Mr. McCULLAGH approached his task as a war correspondent in the Russo-Japanese conflict exceptionally well-equipped. An Irishman possessed of "the gift of tongues" and having the pen of a ready writer, he had seen service in the Far East as the editor of a French newspaper in Bangkok, as exchange editor of the Japan Times in Tokyo, and then as a member of the staff of the Russian newspaper Novi Krai in Port Arthur—during which time he was a regular correspondent of the Japan Mail—he lived with the Russians right up to the time of the outbreak of hostilities in February, 1904. Possessed of an emotional temperament, like most men who come of the race of the Celts, the possessor of an observant, well-trained mind, and with a positive dislike to what are known as the refinements of civilization, Mr. McCullagh found himself in Port Arthur amid surroundings which harmonized with his tastes and inclinations. He describes for us the conditions which prevailed in that fortress in the days preceding Togo's torpedo attack, which sent two Russian battleships limping back beneath the shelter of the batteries on Golden Hill on that memorable 8th of February. The feverish, mad gaiety which prevailed, mingled with scenes of quiet domesticity, the total lack of preparedness, despite all the diplomatic bluster, the rascality and thievery, and the deeply ingrained assurance of the Russian officers that they had come to Port Arthur and the Liaotung to stay for good and all; the good-natured contempt they had for the men who were so soon to thrash them so thoroughly—all this Mr. McCullagh makes us see as he pursues the even tenor of his daily way from his modest lodging to the office of the Novi Krai and then back home again. When war did break out he happened to be returning from a trip to Chefoo, whither he had been to make arrangements for chartering a press-boat, and thus he saw at first hand the results of the torpedo-attack and Togo's initial bombardment of Port Arthur. Mr. McCullagh does not indulge in "fine writing"—except in a few desperate cases; his prose is of the most limpid character, without any attempt at purplish tinges, and any military, naval or scientific student of the war need expect very little help from his pages. But he makes us realise all the terrifying and disconcerting aspects of a naval bombardment as it presents itself to the mind of an imaginative Irishman whose coin of "vantage is the deck of a small British steamer which by force of accident finds herself directly in the line of fire. It was not a very heroic figure that our author cut—and he freely admits it—neither does he make out his companions to have been any better than himself. Supreme mental discomfort must have reigned unchallenged on board the Columbia until she finally drew outside the fire zone and headed for Chefoo, and none was evidently more distractedly uncomfortable than the writer of the story. At Mukden Mr. McCullagh joined the Russian army as correspondent for the New York Herald and being well acquainted with the language of Muscovy found things fairly pleasant. He attached himself to Mischenko's Cossack brigade and thus he derives the title of his book, for with the exception of a brief visit to Tientsin and Peking he remained with the Cossacks until his capture by the Japanese after the battle of Mukden. Mischenko's raid on Yingkow, a raid that for all its dramatic qualities resulted in absolutely nothing being achieved, found Mr. McCullagh in the van of the Cossacks. His description of the motley array of races which comprise the Cossack regiments explains to a very large extent the inglorious part they took in the campaign. Their leader, Mischenko, was "a typical old Hungarian hussar, with reddish, protuberant nose, grey hair, and moustaches," and of a kindly disposition; but he was "not a cavalry man at all, but an artillery officer." As for his men: "It was one of the most composite forces that ever met together in Asia, a force worthy of the mighty behemoth of Muscovy, the potentate who counts three hundred languages around the footsteps of his throne. It comprised Buriats, Tunguses, Bashirs, Kirghises, mountaineers from Daghestan, Tartars, Kalmyks, Cossacks of Orenburg, Cossacks of the Don. * * * Mischenko's force seemed to contain within it all the elements of a Yellow Peril, combined with a faint hint of a Moslem peril." Of the Caucasian mountaineers included in the small force, many could not speak Russian; some fifteen distinct languages were spoken among them, and it was seldom that a man spoke more than two or three of these at the most. As Mr. McCullagh remarks, and with justice we think:—"I do not know if Russia did a wise thing in sending these men out to Manchuria at all, for if there is any truth in the accusations of barbarity the Japanese have made, these Caucasians must—though nearly all of them are Princes—have been the guilty parties." "Again with reference to the diversity of creeds prevailing among Mischenko's Cossacks we read:—"How many shades of Christianity, Mohammedanism, Lamaism, and Buddhism there were among us I dared not inquire. When at set of sun I saw the Mohammedan pray with face turned towards Mecca, I felt as if I were in a Turkish Army. When I saw the Russian kiss the collection of ikons and crucifixes that he wore around his neck, I felt as if I were among Crusaders. When the indolent Mongol laughed at both Mohammedan and Christian, I felt that I was back in my own century. Thus we marched along in peace, each praying to God in his own way, some not praying at all. We were an overflow from the great Muscovite crucible in which all sorts of strange undigested elements boil and bubble without ever uniting." The force got down to Yingkow, but effected nothing in the way of destroying stores, the object of the raid, and it was scarcely surprising when they rejoined the main army that Russian infantry officers remarked among themselves: "The Cossack is no of use except in the streets of St. Petersburg."

The tale of continued Russian defeat, from Port Arthur to Mukden, is told hastily but well in a series of impressionist sketches. Mr. McCullagh supplies no details of the numbers engaged in the various battles, the dispositions of the different forces, etc., but what he does succeed in driving home to the reader's mind is the sense of hopeless resignation to disaster after disaster which gradually settled as an awful nightmare upon the vast inchoate Russian host. His description of the horrors of the retreat from Mukden grips the imagination as Victor Hugo grips it in "Les Misérables"—the abject misery, the degradation of the "broken men," the inevitableness of it all! The iron entered deep into Mr. McCullagh's soul during those melancholy days, tinged the rest of his narrative with a bitterness which only an Irishman can feel and translate into the language of to-day. All the same, it is well, after the shiploads of books which have described the war from the victor's point of view, to see the other side of the shield and to be able to realise the poignancy of grief which saturated the mind of one who from the first had consorted with the vanquished, knew all their good points and aspirations and deplored their fatal weaknesses as only a sincere friend can.

According to the Nichi Nichi, Mr. Devalinoff, son of a Russian Admiral, has been arrested at Ohama near Nagasaki on a charge of having received three hundred yen from a Russian at Yokohama. The Chugwai reports that Lieut. Devalinoff of the Russian Navy, in reserve, has been arrested at Nagasaki on a charge of having made false statements and was subsequently removed to prison.

ENGLISH PAUPERISM.

THE English Poor Laws are being submitted to fierce scrutiny nowadays owing to the continuous rise in the cost of pauperism to the State. Though the national wealth is steadily on the increase, though trade seems reviving generally; though Lancashire and the North Country are rejoicing in a wave of prosperity deeper and wider and seemingly better sustained than any noted for a quarter of a century past, though friendly societies funds and people's savings bank deposits are increasing in volume, the returns of the Local Government Board demonstrate that one out of every thirty-six men walking beneath English skies is a pauper; belongs in fact to that class which Mr. CHARLES BOOTH in his exhaustive study of London's poor, calls the "submerged tenth." Of course only a small proportion of these are at the charges of the State; the larger number are loafers or "out-of-works." As in the days of old Rome the richest country of the world to-day provides the strangest contrasts imaginable. Dives is ever being jostled at the elbow by LAZARUS: the most refined luxury marches side by side with the most abject misery. Some figures which Mr. LOUIS SINCLAIR furnishes to the Law Magazine give startling information regarding the cost of pauperism in England. He says:—"From 1880 to 1904 we spent on in-maintenance £54,316,002, and on out-relief £65,226,425, making a total sum spent on paupers of £119,542,427. In addition, there was spent on salaries of officials £39,817,478; repayment of loans and interest £16,736,163; other expenses £29,558,509; lunacy £36,264,702; bringing up the total cost of pauperism for the twenty-five years to no less a sum than £241,919,279. In 1864 the cost of 999,400 paupers was £6,423,381; in 1904 the cost of 769,029 paupers was £13,369,494. As we glance over these figures the startling fact reveals itself that the cost increases year by year whilst the number of paupers decreases. The cost of officialdom in 1864 for looking after 999,440 was £696,098. The cost in 1904 with 769,029 paupers was £2,358,851. So that for superintending 230,371 fewer paupers in 1904 the officials had a rise of £1,662,754. Truly a marvellous administrative achievement, only emulated by a similar success in extravagant building."

The Poor Law officials are not a popular class among the English poor, and the terror of finishing life in the workhouse still spurs on many to maintain the struggle for existence outside its walls long after the necessary vigour has been spent. But a still larger proportion of the very poor, the shiftless classes, the ne'er-do-wells, accept this termination of the battle of life as inevitable and conform to the condition of pauperism without any qualms. The problem of the "professional" unemployed, which has presented itself very forcibly to dwellers in most of the big towns in the eastern, southern and western parts of England during the past winter has led many writers on social economics to bring forward some schemes of amelioration, and prominent among them are reforms of the present Poor Laws. Mr. SINCLAIR, in his proposals for stemming the rising tide, suggests that the following plans should be adopted:—First, homes of rest for the aged, with thorough classification of the inmates, differentiating between deserving and undeserving, respectable and not respectable. This would be easy of accomplishment were the aged poor made a general charge, instead of a parochial one. It would involve, however, a readjustment of taxation. Second, the entire abolition, and at once, of those 'forcing houses' for paupers, the poor law schools; and the placing of the children under the education authority. The boarding-out system, with frequent and thorough inspection by female inspectors, is by far the best and cheapest. Third, infirmaries for the sick, to which should be attached convalescent homes, wherein the worker could recuperate before returning to his work. Fourth, homes for the exclusive use of mental and physical incapables. Fifth, the poor-law-bred tramp and able-bodied workhouse loafer must be compelled by act of parliament to produce their sustenance on a state farm-colony or starve. I deny the right of these people to eat without work, and I do not see the sometime urged necessity of their living at all if they have to do so at others' expense. Society would be better rid of their presence, but as they probably owe their continued existence to the pious opinions of the 1832 commissioners, let us give them a chance under a new economic distress act which will first train them to work, and then compel them to work ere they get food." Not many months ago a man prominent in public life declared that there was work in England for all who cared to work, and his declaration did not fail for want of facts to support it. There can be little doubt that among the many deserving "out-of-works" who thronged the London streets last winter were hundreds of men who would have refused work had it been offered to them, men of the same class as that loafing cavalry soldier who favoured Yokohama with his presence some years ago and who openly declared that his sole mission in life was to discover the man who invented work for he wished to smother him. This "Weary Willie" was a representative of a very large class, and how to deal with him is a problem which must be faced in all earnestness before many years have passed. Decadent Rome had the problem presented to her, but failed of finding a solution: will England also find it unsolvable?

PRESIDENT STARR JORDAN ON JAPAN.

SOME things are very difficult to account for. Why, for example, should a man enjoying such a high reputation as does

Professor STARR JORDAN, President of the Leland Stanford University—why should he undertake to deliver a lecture on a subject of which he is quite ignorant, and why, having so undertaken, did he not adopt the common precaution of informing himself in some slight degree at any rate? We reproduce his address, taking it from the columns of the Advocate of Peace. Our readers will see that the statements which can be called correct are few and far between, whereas those flagrantly incorrect abound. He sets out by an imaginary account of the purposes to which Japan would have devoted an indemnity had she succeeded in obtaining one from Russia. She would have used it, he says, for strengthening her army and navy; for holding Korea and ultimately Manchuria; for subsidizing manufactures and commerce, and "may be" for getting possession of China. That is obviously a conception spun out of Professor JORDAN's fancies. It appears to us that Japan would have employed the indemnity to relieve the burden of debts, foreign and domestic, imposed on her by the war, and we fail to perceive that Professor JORDAN or any one else has the smallest right to charge her with a deliberate policy of aggression and fiscal folly in the absence of any evidence whatever to support the charge. We ourselves would be committing a similar error if we ventured to accuse the President of the Leland Stanford University of deliberate flippancy, yet we quite fail to comprehend what he means by "Japan leading armies of civilization while England and America paid the bills." That is a programme too inconceivable and too unmeaning to have been seriously penned. Well fitted to its context is the assertion that "Japan's first task must be to disband her army as America disbanded hers in 1865." There is not the faintest analogy between Japan's conscript army and the army specially raised by the United States in the War of the Secession. Professor JORDAN may be acquainted with the Japanese military system, but if so, he most successfully hides his knowledge, for the "disbanding" of an army such as Japan recently put into the field may almost be called an automatic process. It presents no difficulties whatever and has, indeed, been already accomplished. These blunders, however, are far transcended by what follows. "Deferred payment, or credit," says Professor JORDAN, "is a feature alien to the life of old Japan: if a man owes anything let his neighbours pay it and let the amount be decided on the basis of old customs or forgotten equities." We do not pretend to have the least conception of the strange process here described by the learned Professor—vicarious payment by the debtor's neighbours and assessment of the amount in accordance with old customs or forgotten equities. Such a bewildering programme requires a special faculty of romance to interpret it. What emerges clearly, however, is that Professor JORDAN denies the existence of any system of credit in old

Japan. The methods of trade in feudal Japan under the TOKUGAWA rule have been fully described in authentic books to which Professor JORDAN has access, and to which he should have made it his business to refer before venturing to speak publicly and authoritatively on the commercial methods of old Japan. Fifteen minutes' research would have saved him from making a statement diametrically opposed to facts. By what practical joker, again, or by what MUNCHAUSEN, was he betrayed into believing that the Japanese merchant in former times occupied socially a lower status than the coolie and that the Samurai "could neither buy nor sell"? By what imp of mischief was he, an American, prompted to speak of the tariff walls surrounding ancient Japan whereas they were really tenuous palisades compared with the cliffs of protection that guard his own country's shores? Then he goes on to speak of law-making and law-abiding. He says that the Japanese have to learn both; that statutes are of little force in Japan, and that the only law obeyed is "the law of old tradition." He actually believes this and actually intends it to be believed. We must assume as much. It is thus he speaks of probably the most law-abiding people in the world, who have framed for themselves codes in accord with the best principles of modern jurisprudence, who administer those codes strictly and who obey them implicitly. He follows this foolishness by an almost equally silly excursion into the domain of Japanese agriculture. "Japan has no horses, no cows, no sheep, no goats, no hogs, no butter, no cheese, no orchards, no vineyards, no fruit, no turnips, cabbages, carrots, pumpkins, squashes." Nothing was needed to impart a delicious flavour to this bathos except the allusion to goats, hogs, butter, cheese, pumpkins and squashes. The President of the Leland Stanford University is nothing if not patriotic. A land without pumpkins and squashes is no land at all in his eyes. And he has also the splendid assurance of Occidental arrogance. A people must be democratic if they are to hold any rank in his estimation. Individualism must be their guiding principle. The subordination of self to country which makes the Japanese so formidable in war and which constitutes one of the finest elements of their character, is all wrong in Professor JORDAN's eyes. Man is more than the State and must be taught that he is more than the State. May providence guard Japan against teachings like those of the President of the Leland Stanford University, and may some kind friend suggest to Professor JORDAN the expediency of a little study—just a little—before he undertakes to deliver public addresses on subjects of which he knows nothing.

BRITISH LETHARGY.

IT will not be the fault of writers of books if the British nation drops behind in the commercial and industrial race during the 20th century. Book after book is being turned out by the printing presses of the United Kingdom which point out the dangers and sins which beset the nation, the strides which America and Germany are making, and the steps which the British people must take to hold, or regain the lost, supremacy. One of the latest of these publications is entitled "Industrial Efficiency," and comes from the pen of Mr. ARTHUR SHADWELL, M.A., M.D., and is issued by Messrs. Longmans & Co. We gather that Dr. SHADWELL, after a careful survey of both North America and Germany does not despair of the outlook for England as altogether hopeless, in this striking a saner note than some of his contemporaries. But his judgment on the temper of the time is severe. British prosperity has made the nation, as a community of workers, limp and slack. "We have been slowing down while our rivals have been going full speed ahead." The purport of the following passage has often been expressed before, but rarely with more emphasis and authority:—"The once enterprising manufacturer has grown slack, he has let the business take care of itself, while he is shooting grouse or yachting in the Mediterranean. That is his business. The once unequalled workman has adopted the motto, 'Get as much and do as little as possible'; his business is football or betting. Each blames the other. (I shall have to qualify these remarks presently; I am now drawing a broad comparative picture.) Then the manufacturer complains of being handicapped in various ways; and he is justified. He is handicapped by laws and by obsolete regulations, which have the effect of hindering him in some respect without any set-off in the way of help. And what do all these mean but carelessness and neglect on some one's part? Legislators who pass laws without taking the trouble to ascertain the facts or understand what they are doing, or who fail to alter obsolete and detrimental ones, such as the patent laws and the tax on industrial alcohol; Government departments too indolent to watch events and adapt regulations to changing conditions; local authorities applying by-laws without discretion, piling up rates without thought, and administering the poor-law without care; everybody bent on pleasure and amusement. That is the universal business. No one is in a position to abuse the rest; they are all in the picture and wear the same expression from top to bottom of the social scale. Not every individual, of course, but every class. We are a nation at play. Work is a nuisance, an evil necessity to be shirked and hurried over as quickly and easily as possible in order that we may get away to the real business of life—the golf course, the bridge table, the cricket and football field, or some other of the thousand amusements which occupy our minds, and for which no trouble is too great." As The Times points out in the course of its review, Dr. SHADWELL's book will be found useful and instructive to employers and workmen. While acquitted of some common charges, the English manufacturer will hear to his advantage plain words. He will be told that he is much too slack; that his mills, as a rule, are not so well-lighted as those in Germany; that the arrangements for carrying off dust are better in Solingen than in Sheffield; that in mills there is better provision for washing and the like in Germany and America. Dr. SHADWELL hints, too, at a bad habit of "cribbing" time at the end of the day by running machinery for a few minutes later than the stated hour. He is emphatic in condemnation of the policy of always trying to lower the cost of production by reducing the wages bill. These volumes will be a wholesome tonic to many complacent employers. On the other hand, the English workmen are told that they are much too conservative; that they love to be dirty all the week and "take a pride in presenting a ruffianly appearance"; that they are not so orderly as German workmen; that American workmen toil much harder; that English artisans are much too suspicious; and that they have advantages which they are prone to forget. It is a hopeful sign of the times that such books as these are being produced in England to-day and that they are receiving the attention they deserve.

YOKOHAMA LITERARY SOCIETY.

The penultimate meeting of the Yokohama Literary Society for the present season was held in Van Schaick Hall on Friday evening, and notwithstanding the Beethoven Concert at the Public Hall attracted a good audience. In the unavoidable absence of the President, Mr. W. K. E. Vincent, the Vice-President, took the chair and in introducing the lecturer said that Dr. Munro, owing to pressure of professional engagements and the short notice given him regarding the final fixing of his date, had not been able to give all the time to preparation that he would have liked. It was the busiest man who could always find time to help his fellow creatures and Dr. Munro was assured of a warm welcome by the Yokohama Literary Society.

Dr. Munro spoke as follows:—

During the course of a long and not unsuccessful career, mankind has had to cope with enemies of many kinds and sizes. The terrific monsters of bygone ages have but few representatives in the living world of to-day and these are no longer a menace to the continuance of the human race. A few bones and the legends of the dragon are all that remain of the incarnate ferocity that existed along with early humanity.

But a foe more terrible and relentless has fastened upon man and beast alike for countless generations. I refer to the parasitic microbe, the arch enemy of all living forms. Protected by their minute size and astounding rapidity of proliferation, the various bacteria continue their furtive onslaught. More than four-fifths of all the deaths result from the activity of these organisms. If we follow Metchnikoff in his view as to the cause of old age, we might say that, with the exception of a few tragic accidents, mankind dies only by the action of bacteria.

A great surgeon, Sir Frederick Treves, has lately expressed the opinion that disease is not wholly a bad thing, that it may be regarded as a kind of blessing in disguise. If that be so its incognito is well maintained. We may however agree with Professor Treves in one point which he specially dwelt on, namely, that the resistance offered by the blood to the invasion of micro-organisms which constitutes the physiological stand against disease, and upon which many of the symptoms are based, is beneficial to the individual attacked. This resistance frequently results in the defeat of the invaders and in the future protection of the individual against microbes of the same kind; without this resistance, the death of the individual would be assured. It is one side of an act of warfare. It is beneficial, just as armed resistance to the invasion of a country is beneficial, provided it be effectual.

Without this resistance, no war could take place, but no amount of success can diminish the ghastly horrors, the brutal inhumanity of war. The fact that the human frame has fought the battle of life or death, unaided practically since the earliest times, cannot lead us to regard disease as otherwise than a painful necessity. If we define disease in the popular sense, which has a claim prior to that of the medicine man, it could truthfully be called a disability of the body, attended with more or less suffering. If we consider the consequences of disease, not alone to the individual affected, but frequently to those dependent upon him, if we think of the weary vigils, the anguish of mind that affect, yes infect, those nearest and dearest to the sick one, we find it difficult to see any mitigating beneficence in disease.

Yet, just as war in itself is entirely reprehensible, though sometimes leading to a lasting and prosperous peace, so the battle for health which we call disease frequently leads to immunity for a lengthened period. It is a matter of common knowledge that an attack of scarlet fever, smallpox or typhoid usually protects the individual against recurrence of the same trouble, though not invariably so. We may go further than this and say that the individual is capable of transmitting his immunity to his posterity, to a greater or less degree. I do not mean to say that a father and mother who have had typhoid fever will invariably have children who are immune to the attacks of the typhoid microbe. We know that even when both parents have fair hair and blue eyes, the offspring are occasionally dark, and vice versa. The inheritance of special characters is not transmitted to all the offspring unless rendered permanent by long heredity. It is to Gregor Mendel, a contemporary of Darwin, whose experiments in hereditary traits us to reconsider some of the views of the great teacher, that we owe our knowledge of the procedure of transmitted characters. Mendel showed that a character which is capable of transmission from parent to offspring can never be lost unless it is injurious to the species. It matters not how often this character is transmitted through separate individuals. It is sure to appear in a certain proportion of the progeny, a proportion which is always the same. To take an example from the vegetable world: if a form of wheat which is susceptible to the disease called rust, produced by a fungus, is crossed with another form of wheat which is immune to this parasite, it is found that the resulting plants are all susceptible to the disease. A certain proportion of them however carry the character of immunity, for if crossed with each other one-fourth of the plants raised from the resulting seed are found to be immune to the rust fungus. These immune plants, if bred together, will always produce immune plants. On the other hand one-fourth are found to be susceptible to rust. If interbred they produce only susceptible wheat. These two-fourths thus "take after" what we may call their respective grandparents in regard to the characters of immunity and susceptibility. The remaining half resemble their hybrid parents; that is to say, they are susceptible in themselves, but when interbred give rise again to one-fourth purely immune, one-fourth purely susceptible and two-fourths susceptible yet capable of handing the immune character on to the next generation. Recent experiments on the crossing of varieties in the animal world make it almost certain that characters are always propagated in the same manner. Provided then that the immunity obtained by, say an attack of typhoid, be capable of transmission to offspring, we can understand how the suffering endured by a grandfather might be a source of protection to the second generation. I am not aware that this aspect of infection has yet attracted the attention of European investigators, but the question as to the possibility of immunity by transmission has provoked some discussion. That immunity is hereditary to some degree is, I think, conclusively proved by the fact that infectious diseases are more fatal when they attack fresh populations. Measles, for instance, which is rarely directly fatal in European communities, was attended by a considerable mortality when introduced into Iceland, the Faroe islands and the Fiji archipelago. When we consider that immunity in the individual is not always complete, that it does not invariably offer even a partial protection, as seen in smallpox which I have known to have proved fatal on the third attack, we can understand the difficulty of making correct observations as to the heredity of immunity in human beings. On the whole, however, we are justified in the belief that immunity is to some extent hereditary, that the procedure of transmission is on the lines which I have indicated in regard to the rust fungus of wheat, and that to this inherited immunity we must attribute the survival of the race from the epidemic storms that swept away some of its colossal enemies in the prehistoric past. That human beings are immune to the attacks of certain microbes which decimate some of the lower animals, that we are susceptible to disease from which they are immune, and that some infectious maladies are common to man and beast are factors of everyday observation. It may be taken for granted that the immunity of certain animals to special diseases is an inheritance, a useful strain that has been perfected during a very remote past. This precious legacy of relief from certain diseases has doubtless also been acquired by humanity and is surely a reason for optimism. The emancipation of the living from suffering and premature death illumines the future with a gleam of hope. Not in itself but in its far reaching results, do we find some atonement for the grievous burden of disease.

But man has not been content to await the "Ides of March" for protection by evolution against the parasitic microbe. He seeks to ascertain the rationale of the process by which protection is achieved by the individual, to wrest from Nature the secret of immunity and to apply this knowledge in defence of himself and of the domestic animals for which he has become responsible. The results are promising. I need scarcely refer to the mitigation of small-pox and the treatment of diphtheria. Even advanced cases of the latter disease may often be cured by the introduction of large, very large amounts of antitoxin, cases which were abandoned without hope ten years ago. A certain measure of immunity has attended the use of early, or preventive inoculations in other infectious diseases, but in these it cannot be said that more than a satisfactory reconnaissance of the enemy's position has been carried out and the plan of attack clearly indicated. Another century, however, can scarcely pass without security against the epidemic scourges of humanity. I am even sanguine enough to believe, though we cannot live to see it, that during this interval emancipation will be attained from nearly all the ills that are traceable to the activity of parasitic bacteria.

Before I say a word in explanation of the process of immunity, I would remind you that infection, its antithesis, is not a thing but a condition. The active agents of infection, the pathogenic microbes, have only recently come to light long after the name was known. It happens therefore that this word infection was loosely applied to the unknown cause, but we shall use it in its proper meaning, which is an initial invasion by parasitic life and especially by bacteria. It is not necessary to inflict upon you even a resume of the special features that distinguish the varieties of microbes. It is sufficient to say that they are numerous, that each variety gives rise to a distinct reaction accompanied by symptoms that vary with the reaction and according to whether it is local or general. Diseases, formerly supposed to be widely different may originate with the same microbe, such as erysipelas and peritonitis. The patchy pneumonia of acute consumption is not usually caused by the bacillus of tubercle alone, but in conjunction with the dot shaped microbes, known as cocci, such as cause the two former affections. It may be questioned, however, whether this is not an instance of rivalry rather than of partnership between these microbes for immunity may be attained by antitoxin from the streptococci which cause most of the fever and acute symptoms, more easily than if they were playing a "lone hand" in blood poisoning or peritonitis. It is admitted, however, that the dot shaped microbes, or cocci, present varieties of behaviour in relation to their immediate surroundings that are not found in the oval, or elongated bacteria; which may possibly explain the marked successes and failures of antitoxin in dealing with these cocci. The deleterious effects of infection are only in very small part due to the mechanical presence of microbes, or the robbing of nutriment from the blood. In some diseases, as in cholera, the specific microbe does not invade the blood at all, or at least to an infinitesimal degree. The profound depression amounting so frequently to collapse, is due not only to the intense local irritation of the digestive tract and the effort to get rid of the cause, but even more to the absorption of poison created by the comma bacillus. The nutriment which it obtains from the tissues goes to growth and reproduction of the bacilli, but comes from this issue as a virulent poison destroying the vitality of the host and inimical also to the parasites that gave rise to it. In this, as in all diseases, the effects are due to intoxication, and this is the result of a chemical process just as alcohol is the result of the interaction of sugar and the yeast fungus.

The problem of immunity is a complicated one, but a general idea may be gained by supposing that, as an acid is neutralised by an alkali, so the toxin or specific poison of the microbe is neutralised by some substance within the animal body. This simile is probably not exact. A combination, however, is formed which is more inert towards the blood and other tissues of the body than to the microbe that manufactured the poison. I may not be far wrong if I suggest that this union of the toxin with a substance from the body, resembles rather the formation of an alloy by the fusion of two metals, for although the product of this union has properties different from that of the toxin alone, it behaves in some respects like a mixture more than like a chemical compound. The substance which thus unites with the toxin to diminish its virulence towards the tissues, is the antitoxin. It would be unprofitable, even if I had the ability, to deal with this complex subject in detail. It fairly bristles with technicalities, but in general terms it may be stated that the various substances comprised under the name antitoxin, are derived mainly from certain floating or wandering cells of the body which are themselves capable of destroying bacteria. As the bacteria die out when the antitoxin is more than sufficient to neutralise the toxin, an excess of the antitoxin is left, but its manufacture still goes on in a more leisurely fashion, thus securing continued immunity, which may or may not be permanent.

It is by taking advantage of this fact that artificial immunity is secured. An animal, conveniently the horse, which has been inoculated with diphtheria toxin, in very small amount, develops a large amount of antitoxin in its blood. This is gradually increased by successive inoculations. From six to twelve litres of blood are then withdrawn without pain, or even inconvenience to the horse, and the resulting serum, is tested to ascertain its strength, and preserved for use as an "antitoxin" for diphtheria. Along these lines the process of research is moving at a rate so rapid that artificial immunity from other infections is already within sight.

While seeking for available weapons wherewith to combat our microscopic foes modern science has been taking steps to exclude them from access to the human body. This method of exclusion has been attended with considerable success, both with the individual and the community. In regard to the former, no one in these days needs to be reminded of the triumphs of modern surgery. Pasteur and Lister, the knower and the doer, stand hand in hand at the threshold of the new healing art, to receive the grateful homage of mankind for all time to come. Surgical interference, which twenty years ago had an unenviable notoriety for shortening the span of human existence, though its successes even then were not few, is now giving relief to suffering and health to the ailing in fields that were not dreamed of then. As surgical clinical assistant and anaesthetist in the University wards at Edinburgh for a year and a half, I had an opportunity of seeing the work of the great surgeon, Sir James Spence, and of noting his results together with those of Chiene, Duncan, Bell, Watson, Annandale and others. This was the infancy of the antiseptic school at which some scoffed and others theorised, but few there were who gave the method a serious trial. Doubts prevailed even amongst those who did, for the results were not very brilliant. As the technique improved, however, the statistics of operations proved the value of the new system. Surgeons still looked askance at the abdomen and even joints were considered very dangerous things to tamper with. The mortality from the latter is now less than from amputating a finger in the old days. If the surgery of the abdomen is not always without risk it is because the risk is now undertaken and usually justified by the results in cases that would formerly have been regarded as hopeless. The aseptic technique, the method of protection by exclusion of microbes, has truly been a boon and a blessing to humanity.

More widespread, and therefore more patent in its results is the effort to limit the spread of pestilence by quarantine and other measures which aim at the destruction of infective bacteria. This latter object is accomplished mainly by chemical means and encouraging these enemies to prey upon each other. Every old sailor knows that the cask water got putrid before it became sweet, the explanation being that the microbes it contained elbowed each other out of existence, and the same plan is used with some success in the purification of drainage. The proper disposal of this residuum is of the highest importance in all civilised communities. I regret to say that the important city of Yokohama is in a backward condition in this respect. I do not think that there is a single syphon trap on any drain of the Bluff and the effluvia from the lower sewers which are ventilated only by the Bluff drains is a source of neither pleasure nor profit. I have long been of opinion that the so-called malaria of Yokohama has a closer connection with its drains than its paddy fields. The water supply is admirable, at least as regards quality, and this leads me to say that too much care cannot be taken to secure water free from contamination. The water supply of any community is a source of danger as well of safety. If proper care be exercised protection against parasitic microbes is fairly well assured, but the absence of this means the distribution of disease amongst an unsuspecting population. This was well illustrated by the cholera epidemics of London in 1854 and 1856 and the more recent ones of Hamburg and Marseilles.

With all these modern resources it would seem that in the near future infection must play a minor part in the production of disease. This desirable end is retarded not so much by the imperfection of our appliances, or knowledge or energy on the part of our scientific experts, but by the deplorable ignorance and carelessness of ourselves as individuals. It is here that commonsense may be brought to bear upon the subject of infection so as to give increased security of life and health. If we define common sense as the intelligent appreciation of any matter without undue technicality we set before ourselves a not too difficult task in applying it to the preservation of human life. If we mean by common sense the average intelligence ingrained by constant use, I fear that it has failed to prove a reliable barrier against infection. The natural fear of "catching" disease has been some protection, and in the case of leprosy, which was rife in the middle ages in England, having been brought thither by the crusaders, the mere isolation of cases was sufficient to stamp out a disease which is not very contagious. Indeed its contagion has been denied, and quite recently too, but on insufficient grounds. Plague, cholera, small-pox and other epidemic diseases have been avoided for centuries by the individual, but with only partial success. Typhus and relapsing fever have almost disappeared, owing to better conditions of life, and probably also because natural immunity has been secured. It is well known that these, and indeed to some extent, all specific fevers, meet at the outset of their invasion, more resistance from the well nourished and vigorous than from the ill fed and exhausted. If we include with immunity the resistance of membranes and tissues of the body to penetration by micro-organisms and also the counter attack of the defence which seeks to entrap incoming microbes, it would seem to the eye of common sense that the robust should be the best armed against infection. In the case of the infectious fevers, whose onset is preceded by a definite period of incubation from the time of contact, the advantage is on the side of the strong. But it is on the contrary well known that those who have suffered from an exhausting disease are usually more resistant to direct infection and are better subjects for operation, where there is sometimes a risk of introducing microbes into the blood.

Common sense needs to be guided by some knowledge of the conditions that lead to infection before it may be relied upon to check the spread of infection. It is much to be desired that the little information required should be thoroughly instilled into the minds of the young. Much needless exposure to contagion would be avoided were children taught to take an intelligent interest in these unseen foes. It is not enough to know that direct contact from one person to another may communicate disease. Indirect contagion is infinitely more common than direct transference. It is more insidious, more because less under control, and therefore more dangerous. And knowing this, it is necessary to act upon it conscientiously, not so easy a matter when the habits of life are formed. We may know the danger of touching the door handle with hands that have been in contact with a case of infectious disease unless they have been thoroughly cleaned of all microbes by washing and disinfection. We may know that a towel, used in a case of mild infection, is not exactly the proper thing for drying the hands after they are cleansed. We may have qualms of conscience if a spoon gets from the sickroom to the kitchen before sterilisation by boiling. But this knowledge is not sufficient to prevent accidents unless it anticipates these mistakes, instead of having to regret them. It may seem to be common sense that that there is less prospective risk in conveying infection from a mild case than from a severe one. If we remember, however, that partial immunity sometimes exists, that the soil upon which the seeds of infection fall makes the same difference in the individual case as does the ground upon which we sow wheat: if we bear in mind that the seed from a poor crop may flourish in earth which is better suited to it, we can see how fallacious is this idea. It is a common, almost a conventional, idea that what are called mild diseases, such as chicken pox, measles and the like, may be played with like a game of hide and seek. Apart from the fact that these "mild" affections are occasionally fatal and sometimes lead to ill health and diminished resistance to other disease, I submit that no one ought to be less careful with these than with the more fatal types of infection. It is sometimes said the children ought to get these diseases when young, for they are more severe with older folk. The same thing used to be said of smallpox, but it is a poor argument. If proper care be taken the risk of adults catching these diseases will be greatly diminished.

There are some diseases which are known to be often fatal, but which are supposed to be only mildly-infectious. Consumption is one of these. I need not remind you again that the condition of health at the time will often determine the sensitiveness to this infection and that it is impossible to predict whether one may catch it by being in the presence of a case for even a few minutes. There can be no question that not only the expectoration, but the acts of coughing and even speaking may transfer the bacillus of this dread disease to others. The common sense view of this complaint is, or ought to be, that it is infectious. It is hard on the individual to have to live in accordance with this view. The logical sequel is that consumptives should be isolated, should be quarantined till they are no longer a danger to their neighbours. By faithful and conscientious adherence to a rigid system this might be done in many cases without absolute alienation and ostracism from their fellow beings. Sterilisation of all utensils daily, the periodic disinfection of the room, which should be open and little used, mouth screens while speaking and coughing; which can be destroyed or sterilised, the destruction of sputa, regulation of distance of visitors who should be present only in an open space or in a room previously sterilised; such precautions as these are necessary to ensure moderate protection against this infection, which, in one form or another accounts for about one seventh of the death rate in civilised communities. It ought to be possible to stamp out this disease within two centuries, by the method of exclusion alone but there is hope that in the immediate future artificial immunity will render the sterner plan less imperative.

With at least the more violent infections, it is unlikely that artificial immunity will altogether supplant that of exclusion. The former is expensive and like armed resistance to invasion, is not to be accomplished without the distress of actual infection.

Preventive immunity may obviate this, but is not always permanent and the prospect of each infant, having to undergo a kind of vaccination for twenty different possibilities in the way of infection is not one to be contemplated with equanimity, at least by parents of this generation.

A hearty vote of thanks having been accorded the lecturer, the Vice-President announced the result of the Essay Competition held in February. There had been seven entries and the Judges—Messrs. W. B. Mason, A. M. Knapp, and T. Satchell had awarded positions as follows:—1st, Mr. P. E. Nicolle, for an essay entitled, "My favourite author," on which the judges commented:—"An excellent piece of literary criticism; and in its limited scope, both comprehensive and original"; 2nd, Miss Hall, for an essay entitled: "An account of a journey," of which the judges said:—"Though somewhat brief, well worthy of second place for its bright and descriptive style"; 3rd, C. F. Stephens, for an essay on "What subjects ought we to study," which the judges declared was "well-written, but somewhat reminiscent of the school-books." The judges also commended Miss Waddilove and Mrs. Burleigh for their essays. The date of the musical competition would, if possible, be arranged for Saturday, April 28.

Following these announcements, the miscellaneous portion of the programme was discussed and, as usual, proved highly interesting and was evidently greatly appreciated.

1. Song....."Ho, Jolly Jenkin".....Sullivan.
Mr. S. H. Somerton.
2. Reading..."The Old and the New".....
Mrs. P. S. Hubbard.
3. Song....."Orpheus and His Lute".....Sullivan.
Miss Thompson.
4. Song....."Molly Bawn".....Lover.
Dr. Emerson.
5. "A Ten Minutes Talk on James Withcomb
Riley," with a poem.
Dr. J. E. Jones.
6. Song....."The Devout Lover".....Maud V. White.
Mr. S. H. Somerton.
7. Song....."Berceuse de Jocelyn".....Godard.
Miss Thompson.
8. Song....."If I only knew".....Maud V. White.
Dr. Emerson.

The last meeting of the season will take place on Friday, April 27, when selections from Wallace's Opera "Maritana" will be given, the biographical notes being supplied by Mr. A. W. Quinton.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

About seventy members of the French Society held a meeting on the afternoon of April 7th at the residence of Prince Kanin. Mr. S. Tsuji, President of the Imperial University, presented the annual report of the Society, after which His Imperial Highness delivered a speech complimenting the Society on its development. The French Chargé d'Affaires and the President of the Alliance Française of Yokohama, read congratulatory addresses. In the evening, the members were entertained by the Prince.

Mr. K. Tako, Director of the Utsunomiya Revenue Superintending Bureau and the Utsunomiya Salt Monopoly Bureau, has been transferred to Yokohama for similar duties.

The Office of the Kwantung Government will be removed to Port Arthur before the end of April. The former Russian military staff office will be occupied by the Japanese for which purpose repairs are being carried out.

The work of repairing the Sawo (formerly the Pobieda) at Nagasaki is now in progress. Before the end of April she will be removed to the Yokosuka Naval Station for her equipment which is expected to be completed within this year.

The tenth trial of Kono Hironaka and other politicians charged with having instigated the Tokyo disturbances, took place on April 9th in the Tokyo District Court. After a lengthy discussion by the lawyers for the defence, the case was again adjourned.

Prince Higashifushimi, Commander of the cruiser Takachiko, has been removed to the Kasuga. Captains K. Saito (Commander of the Yakuma) and A. Matsumoto have been appointed Chiefs of Staff of the Sasaho and Maidzuru Naval Stations respectively.

The Rt. Rev. Wm. Awdry, D.D., Bishop of South Tokyo, held a confirmation in Christ Church, Yokohama, on Tuesday evening. Thirteen candidates were confirmed in the presence of a good congregation. The Bishop's address was very touching in its effectiveness.

Three electric railway companies of Tokyo are conducting negotiations to amalgamate. On the other hand, the Tokyo Municipal Council propose to purchase the three railways for twenty-two million yen. On April 7th, the councillors met and decided to investigate the matter and appointed a committee.

Mr. E. W. Rutter, late manager of the Imperial Bank of China in Hongkong, has been appointed to take charge of Messrs Samuel, Samuel & Co's. business in Formosa. Mr. Rutter has been in Hongkong on and off since 1882 and was popular in the community having taken a great interest in racing, rowing and social matters.

In a recent number of the Portsmouth Times (England) in the report of a presentation of prizes to students of the Portsmouth School of Art, we note that a Kobe young lady has much distinguished herself. Miss Katie Blackmore's name appears in the Local Competition as the winner of a 1st prize for painting head from life, and first for shading from the cast. In the same examination she won a first for painting ornaments in monochrome, and in the Board of Education, South Kensington Art Examinations, certificate of the second class for painting from still life. Such a record should prove very gratifying to the young lady's friends.

The Rev. R. C. Fillingham has submitted to the judgment passed upon him. In the Court of Arches on Feb. 27th the Dean (Sir Lewis Dibdin) read a letter from him admitting and regretting his error in the matter of the "ordination" at Southend. The Dean said he was glad that submission did away with the necessity of Mr. Fillingham's being deprived of his benefice; but, as his offence had been outrageous, and had been aggravated by persistent contumacy, he sentenced him to be suspended from office and benefice for two years, dating from March 11th, and ordered him to pay the promoter's (the Bishop of St. Albans) costs.

POLITICS IN MODERN JAPAN AND THE PRESENT POLITICAL SITUATION.(CONTRIBUTED.)
(III.)

Party-government is generally considered to be the natural culmination of representative government. But many Japanese publicists today tell us that to them it appears that in this country the cause of party-government has been losing ground continually during the past few years. The principal reason of this is the manifest inferiority of the bulk of the party members to their political foes, the anti-party officials. We desire to call the attention of readers of these articles to what Mr. Toyabe Shuntei has written in the Taiyō on this subject during the past few months. His instructive essays have been reproduced in these columns in the Monthly Summaries of Japanese Current Literature. We believe his analysis of the present political situation to be the true one. In an article entitled "Two Planets of the Itō Solar System," a full epitome of which will be found in last month's Literary Summary, Mr. Toyabe says:—"There is a growing feeling of contempt for political parties and not a few are beginning to feel that it is an honour not to belong to them. The country believes in officials, because among them there is knowledge and character. The only hope for political parties must come from their possessing a better set of men, taken all around, than officialdom can show. This Marquis Itō knew when he formed the Seiyū-kai. But he failed to bring the party up to the required standard. Marquis Saionji cannot be said to have succeeded any better than his predecessor. The party has gone on degenerating in every way." Although Marquis Saionji is the President of the Seiyū-kai, in forming the present Cabinet to a large extent he left the Seiyū-kai out in the cold. Messrs. Hara Kei and Matsuda Munemasa only were given portfolios. There were several other available and apparently suitable men who had long been connected with the Seiyū-kai, such as Barons Kaneko and Suyematsu, for instance, but they were not asked to join the Cabinet. Either Marquis Saionji is at heart opposed to party-Cabinets in this country, or he took over the reins of Government from Count Katsura on the understanding that the Cabinet should for the most part consist of officials—Count Katsura like Marquis Yamagata being an anti-party statesman. Marquis Saionji seems to have known that he could command the support of the Seiyū-kai in the Diet without distributing many of the sugar-plums of office among the members of the party there. This speaks well for his astuteness. But by the same manner in which they submitted to the dictation of the Marquis in connection with the passing of the Railway Bill in the Lower House, the members of the Seiyū-kai have drawn down upon themselves the ridicule of the nation. It must be remembered that they hold their seats in the Diet as the representatives of the people. Hence when a measure affecting the rights and the profits of large sections of the community was brought up for discussion in the Lower House it was naturally expected that they would regard it as their duty to defend the rights of their constituents in the House of Representatives in a pronounced manner. They did nothing of the kind. They displayed no independence of spirit, no consciousness of their responsibility as legislators, in a word, they showed themselves to be quite characterless.

The attitude of Count Okuma's party to the Railway Bill was somewhat singular. When great measures are brought before a Diet, it is usual for political parties to discuss them thoroughly and to determine whether they will oppose or support them. But to the surprise of everybody, at a meeting of the Shimpotō held a few days prior to the final discussion of the Bill it was decided that the Party would regard the Railway Nationalization Bill as an exceptional question (Joguwairai), that is a measure on which the Party as a Party took no decided action—members were free to vote as they pleased. The Kokumin Shimbun rightly points out that for a big party like the Shimpotō to adopt no party policy in reference to one of the greatest questions that has been discussed by the Diet in modern time is very derogatory to that party. On minor questions it is customary to allow members of a party to vote as they please, but if the members of a party cannot act together when such a momentous question as the nationalization of the railways is before the Lower House, surely its raison d'être is gone. The Shimpotō is evidently in a pitifully divided and weak condition or it would have made a better show at such a crisis as this, says the Kokumin Shimbun. It is affirmed, with what amount of truth we are unable to say, that Count Okuma and Dr. Hatoyama were forced to take the action they did in reference to the Railway Bill owing to the strong difference of opinion in the ranks of the Shimpotō on the State purchase of railways. To have tried to insist on the party's declaring itself opposed to the measure as a party, would have split the Shimpotō up into sections, thus hindering its future usefulness.

Now, it is only fair to the leaders of political parties in Japan to state that they have from the very outset always had to encounter what they consider to be unfair interference with the liberty and the opinions of private citizens by government officials. Count Okuma and other leading statesmen have repeatedly protested against the manner in which the Government has influenced elections, has done its best to suppress free political discussion in the Tokyo Imperial University and in other Government schools. It is alleged that most of the corruption that exists in political parties to-day is the result of the manner in which the Government has resorted to bribery. Of course it is quite impossible for a foreigner to find out exactly how much truth there is in the many charges that are brought against the anti-party officials. But when we find men like Count Okuma endorsing these charges it is impossible to dismiss them as nothing more than malicious newspaper slanders. We shall be quite safe in saying that the slow development of party-government in this country is largely owing to the determined stand against this form of government which Japanese officialdom has made. And we see no signs at present of any change in the official attitude to parties. The position of affairs is correctly described by Mr. Toyabe in the following sentences:—"The situation is critical as far as the parties are concerned. When Marquis Itō will return to this country nobody knows. In the meanwhile, Count Okuma may die and his party lose its coherency. Yamagata's party does not depend on him at all for its strength. It is a big official body that is not dependent on skillful leadership. Its coherency is assured by identity of interests in the members of the great organization and its popularity will last as long as it displays administrative ability of a bigger order than that shown by its rivals, the political party magnates. The compactness of the great official association to-day forms a striking contrast to the disjointed character of the organizations known as political parties, whose members are like a flock of crows that come and go as they please."

MRS. IRWINE'S SCHOOL.

A very pleasant time was spent on Wednesday afternoon by parents and friends of the pupils attending Mrs. E. C. Irwine's school at No. 72 Bluff, when the prizes won during the year were distributed and a programme of recitations gone through prior to breaking-up for the Easter holidays. The girls all did very well in their respective parts and the French ladies present were loud in their praise of the faultless accent and the facility which all showed in the language of la belle France. Mrs. E. C. Irwine, in opening the proceedings, said that the day marked the close of their fourth year of work, and as many of the pupils had been with her from the commencement, she need hardly express how satisfactory it was for her to see that the results aimed at from the first were gradually being achieved. Those among her audience who had read the last examination papers must have been struck with the great improvement over those of the previous Easter, and even of those of last Christmas. Every class had worked well and the friendly emulation and the esprit de corps prevailing among them had had the best results. Mrs. Irwine then accorded her sincerest thanks to her helpers, Miss Burdett Leach, Miss Talbot and Miss Griffin, and also to her first class for the example which it had set to the rest of the school. In regard to the programme which was to follow, Mrs. Irwine said that no school time had been wasted in rehearsals, all the items had been learnt during term, and only two rehearsals had been given to the little plays. The prizes (presented by Mrs. Irwine, Miss Burdett Leach, the Misses Talbot and Mr. Harold Irwine) were then distributed as follow:—

I. Class:—C. Brockhurst, A. Walter, I. Irwine, A. Talbot, and D. Dinsdale.
II. Class:—M. Cowen, M. Box, J. Sibiodon, E. Mischke, and D. Surth.
3rd and 4th Classes:—H. Cowen, D. Healing, D. Blake, H. Lefebvre, and H. Pollak.

This interesting ceremony was followed by a capital school programme which we append:—

PROGRAMME.

Song....."The Spring."
Poesses....."Rataplan".....T. Abbey.
"Le nid de fauvette".....H. Lefebvre.
"Le papillon et l'enfant".....S. Box.
"My bed is a boat".....H. Pollak.
"Dolly Rosie's Bath".....M. Colomb.
Song....."Dites, la jeune belle."
Poetry....."Le papillon et l'abeille".....D. Blake.
"Dolly's Christening".....D. Healing.
"Le clouetier dans sa forge".....F. Eoster.
"The bubble".....S. Box.
"La Source".....F. Foster.
"Le petit oiseau".....3rd class.
Song....."Time to Rise."
Scenes....."Minette".....D. Healing and H. Pollak.
"Il faut nous lever".....D. Healing & H. Cowen.
"Marie, venez dans le jardin".....H. Pollak and D. Blake.
"Voyez vous cette boîte".....3rd class.
Song....."Le carillon."
"Le cheval et l'âne".....M. Blum.
"Le coucher de Bebe".....D. Surth, E. Mischke and J. Sibiodon.
"Le déjeuner de Bebe".....D. Surth, E. Mischke and M. Box.
Song....."Good-night."
Poetry....."Where they grow".....E. Mischke.
"Le Pincon et la Pie".....H. Payne.
"The Story of a Star".....M. Sibiodon.
"La chute de un gland".....P. Blum.
Scene....."Bebe est mis au coin".....M. Cowen, J. and M. Sibiodon.
Song....."The Dancing Song."
Scene....."En tramway".....2nd class.
Poetry....."His names".....J. Sibiodon.
Song....."The Postillion."
Scene....."Un bureau de Poste".....A. Walter, D. Dinsdale, A. Talbot, C. Brock.
Poetry....."The Minuet".....I. Irwine.
Scene.....
Two scenes from....."Midsummer Night's Dream."
Scene....."Un Salon d'hotel".....I. Class.
National Songs: French, American and English.

MISS IRWINE'S KINDERGARTEN.

Miss Irwine's Kindergarten class broke up for the Easter holidays on Thursday afternoon, after entertaining a number of parents and friends with a charming programme of recitations and exhibition of school-work. Miss Irwine, in receiving her guests, said that at the last prize-giving she remembered saying that Yokohama seemed to have an erroneous idea of the Kindergarten, regarding it only as play. Her increased class, as well as the testimony of many of the parents showed that a truer appreciation of the work was now felt. During the past year the children, especially the old pupils, had shown a marked improvement in every subject; their answers in the different nature lessons had shown a great deal more thought, and their handwork was much neater. They enjoyed so much the sewing and weaving and never got tired of their lessons, as they were not kept for more than fifteen minutes at one subject, except the nature lesson or sand geography: to these were devoted half an hour. The following programme was then gone through, the children acquitting themselves well:—

"The Land of Short-frock" ..... The Class.
 "Peter," ..... Eric Clausen.
 "The Penny Whistle," ..... Hildegarde Mischke.
 "The Little Grey Bird," ..... Charlie Skrimshire.
 "Nature Lesson on the Rainbow and the Moon."
 "Jack Frost," ..... Marjorie Bellamy Brown.
 "Le Papillon et l'enfant," ..... Ian Munro.
 "French Lesson."
 "The Merry Mice," ..... Eric Bellamy Brown.
 "Bird's Thoughts," ..... Iris Neville.
 "Madame Sans Souci," ..... Marjorie Bellamy Brown.
 "The Rats," ..... Henry McLarty.
 "Rataplan," ..... Eric Bellamy Brown.
 "Mon petit oreille," ..... Iris Neville.
 "Going to School," ..... The Class.

THE LAW COURTS.

CLAIM FOR SHORT DELIVERY.

On April 6th, in the Yokohama District Court, the hearing of the case in which Messrs Mendelson Bros. claim twelve hundred yen from the Ocean Steamship Co. and the China Mutual Steam Navigation Co. was resumed before Judge Nakamishi.

Mr. M. D. Currie, sub-accountant of the International Banking Corporation, was examined as to the shipping documents for the cargo in dispute.

Mr. Currie stated that the bill of lading and other documents were handed to Messrs Mendelson Bros. through the International Banking Corporation which received the documents from the shipper.

Defendant's Counsel referring to the "Notice to Consignees" published in the local papers read that claims for damage and short delivery should be notified to the agents of the steamer within forty-eight hours after landing is completed, and said that the advertisement should have been observed by the plaintiffs. As the notice explained, the defendants had no responsibility. Counsel went on to say that the shipping agents were not liable for damage on short delivery of cargo which had been removed to the bonded warehouse of the Customs as the notice stipulated. Referring to Exhibit B-3—a bill of lading,—he said that the tin-plates specified had all been delivered to the consignees as to which delivery they made an endorsement on the document. The endorsement meant the receipt of complete delivery.

Plaintiffs' Counsel contended that the advertisement could not be admitted in the present dispute. Investigation as to damage or short delivery of large quantities such as tin-plates was quite impossible within forty-eight hours. Any advertisement the shipping agents published in the local papers in order to escape their liability could not bind the consignees. Counsel referring to the endorsement on the bill of lading of Exhibit B-3 said that the defendant's counsel had made a mistake. The bill of lading was signed by the shipper, and also by the consignees at the time when the latter presented the document to the ship's agents for counter-signature. The endorsements, therefore, did not mean receipt of complete delivery.

The parties further discussed the practice of landing and delivery of cargo, after which the plaintiffs asked the Court for leave to examine the representative of the tin factory of England who is now in Yokohama, Mr. M. Beart of Messrs. Butterfield and Swire, and Mr. F. J. Lias of Messrs. W. M. Strachan and Co., as witnesses, and the defendants' counsel applied to summon Capt. Weston for the same purpose. The Court agreed to both requests and decided to examine the representative of the factory on Monday, April 9th, and the other gentlemen on April 20th.

CLAIM FOR ELECTRIC LIGHTING.

On April 7th in the Yokohama District Court, the hearing of an action filed by the Yokohama Electric Light Co. against L. H. Abel, formerly residing at No. 159, Bluff, claiming payment for electric light supplied, amounting to yen 314.90, was brought on before Judge Nakanishi. Mr. S. Ota appeared for plaintiff, but the defendant was not represented.

Mr. Ota stated that the plaintiffs had supplied to the defendant electric light since January last year. The charges were only paid for the first four months, but the plaintiffs did not take any special procedure to obtain payment, because the defendant then held a responsible position in the Standard Oil Company. The plaintiffs subsequently pressed for payment when the defendant was released from the above company, and finally stopped the supply of electricity. One hundred yen was paid on January 29th this year, but since then the defendant had disappeared without settling the account.

Judgment was delivered in default, the defendant being ordered to pay the sum claimed with costs.

PETITION FOR DECISION IN BANKRUPTCY.

An action filed by Messrs. Samuel, Samuel & Co., asking for a decision in bankruptcy against R. Okawa, a drug merchant, came up again on April 9th in the Yokohama District Court.

T. Okawa, elder brother of the plaintiff, and K. Ito, Manager of the Jitsugyo Bank, were examined as witnesses.

T. Okawa deposed that he was engaged in the drug business jointly with the defendant. The business was being carried on in witness's name. However, the defendant practically attended to the business details and witness looked after the work of manufacturing peppermint. Witness did not know anything with regard to the transactions between plaintiffs and defendant. Further, witness was often traveling in the interior to obtain raw materials. As to the business relations between the brothers, the Court asked several questions, but no definite answer was given.

K. Ito, manager of the Jitsugyo Bank, said that the defendant had been one of the bank's customers since October, 1904. From April to December last defendant deposited several amounts at current account, paying in cheques issued by Messrs. Samuel, Samuel and Co. The accounts were credited in the name of Okawa Tomijiro, and the paying-out was made in the name of Okawa Ryonosuke per pro. the former.

T. Okawa was again examined. He said that he did not know the details of the present case between Messrs. Samuel, Samuel and Co. and R. Okawa. About January 30th or 31st this year, Tanaka Zensuke, one of the banto of the British firm, told witness that Mr. E. C. Davis had presented a petition to the Yokohama District Court asking for decision in bankruptcy. Later witness's elder brother also told him about the case.

The Court said that R. Okawa, whom the plaintiff's Counsel had asked to be examined for guidance, was ill and unable to be present in Court. Counsel asked the Bench to examine the man and the Court decided to examine him at his dwelling on April 12th.

ACTING RIGHTS OF "MONNA VANNA."

Mr. F. Uda, a merchant of Tokyo, filed a petition in the Yokohama Local Court against Mr. O. Kawakami, the well-known actor, who is now in Osaka, asking for the seizure of the translation of the drama Monna Vanna. As a result, the acting rights in the drama were sold by auction on April 9th for eighty yen at the office of Mr. Kusakabe, one of the bailiffs belonging to the Yokohama Local Court. The drama, which was being performed at the Nakaza theatre, Osaka, has been suspended.

It is alleged that Kawakami borrowed sixty thousand yen from the plaintiff when the former established the Kawakamiza theatre in Tokyo. Since then the defendant had not repaid any of the money advanced while his theatrical business has been a success, especially his representation of Monna Vanna, which was welcomed in Tokyo and Osaka.

CLAIM FOR SHORT DELIVERY.

The case in which Messrs. Siber, Wolff and Co. claim yen 1,541.80 from Messrs. Butterfield and Swire, Yokohama agents of the China Mutual S. S. Co., for short delivery of cargo came up again on April 11th in the Yokohama District Court.

Defendant's Counsel stated that the responsibility of the ship's owner as to transportation of cargo ended on the arrival of the steamer at the port of destination. According to the bill-of-lading, consignees had to take delivery of cargo alongside the ship immediately after she was ready to discharge. Further, the goods in dispute were stolen while laying in the customs shed. So long as the goods were stored in the shed, they were under the supervision of the Customs authorities; accordingly the defendants could not be held responsible for them. Counsel further added that B. Miramide and H. Watanabe were later arrested on a charge of having stolen the goods and are now detained in the Yokohama Prison as convicts. Counsel asked the Court to summon them as witnesses and also Mr. Tomii, one of the tide-waiters of the Yokohama Customs, for the same purpose.

The Court decided to examine the three men, and the hearing was adjourned till April 25th.

THE FAMINE.

Immediately on receipt of the news of a famine in north-eastern Japan, thirty-four members of the Japan Society of London put down their names for over £402, being an average of nearly £13 each, or, say, 130 yen. The English contributions to the famine-relief fund have been divided so that it is difficult to form a general estimate, but the total has probably been very large.

The following taxes will not be collected in the famine districts this year: Miyagi prefecture, yen 777,111; Iwate prefecture, yen 328,540; and Fukushima prefecture, yen 992,409.

It is reported that the official number of deserving poor of Wakamatsu (Aizu) is 2,300. There are among them four classes (Ko-otsu-hei-ter). The first includes 110 families and the second 190.

A call this morning from Mr. Asonuma, of the Sendai Relief Committee, gave the following facts:—Over five hundred children have been gathered into different orphanages (or "Homes," as they prefer to be called), and there are as many more who ought to be there, but cannot travel in their poor, dirty rags.

Mr. Asonuma had just been to Okayama with one hundred and twenty children, and was returning to Sendai. He brought the thanks of the Committee for the clothing already sent; and said it had been a great help. His request was that present efforts in that line should be given entirely to clothing the children of from six to twelve, or thirteen, years of age: so anyone who has a piece of cloth, old or new, no matter what shape, big enough to make a child's garment, please send at once, to one of the mission schools, where it will be made up and sent off as soon as a bag can be filled.

Mr. Asonuma says the worst is over, because the severe cold has passed, but that there will be much to do until harvest time.

C. VAN PETTEN.

Bishop Harris has received from the Missionary Society and other sources yen 11,138 for the Famine Sufferers.

The Bishop will be in Kiushu till the last of April attending the annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church and making addresses.

The Executive Committee of the Yokohama and Tokyo Foreign Residents' Association for the Relief of Sufferers by the War gratefully acknowledge receipt of the following sums towards the Famine Relief Fund now being collected:—

Yen.
 Amount already acknowledged ..... 10,955.60
 Mr. J. P. Mollison ..... 100.00

"THE CAPTIVES OF BABYLON"

In many respects the second performance of the oratorio, "The Captives of Babylon," by the augmented choir of Union Church, Yokohama, was an improvement upon the first presentation. The choir, to begin with, was at its full strength, several who were unavoidably absent by reason of colds at the first performance, being in their places; Mr. Cooper, Mr. Kendall and Miss Mendelson also were more at home in their parts, while Mr. Vincent, who conducted, imparted a brisker touch to all the choruses, brightening them considerably in the declamatory passages, and deepening the modulation in others. Apart from the chorus work, the outstanding gems of the evening were Mr. Somerton's short solo, "Sing us one of the songs of Zion"; the duet between Miss Mendelson and Mrs. Thom in the first part, and the closing quartette, "When the Lord turned again the captivity of Zion." These were most expressively rendered. Mrs. Thom is to be congratulated upon the manner in which she filled at short notice the part relinquished by Mrs. W. T. Payne. She will be a distinct acquisition to the ranks of local singers. On this occasion the audience, though scanty in numbers, were very appreciative and expressed their approval heartily, both to soloists and chorus, and at the close Mr. Vincent had repeatedly to bow his thanks. Miss Blundell again accompanied most admirably.

CORRESPONDENCE.

FAMINE RELIEF IN FUKUSHIMA.

(TO THE EDITOR OF THE "JAPAN MAIL.")

SIR.—A month ago you were good enough to insert in your paper a letter and list of subscribers to my "Fukushima Ken Famine Fund." I shall be glad if you will let me through this letter express my sincere thanks to all who have assisted me to perform a sad, but pleasing duty, in feeding the hungry and helping them in their distress. I regard it a great privilege to be able to do so.

Since my last letter I am glad to report things are looking much brighter and the people are seen turning over the soil, making and repairing roads, so able to earn a little money. Higher up the hills the snow still prevents work, but the warm days and bright sun will soon melt it.

The worst of the distress has passed, and although men are gradually able to resume work we must try and help them until their wheat harvest. The need of help should be less and less each month until June or July, after which our help will be no longer needed. Considering this and the very large sums of money in aid of the sufferers which have been sent, very much of which is yet not distributed we may consider it is not too early to let our friends in the Home Lands know facts. They have come forward like true Christians to help their neighbour, and none the less those foreigners who are resident in Japan. I do not wish in the least to stay the hand of any one who feels it his duty and his privilege to give and help some poor creature living under the misfortunes of poverty and sickness in its various forms, together with the aged old folk and inner rural life altogether unknown to city people. There may be some who have not yet contributed (though I think, they are few) to the Famine Fund; I hope they will feel it their duty to do so and so have a share in this noble work of helping our neighbour when in need. Any further aid in money or kind will be well spent among the very poor in the large towns, who through the high price of food stuff have for some months found it hard to live. Indeed I have seen and known many very sad cases here in Fukushima. At the earnest request of some officials I have opened up relief in Fukushima. Tickets are to be obtained through the police for which, when presented they get from 1 to 3 sho of rice. In Fukushima a Ken from 25 to 50 yen per month is given to 19 villages, and in most of them rice is given and not money even to the Yakuba. In my case we have been able to give with our own hands rice to the poor of several villages, but our relief work through the kind help of friends has outgrown personal supervision.

Every month at least 1300 hot meals are served out to poor school children. This will be no longer needed after May. At least 1000 persons are receiving rice every week.

Already published March 5th ..... 2,955.06
Foreign Collection, per Rt. Rev. Bishop
Partridge ..... 5.00
Three Australian Ladies, Fusan, Corea ..... 15.00
Monoyama Middle School, Osaka ..... 30.15
Yokohama Lodge (Masonic) ..... 50.00
Yokohama Chapter ..... 50.00
Three friends, per H. V. Lea ..... 45.00
Nippon Sei Kokwai, Fusan, Corea ..... 10.00
Hon. Treasurer Christ Church, Yokohama ..... 100.00
English Church, Seoul, Corea ..... 60.00
English Church, Chemulpo, Corea ..... 7.50
A Member of Yokohama Lodge (Masonic) ..... 10.00
Yokohama and Tokyo Foreign Residents
Relief Fund ..... 1,500.00

Visitors and Residents, Oriental Hotel,
Kobe ..... 225.00
H. Russell ..... 5.00
Total ..... 5,070.71
W. H. SMART,
St. Stephen's Parsonage, Fukushima.
March 6th, 1906.

RESULTS OF THE WAR BETWEEN RUSSIA AND JAPAN.

[AN ADDRESS BY DAVID STARR JORDAN.]

In this presence I have come to be admitted as one of the minor prophets. Around this table I have prophesied that we would be some day soul-weary of the glory and the cost of the Philippines, that China would some day find her version of the golden rule,—to do unto others the things you are tired of having them do unto you,—that Russia could never conquer Japan; and now I am asked to say, what next?

I cannot answer this; no white man can. For to do this we must fathom the Oriental mind, the mind that is to determine the Oriental future. The Oriental mind is mostly human,—thinks and acts as you do,—but it is very, very old, and our race of parvenus on the field of history cannot grasp its sinuosities.

For old Japan, new Japan has come to the parting of the ways. One way leads through military glory to the empire, to the lime-light glare and national bankruptcy. The other leads through development of resources, economy, patience, and education, to the highest achievements of the highest races. Doubtless the future will lie between the two, for history never throws a clean switch, but no one can yet tell which set of tendencies will have the lead.

The programme of the lime-light involved a great indemnity to be used for strengthening of army and navy, for holding Korea of course, and ultimately Manchuria, for subsidies to manufactures and commerce, which will give the appearance of prosperity. "Japan for the Japanese," and maybe China also, and withal an active part in the world politics. Japan has tasted blood, and after this life is never again quite the same.

Peace without subsidy checks this plan. Money-lenders charge a high interest on cash spent on glory. In the future war and peace is a matter of the bankers, a matter of public opinion.

Many Japanese, no doubt, have dreamed that Japan should lead armies of civilization, while England and America would pay the bills, and the final shower of Russian gold should make every Japanese rich. Japan has her snobs, her fools, her knaves, and her jingoes the same as the most favored nations. But she has also her men of sense and foresight, and these still have the upper hand. Their first task must be to disband their army, as we disbanded ours in '65. No longer needed as soldiers, let them be citizens again. She has shown the perfection of military science in forming this army; an equal effort in a greater science is needed to dissolve this splendid creation.

Once at peace, the army disbanded, the Japanese have several things to learn. As an avowed admirer of Japan, you may pardon me for exposing some of her elements of weakness. They must master the art of trade. This does not come natural to them, and for two main reasons: In the first place, deferred payment, or credit, is a feature alien to the life of old Japan. If a man owes anything let his neighbors pay it, and let the amount be decided on the basis of old customs or forgotten equities. Second, in old Japan every effort was made to discourage trade; barriers were raised—often physical walls of sand and stones—around each county, and a greater wall, tariff on tariff, about the island empire as a whole. The samurai, the feudal retainers who through the ages have given Japanese life its colour and tone, had no money,—could neither buy nor sell, and by law the merchant caste still stands lowest of all—below the artisan, the farmer, the coolie even, only the outcast being still lower. So trade, as we know it, must be understood and its rules must be practised before Japan can lead in commerce. The power of voluntary cooperation to do things in a large way the Japanese have yet to acquire. The profits of her busy commerce exceed but little the subsidies she ships receive.

The Japanese must learn the art of law-making and law-abiding. Statutes are of little force in Japan—the law that men obey is the law of old tradition. New statutes, as, for example, the protection of birds or fishes, are secured with difficulty—usually ignored when secured. The law which counts is the custom of three thousand years, and this the men of Japan respect, be it good or bad.

Japan has yet to learn the art of manufacture, to do things in the large and do them right. Art in Japan is a matter of exquisite development. Nothing can be more refined, more dainty than Japanese things of beauty. And many things not beautiful are needed in Japan and are made there, but not as the Europeans make them. Japanese artisanship is clumsy and crude. It is counted that in factories one American workman is worth four Japanese. So that in the large common Japanese labour is not cheap labour, except in the crude purposes for which coolie labour can be used. Cheap labour is never cheap. That is cheapest in which the individual man counts most. It is true that Japan has great manufacturing cities. Osaka is as large as Manchester or Pittsburg, and her smoke hangs as black over the green fields. But it will be many years before she can be a rival to these cities in commercial output. When she is, then wages will have risen, and with it the whole standard of living.

Japan has yet to learn agriculture. The tourist in Japan goes from Tokyo to Kyoto, then to Kobe or Nagasaki. He knows the Japan of the swarming villages, the dainty squares and strips of rice fields, green tea gardens, entrancing flower gardens, the hand-painted landscape. He sees, or thinks he sees, that Japan is crowded, very overcrowded, every foot of land worked to the utmost, no room for expansion or extension of any form of agriculture. But this is an optical illusion. In fact, barely half the arable land of Japan is cultivated, and that not the best half. Great tracts in the North, fit for wheat, rye, oats, barley, potatoes, Indian corn, or hay, are almost wholly unused—moors of the red sedges, covered with red swamp grasses, logs, and weeds. Japan has no wagon roads and inadequate railroads, no horses, no cows, no sheep, no goats, no hogs, no butter, no cheese, no orchards, no vineyards, no fruit, no turnips, cabbages, carrots, pumpkins, squashes—scarcely anything to show in agriculture save rice, tea, lacquer, and silk; nothing in domestic animals save a few bodiless chickens, half-starved dogs and measly cats. Everything in agriculture is in the style of two thousand years ago, unspecialized—nothing worked to the fullest modern economic advantage. The Japanese people are very poor; the average earning is less than a dollar a week—some estimate a dollar a month; their holdings per capita less than a hundred dollars. Of course these matters are changing from day to day, and a sweeping statement is no longer true. There is now and then a horse, a cow, an apple tree, a field of varied grains. The agricultural stations of the government are doing their best to accustom Japan to the successful methods of other countries. But the population of Japan could be doubled without crowding if every resource were developed. It is said that all Japan could be fed with the waste of America. Another Japan could be with the waste of Japan, not the waste of lavish carelessness, but that of limited and antiquated methods. The vast fisheries of the North, more than doubled by the acquisition of Saghalin, have yet to be worked in a commercial way, while the equally valuable fisheries of the South are almost ruined for lack of protection.

Japan must learn the art of education—to educate men as men, not as a part of a group or a caste. It must substitute real democracy for what is left of feudal communism. It must break down caste, and it must make the best of whatever of varied talent may arise among her people. The strong men born in the nobility can never make a great nation. It takes all the strength there is. As things are, the trade is greater than the man, and this destroys adaptability to new conditions. The student is all student—he can do nothing but study; the warrior is all warrior—he knows nothing but fighting; the jirikisha man is all legs; the farmer is all farmer. His clothing was fashioned for him two thousand years before he was born, and he can never change it. He is chained to his caste and cannot get out of it, whatever his fitness for other or higher things.

The relation of the man to the state, most effective in the late war, must never be so effective again. The man is more than the state, as he is more than the Sabbath. In a more advanced civilization than that of Japan, the state is a creation of the man. It exists for his convenience, for his development, and has no other divine right or consequence.

The present war cannot fail to hasten the day of individualism in Japan. For better or for worse, social conditions will align themselves to those of the rest of the world. This will change the status of women. In old Japan the woman is the most perfect type of self-abnegation. The most beautiful self-renunciation is the ideal womanhood. But with advancing civilization woman becomes more human, less an angel, less a slave. In Europe a test of democracy is seen in the number of women riding on the trams. In a few years the number has relatively doubled. So has the number of women in the universities. So will it be in Japan, and with the individualism of women will rise a higher morality, less ideal, more real. In these changes there will be shocks of opinion; there will be labour troubles; there will be riots and breaches in the fine art of Japanese politeness. Japan in convulsion will be less agreeable than Japan in the calm of her ancient glories.

The idealism of patriotism, the spirit of Bushido, the fine art of the "warrior's way," then, may endure in Japan. Science will flourish there. It finds no rank growth of superstition to bar its way. It finds no dead weight of inertia, for Japan is a land of movement. It will be potent not alone in war and medicine, but will be taken seriously in all its ramifications. It will cost more to live in Japan than it does now, for men will be worth more. The birth rate will be lowered, and the death rate as well. The rich will grow richer and the poor poorer, as in other civilized lands, for the feudal socialism which prevents men from rising also keeps men from falling. Men becoming more important will demand more for themselves and ask more of others. Individual Japanese will come to the front in the work of the world, and this is my final prophecy, that on the whole the new Japan will be greater than the old. She will do her part in civilization without losing her old beauty or the fragrance of her old ideals.

We heard much, not long since, of the "yellow peril," of the four hundred million Chinamen who, under the lead of forty million Japanese, would trample down and devour our Western civilization. This talk of yellow peril is crude nonsense. Unless we of the West lend Asia the money, she will never send an army against Europe. Asia is poor and Europe is rich, and war burns out wealth as it burns out vitality. But a yellow awakening is sure to come. Not a yellow peril, but a yellow enlightenment. The dawn will come to China as it has already come to Japan. More slowly the sun rises over Chinese lethargy, but in much the same way. In Boxer times Japanese gentlemen have said to me: "We know how those people feel toward foreigners. We used to feel just that way ourselves." Later the Chinese will know the feelings of the men who endowed the great Imperial University of Tokyo, an institution consecrated not to the best of Japan, but to the best of the world. The awakening of China will come through Japan. Already five thousand Chinese students are in the Imperial University and the other colleges of Tokyo. Already hundreds of Japanese teachers are in the schools of China. Japanese influence is everywhere in China. It is not always friendly to us or our interests, but we cannot blame it for that. Agitation for exclusion is a game that more than one nation can play at. But, on the whole, the influence works for our good as well as for that of China. It means the economic and social redemption of China. Those without money and with nothing to sell cannot buy. Give the Chinaman the chance at home that he makes for himself elsewhere. Then the star of the jelly-fish nation mid others will shine as fair. China will be no longer a watermelon to be cut up by robbers, but a nation to be respected. Then we shall realize the dream of Chinese trade. There is no trade with a pauper state. It is said that our much discussed commerce through the open door of Mukden is less than the trade in eggs and chickens between Detroit and Windsor in Canada. To us of the Pacific, in the trade centre of the world, China will be our best customer and Japan our most helpful mediator.

Once in Sendai, Japan, I was asked to give a talk before the common council of the city on "How to Make Sendai a Better City." A venerable old man, now mayor of Sendai, acted as spokesman for the Japanese. He said to me: "Japan is like a country boy newly come to the city. He finds a brother there who had been long in the city and knows the ways and could help him that he should make no mistakes. This kind and helpful brother is America, and Japan is stepping slowly into the complexity of modern civilization leaning on America's helping hand."

Another metaphor of Chinese origin. China is the giant who crosses the river; Japan, the dwarf upon his back. But the dwarf can see farther than the giant, and deeper into the water. So as they move along, to the giant he points out the shallows and the depths in the stream. Some day the stream will be crossed, the helping hand no longer needed, and the two shores of the Pacific will be inhabited by great friendly nations, whose mutual respect will be good for both, and whose mutual trade will be a source of mutual enrichment, and the intermingling of whose peoples will be a perennial source of embarrassment to the rulers of both — The Advocate of Peace.

CUSTOMS TARIFF.

(CONTINUED FROM NEXT ISSUE.)

GROUP XI.

COTTON AND COTTON MANUFACTURED GOODS.

	Ad val.	Specific	Ad val.	Specific
	Duty.	Duty.	Duty.	Duty.
	%	yen.	%	yen.
233—Grey shirtings and sheetings ... 10 sq. yards ...	0.31		0.012
234—Shirtings, white or bleached, and white sheetings ... 10 sq. yards ...	0.41		0.018

235—Shirtings, twilled ... 10 sq. yards ...	0.37		0.023
236—Coloured cambrics, and turkey red cambric ... 10 sq. yards ...	0.39		0.021
237—T. Cloth ... 10 sq. yards ...	0.43		0.018
238—Cotton drills ... 10 sq. yards ...	0.63		0.024
239—Cotton Duck ... 10 sq. yards ...	1.56		0.097
240—Cotton Satins and Cotton Italians ... 10 sq. yards ...	0.76		0.038
241—Cotton Prints ... 10 sq. yards ...	0.49		0.023
242—Cotton flannel or flannelette ... 10 sq. yards ...	0.73		0.033
243—Cotton Velvet, or Velve- teens ... 10 sq. yards ...	1.36		0.08
244—Victoria Lawns ... 10 sq. yards ...	0.21		0.01
245—Cotton for mosquito- netting ... 10 sq. yards ...	0.41		0.023
246—Cotton lace for window curtains ... 30 ...
247—Pure cotton, not herein enumerated ... 30 ...
248—Pure Linen damasks ... 10 sq. yards ...	2.33		0.091
249—Pure linens, not herein enumerated ... 30 ...
250—Jute tissues ... 30 ...
251—Flax and ramie tissues ... 30 ...
252—Canvas for sails ... 10 sq. yards ...	1.48
253—Elastic canvas ... 10 sq. yards ...	0.57
254—Gunny tissue ... 10 ...
255—Clukufu and Hori ... 10 sq. yards ...	0.77		0.027
256—Woollen and worsted cloth and Serges. 1. Woollen cloth. a. Each square yard not exceeding 250 grammes ... 10 sq. yards ...	1.60		0.166
b. Others ... 3.20
2. Woollen and Cotton cloth. a. Each square yard not exceeding 250 grammes ... 10 sq. yards ...	1.00		0.083
b. Others ... 1.60
257—Alpaca, Orleans, and lustrés ... 10 sq. yards ...	1.46		various
258—Mousseline de laine (woollen and cotton mixed). 1. Gray and White ... 10 sq. yards ...	0.87		various
2. Others ... 1.10
259—Italian cloth 10 sq. yards ...	1.22		0.059
260—Flannels. 1. Woollen ... 10 sq. yards ...	1.64		0.075
2. Woollen and cotton mixed ... 10 sq. yards ...	1.43		0.075
261—Bunting ... 10 sq. yards ...	0.98		0.048
262—Pure woollen and worsted damasks ... 10 sq. yards ...	2.50		0.062
263—Velvet, (woollen, or woollen and cotton mixed) 10 sq. yards ...	2.40		0.023
264—Roller cloth ... 10 sq. yards ...	4.20		0.023
265—Woollen Felt ... 10 sq. yards ...	1.34		0.061
266—Pure woollen damasks not herein enumerated 30 ...
267—Silk crapes ... 10 sq. yards ...	6.76		0.277
268—Silk pongee ( kenchu ) 10 sq. yards ...	1.55		0.058
269—Silk satin, figured ... 10 sq. yards ...	5.61		0.285
270—Silk satin ... 10 sq. yards ...	9.50		0.432
271—Silk faced satin (silk and cotton mixed) 10 sq. yards ...	3.04		0.196
272—Velvet (silk only or silk faced velvet) 10 sq. yards ...	4.90		0.201
273—Pure silk damasks not herein enumerated ... 40 ...			15
274—Cotton and Silk damasks not herein enumerated. 1. Cotton mixed with silk ... 40 ...			15
2. Others ... 30 ...			15
275—Silk tissues, embroidered ... 40 ...
276—Handkerchiefs. 1. In piece. a. Of cotton ... 10 sq. yards ...	0.37		0.025
b. Of cotton and silk mixed ... 45 ...
c. Others ... 30 ...
2. Singly. a. Of cotton ... dozen ...	0.22		0.068
b. Of linen ... dozen ...	0.88		0.291
c. Of linen and cotton ... dozen ...	0.46		0.18

d. Of silk or of silk mixed ... 50 ...	25
e. Others ... 40 ...
277—Towels ... 40 ...
278—Blankets. 1. Of wool or of wool and cotton mixed ... 100 kin ...	32.80
2. Others ... 30 ...			various
279—Grey and white carpets and carpetings. 1. Jute and yellow hemp carpetings ... 10 sq. yards ...	1.60		0.096
2. Carpets and carpetings, Brussels ... 10 sq. yards ...	7.30		0.412
3. Patent tapestries ... 10 sq. yards ...	3.70		0.215
4. Carpets and carpetings, velvet ... 40 ...
5. Carpets and carpetings, felt ... 10 sq. yards ...	1.30		0.073
6. Others ... 40 ...	20
280—Travelling Rugs. 1. Of Silk, or of Silk mixed ... 50 ...	25
2. Others ... 40 ...	15
281—Table cloth. 1. Of silk or of silk mixed ... 50 ...	25
2. Others ... 40 ...	20
282—Curtains. 1. Of Silk wholly or in part ... 50 ...	25
2. Others ... 40 ...	20
283—Mosquito-nets ... 40 ...	20
284—Hammocks ... 40 ...
285—Fishing nets ... 25 ...
286—Elastic boot webbing. 1. Of silk in part ... 10 sq. yards ...	15.10
2. Others ... 8.87
287—Book-binder's cloth ... 10 sq. yards ...	0.42		0.026
288—Leather cloth ... 10 sq. yards ...	1.07
289—Oil cloth for floor and linoleum ... 10 sq. yards ...	1.83
290—Elastic Braids and cords ... 30 ...	15
291—Insulating tape 100 kin ... 17.99
292—Lamp wicks ... 30 ...
293—Gunny bags 100 pieces ... 1.39
294—Old gunny bags ... free
295—Old waste cloth ... free
296—Other tissues ... 30 ...
297—Other tissues, not herein enumerated. 1. Of silk, or of silk mixed ... 50 ...
2. Others ... 40 ...
GROUP XII.
298—Rain Coat (waterproof coat) ... 40 ...	25
299—Shirts, collars and cuffs ... 40 ...	20
300—Undershirts and drawers. 1. Of cotton knit ... dozen ...	4.00		1.642
2. Of woollen knit ... 7.00			3.325
3. Of cotton and woollen knit ... dozen ...	4.20		2.165
4. Others ... 40 ...
301—Gloves. 1. Of leather ... dozen ...	4.40
2. Of silk or of silk mixed ... 3.00			20
3. Others ... 1.40
302—Socks, hose, or stockings. 1. Of Silk, wholly or in part ... 1 kin ...	2.50	25
2. Others ... 0.80	20
303—Shawls and Comforters. 1. Of Silk, feather, fur, silk in part, feather in part, and fur in part ... 50 ...
2. Others ... 40 ...	20
304—Neckties. 1. Of Silk, wholly or in part ... 1 kin ...	5.50	25
2. Others ... 2.00
305—Suspenders. 1. Of Silk, wholly or in part ... 50 ...	25
2. Others ... dozen ...	1.30
306—Arm-suspenders and stocking suspenders and others similar ... 40 ...
307—Hats ... 40 ...	30
308—Boots and Shoes of all kinds ... 40 ...	20
309—Buttons (excepting buttons for ornament purpose). 1. Buttons covered ... 100 kin gross ...	87.50	20
2. Of metal ... 34.00	20

3. Of porcelain and glass	100 kin gross	10.70	20	...
4. Of ivory-nuts (including imitation).....	100 kin gross	52.40	...	...
5. Others .....	35	...	...	...
310—Buckles, hooks, and eyes.
1. Buckles .....	100 kin	13.60	20	...
2. Hooks.....	"	23.10	20	...
3. Buckles, Hooks, and Eyes .....	"	36.20	20	...
4. Others .....	35	...	20	...
311—Personal trimmings of all kinds.
1. With precious metal or stones.....	60	...	30	...
2. Others .....	50	...	20	...
312—Ornamental articles, (including braids, cords, laces, fringes, knots, stars, metallic threads and braids, etc.)
1. Of gold, silver, and silk, and of gold, silver, and silk, wholly or in part .....	50	...	20	...
2. Others .....	40	...	...	...

GROUP XIII.

PAPERS, PAPER WARES, BOOKS AND PICTURES.

314—Printing paper.
1. Sheets not exceed 1,686 sq. inches and 500 sheets not exceed 45 lbs. in weight.....	100 kin	1.00	...	1,560
2. Others.....	"	1.95	15	...
315—Paper for writing .....	"	2.42	15	...
316—Paper for drawing .....	"	3.08	15	...
317—Blotting paper .....	"	2.15	15	...
318—Filtering paper .....	"	19.70	15	...
319—Fancy paper .....	"	3.45	15	...
320—Book binding paper .....	"	3.65	15	...
321—Packing paper (including match-box wrapper).....	100 kin	1.26	15	...
321—Cigarette paper .....	"	12.30	15	...
323—Wall paper .....	"	5.06	15	...
324—Card boards .....	"	2.40	15	...
325—Toshi, Chinese paper .....	100 kin	5.60	15	...
326—Imitation Japanese paper .....	100 kin	4.30	15	...
327—Imitation leather .....	"	4.15	15	...
328—Other kinds of paper .....	30	...	...	...
329—Books, blank and printed blank form .....	30	...	15	...
330—Letter paper with envelopes contained in box together with box .....	100 kin	15.10	15	...
331—Album .....	40	...	25	...
332—Papers for photographic purposes.
1. Albuminized paper.....	100 kin gross	65.90	...	...
2. Bromide paper and platinum paper .....	100 kin gross	112.00	...	...
3. Others.....	"	89.40	...	...
333—Labels.....	100 kin	30.70	15	...
334—Playing cards .....	60	...	15	...
335—Photograph, autograph and pictures .....	50	...	15	...
336—Printing matters and pictures for advertisement .....	free	free	...	...
337—Illustrated postal cards and Christmas cards, etc. .....	50	...	15	...
338—Books, copy-books, teaching, drawing, musical books, newspapers, and magazines.....	free	free	...	...
339—Construction plans .....	free	free	...	...
340—Maps, charts, and other scientific plans .....	free	free	...	...
341—Notes, bank-notes, coupons, shares and other valuable documents.....	free	free	...	...
342—Waste paper .....	free	free	...	...
343—Other paper not herein enumerated .....	30	...	...	...

GROUP XIV.

ORES AND STONE ORES.

344—Mineral ores .....	free	free	...	...
345—Precious stones.
1. Not worked.....	40	...	30	...
2. Worked, (not herein enumerated) .....	50	...	35	...
346—Stones.
1. Not worked.....	10	...	...	...
2. Worked, (not herein enumerated) .....	30	...	...	...
347—Amber.
1. Not worked.....	40	...	10	...

2. Worked, (not herein enumerated) .....	50	...	20	...
348—Plumbago or black lead .....	free	free	...	0.995
349—Asbestos .....	10	...	...	1.268
350—Mica.
1. In sheet or board.....	100 kin	28.90	10	...
2. Others .....	10	...	...	...
351—Gypsum .....	100 kin	0.12	...	0.064
352—Plaster of Paris .....	"	0.27	...	0.155
353—Phosphoric minerals .....	free	free	...	...
354—Cyanite, kieselite, carnalite, and others resembling salt .....	free	free	...	...
355—Cryolite.....	free	free	...	...
356—Clay .....	free	free	...	ton.
357—Coal .....	free	free	...	0.879
358—Coke .....	Eng. ton	2.18	...	0.789
359—Coal briquettes .....	10	...	5	...
360—Chalk and whiting.....	100 kin	0.54	...	0.245
361—Emery sands .....	free	free	...	5
362—Grind stones .....	10	...	5	...
363—Other mineral materials .....	10	...	...	...

GROUP XV.

METALS.

364—Platinum.
1. Ingot or slab .....	7½	...	5	...
2. Wire or sheet.....	1 kin	150.00	10	...
365—Gold bullion .....	free	free	...	...
366—Silver bullion .....	free	free	...	...
367—Iron and Steel.
1. Ingot.
a. Pig .....	100 kin	0.10	...	0.113
b. Others .....	"	0.60	...	...
2. Bars and rods (exceeding ¼ inch in diameter) .....	30	...	...	0.464
3. Wire, bar and rod, not exceeding ¼ inch in diameter .....	100 kin	2.00	...	0.665
4. Galvanized wire .....	100 kin	1.80	...	0.591
5. Hoop and band .....	"	0.72	...	0.502
6. Ribon .....	10	...	...	...
7. Wire (or paragon ribs) .....	100 kin	4.05	...	...
8. Wire rope.
a. Galvanized .....	"	4.50	...	1.367
b. Others .....	"	6.00	...	...
9. Tinned plates or sheets.
a. Plain.....	100 kin	1.34	...	0.961
b. All other .....	"	3.60	10	...
10. Plates and sheets.
a. Galvanized .....	100 kin	2.60	...	0.935
b. All other .....	30	...	...	0.499
11. T-plate, Angle and all other similar articles.....	100 kin	1.10	...	0.539
12. Rails .....	"	1.00	...	0.384
13. Fish plates (for rails) .....	100 kin	1.20	...	0.471
14. Pipes and tubes .....	30	...	10	...
15. Waste or old (only fit for remanufacturing) .....	100 kin	0.17	5	...
368—Spiegel Eisen.....	"	0.16	...	...
369—Copper.
1. Ingot and slab .....	7½	...	5	...
2. Bar and rod .....	100 kin	10.20	...	5.206
3. Wire.....	"	11.20	...	6.306
4. Plates and sheets.....	100 kin	11.00	...	5.115
5. Pipes and tubes .....	"	13.00	...	5.948
6. Old, (only fit for remanufacturing) .....	100 kin	1.66	...	1.342
370—Lead.
1. Ingot and slab .....	"	0.38	...	0.420
2. Wire and plates and sheets.....	100 kin	1.60	...	0.982
3. Tea-lead .....	free	free	...	...
4. Tubes .....	100 kin	1.90	...	1.148
5. Old, (fit only for remanufacturing) .....	7½	...	...	...
371—Tin.
1. Ingot and slab .....	100 kin	3.74	...	3.377
2. Plates and sheets .....	20	...	10	...
3. Tubes .....	20	...	20	...
372—Zinc.
1. Ingot and slab .....	100 kin	0.72	...	0.559
2. Plates and sheets.
a. Nickel plated .....	100 kin	3.82	...	1.407
b. All other.
No. 2 plates and sheets .....	free	...	...	...
All other .....	100 kin	2.27	...	0.353
3. Old, (only fit for remanufacturing) .....	100 kin	0.57	...	0.353

373—Nickel.
1. Block and ingots .....	100 kin	4.65	...	4.831
2. Bar, rod, wire, plates or sheets, and tubes .....	20	...	...	4.831
374—Mercury or quicksilver .....	100 kin	7.20	...	7.617
375—Aluminium.
1. Block ingot and slab .....	100 kin	3.96	5	...
2. Bar, wire, plates or sheets, and tubes .....	100 kin	18.80	5	...
376—Antimony.....	7½	...	...	0.391
377—Brass and yellow metal.
1. Bar and rod .....	100 kin	6.70	...	5.195
2. Wire, and plates or sheets .....	100 kin	7.40	...	4.748
3. Pipes or tubes .....	"	9.40	...	4.924
4. Old, (fit only for re-manufacturing).....	100 kin	2.06	...	0.986
378—German Silver (bar, rod, wire plates and sheets) .....	100 kin	14.50	...	7.583
379—Soldier .....	7½	...	5	...
380—Babbitt's Metal and other anti-friction metals.....	100 kin	3.50	20	...
381—All other metals, and the metals above mentioned having shape and quality not otherwise provided for.
1. Ingot and slab .....	7½	...	5	...
2. Bar, rod, knob, belt, wire, plates or sheets, pipe, tube, angle shape, and of other similar nature (excepting articles for ornamental purposes) .....	20	...	20	...
3. Waste and old, (only fit for re-manufacturing) .....	7½	...	...	...

GROUP XVI.

METALLIC MANUFACTURES.

382—Coins.
1. Japanese species and foreign gold and silver currency .....	free	free	...	...
2. Others .....	10	...	5	...
383—Metallic foil and powder.
1. Tin foil .....	100 kin	19.60	...	12.221
2. Bronze powder .....	"	19.80	...	12.216
3. Others .....	25	...	15	...
384—Capsules for bottles .....	1000 pcs.	0.63	15	...
385—Crown corks .....	gross	0.10	...	...
386—Sewing and knitting needles and pins.
1. Needles for hand sewing .....	1 kin	0.45	...	...
2. Needles for machines .....	1 kin	3.90	...	...
3. Others .....	30	...	...	...
387—Pen nibs.
1. Gold .....	1 kin	60	...	30
2. Others .....	gross	0.16	15	...
388—Nails, rivets, screws, bolts and nuts, etc.
1. Nails, (of iron or copper).
a. Iron.
Galvanized .....	100 kin	4.20	10	...
Others.....	"	1.60	...	0.583
b. Copper .....	"	13.50	...	6.010
2. Screws of iron or brass.
a. Iron .....	20	...	10	...
b. Brass .....	100 kin	20.60	10	...
3. Bolts, nuts and washers of iron.....	30	...	10	...
4. Rivets (of iron) .....	100 kin	2.00	10	...
5. Dogspikes (of iron) .....	100 kin	1.80	10	...
6. Boots protectors (of iron) .....	100 kin	5.40	20	...
7. Other .....	30	...	20	...
389—Materials for buildings, bridges, telegraph wire props and other similar materials .....	25	...	20	...
390—Submarine cable wires, underground telegraph wires, and all other insulated telegraph wires .....	20	...	10	...
391—Metallic pieces for doors and furniture.
1. Door locks, (iron or brass).
a. Iron .....	100 kin	9.12	15	...
b. Brass.....	"	36.50	15	...

2. Door hinges, iron or brass.
a. Iron .....100 kin ...	7.65	15	...
b. Brass..... " ...	25.60	15	...
3. Others ..... 30	...	15	...
392—Carpenter's and agricultural implements and parts thereof.
1. Iron anvils.....100 kin ...	2.35	5	...
2. Iron hammers " ...	4.65	5	...
3. Wrenches " ...	10.90	5	...
4. Vises ..... 4.00	5	...	...
5. Shovels and scoops (with handles) ..... 100 kin ...	3.27	5	...
6. Others..... 20	...	5	...
393—Cutlery (excepting gold and silver, gold and silver plated, and those otherwise provided for)..... 40	...	20	...
394—Anchors and anchor chains .....100 kin ...	1.68	20	...
395—Iron chains.....100 kin ...	2.03	15	...
396—Watch chains.
1. Of gold or platinum 60	...	35	...
2. Gold plated .....1 kin ...	14.30	25	...
3. Others..... 50	...	20	...
397—Stoves ..... 30	...	20	...
398—Enamelled iron utensils ..... 100 kin ...	9.48	20	...
399—Coffee mill and mincing machines ..... 30	...	10	...
400—Cocks and valves, etc.
1. Of iron .....100 kin ...	9.55	10	...
2. Of brass..... " ...	26.70	10	...
3. Others ..... 30	...	10	...
401—Calling bells, alarm bells for carriages.....100 kin ...	46.40	...	...
402—Gold manufactures (not otherwise provided for) 60	...	20	...
403—Silver ware and plated gold or silver ware, (not otherwise provided for) 50	...	20	...
404—Copper manufactures and brass manufactures (not otherwise provided for).....100 kin ...	30.80	20	...
405—Aluminium manufactures not otherwise provided for .....100 kin ...	60.00	20	...
406—All other metallic manufactures (not otherwise provided for)..... 30	...	20	...
GROUP XVII.
POTTERY WARES, GLASS AND GLASS MANUFACTURES.
407—Bricks and tiles.
1. Fire-proof bricks..... 100 kin ...	0.38	10	...
2. Tiles.
a. Glazed..... " ...	2.93	10	...
b. Others ..... " ...	1.56	...	...
3. Others ..... 20	...	...	...
408—Earthenware and porcelain (not otherwise provided for) ..... 40	...	20	...
409—Glass blocks..... 20	...	...	...
410—Glass rods and tubes ... 20	...	20	...
411—Glass plates.
1. Uncoloured and plain.
a. Not exceeding 4 millimeters in thickness.
i. Not exceeding 10 feet sq. 100 sq. ft. ...	0.95	...	0.628
ro. Others " ...	1.18	...	0.628
b. Others.
i. Not exceeding 1 sq. ft. ....100 sq. ft. ...	1.52	...	0.628
ro. Others " ...	9.30	...	0.628
2. Silvered.
a. Not exceeding 1 sq. ft. ....100 sq. ft. ...	13.80	...	6.896
b. Others " ...	15.80	...	6.896
3. Coloured, stained and ground.
a. Not exceeding 10 sq. ft. ....100 sq. ft. ...	3.25	20	...
b. Others " ...	3.71	20	...
4. Others ..... 30	...	20	...
412—Ship's side-light glass and skylight glass..... 30	...	20	...
413—Watch glasses..... 30	...	20	...
414—Photographic dry-plates.
1. Undeveloped 100 kin ...	18.20	...	...
2. Others ..... 40	...	...	...
415—Looking glasses ..... 40	...	25	...
416—Lenses and other optical glasses (without frames or handles)..... 30	...	20	...
417—Glass broken or powdered.....free	...	...	0.065
418—Glass manufactures not otherwise provided for... 40	...	20	...

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

TELEGRAMS.

(REUTER'S SPECIAL SERVICE.)

THE FRENCH COLLIERY DISASTER.

London, April 6.

The Public Prosecutor has instituted proceedings against the engineers in charge of the salvage work at the Courrières coal-mine.

A live horse was found in one of the galleries in the Courrières mine yesterday evening. This intensified the prevailing excitement. Crowds of infuriated women gathered at the pit head, and the engineers were forced to take refuge in the mine.

VESUVIUS IN ERUPTION.

Vesuvius is in violent eruption; a fresh crater has been formed.

BRITISH SAILORS AND THE JAPANESE FAMINE.

An effort is being made throughout the British Navy, in home and foreign waters, to raise funds in aid of the Japanese famine fund. The movement originated at a meeting of bluejackets at Portsmouth.

SUDDEN ILLNESS OF PRINCE VON BUELOW.

Later.

Prince von Buelow, the German Chancellor, delivered a long speech before the Reichstag about the Algieras conference. After delivering the speech he fainted and was carried out unconscious from the House, which immediately adjourned.

THE RISING IN NATAL.

The Field Force was compelled to retire on Greytown after a running fight of six miles. Three policemen were killed. The field force will be strongly reinforced within 24 hours. Every precaution to defend Greytown has been made.

Later.

A portion of the Field Force at Greytown was cut off.

GEN. BOOTH COMING TO JAPAN.

London, April 7.

General Booth, of the Salvation Army, in an interview, said he will start on a visit to Japan in October.

GERMAN HOTEL COLLAPSES.

A new hotel in the Black Forest, Germany, collapsed during a "house-warming" celebration. Forty-two dead bodies have been removed from the debris, and there are 71 injured.

PRINCE BUELOW'S CONDITION.

Prince von Buelow's speech in the Reichstag disclaimed any wish for war for the sake of Morocco. He justified German policy at Algieras on the ground that he wished to show that Germany cannot be treated as a negligible quantity.

Prince von Buelow is progressing but he is likely to be incapable of transacting business for several weeks.

THE PROPOSED RUSSIAN LOAN.

London, April 7.

The German banks have refused to participate in the new Russian loan, alleging the approaching issue of a new German loan in London.

THE SECOND PEACE CONFERENCE.

Russia's programme at the second Peace Conference proposes to limit the work of the Conference to further elaboration of the rules of procedure of arbitration courts, and consideration of the rules of warfare including the question of private property at sea and the rights and duties of neutrals.

CLOSE OF THE ALGIERAS CONFERENCE.

April 8.

The Algieras Conference held its last sitting yesterday. All the delegates signed the general act.

THE TSAR AND THE DALAI LAMA.

The Tsar has telegraphed to the Dalai Lama in the following effect: "A large number of my Buddhist subjects had the happiness to pay their homage to their great high priest during their visits to Northern Mongolia, which borders on the Russian Empire. I rejoice that my subjects had this opportunity of benefiting by salutary and spiritual influence. I beg you to accept my sincere thanks and regard."

THE UNIVERSITY BOAT RACE.

Cambridge won the University Boat Race by five lengths.

VESUVIUS.

The eruption of Vesuvius continues to be alarming.

VESUVIUS TORN BY ERUPTION.

London, April 9.

The eruption of Vesuvius is assuming extraordinary proportions. The cone has collapsed on the Pompeii side and a new crater has opened on the opposite side. There are constant explosions. The principal crater is vomiting red-hot rock to a height of 3,000 feet. Naples is crowded with refugees. The houses there are being shaken, and many inhabitants spend the night in the squares.

VESUVIUS A SUBLIME SPECTACLE.

London, April 10.

Vesuvius now presents a sublime spectacle. Ashes lie several inches deep in Naples. There have been several shocks of earthquake. Several people have lost their lives by the collapse of houses at San Giuseppe and San Giovanni. A stream of lava 20 feet high and 600 feet wide has submerged Borotrecasse, invading Torre Annunziata, and is flowing at the rate of half a mile hourly. Another seven foot stream is traversing and causing buildings to collapse in Ottagana, where 12 inches of ashes have fallen. The Duke d'Aosta has assumed command of the troops for maintaining order. All steamers in the Bay of Naples have steam up to be in readiness for emergencies. An Italian squadron has been ordered to Naples to be at the disposal of the Duke. Two warships are removing the inhabitants from Torre del Greco.

VESUVIUS.

London, April 11.

Vesuvius is quieter. The stream of lava towards Torre Annunziata is now stationary. The shower of ashes which was falling on Naples has ceased. Some earthquake shocks are still experienced.

THE BRITISH BUDGET.

The budget will be presented on the 30th.

EDUCATION.

Mr. Birrell has introduced his Education Bill.

THE KING'S MEDITERRANEAN TOUR.

Their Majesties are now at Messina. They will attend the Olympic games at Athens, where the Prince and Princess of Wales will join them.

THE ITALIAN KING AT VESUVIUS.

The King and Queen of Italy have visited Vesuvius. The journey was very perilous, the party being beset by whirling cinders and sand which darkened the air and impeded respiration. The mud, a foot deep, stopped the motors in which the Royal party were travelling. The suite declined to proceed but their Majesties were undismayed and advanced to the lava stream. They visited Torre Annunziata and various villages, and gave orders for the distribution of food.

THE EDUCATION BILL.

The Education Bill is described as a masterpiece of ingenuity, but it is not expected that it will ally religious strife.

THE NEW RUSSIAN LOAN.

Later.

Arrangements for the new Russian loan are approaching completion. It will be for 80 to 90 millions sterling at 5 per cent., France taking 50, and the rest being divided among England, Russia, America and Holland.

THE TROUBLE IN NATAL.

London, April 11.

The chief Bambaata's crops and kraals (villages) have been destroyed; the Natal militia are returning to their homes.

The rebel chief Bambaata has reached a dense forest, where it would be almost hopeless to pursue him.

COMPENSATION TO WORKMEN.

The House of Commons has read the Workmen's Compensation Bill for the second time.

THE HAGUE CONFERENCE.

London April 12.

The United States, supported by France, asked Russia to postpone the date of summoning the Conference at The Hague, so as to avoid clashing with the Pan-American Conference at Rio de Janeiro (Brazil).

DIPLOMATIC TRANSFER.

Baron von der Goltz, Secretary of the German Legation in Peking, has been appointed Minister to Colombia.

VESUVIUS: DESOLATION UPON DESOLATION.

Ottajano has been smothered in hot ashes, the population of 200 perishing. The volcano resumed activity last night, showering sulphur and sand on Torre del Greco and Torre Annunziata, which are now cut off from Naples. Several newspapers correspondents are there, unable to leave.

Later.

The country for miles around Vesuvius presents a picture of horrible grey desolation: no vestige of a green thing remains. All the towns and villages around are more or less buried in ashes, which in some cases are 6 feet deep, recalling the fate of Pompeii.

The estimated total deathroll varies from 500 to 800.

The last accounts are not reassuring. The whole region is under a dense pall of darkness, Vesuvius being invisible. There are frequent hurricanes of rain, stones, and ashes.

(BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT WITH THE "TOKYO ASAHI SHIMBUN.")

CANADA AND THE FAMINE FUND.

London, April 6.

Canada's contribution to the Japan famine funds exceed $20,000. The Montreal Board of Trade heads the list with $12,000. [NOTE.—The figures are not quite clear.—Ed. J.M.]

THE RUSSIAN LOAN.

It is stated in St. Petersburg that the new loan will amount to 92 million pounds, France taking 50 million pounds.

CHURCH AND STATE IN FRANCE.

London, April 12.

Telegrams from Paris announce that the industrial population is increasingly discontented. The strikes are spreading and the situation is complicated by the increasing reluctance of the troops to assist in the enforcement of the Church Law. The Government is in a difficult situation.

MAIL STEAMERS.

NEXT MAIL IS DUE

From	Line	Steamer	Date
America	O. & O.	Coptic 1	Tu. April 17
Hongkong	O. & O.	Doric 2	Th. April 19
Hongkong	C. P. R.	Athenian 3	F. April 20
Europe	N. Y. K.	Sachsen 4	Sa. April 21
Vancouver	C. P. R.	Em. of Japan 5	M. April 23
Vancouver	C. P. R.	Tartar 6	Tu. April 24
America	P. M.	Siberia	Tu. April 24
Europe	M. M.	Polynesian	W. April 25
Hongkong	B. T.	Pleiades	W. April 25
Tacoma	B. T.	Tremont 7	Th. April 26
Hongkong	C. P. R.	Em. of India	Th. April 26
Hongkong	P. M.	Manchuria	Th. April 26
America	T. K. K.	America Maru	Tu. May 1
Hongkong	T. Y. K.	H'kong Maru	Th. May 3

- 1 Left San Francisco on the 31st ult.
- 2 Left Hongkong on the 10th inst.
- 3 Left Vancouver on the 6th inst.
- 4 Left Hongkong on the 12th inst.
- 5 Left Vancouver on the 9th inst.
- 6 Left Hongkong on the 11th inst.
- 7 Left Seattle on the 10th inst.

NEXT MAIL LEAVES

For	Line	Steamer	Date
Europe	N. Y. K.	Kawachi Maru	W. April 18
Shanghai	N. Y. K.	Kosai Maru	Th. April 19
Hongkong	O. & O.	Coptic	Th. April 19
Seattle	N. Y. K.	Shinano Maru	Th. April 19
Europe	M. M.	Ernest Simons	Sa. April 21
America	O. & O.	Doric	Sa. April 21
Vancouver	C. P. R.	Athenian	Sa. April 21
Portland	P. & A.	Numanita	Su. April 22
Hongkong	C. P. R.	Em. of Japan	M. April 23
Europe	P. & O.	Manila	Tu. April 24
Hongkong	C. P. R.	Tartar	Tu. April 24
Hongkong	P. M.	Siberia	Th. April 25
Hongkong	B. T.	Tremont	Th. April 26
Tacoma	B. T.	Pleiades	Th. April 26
Vancouver	C. P. R.	Em. of Japan	F. April 27
Europe	N. D. L.	Sachsen	Sa. April 28
America	P. M.	Manchuria	Sa. April 28
Hongkong	T. K. K.	America Maru	Th. May 3
America	T. K. K.	H'kong Maru	Sa. May 5
Australia	N. Y. K.	Yawata Maru	Sa. May 5
Hongkong	P. & A.	Aragonia	Th. May 17

LATEST SHIPPING.

ARRIVALS.

Seiko Maru , Japanese steamer, 938, K. Fukushima, 5th April.—Mojii, General.—Yamagata-ya.	Prinz Eitel Friedrich , German steamer, 5,001, E. Malchow, 6th April.—Hamburg and Bremen via ports, 5th April, Mails and General.—H. Ahrens & Co., Nacht.	Needles , British steamer, 2,906, J. P. Turner, 6th April.—London via ports, and Kobe, 4th April, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.	Tijpanas , Dutch steamer, 2,475, Pander, 6th April.—Macassar via ports, General.—Ed. L. van Nierop & Co.	Kanagawa Maru , Japanese steamer, 3,813, J. W. Wale, 6th April.—Seattle, Wash., via Victoria, B.C., 20th March, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.	Mikawa Maru , Japanese steamer, 2,060, B. Imai, 6th April.—Mojii, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.	Mandasan Maru , Japanese steamer, 3,245, K. Amato, 7th April.—Mojii, Coal.—Mitsui Bussan Kaisha.	Giran Maru , Japanese steamer, 1,815, T. Kitano, 7th April.—Takao, General.—Yamagata-ya.	Hiroshima Maru , Japanese steamer, 2,035, S. Wada, 7th April.—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.	Tategami Maru , Japanese steamer, 1,673, K. Sudzuki, 7th April.—Shanghai via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.	Benlawers , British steamer, 2,510, D. Clark, 7th April.—London via ports, and Kobe, 5th April, General.—Cornes & Co.	Nicomedia , German steamer, 2,808, Wagemann, 8th April.—Hongkong via ports, and Kobe, 7th April, Mails and General.—P. & A. S.S. Co.	Empire , British steamer, 2,843, Helm, 8th April.—Australian via ports, Mails and General.—Cornes & Co.	Sado Maru , Japanese steamer, 3,856, G. S. Lapraik, 8th April.—Hakodate, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.	Korea , American steamer, 5,651, W. B. Seabury, 8th April.—San Francisco via Honolulu, 22nd March, Mails and General.—P. M. S.S. Co.	Ningchow , British steamer, 4,894, H. L. Allen, 8th April.—Seattle, Wash., Mails and General.—Butterfield & Swire.
--	--	--	---	--	--	---	---	--	--	--	---	--	---	---	---

Anchises, Dutch steamer, 1,885, B. De Boer, 6th April.—Glasgow and Liverpool via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.

Chiyoda Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,038, H. Tanaka, 9th April.—Yokkaichi, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Yechigo Maru, Japanese steamer, 712, A. Yamashita, 9th April.—Yokkaichi, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Segovia, German steamer, 3,796, Schoenfeldt, 9th April.—Hamburg via ports, General.—C. Illies & Co.

Wakanoura Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,556, I. Shimizu, 9th April.—Otaru via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Falladon Hall, British steamer, 2,206, F. Wickham, 9th April.—Saigon, Rice.—Jardine, Matheson & Co.

Ernest Simons, French steamer, 2,162, Bourdon, 10th April.—Marseilles via ports, and Kobe, 9th April, Mails and General.—M. M. S.S. Co.

Mitake Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,060, I. Shimizu, 10th April.—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Kintuck, British steamer, 2,881, Lewis, 11th April.—Glasgow and Liverpool via ports, and Kuchinotsu, General.—Butterfield & Swire.

Louqsor, French steamer, 4,444, Casanova, 11th April.—Antwerp via ports, and Kobe, 10th April, General.—M. M. S.S. Co.

Machaon, British steamer, 4,277, G. W. Long, 12th April.—Glasgow and Liverpool via ports, and Kuchinotsu, General.—Butterfield & Swire.

Woodford, British steamer, 1,860, Jas. Seddon, 12th April.—Saigon via Kobe, Rice.—Dodwell & Co., Ltd.

Fushiki Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,110, A. Keith, 12th April.—Shanghai via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Nippon Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,437, W. W. Greene, 12th April.—Hongkong via ports, and Kobe, 11th April, Mails and General.—Toyo Kisen Kaisha.

DEPARTURES.

Empress of China, British steamer, 3,003, R. Archibald, 6th April.—Vancouver, B.C., Mails and General.—C. P. R. Co.

Yechigo Maru, Japanese steamer, 712, A. Yamashita, 6th April.—Yokkaichi, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Kumamoto Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,237, T. Suka, 6th April.—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Yamaguchi Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,028, T. Iri-sawa, 6th April.—Otaru via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Prometheus, Norwegian steamer, 1,023, O. Kornelinsen, 5th April.—Taku and Newchwang via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Merionethshire, British steamer, 1,950, D. Davies, 6th April.—Mojii, Ballast.—Samuel Samuel & Co.

Norge, Norwegian steamer, 1,924, Boe, Jr., 6th April.—Kobe, General.—Samuel Samuel & Co.

Seiko Maru, Japanese steamer, 938, K. Fukushima, 6th April.—Newchwang via ports, General.—Yamagata-ya.

Kumano Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,881, H. Fraser, 7th April.—Sydney and Melbourne via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Taiwan Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,796, A. Christensen, 7th April.—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Hongkong Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,437, E. Bent, 7th April.—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—Toyo Kisen Kaisha.

Armand Behic, French steamer, 2,810, Guionnet, 7th April.—Marseilles via ports, Mails and General.—M. M. S.S. Co.

Dolores, American schooner, 120, V. A. Herrero, 7th April.—Guam, General.—H. MacArthur & Co.

Richmond, British steamer, 2,059, F. T. Nicolle, 7th April.—Muran, Ballast.—Dodwell & Co., Ltd.

Hiroshima Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,035, S. Wada, 9th April.—Otaru via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Vienna, British steamer, 2,653, L. White, 9th April.—Sebang, Ballast.—Dodwell & Co., Ltd.

Nicomedia, German steamer, 2,808, Wagemann, 9th April.—Portland, Oregon, Mails and General.—P. & A. S.S. Co.

Tategami Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,673, K. Suzuki, 9th April.—Yokkaichi, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Benlawers, British steamer, 2,510, D. Clark, 10th April.—London and Antwerp via ports, General.—Cornes & Co.

Socotra, British steamer, 3,806, W. R. F. Hickey, 10th April.—Marseilles, London and Antwerp via ports, Mails and General.—P. & O. S.N. Co.

Korea, American steamer, 5,651, W. B. Seabury, 10th April.—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—P. M. S.S. Co.

Tijpanas, Dutch steamer, 2,475, Pander, 10th April, —Macassar via ports, General.—Ed. L. van Nierop & Co.

Vandalia, German steamer, 2,641, Hasse, 10th April.—New York via ports and Suez Canal, General.—C. Illies & Co.
Mikawa Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,060, Bulheima, 10th April.—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Kanagawa Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,813, J. W. Wale, 11th April.—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Needles, British steamer, 2,906, J. P. Turner, 11th April.—Yokosuka, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Yechigo Maru, Japanese steamer, 712, A. Yamashita, 11th April.—Yokkaichi, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Kasuga Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,214, K. Kohri, 12th April.—Shanghai via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Kintuck, British steamer, 2,881, B. C. Lewis, 12th April.—Amsterdam, London and Antwerp via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.
Ningchow, British steamer, 3,894, H. L. Allen, 12th April.—Kobe, General.—Butterfield & Swire.
Tulegami Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,673, K. Sudzuki, 12th April.—Yokkaichi, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Wakanoura Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,556, I. Shimidzu, 12th April.—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

PASSENGERS.

ARRIVED.

Per Japanese steamer Kanagawa Maru from Seattle, Wash., via Victoria, B.C.:—Mr. H. Okakura. For Manila:—Mr. Newton in cabin; Mr. Hayashi and Mr. H. Powers in second class.
 Per German steamer Prinz Eitel Friedrich, from Hamburg and Bremen via ports:—Mr. Velling and 2 children, Mr. and Mrs. Phelps, Miss Phelps, Mr. and Mrs. Callthrop, Mr. Ch. M. Bartlett, Mr. H. Sug, Miss Cumberland, Mr. K. Iwamoto, Mr. P. Gayen, Captain Lange, Mr. C. Inouye, Mr. T. Takikawa, Mr. W. Velling, Miss S. Moule, Mrs. Schaeurle, Consul and Mrs. Atkinson, Commander Percy Cullen, Messrs. C. H. P. Hay, S. Nakamura, T. Hada, K. Sumiyoshi, Y. Kawano; Miss Crommelin, Mrs. Vosseler, Baron Dr. S. Loudon, Col. W. Samoyloff, Rev. Mr. Tucker, Miss Downie, Mrs. G. Stuart, Mr. and Mrs. H. Winters, Mr. and Mrs. Lazarus, Capt. Despart, Mr. and Mrs. P. M. Steward, Mr. and Mrs. Anthony, Miss Parrott, Dr. A. Ham, Lt. E. N. Hardinge, Col. and Mrs. Long; Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins, Mr. and Mrs. Berick and child, Mr. Rempel, Mr. A. Penner and child, Count A. del Arbre, Mr. F. Lamont, Mr. and Mrs. von Carstanfen and servant, Mr. and Mrs. Kolwitz, Mr. Meier, Dr. E. Springer, Dr. K. Karock, Mrs. Silver and child, Mrs. Parros, Dr. K. Fujii, Mrs. Clarke, Mr. and Mrs. Adair, Mrs. Hess and children, Mrs. T. Atkins and child, Mrs. Carter and child, Mrs. J. M. Healy, Mrs. P. C. Field and child, Mrs. C. E. Stanton, Mr. and Miss Scawfield, Capt. and Mrs. Richter, Mr. and Mrs. Middendorf, Mr. T. S. Apar, Miss Snowden, Misses A. E. and A. Ferguson, Mr. G. Petersen, Mr. H. Goebel, Mr. J. W. Price, Master Fujii and Miss Holdorf in cabin.
 Per American steamer Korea, from San Francisco via Honolulu:—Baron Bakmeteff, Baroness Bakmeteff & maids, Mr. F. F. Jagues, Mrs. F. F. Jagues, Miss S. F. Pond, Mr. J. J. McDonald, Mr. and Mrs. I. Woolf and son, Miss D. McDonald, Miss Lichtenberg, Mrs. Huntington, Miss Huntington, Mr. J. R. Curle, Mr. and Mrs. F. Hellyer, Mr. and Mrs. H. N. Allen, Miss A. E. Allen, Mrs. W. H. Didden, Mr. Miss Hellen Dille, Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Dumbell, Mrs. F. H. Platt, Mrs. H. D. Armour, Miss Mary Altemus, Mr. W. H. Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Scott, Mr. and Mrs. Homer Laughlin, Miss G. V. Laughlin, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Webber, Miss Webber, Miss A. Carstens, Mr. and Mrs. G. Homma, Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Miller, two children and servant, Mr. M. Oka, Miss Alita Jagues, Mrs. R. R. Converse, Miss K. C. Stearns, Mr. S. Inagaki, Miss A. Allen, Mrs. H. Littauer, Mrs. H. S. Spurborg, Mr. R. Guggenheim, Mr. M. C. Luckenbach, Mr. Edward Cronan, Mrs. A. D. Warren, Mrs. C. B. McCarty, Mr. P. McCadden, Miss R. B. Raoul, Miss Marcha Boynton, Mr. J. H. J. Johnston, Miss C. D. E. Johnston, Mr. R. Thiel, Mr. Franz Wenthin, Mr. Ernesto Paulsen, Mr. John Inglis, Miss P. L. McCormick, Miss Ed. McCormick, Mrs. W. V. Dudley, Mr. W. B. Dickson, Mrs. Leney, Miss C. D. Leney, Miss C. L. Anderson, Mr. Arthur W. Stanford, Mr. K. Ishoshima, Mr. and Mrs. K. Hiyama and two children, Dr. Geo. J. Augur, Mr. and Mrs. D. Yonekura and two children, Miss M. E. McCormick, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Gay, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Sweet, Mr. J. G. Manuel, Mrs. C. E. Heywood, Miss E. C. Heywood, Miss B. Heywood, Dr. and Mrs. A. W. Biddle, Miss C. Biddle and maid, Miss Julia Biddle, Miss Isabel Biddle, Mr. G. M. Laughlin, Miss C. M. Schener, Mrs. M. Van Buskirk, Dr. and Mrs. D. Coke, Mrs. R. E. Coke, Mr. H. Ropes, Mr. O. O. Gilfillan, Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Fraser, Mr. Earl Fraser, Mrs. Olive Byrne, and Miss Lena Byrne, in cabin. For Kobe:—Mr. G. J. Beeba, Mr. and Mrs. W. Hohmeyer, Mr. W. J. Schroth, and Mr. W. H. N. Nolet, in cabin. For Nagasaki:—Rev. J. Ingram Bryan, Mrs. J. Ingram Bryan and child, in cabin. For Shanghai:—Mr. R. G. MacDonald, Miss M. Serviss, Mr. Sampson, Rev. and Mrs. C. S. Keen, Mr. C. A. McGrail, Miss E. F. Lewis, Miss M. Dilton, Miss W. Arkiainen, Mrs. G. C. Batcheller and child, Miss Cornelia Bonnell, and Mr. L. Neitert, in cabin. For Hongkong:—Miss Arlette Hughes, Mr. G. Kellogg Claxton, Mrs. F. S. Kellogg, Mr. S. V. Derr, Mrs. Admiral Goodrich, Miss Goodrich, Mrs. M. E. Westfall, Com. J. E. Helm, U.S.N., Mr. C. S. Derham, Mr. G. B. Cooley, Miss M. T. Matthews, Mr. A. S. Danier, Mr. and Mrs. Lorenzo Deland, Mr. and Mrs. S. E. King, Mrs. O. Hines, Mrs. S. V. Parks, Mr. E. G. Carrera, Mr. and Mr. A. L. Coy, and Mr. Wm. Y. Kwai Fong, in cabin.

 Per British steamer Empire, from Australia via ports:—Misses Graham (2), Dr. and Mrs. Leyland, Miss Leyland, Miss Boddington, Miss B. de Pledge, Mr. and Mrs. P. Pearce, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Morris, Mr. T. E. Bunnett, Mrs. and Miss Watson, Dr. and Mrs. Parkers, Mr. F. Ross, Mr. and Mrs. Middleton, Miss Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. H. Dixon, Misses Davy (2), Mrs. E. E. V. Brooks, Mrs. Pilkington, Mr. Thos. Reid, Mr. W. G. Fy, Miss Sandes, Mr. J. B. Milne, Miss Hunt, Mr. E. M. Lehoucq, Sir R. Pullar, Mrs. and Miss Keyworth, Miss F. Binnie, Mr. and Mrs. Peters, Mr. Wolfhagen, Dr. McMurray, Miss Gamble, Miss Gibbs, Mr. and Mrs. Johnson, Miss Johnson, and Mr. A. C. Lang, in cabin.
 Per French steamer Ernest Simons, from Marseilles via ports:—Mr. R. Grenade, Mr. Garrido Cisneros, Mr. and Mrs. Hallows, Mr. and Mrs. d'Humieres, Mr. H. C. Joass, Mr. Harmand, Mr. Lera, and Mrs. Lera in cabin; Mr. Charlo Reaux, Mr. R. B. Kahn, Mrs. Black, Mrs. Perry, Mr. Iyo Joan Soe and servant, Mr. Iyo Kik Yong, Mr. J. C. da Souza, Mrs. Kate Bezon, Mrs. J. L. Zinn, Mr. Quan So Yen, Mr. Quan Qui Min, and Mrs. Lien Ya Yen in second class; Mr. N. L. Dutt, Mr. Dang, Mr. Wang, and Mr. Warmont, in third class.
 Per Japanese steamer Nippon Maru, from Hongkong via ports:—Mrs. H. H. Christy and 3 children, Mrs. K. Smith, infant and amah, Col. Barrett, Mrs. Barrett, Miss Manuel, Miss S. Jewett, Mrs. Train, Miss Train, Mr. W. B. Biefield, Mr. N. Bumb, Mrs. N. Bumb, Mr. B. Biefield, Mr. T. S. Cairns, Mrs. Cairns, Master Cairns, Mr. W. H. Wilton, Mrs. Malby, Mrs. H. Steinmann, Mr. A. Reynolds, Mrs. Hagin, Mr. P. J. Melhuish, Mrs. Melhuish and son, Mr. J. L. Jacob, Miss J. W. Anderson, Mr. J. Mustaros, and Mr. P. Revell, in cabin. For San Francisco:—Mr. H. H. Seebree, Mrs. J. C. Sweeney, Mrs. S. Taylor, Mrs. Clinton and infant, Mr. Frank Hitch, Miss Sweeney, Mr. H. J. Haslett, Lieut. M. Covell, Mr. J. George, Mr. H. H. Plover, Hon. J. C. Sweeney, Mrs. A. V. Curtis, Mr. Buford, Mr. Lam Quin, Mr. J. McGregor, Mr. J. E. Thompson, Mr. Djaohoukoff, Mr. P. Board, Mrs. Board, Miss A. Quesnelle, Dr. J. Fowler, and Miss Waters, in cabin.

DEPARTED.

Per British steamer Empress of China, for Vancouver, B.C.:—His Ex. Viscount Aoki and 3 valets, Viscountess Aoki and 2 maids, Mr. Ed. Backhouse, Col. D. J. Baker, Mr. W. R. Barker, Mrs. W. R. Barker, Misses Barker (2), Dr. Bastian, Mr. E. Bird, Mr. E. M. Brooks, Mrs. Bushey, Mrs. Bushey and infant, Flag Lieut. B. Buxton, R.N., Mrs. E. Charlton, infant and nurse, Mr. T. Cochrane, Lord Dynevor and valet, Dr. Forrest, Capt. Geohagan, Mrs. Geohagan, Mr. T. A. Glover, Com. W. M. Harbord, R.N., Mr. A. H. F. Hodgson, Mr. A. Hofman, Mr. T. Iida and valet, Mr. Ingils, Mr. A. Johnstone, Mr. A. B. King, Mr. Lindall, Mr. A. S. D. Loveland, Miss C. MacDonald, Dr. H. D. MacKenzie, Rev. A. N. Marshall and son, Mr. J. Marshall, Mrs. J. Marshall, Mr. A. P. McEwen, Mrs. A. P. McEwen, Capt. J. J. McLean, Mr. V. Meyer, Mr. T. Miyaoka and valet, Admiral Sir Gerard Noel, K.C.B., K.C.M.G., Miss Noel, Mr. S. H. Noyes, Mr. J. Parsons, Miss E. A. Pearson, Mr. C. Prior, Hon. Walter Rice, Mr. F. Ringer, Mr. J. H. Roberts, Mr. A. B. Rouse, Mr. Carl Scheuer, Mr. R. J. Smardon, Major G. Soady, Mr. G. Soady, Mr. F. R. Southern, Mr. G. W. Steele, Mr. W. H. Stevenson, Mrs. W. H. Stevenson, Miss W. Stevenson, Miss P. Stevenson, Major K. Tanaka, I.J.A., Lieut. J. M. G. Taylor, Mr. W. J. Tyack, Mrs. R. E. Valentine, Mr. E. G. Veitch, Mr. A. F. Vorwerk, Mr. L. Wiegand, and Miss W. Wilson, in cabin.
 Per French steamer Armand Behic, for Marseilles via ports:—Mr. L. Roudon, Mrs. Emerson, Miss Martyn, Mr. Lera, Miss Lera, Mr. and Miss Simons, Mr. J. A. Moon, Mrs. Moon, Mr. Geo. Bowack, Mrs. Zacharias, Mrs. Harmand, Mr. Julio B. Merz, Mr. Lebeau, Mr. C. H. Spittle, Mr. K. B. Daryanani, Mr. Y. Guillemin, Mrs. Marie Rouveyn and Chinese, in cabin.
 Per Japanese steamer Hongkong Maru, for Hongkong via ports:—Mr. J. M. Cunningham, Mr. H. B.

Dunbar, Mrs. R. Gettings, Dr. E. Haenisch, Mr. John S. Janeway, Mr. G. H. Lamb, Mr. Geo. E. Loney, Capt. G. F. Lyon, Mr. Chas. L. Raver, Miss M. Roberts, Mr. de Anker, Capt. F. S. Cochen, Mrs. F. S. Cochen, Lieut. R. B. Creasy, Mr. L. D. Causey, Mr. A. H. Harrison and servant, Mr. James Hayes, Miss Kalyded Jones, Mr. John Lewis, Constul General H. B. Miller and son, Mrs. F. Schmidt, Dr. E. A. Smith, and Mr. H. E. Waite, in cabin.

Per American steamer Korea, for Hongkong via ports:—Dr. Geo. J. Augur, Miss W. Arkiainen, Miss Martha Boynton, Rev. J. Ingram Bryan, Mr. G. S. Beebe, Mrs. G. C. Batcheller and child, Miss Cornelia Bonnell, Mr. G. B. Cooley, Mr. G. Kellogg Claxton, Mr. E. G. Cariera, Mr. J. Cox, Mrs. A. Cox, Miss M. Dalton, Mr. S. V. Deer, Mr. C. S. Derham, Mr. Francis Gray, Mrs. Francis Gray, Mrs. Admiral Goodrich, Miss Goodrich, Mr. W. Hohmeyer, Mrs. W. Hohmeyer, Com. J. N. Helm, U.S.N., Mrs. O. Hines, Miss Arlette Hughes, Rev. C. S. Keen, Mrs. C. S. Keen, Mr. Wm. Y. Kwai Fong, Mr. S. E. King, Mrs. S. E. King, Mrs. F. S. Kellogg, Mr. A. S. Lanter, Mr. Lorenzo Leland, Mrs. Lorenzo Leland, Miss E. F. Lewis, Mrs. M. E. McCormick, Mr. R. G. MacDonald, Miss M. T. Matthews, Mr. C. A. McGrail, Mr. W. H. Nolet, Mrs. S. V. Parks, Miss R. B. Raoul, Mr. W. J. Schroth, Mr. J. Sampson, Miss M. Serviss, Mrs. M. E. Westfall, Mr. H. Allen, Mrs. H. Appel, Miss Appel, Mr. F. A. Bennett, Mr. Justus Briggs, Mr. F. E. Harto, Mrs. J. H. Criss, Mr. Chong Chaw, Mr. R. W. Carbaniss, Mr. A. J. Chantry, Miss H. Dalle, Mr. F. M. Dranier, Mr. H. Delano, Mr. H. F. Emerson, Mr. Henry Farnam, Mr. H. J. French, Mr. G. V. Hayes, Mr. J. R. Hornberger, Mrs. J. R. Hornberger, Mr. C. M. Haes, Mr. Chas. D. Hirmon, Mr. W. B. Howe, Mr. E. R. Kelloggs, Mr. L. O. Kelloggs, Mr. J. M. McCain, Mr. C. B. Mayo, Mrs. C. B. McCarty, Mr. J. J. McDonald, Miss M. McDonald, Mr. A. Morton, Mr. T. R. Neil, Mr. W. D. Newton, Miss R. Osborne, Mr. F. S. G. Piggett, Mr. F. F. Rogers, Mr. T. R. Randall, Mr. T. J. Reibe, Mr. E. I. Reichmuth, Mr. R. W. Spofford, Mr. S. A. Taffinder, Mr. R. H. Van Demon, and Mr. A. C. Wilhelm, in cabin.

CARGO.

Per British steamer Empress of China, for Vancouver:—

From.	TEA.				Total.
	Canada & West.	Chicago New York Pacific & East.	Coast.	Cities.
Hongkong...	1,496	—	—	774	2,270
Shanghai...	—	328	—	—	328
Vokohama...	57	—	—	—	57
Total...	1,553	328	—	774	2,655

From.	SILK.				Total.
	New York.	Eastern Pa.	Phila. delphia.	South Man'ter.
H'kong & Canton	305	—	—	—	305
Shanghai	108	—	—	—	108
Vokohama	634	—	—	—	634
Total	1,047	—	—	—	20 1,067

SILK SHIPPERS.

Silk shippers per steamer Empress of China, for Vancouver, 6th April:—

	Bales.
Varenne & Co.	120
Vivanti Bros.	75
Jewett and Bent	66
Herbert Dent & Co.	50
Bavay & Co.	30
F. Strahler & Co.	25
China and Japan Trading Co.	15
Otto Streuli	10
Siber, Wolff & Co.	10
Boyer, Mazet, Guillee & Co.	5
Mitsui Bussan Kaisha	116
Doshin Kaisha	80
Kiito Gomei Kaisha	52
Total	654

Raw and Waste Silk shipped per steamer Armand Behic, 7th April:—

	RAW.			WASTE.
	Marseilles	Lyons.	Milan.	Marseilles	Italy.	Russia.
Sulzer Rudolph & Co.	98	—	—	—	—	—
Sieber & Co.	61	—	—	—	—	—
Otto Streuli & Co.	—	11	—	—	—	—
Doshin Kaisha	—	10	—	—	—	—
Carlowitz & Co.	—	11	—	—	—	—
H. Bernardin & Co.	—	22	—	—	—	—
Ulysse Pila & Co.	—	62	—	—	—	—
Varenne & Co.	—	—	17	—	—	—
Bavay & Co.	—	—	165	—	—	—
Cl. Eymard	—	—	154	—	—	—
Jardine, Matheson & Co.	—	—	—	2	—	—
Total	159	116	—	336	2	—

LATEST COMMERCIAL.

[SPECIALLY COMPILED FOR THE "JAPAN MAIL."]
IMPORTS.

Yokohama, April 14.

No special feature to report.

COTTON PIECE GOODS.

White Shirting—{40 yds. 36 in. } ... 0.10 to 0.16
{50 yds. 36 in. }Grey Shirting—8½ lb. 38½ yds. 36 inches V. 4.00 to 4.50
Grey Shirting—9½ lb. 38½ yds. 45 inches 4.50 to 5.25

Prints—Assorted, 24 yards, 30 inches... 2.85 to 4.65

Cotton Italians and Satteens... 0.20 to 0.40

WOOLLENS.

Flannels... V. 0.50 to 0.65

Italian Cloth, 32 in... 0.35 to 0.50

Mousseline de Laine,—Crape, 21 yards, 30 inches... 0.16 to 0.32

Cloths—Pilots, 54 to 56 inches... 0.50 to 1.00

Cloths—Presidents, 51 to 65 inches... 0.90 to 1.00

Cloths—Union, 54 to 56 inches... 0.50 to 1.00

Blankets—Assorted 3 to 5 lb per lb... 0.60 to 0.80

Velvets—Black, 35 yards, 22 inches... 9.20 to 12.50

Victoria Lanes, 12 yards, 42 inches... 0.90 to 1.80

Turkey Reds—2.8 to 3.0 lb 24-25 yards, 30 inches... 1.90 to 2.25

Turkey Reds—3.8 to 5 lb, 24-25 yards, 32 inches... 2.50 to 3.65

COTTON YARN.

Nos. 2/60, Gassed... V. 300.00 to 310.00

Nos. 2/80, Gassed... 375.00 to 385.00

Nos. 2/100, Gassed... 465.00 to 475.00

RAW COTTONS.

American Middling... 33.50 to 34.00

Indian Branch... 28.50 to 29.00

Chinese... 25.00 to 27.50

METALS.

No business to chronicle.

Iron or Mild Steel, Bar, flat, round and square... V. 4.20 to 4.40

Iron or Mild Steel, Plate... 4.35 to 4.65

do Sheet... 4.70 to 6.95

do Hoop (¼" to 1½")... 5.00 to 5.50

Galvanised Iron Sheets No. 30 G... 11.75

Wire Nails, Ordinary assortments... 6.60 to 7.20

Tin Plates, golha. I.C.A.V... 7.40 to 7.65

Pig Iron, No. 3 "Redcar" ... 2.30

KEROSENE.

The market has become slightly active.

American... $3.21 to 3.41

Russian... 3.32

Langkat... 3.32

SUGAR.

Prices continue to have an upward tendency.

Brown Takao... V. 7.70 to 8.10

Brown Manila... 8.70 to 9.70

Brown China... 7.40 to 12.00

White Java and Penang... 12.60 to 13.60

White Refined... 14.70 to 17.00

INDIGO.

There is little or no demand.

Java, Medium to best... Nom. 250.00 to 300.00

Calcutta, Medium to best... Nom. 180.00 to 200.00

Madras (Karyak), Medium to best Nom. 130.00 to 160.00

Madras (Dry Leaf), Medium to best ...

EXPORTS.

RAW SILK.

The advance has been fully maintained on the better qualities of silk going to the United States, whilst an increased demand from Europe for the lower grades has caused prices to move up for these, both in fine and coarse sizes. Settlements for this week are only some 600 piculs and the present high prices reached seem to tend to restrict business at the close.

QUOTATIONS.

Filatures—Extra Best, Coarse... 1,120 to 1,130

Filatures—Extra, Fine... 1,060 to 1,070

Filatures—Extra, Coarse... 1,060 to 1,070

Filatures—No. 1, Fine... 1,040 to 1,050

Filatures—No. 1½, Fine... 1,100 to 1,120

Filatures—No. 1½, Coarse... 1,070 to 1,080

Filatures—No. 2, Fine... 1,070 to 1,080

Filatures—No. 2, Coarse... 1,070 to 1,080

Common—Coarse... 1,055

Re-reels—Extra... 1,055

Re-reels—No. 1... 1,055

Re-reels—No. 1½... 1,055

Re-reels—No. 2... 1,055

Kakadas—Gold Cup Chop Extra... 1,055

Kakadas—Veiled Woman Chop No. 1... 1,055

Kakadas—One Horsehead Chop No. 1½... 1,055

Kakadas—No. 2... 1,055

Kakadas—No. 2½... 1,055

WASTE SILK.

Stocks are much reduced so the amount of business done has been small and confined to new arrivals of Waste which meet with a ready sale. Prices are unchanged.

QUOTATIONS.

Noshi—Filatures, Best... —

Noshi—Filatures, Good... —

Noshi—Oshiu, Best	...	...	...	...
Noshi—Oshiu, Good	...	...	...	...
Noshi—Oshiu, Medium	...	...	...	...
Noshi—Shinshiu, Best	...	...	...	...
Noshi—Shinshiu, Good	...	...	...	...
Noshi—Bushi, Best	...	...	...	...
Noshi—Bushi, Good	...	...	...	...
Noshi—Bushi, Medium	...	...	...	...
Noshi—Joshi, Best	...	...	...	...
Noshi—Joshi, Good	...	...	...	...
Kibiso—Filatures, Extra	...	...	...	...
Kibiso—Filatures, Best	...	...	...	...
Kibiso—Filatures, Second	...	...	...	...
Kibiso—Joshi, Good	...	...	...	...
Kibiso—Bushi, Fair	...	...	...	...

HABUTAE.

The Yokohama market has undergone no special change since last report. Generally speaking, business has been stationary although some slight fluctuations were experienced.

Owing to scarcity of material, some of the factories in Kawamata, a prominent habutae producing district, have stopped work, and consequently a slight rise has occurred in the outputs from that locality. There is a very small enquiry from foreign countries—America and India especially, for Kawamata habutae, so that the rise seems to be nominal. Fukui and Kanazawa habutae are being sent to Kawamata in order to undergo bleaching and mailed to the open ports as Kawamata. Anxiety is generally entertained that this will probably come to the notice of consumers abroad and that another fall in price will take place.

KANAZAWA.

Inches.	3½ me.	4 me.	4½ me.
19½	10.10	9.75	9.65
22½	9.90	9.45	9.45
27	9.65	9.45	9.30
36	9.45	9.25	9.25

"FINE-LEAVES" MARK.

Inches.	6 me.	6½ me.	7 me.	7½ me.	8 me.
19½	9.15	9.00	8.90	8.90	8.80
22½	9.00	8.90	8.90	8.90	8.90
27	8.70	8.70	8.70	8.80	8.90

"GOLD" MARK.

Inches.	4½ me.	5 me.	5½ me.	6 me.
19½	10.30	10.70	9.60	9.40
22½	9.80	9.50	9.40	9.00
27	9.60	9.50	9.40	9.00
36	9.40	9.30	9.80	8.80

RICE.

Tokyo.—The market which had been embarrassed by speculative purchases during the previous three weeks has now recovered its normal state. As enquiries from the interior continued throughout this week, prices were maintained.

Osaka.—The market is weak.

Kobe.—No notable transaction; slight fluctuations.

Domestic rice in Fukagawa... koku, 1,247,964
Foreign rice in Fukagawa... 180,675
Closing Price. Yen.Delivery. Yen.
April... 14.41
May... 15.83
June... 15.16RICE AT WHOLESALE: STANDARD PRICE.
(Tokyo.) per koku.
Superior... Yen 14.71
Medium... 14.09
Common... 13.51
Average... 14.10
koku, 4,9629 bushels.

STOCK EXCHANGE.

Tokyo and Osaka.—During the week, the markets were very dull. Some of the Cotton Spinning Companies shares were in good demand.

COTTON YARN (Osaka).

Throughout the week, the market was very inactive.

April delivery... Yen. 131.00
May delivery... 130.00
June delivery... 129.35

TEA.

Samples of new tea have been repeatedly brought from Shidzuoka and other western places to Yokohama. The quality is better than that of last year.

EXCHANGE.

Yokohama, April 14

London silver ¼ higher but no news from China since the 12th inst. and local rates have undergone no alteration at the close of the week. The 16th being Easter Monday all the Foreign Banks will be closed.

London—Bank T.T... 1/0½ @ 1/2

— Bills on demand... 1/0½ @ 1/2

— Private 4 months' sight... 1/0½ @ 1/2

— Private 6 months' sight... 1/0½ @ 1/2

Paris &amp; Lyons—Bank sight... 1/0½ @ 1/2

— Private 4 months' sight... 1/0½ @ 1/2

— Private 6 months' sight... 1/0½ @ 1/2

Hongkong—Bank sight... per $100 101

— Private to days, sight... 99

Shanghai—Bank sight... 70½

— Private to days, sight... 72½

India—Bank sight... 152½

— Private 30 days' sight... 154½

America—Bank sight... 49½ @ 1/2

— Private 30 days' sight... 50

— Private 4 months' sight... 50½

Germany—Bank sight... 208½

— Private 4 months' sight... 212½

Bar Silver (London)... 29½

* Nominal.

SHARE REPORT.

Yokohama, April 12, 1906

LOCAL STOCKS.—There has been a perceptible improvement in business during the past week, and the demand for stocks has been very general. Grand Hotels have been the medium of a fair line of business at yen 225. Kirin Breweries changed hands at yen 130, market closing with sellers at the same price. Engine and Iron Works can be obtained at yen 120. Offers of Nickels are wanted. Langfeldts remain at yen 45 with nothing doing. Club Hotels are enquired for, offers of shares wanted. Oriental Hotel Kobe, and Brewery debentures are wanted. Japanese stocks have been dealt in to a fair extent chiefly in Tokyo City Loan Bonds. Osaka Harbour Bonds, Yokohama City Public Loan Bonds, Yokohama Electric Trams, and Yokohama Docks. For quotations see below.

STOCKS.	Capital.	No. of Shares.	Issue Value.	Amount Paid Up.	Reserve Fund.	At Working A'nt or Carried Forward.	Date.	Last Dividend.	For Term.	Closing Quotations.
	Y.		Y.	Y.					Year.
Brett & Co. Ltd.....	28,000	2800	10	10			30.6.03	6%	for 1	6.50 N.
Club Hotel, Ltd.....	185,000	1850	100	100			31.3.04	7%	" 1	60 N.
Grand Hotel, Ltd.....	250,000	2500	100	100			30.6.05	10%	" 1	225 Sa.
Helm Bros., Ltd.....	186,000	3720	50	50		Y. 6,179.25	31.12.04	17½%	" 1	87½ S.
Langfeldt & Co. Ltd.....	150,000	1500	100	100		Y. 8,349.06	31.12.05		" 1	45 S.
C. Nickel & Co. Ltd....	500,000	20000	25	25		Dr. 28,875.52	31.12.05	12%	" 1	34 Sa.
Japan Brewery Co. Ltd....	450,000	9000	50	50	200,000	5,106.41	31.12.05	20%	" 1	130 S.
Y. E. & Iron Works.....	130,000	2600	50	50	20,000	8,702.28	30.11.05	10%	" 1	120 S.
Hirano M. W. Co. Ltd....	125,000	5000	25	25		Y. 20,149.17	1st y.r.		" 1	25 S.
Oriental H.L. old ord.		1490	50	50			31.8.05	12%	" 1	75 N.
" " new "	251,000	1510	50	50	60,542.50
" " old pref.		750	50	50				8%		63 Sa.
" " new "		1250	50	50
" " Founders		80	12½	12½				Y.37	500 Sa.
Oriental Consolidated	G.		G.					G.
Mining Co., Ltd. ....	$5,000,000	500,000	$10	$10	None	G. $672,093	31.12.04	$1	" 1905	G. $18 S.
Raub Australian Gold	£	150,000	£1	18/10	£4,873	Dr. £8,745	31.3.05	40cents.	" 1901	$3½
Mining Co., Ltd.....	200,000	50,000	£1	£1
Debenture Loans.	Amount of Loan.		Face Value of Debentures.		Rate of Interest.		Interest Payable.		Closing Quotation.
Japan Brewery Company, Ltd. ...	200,000.00		100.00		7 per cent.		1 April and 1 Oct.		108 Sa.
Brett and Company, Ltd.....	11,500.00		100.00		7 per cent.		1 June and 1 Dec.		85 S.
Yokohama United Club .....	250,000.00		100.00		7 per cent.		30 June and 31 Dec.		108 Sa.
C. Nickel and Company, Ltd.....	50,000.00		100.00		8 per cent.		1 May and 1 Nov.		110 S.

A. C. HUTTON POTTS,
Share and General Broker.

FOR BABY'S SKIN SCALP AND HAIR

Something for Mothers to Think About

EVERY CHILD born into the world with an inherited or early developed tendency to distressing, disfiguring humours of the skin, scalp, and blood, becomes an object of the most tender solicitude, not only because of its suffering but because of the dreadful fear that the disfiguration is to be lifelong and mar its future happiness and prosperity. Hence it becomes the duty of mothers of such afflicted children to acquaint themselves with the best, the purest, and most effective treatment available, viz., THE CUTICURA TREATMENT.

Warm baths with CUTICURA SOAP, to cleanse the skin of crusts and scales and soften the thickened cuticle, gentle anointings with CUTICURA OINTMENT, to instantly allay itching, irritation, and inflammation, and soothe and heal, to be followed in the severer cases by mild doses of CUTICURA RESOLVENT PILLS (see below), to cool and cleanse the blood, are all that can be desired for the alleviation of the suffering of skin-tortured infants and children and the comfort of worn-out, worried mothers. A single set is often sufficient to cure when the best physicians fail.

Millions of Women Use Cuticura Soap

Assisted by CUTICURA OINTMENT, for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, for cleansing the scalp of crusts, scales, and dandruff, and the stopping of falling hair, for softening, whitening, and soothing red, rough, and sore hands, for baby rashes, itchings, and chafings, in the form of baths for annoying irritations and inflammations, or too free or offensive perspiration, in the form of washes for ulcerative weaknesses, and for many sanative, antiseptic purposes which readily suggest themselves to women, especially mothers, and for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery.

CUTICURA RESOLVENT PILLS (Chocolate Coated) are prepared to meet the wants of delicate women, and sensitive children, and are pure, sweet, and tasteless. They are beyond question the most successful blood purifiers and humour cures yet compounded.

CUTICURA REMEDIES are sold throughout the world. Australian Depot: R. Towns & Co., Sydney. British Depot: 37-38, Charterhouse Sq., London. French Depot: 5 Rue de la Paix, Paris. Forras Daus and Cuts. Corp., Sole Props., Boston, U. S. A. "All about the Skin," free.

Lea and Perrins' Sauce.

By Royal Warrant
to
His Majesty the King.

THE ORIGINAL AND GENUINE WORCESTERSHIRE.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT

IS A HOUSEHOLD NECESSITY

It cures Rheumatism, Sciatica,
Stiff Joints,
Glandular Swellings,
Sore Throat, Quinsy, Mumps,
Burns, Piles, Fistulas, &c.

AND EVERY
FORM OF SKIN DISEASE.

Manufactured only at 78, New Oxford St. (late 583, Oxford St.), London. Sold by all Chemists and Medicine Vendors.

VESSELS ON THE BERTH.

For KERLUNG, via Moji (from Kobe), 3rd, and 18th every month, at Noon, the "SAIKIO MARU."
—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
For KERLUNG, via Moji (from Kobe), 10th and 25th every month, at Noon, the "KOSHUN MAUR."
—Osaka Shosen Kaisha.
For TRIESTE, via Kobe, Hongkong, Singapore, Penang, Colombo, Bombay, Karachi, Aden, Suez, Port Said, and Fiume, about April —, the "FILIPPO ARTELLI."
—Heller Bros.
For BOMBAY, via Kobe, Moji, Hongkong, Singapore, and Colombo, April 17th, at 2 p.m., the "BOMBAY MARU."
—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
For MARSEILLES, London, and Antwerp, via Kobe, Moji, Hongkong, Singapore, Penang, Colombo, and Port Said, April 18th, at Daylight, the "KAWACHI MARU."
—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
For SYDNEY, via Hongkong and New Guinea, April 18th, the "PRINZ SIGISMUND."
—H. Ahrens & Co., Nachf.
For SHANGHAI, via Kobe, Moji, and Nagasaki, April 19th, at 10 a.m., the "KOSAI MARU."
—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
For HONGKONG, via Kobe, (Inland Sea), Nagasaki, and Manila, about April 19th, the "COPTIC."
—O. & O. S.S. Co.

(毎土曜日一發行)

編輯人 エフ アインタリー
發行兼印刷人 エー ビー フラオン
發行所 横濱市山下町五十五番
ウヤツマンメー ル新聞社

The Japan Weekly Mail.

日曜日 A REVIEW OF JAPANESE COMMERCE, POLITICS, LITERATURE, AND ART. 一回刊行

No. 16

REGISTERED AT THE G.P.O.
AS A NEWSPAPER.

YOKOHAMA, APRIL 21ST, 1906.

明治廿五年三月廿日
第三千三百九十四號

VOL. XLV.

CONTENTS.

Summary of News	391
Manchuria	391
China	391
The Metropolitan Police	391
Formosa	391
The Earthquake in San Francisco	391
Korea	391
Payment of Members of the House of Commons	391
Easter in the Churches	391
The Prince of Turkistan	391
The Saghalien Fisheries	391
The American-Japanese Copyright Convention	391
The Socialists in Tokyo	391
Marquis Ro	391
The Railway Nationalization Bill	391
Sir Ernest Satow	391
The "Kurokawa" and the Diet	391
The Review	391
Saghalien	391
The Famille	391
Notes on Current Events	391
Leading Articles	391
Missionaries in China	391
The "N. rh-Ch na Daily News" on Korea	391
The Brookfield	391
The Ya-ami Hotel Fire	391
Farer	391
Monthly Summary of Japanese Current Literature	391
Weddings	391
Yokohama Customs	391
A Chapter of Korean History	391
The Law Courts	391
News of the Week	391
English Public Schools and Universities	391
Waseda English Society	391
Correspondence	391
A Globe-Trotter's Suggestions	391
President Starr Jordan on Japan	391
English versus Japanese Moral Education	391
Customs Tariff	391
Telegrams	391
The Union Insurance Society of Canton	391
Latest Shipping	391
Latest Commercial	391

"FAIS CE QUE VOUS DEVEZ: ADVIENNE QUE POURRA!"

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

No notice will be taken of anonymous correspondence. What is intended for insertion in the "JAPAN WEEKLY MAIL," must be authenticated by the name and address of the writer, not for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

It is particularly requested that all letters on business be addressed to the MANAGER, and Cheques be made payable to same; and that literary contributions be addressed to the EDITOR.

YOKOHAMA: SATURDAY, APRIL 21ST, 1906.

MARRIAGES.

POLLARD CAMERON—On the 18th April, 1906, at H.B.M.'s Consulate-General, Yokohama, and afterwards at Christ Church, Yokohama, by the Rev. W. P. G. Field, M.A., Incumbent, FRED POLLARD, fourth son of Frederick Lessey Pollard, Esq., of London, England, to AUGUSTA ROSE, second daughter of the late W. G. Cameron, Esq., and of Mrs. Cameron, Yokohama.

EDWARDS PAGE—At the British Consulate General, Yokohama, on April 19th, before J. Carey Hall, Esq., I.S.O. (British Consul General), and afterwards at the Union Church, Yokohama, the Rev. E. S. Booth officiating, ROBERT CAMPBELL EDWARDS, of the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, son of Matthew Edwards, Esq., of Willowbank House, Antrim Road, Belfast, Ireland, to HELENA DEBORAH LOUISE, daughter of Walter Finch Page, Esq., of Togonohama, Dzusli, Kanagawa Ken, Japan.

SUMMARY OF NEWS.

A CASE of plague is reported from Shimonoseki.

On April 18th, Kushiro, Hokkaido, experienced a snow storm.

£150,000 capital is being subscribed for new ice works at Singapore.

A FLOATING mine was observed on April 17th in the Bungo channel, Kyushu.

News brought by the Capric shows that Mr. F. Vivanti's death was shockingly sudden. He was alighting from a train on the New York elevated railway on March 24th, when he fell on the platform and died in a few moments.

A CASE of supposed plague is reported in the village of Otake near Hiroshima.

TWO cases of small-pox were reported in Gobe-machi, Yokohama on April 15th.

TRAFFIC on the electric railway between Omiya and Kawagoe was opened on April 16th.

MR. K. Oshima, Chief of Police of Formosa, has been ordered to pay a visit to Egypt.

MR. M. Ichihara, Mayor of Yokohama, has tendered his resignation to the Home Office.

THE Commission for the delimitation of the Franco-Siamese territories has arrived at Hanoi.

THE French flagship Moncalm and three destroyers left Hongkong on April 11th for Yokohama.

PRINCE Ferdinand arrived on April 18th at Kobe by the Calabria. The following day, he proceeded to Kyoto.

THE Emperor of Annam is about to visit Tonkin and in Hanoi fêtes are being arranged in honour of his coming.

A CASE of plague is reported in Kobe, the patient being the wife of a metal ware workman, residing in Nagasa-dori.

A telegraph message has reached Cairo that the withdrawal of the Turks on the disputed territory at Akaba has begun.

On the afternoon of April 22nd the Yokohama citizens will give a garden party in honour of soldiers who participated in the war.

THE German coasting steamer M. Struve, which struck on a rock near Ockseu Island, between Amoy and Foochow, has become a total wreck.

At the recommendation of Prince Kan-in, Marquis Oyama and Admiral Togo have been elected Advisers of the Ladies' Patriotic Society.

THE Miyako Hotel in Kyoto was totally destroyed by fire on Tuesday night. Fortunately, though the Hotel was crowded with guests, no lives were lost.

LIEUT.-GENERAL Yamauchi has been placed on the retired list. After the conclusion of the war, he was appointed to the headquarters staff of the Second Division.

A CASE of scarlet-fever was reported among the passengers on board the Hakui Maru which arrived at Nagasaki from Shanghai on the morning of April 16th.

A CASE of bubonic plague was reported in Kobe, on April 16th the patient being Kiyo, the wife of a rice dealer named Akamatsu, residing in North Honcho.

A SEVERE earthquake devastated San Francisco on Wednesday. Three hundred lives were lost. Thousands were injured, and the damage done by fire exceeded a million dollars.

THE casualties created by the severe earthquake in Formosa on April 14th are officially estimated as follows: 14 persons killed; 67 injured; 1,144 houses collapsed; and 7,160, damaged.

UNDER the auspices of Mr. Hamao, the President of the Imperial University, and the professors of the various colleges, the annual spring boat races by the students of the University were held on April 14th on the Sumida river in Tokyo. Fine weather marked the occasion and the races were carried out successfully.

On March 18, Bishop Satelee, of the Protestant Episcopal Church of America, confirmed Miss Ethel Roosevelt, second daughter of the President.

It is reported by the Jiji that the leading members of the Tokyo Kihin Kwai (Welcome Society) intend to purchase the Club Hotel, Yokohama, and to replace it by a larger building.

A SAD accident is reported from Matsuyama. On April 10th, owing to high waves, a fishing boat capsized off the district of Shuso, the result being that one fisherman and ten women were drowned.

MR. E. F. Crowe has been appointed Commercial Attaché in Japan to the British Embassy, with an office in the old British Court room, Yokohama. The appointment, for the present, is for three years.

MR. T. Inouye, Chief of Police of the Kanagawa prefecture, has been removed to the Metropolitan Police Office, as Director of the Secretariat. Mr. K. Yuasa, Chief of the Police of Nagasaki Prefecture, is appointed to the vacant post.

At 10.30 p.m. on April 16th, fire broke out in a freight car of a passenger train on the Tokaido Railway while running between Mishima and Numadzu, the result being that the mail bags and much passenger baggage were destroyed.

THE Kwansei Railway Co. will hold a general meeting on April 27th at Yokkaichi. The net profit for the last half year—from October to March—amounts to yen 798,364.05. The dividend is expected to be at the rate of 9.3 per cent per annum.

MR. M. C. Goncalves Pereira, Brazilian minister, having been transferred to Bolivia, will leave Tokyo about the middle of May for his new post. The vacancy in Tokyo will be filled by Mr. Louis de Pereira, formerly Secretary of the Legation in Venezuela.

THE Department of Communications will issue 3-sen and 1½-sen special postage stamps as souvenirs of the military review which is to take place at the end of April. The stamps will be used on postal matters in Japan, Korea and some cities of China only.

COLONEL Akashi, military attaché of the Japanese Embassy in Berlin, Surgeon-General Yoshida of the Fifth Division, and Mr. Akiyama, Councillor of the Army Department, have been ordered to attend the International Red Cross Conference to be held this year at Geneva.

THREE godowns used for storing gunpowder and other explosives were blown up in Osaka on Tuesday. Much damage was done in the neighbourhood and a child was killed through the collapse of a house. Passengers in an electric car passing at the time were injured.

BARON BAKHMETIEFF, Russian Minister, who recently arrived in Tokyo, proceeded to the Palace at 10.30 a.m. on April 18th, and presented his credentials to the Emperor. The Minister was escorted by Baron Madenokoji, one of the Grand Masters of the Board of Ceremonies.

EMBARRASSMENT is again reported on the Tokyo Rice Exchange. Owing to the appearance of speculative purchases, the forenoon session was suspended on April 17th. The suspension, however, seems to be attributed to insufficient margin money being deposited with the Exchange by the purchasers.

MANCHURIA.

Sunday, April 15.

A telegram to the Fiji Shimpō from Ying-kow says that this railway is to be built by a Chinese Company and that the Russo-Chinese Bank will provide the greater part of the capital. That is a new version, which we find difficulty in crediting. If the persistence of rumours may be taken as evidence of public interest the Kirin-Changchun line attracts much attention. In the face of the Portsmouth Treaty the arrangement suggested by the Fiji Shimpō's correspondence would be emphatically an act of bad faith.

Tuesday, April 17.

Yingkow telegraphs that the Russians are retiring from Northern Manchuria in a leisurely manner. Their troops are being gradually drawn towards the railway and thus the distance between them and the advanced guards of the Japanese garrison force is decreasing. There are now only 200 Russians at Supingchih, 400 at Kuchuling, 3,000 at Changchun and 4,000 at Kirin. But at Harbin there is still a huge army, and judging from the nature of the structures the Russians are putting up there to store guns and ammunition, Harbin is to be a permanent military depot. Arrangements are also in progress for stabling a great number of horses. This news all comes from Newchwang and can not be received with absolute confidence.

Wednesday, April 18.

The China Gazette has succeeded in attracting attention by publishing a message from its Peking correspondent, to the effect that Mr. Hosie, having been sent by the British Government to investigate the attitude of Japanese officialdom towards British trade, and having telegraphed to Mukden the fact of his pending arrival, was there treated with such marked rudeness that he left the city highly incensed and without accomplishing anything. We refrain from reproducing the particulars given by the Shanghai journal, since evidence of a very different nature is needed to convince any one that Japanese officials deliberately showed gross discourtesy towards a distinguished British official holding a high position. The animus of the correspondent may be gathered from his further allegation that the result of Mr. Hosie's investigations at Newchwang was to convince him that while every facility was given officially to Japanese merchandise, every obstacle was placed in the path of British and American goods.

The photographer, Mr. Toyeda, and his ten companions, who when travelling to Harbin, duly provided with passports, were seized by the Russian military authorities, have been released with the exception of Mr. Itonaga who, with one Chinaman and one Korean, is still detained on suspicion of being spies. This was the suspicion which led to the arrest of the whole party. They were kept in prison for 20 days, and they complain that the prison guards robbed them of all their money—sums varying from 700 yen to 200. They speak of their treatment as having been very cruel, especially that of Itonaga, whose plight seems to be decidedly dangerous unless the Japanese Authorities intervene vigorously in his behalf.

We read in the Yomiuri Shinbun that the Japanese Government has decided to take steps for the opening of Mukden and Antung on the 1st of May. Mr. Yamaza, Chief of the Political Bureau in the Foreign Office, and Mr. Wakatsuki, Vice-Minister of Finance, are said to have proceeded to Manchuria to make preparations. During Mr. Yamaza's absence his duties will be discharged by Mr. Kurachi. The Yomiuri writes as though the opening of these places depended on Japan's fiat alone, but that, of course, is only a façon de parler.

Thursday, April 19.

Russia is said to have intimated her desire to establish a Consulate at Uriastai and the Chinese Government has issued instructions that investigations shall be made for the purpose of determining whether such a measure would impair China's Sovereign power.

Tokyo journals say that the Japanese Government has formally announced to the Powers the carrying into effect of the policy of the open door and equal opportunities in Manchuria. The notice states that military necessities have hitherto impeded this step, but that no obstacles exist any longer, and that, consequently, Antung and Tatung-kou (near the mouth of the Yalu) will be opened on the 1st of May, and Mukden on the 1st of June. It is further intimated that Japan intends to open Dalny in the near future. Persons who, taking advantage of these measures, travel in the interior of Manchuria, are warned, however, that owing to the conditions there existing Japan can not possibly undertake to protect their lives and properties, and that they must take the risks upon themselves. This addition to the announcement, though inevitable under the circumstances, will have a very deterrent effect.

Japan will establish a consulate-general at Mukden and a consulate at Antung, preserving, of course, her consulate at Newchwang.

It was recently stated that the Russians were prepared to surrender the railway between Changtu and Changchun and that Japanese commissioners, appointed to take over the line, were to leave Changtu on the 19th instant. Later intelligence indicates that the portion which the Russians are prepared to give up at once extends only as far as Kunchuling and that the commissioners will set out on the 22nd, their place of conference with the Russians being probably Shakotsu. The Japanese military authorities have made arrangements for commencing the restoration of the line immediately after its transfer.

It is stated that the offices of the Governor-General of Kwantun will be moved from Dalny to Port Arthur, as will also the office of the Civil Administration. The reason for this step is not stated, but it may be because of the contemplated opening of Dalny to foreign trade.

CHINA.

Sunday, April 15.

On the 28th of March Amoy was visited by a very severe shock of earthquake. No such earthquake had ever previously been felt at the place. Minor shocks occurred on succeeding days and the disturbance has not yet ceased entirely. Exact statements as to the damage done and the injuries to life and limb are not forthcoming, but the effects of the shock seem to have been very severely felt. The heaviest shock experienced in Formosa was on the 17th of March, from which it may be inferred that the phenomenon at Amoy had a different origin. Japan has thus far escaped, but we can not yet feel quite confident.

Tuesday, April 17.

Germany has steadfastly pursued her recently inaugurated policy of withdrawing her troops from Pechihill. On the 14th instant 1,900 of her Tientsin garrison embarked at Taku, leaving only 400 in Tientsin and 300 in Peking. It is stated that Italy is contemplating a similar reduction at an early date, but that the other Powers are undecided. Viceroy Yuan with his modernized army ought certainly to be able to guarantee the security of life and property in Pechihill, yet, when we consider the state of public feeling now existing in China, the time does not seem opportune for military evacuation by foreign States. Germany doubtless is fully convinced of the wisdom of her course, and from a purely German point of view there can be little question as to its diplomacy.

The Chinese official and the French Secretary of Legation who were sent to Nanchang to investigate the recent disturbance there, have left the place for Peking, whither the negotiations are to be transferred. A telegram to the Fiji Shimpō affirms that the Chinese Government still insist that the Chihsien did not die by his own hand.

Wednesday, April 18.

It is telegraphed that the Peking Government is endeavouring to save its face by removing or censuring the incriminated local officials, not on the ground that they failed to extend due protection to the lives and properties of Christians, but that they sent incorrect reports to Peking. Whether the Representatives of the Powers concerned will consent to that method of dealing with the problem, we have no information.

Thursday, April 19.

Chingtu telegraphs that the force sent by the Chinese Government from Szchuan to quell the insurrection in Tibet has been defeated with a loss of 200 killed and wounded, and that the Viceroy of Szchuan has ordered re-inforcements to be moved to the front with all expedition.

It is reported (Fiji Shimpō's Peking correspondence) that the Chinese Minister in Washington has been asked by the Secretary of State to inform the Chinese Government that the United States Congress is willing to modify the regulations relating to the admission of Chinese but that there is a natural reluctance to take this step in the face of the boycott of American goods. In fact Congress is not prepared to legislate under pressure of a menace, and the suggestion is offered that the Chinese should commence by abolishing the boycott, after which act America will not be slow to reciprocate. It seems scarcely likely that any proposition so crude has been officially submitted from Washington to Peking, though as a description of the sentiment of the United States Legislature the statement is probably accurate.

Friday, April 20.

According to the Peking correspondence of the Kokumin and the Nippon M. Pokotiloff is much incensed with the dilatoriness of the Chinese Government in replying to his proposals. He is said to have declared to H. E. Tang Shao-i, the Chinese Delegate, that Peking's tardiness constituted a clear proof of China's insincerity; that, under the circumstances, Russia would know what course to take, and that he should immediately move St. Petersburg to issue an order for the withdrawal of all Russian women and children from Manchuria.

We do not believe this tale. It may have some grain of truth but it reads like a large exaggeration.

THE METROPOLITAN POLICE.

It is stated that the scheme of extensive reforms in the Metropolitan Police system of Tokyo, mentioned by us in a recent issue, has been actually drafted, and has left the hands of the Legislative Bureau for submission to a Cabinet Council. Few details of the proposed changes appear to be publicly known, but one is mentioned with considerable satisfaction. According to the present system the Chief of Police is required to seek instructions from the Prime Minister with regard to the discharge of high police functions, namely political prosecutions, and investigations. This provision is said to have been elided from the new system. Many changes of personnel are also spoken of, but probably in that respect we shall see only transfers.

The subject of the proposed reform of the Metropolitan police system occupies a great deal of attention in Tokyo, but it has not very vivid interest for foreigners, who have always found the police most obliging and efficient. The truth is that politics are largely connected with the matter, and in so far as the projected changes remove the police from the direct control of the administration, politicians welcome the re-organization. We may note, however, that the principal police authorities of the Akasaka and the Kojimachi districts have sent in their resignations, foreseeing that they are likely to be sufferers in connexion with the riots of last September. Briefly speaking the cardinal reforms contemplated by the new system are, first, that the Chief of Police will no longer seek instructions direct from the Minister President, and secondly that the police authorities of each district will be held directly responsible for the occurrences within their jurisdiction. The measure thus localizes responsibility.

On Saturday evening the Chuo Shinbun published an extra the gist of which was that the Inspectors of Police in nearly all the districts of Tokyo had resigned and that something very like a strike had taken place. This proved to be a great exaggeration. There have been only four resignations in direct connexion with the reforms and two in consequence of transfers which would have amounted to reductions of official rank. Several other inspectors have resigned in the sequel of advice given to them by their superiors. The inclination is evidently to deal firmly with the police problem and to satisfy the citizens that no excesses committed by the police in the riots of September last will be condoned. There seems to be great regret about the resignation of Mr. Matsui, Inspector of the Nishi-no-kubo district, who is recognised as one of the ablest and most experienced officers in the force. As to the idea that anything like a strike has taken place, it is altogether groundless.

Among the proposed reforms of the police system one contemplates an increase of salaries. The present salaries are quite insufficient. All the Tokyo newspapers approve of this. They say that the pay of the police at present is not equal to the wages earned by the humblest workman.

In the Official Gazette the much talked of reforms of the Tokyo Metropolitan Police are promulgated. The reforms are not sufficiently salient to have much interest for foreign observers. So far as we can see, the chief change is that the relations hitherto existing between the Chief of Police and the Minister President of State are terminated, and the Chief of Police will henceforth take general instructions from the Minister of Home Affairs, while in matters directly concerning other Departments he will communicate with their respective Ministers. The police constables are given kannin rank, which doubtless means that they will receive increased salaries, but this point as well as other matters relating to the police in general are dealt with in separate regulations which have not yet been published.

In connexion with this subject the Minister of Home Affairs has issued to the Tokyo Municipality and the Chief of Police an injunction the spirit of which is to put an end to the vexatiously complicated procedure now followed by offices of local government and by the police in dealing with every-day affairs of the citizens. Documents are henceforth to be abolished as far as possible, the police are to refrain from a custom now too common, the custom of summoning people to attend at a police station in connexion with the most trifling matters, and whereas applications which have to receive the sanction of the police and the municipality have hitherto had to be sent in to each office separately, it will suffice henceforth if one application be sent to either office. Practical experience alone can convey any idea of the enormous waste of time and trouble that is entailed by the present system. Naturally when introducing a number of institutions entirely novel, the Japanese Authorities had to issue voluminous codes of regulations, and these being supplemented by other codes as circumstances suggested, the whole machinery became terribly complicated. On the other hand, the officials charged with giving effect to the system were equally novel to it and consequently could not venture to exercise discretion. They clung in nearly every case to the letter of the law, so that finally matters become so complicated as to involve a large frittering away of popular energy. It is that most mischievous and crippling abuse that Mr. Hara Kei is applying himself to correct, and if the Cabinet prosecutes this work resolutely, it will find the nation grateful.

FORMOSA.

Sunday, April 15th.

There has been another earthquake in Formosa. It occurred on the 14th instant, and the shocks were two, one at 3 a.m. and one at 8 a.m. The centre of disturbance seems to have been near the port of Yensui in the south. Great damage is said to have been done there but accurate particulars have not been ascertained as yet. At Taipei in the north the shock was not felt, but it developed serious force at Kagi, where several of the buildings which had survived the earthquake of March 17th were heavily injured by this new attack, and 24 injured persons have been carried to the hospital. It is believed that several were killed.

Monday, April 16th.

The earthquake in the Kagi district of Formosa on the 14th instant is said to have been more severe than that on the 17th of March. The loss of life does not appear to have been heavy, but in this matter the accounts differ, some putting the casualties at 31—of whom 3 at least were killed—and some at 57 (including 7 deaths). Yensuiko, where the shock was originally reported to have taken place, is the port of Kagi where the former earthquake wrought such damage. Telegrams speak of 1,191 houses destroyed by this last shock and 746 injured. In fact the town of Kagi may almost be said to have been obliterated. The centre of the disturbance is reported to have been Nanseichiku, in the immediate vicinity of Kagi. Parts of the hills there were torn away, as was the case with Bandaisan in Japan, and heavy land-slides occurred. The comparative smallness of the injuries to life and limb is attributed to the fact that the people, warned by their experience on the 17th ultimo, vacated their houses rapidly at the first symptoms of the shock. The earthquake on the 14th is said to have lasted one minute. The time was 3.25 a.m., and thus many of those that escaped must have fled from their houses in night garments. Among the injured are 19 Japanese. Baron Goto's report of casualties refers to Kagi alone. He gives the killed as 7 and the injured as 22.

THE EARTHQUAKE IN SAN FRANCISCO.

News of the big earthquake which has devastated San Francisco reached Yokohama shortly before noon on Thursday and created a great sensation, so many among the foreign residents here having intimate ties with the city which lies behind the Golden Gate. The gogai runners, hardly heard since the day of war, were busy during the tiffin hour distributing newspaper specials. Among them was a message to the Hochi Shinbun which read:—

San Francisco 19th April.
There has been a great earthquake in San Francisco. The loss of property is put at a million dollars. The town is still on fire and the killed number 300. The Municipal offices and other public buildings have been overthrown and it is anticipated that the whole town will be destroyed by fire.

Of course the wildest rumours were soon afloat regarding the losses sustained, one statement even going so far as to assert that Reuter had news of eighteen thousand people having been killed. This was an obvious exaggeration, for the Kokumin's telegram, which gave further details, ran:—

The worst earthquake in the history of California occurred here on Wednesday morning. Immense damage has been done. Scores of big buildings have been ruined. Many people are injured. No details are procurable as to the loss of life.

All the wires from the city are down. The shock lasted one minute.

Fire broke out in the ruins of a score of buildings which were burned. The water supply was cut off and the fire-alarm being disabled the city is at the mercy of the flames.

A telegram to the Yokohama Specie Bank, received via New York said that there had been a severe shock of earthquake at San Francisco, followed by a conflagration, the loss of property being great. The city was then still burning.

The Great Northern Telegraph Co. wired from Shanghai that it had received a report from the American Pacific Cable Co. to the effect that in consequence of the earthquake at San Francisco, the staff of the telegraph office retired from the building and consequently communication with San Francisco has been indefinitely postponed.

These are all the public details obtainable up to the time of going to press. We understand that several private cables have been received assuring relatives in Yokohama of the safety of loved ones and friends. Old acquaintances will be glad to hear of the safety of Mr. John T. Griffin, for he is about due in San Francisco at this time.

It is interesting to note that Mrs. J. F. Lowder, of Yokohama, was in San Francisco at the time of the great earthquake of 1868. The damage done then was very great, though the city in those days was mainly constructed of wood. To-day it is crowded with sky scrapers.

KOREA.

The Kokumin Shimbun attributes to Marquis Ito a project of establishing pastures in Korea under the joint ownership of the Imperial Houses of that country and Japan. With that object Viscount Fujinami, Chief of the Imperial Stud Bureau in the Japanese Household Department, proceeded recently to Korea, and after much investigation selected five places, each about twenty thousand acres in extent, which seem suitable for the purpose in view. Our contemporary, in making this statement, notes that while the horses of Japan are superior to those of Korea, the latter country has much better cattle, sheep and pigs than the former. In fact, the President of Leland Stanford University would probably find Korea a much more civilized country than Japan if he compared the oxen and swine of the two empires. We do not understand the item of joint ownership, but doubtless some explanation—probably a flat contradiction—will soon be forthcoming.

A strange story is published to the effect that Mr. Li, Korean Representative in St. Petersburg, is in a painfully impecunious condition. He is said to be without means either to remain in Russia or to return to Korea. Presumably he failed to comply with the original orders of his Government to leave the Russian capital, and thus he finds himself abandoned, for naturally the Russians decline to help him. But from any point of view the tale is very perplexing.

At the instance of Marquis Ito, it is reported to have been decided that the salaries of all Korean officials shall be increased. Details are not given but rumour says that the Ministers of State will have, in addition to their pay, a sum of 13,000 yen each annually for entertaining expenses and contingencies. The first step towards putting an end to administrative corruption in Korea is to make official salaries adequate to support their recipients without recourse to dishonest practices. Marquis Ito was understood to have that in view when he went to Korea.

A bureau is to be established in Seoul for investigating the affairs of local governments in Korea. Thus far the only members spoken of are Police Inspector Kameyama of the Residency General, and Interpreter Shiokawa.

The return of all the Korean refugees, headed by Prince Wi Hwa, has been spoken of lately as an accomplished fact, but it now appears that such is not the case. Pak Young-ho and the other serious offenders have not been amnestied, nor is there at present any appearance of their being amnestied. Only in the case of Prince Wi Hwa and some fourteen or fifteen members of his suite whose offences were comparatively light have pardons been granted.

In the March number of "The Korea Review" there appears a poem entitled "At Kilja's Grave." It is signed "Stirling," and it deals feelingly with the eternal stillness that wraps the grave of even the greatest winner of victories and the everlasting paralysis that death decrees for him. The writer is in strong sympathy with Korea. He speaks of the island empire as "trampled over by the invader"; of its people as "lifting hopeless hands of prayer beneath the foreign yoke," and of Kilja's spirit neither "knowing the nation's woe" nor able to bring redress. "All this would be very touching were it inspired by any grave other than that of Kilja. But that hero was himself a usurper who, in the 13th century before the Christian era, invaded Korea with an army of 5,000 followers, took possession of the country and founded a dynasty which lasted a thousand years. We may assume, therefore, that the Koreans were "trampled over" in his time and "lifted hopeless hands of prayer beneath the foreign yoke" at least as literally as they are now doing under the Japanese, who, for the rest, will make them far more happy and prosperous than ever Kilja did. The only advantage Kilja has over Marquis Ito is that the bee has been chaunting for some centuries in the green that wraps the former's grave and that the shadow of the pines falling across his narrow bed appeals to the romantic and silences the critic.

The Menkwa Saibai Kyokai, which has for object the growing of good cotton in Korea, seems to be making a success. Tokyo journals publish some particulars. It has been proved that American seed, when planted in Korean soil and properly cultivated, produces a crop twice as large as that obtained from Korean seed. The cotton farms in Korea cover an area of 300,000 acres. Last year, owing to inclement weather, only 800,000 piculs of cotton were produced, but this can be largely increased. The value was 210,000 yen, and the Society's experts calculate that the cotton grown in the peninsula will ultimately be worth 25 million yen. Thirty model farms are to be established and a sum of 120,000 yen will be expended for the purpose of distributing seed gratis among the Koreans. The Menkwa Saibai Kyokai numbers among its associates nearly all the most prominent Korean statesmen as well as the Japanese connected with Korea, for example Messrs. Pak Che-sun, Li Chion, Li Keunthaik, Li Hwa-yong and 3 other Koreans, Mr. Megata, Mr. Kato Masuo, Mr. Tsurubara, Mr. Kurachi, Baron Shibusawa, Mr. Nabeshima, Mr. Sasa Tomofusa, etc.

PAYMENT OF MEMBERS OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

On March 7th the House of Commons, by a vote of 348 to 110, adopted a motion that "In the opinion of this House the time has now arrived when it is urgently necessary in order to give to every constituency an equal, free and unhampered selection of members, that all members of Parliament should be paid by the State a sum at the rate of £300 per annum." The measure was avowedly proposed in the cause of the development of democracy. It encountered keenest opposition at the hands of Sir Edward Clarke, formerly Solicitor General. He took the interesting line that the House of Commons could not lawfully vote in such a sense, first, because no member had competence to go into the lobby on a measure in which he was personally interested, and, secondly, because the House was trustee of the public funds and could not properly divert any part of those funds to its own uses. Particularly did he urge that to give salaries to the Irish members would be ridiculous since they themselves averred that they were in the House not to promote its discussions and its legislative duties but to obstruct them. Sir Henry Campbell Bannerman, while not venturing to join legal issues with the ex-solicitor-general, asked how the British Colonies had all managed to pay their members if it were unconstitutional to vote public money for such a purpose, and he further observed that Sir Edward Clarke, in the course of his parliamentary career, must have voted for his own salary, a statement which Sir Edward Clarke strenuously denied. While supporting the motion, however, the Prime Minister intimated that the Treasury had no money to devote to such a purpose and hinted that even though the House voted in approval, the Government would not act upon the vote. Mr. Redmond, speaking on behalf of the Irish members, said that they were paid by their constituencies, and that in view of the distinction publicly made between them and the remainder of the House, they were willing to be exempted from the boon of salary. It is plain that after this vote the measure to which English conservatives are so strongly opposed can scarcely be long deferred.

EASTER IN THE CHURCHES.

Easter Sunday was a typical April day in eastern Japan. The morning broke dull but by noon the sun was shining unchallenged from the bluest of skies. By evening, however, there was a promise of rain in the air. At the Union Church forenoon service there was a large congregation. The service was conducted by the honorary Pastor, Rev. E. S. Booth, the preacher being Rev. B. Chappell, Aoyama, who discoursed on "Christ is Risen." The music consisted of the usual Easter hymns and the anthem "The Lord is my strength" by Monk. During the offertory Mr. S. H. Somerton sang "The Trumpet shall sound," from "The Messiah" and Mr. W. K. Vincent, who was at the organ, played as the concluding voluntary the Hallelujah Chorus from "The Messiah." The church was prettily decorated.

The Union Church Sunday School held the usual Easter flower service in Van Schaick Hall in the afternoon. The hall was very tastefully decorated, with spring flowers. Six Easter carols were sung. Addresses were given by Mr. C. Griffin, Superintendent of the Sunday School, who spoke of the work in which the children were interested, by Rev. E. S. Booth, and by Rev. Dr. Dearing on "The Gladness of Easter." The service was exceptionally bright. During its course prayers were offered for those who had left the community in the past twelve-month and also for those who might leave it during the present year.

Christ Church was beautifully decorated. The services were carried through by the Incumbent, Rev. W. P. G. Field, assisted by Rev. C. H. Shortt. At the morning service the Te Deum (Simper's setting) was sung; the communion service was fully choral and the sermon was preached by Rev. W. P. G. Field. In the evening the "Magnificat" and "Nunc Dimittis" (Simper's setting) were rendered and the singing of a quartet consisting of Miss Alice Blundell, Miss Waddilove, Mr. Kenneth Dodds and Mr. Fellowes-Lukis was greatly appreciated. The church was crowded at all the services; the number of communicants during the day being 174. The collections amounted to yen 263.83.

The wounded soldiers at the permanent military hospital, Kojimachi, thoroughly enjoyed an Easter-egg hunt arranged for them by Mrs. W. Pengeley Buncombe. Dr. Hirai had kindly given permission to use the garden for the "hunt" but the original programme could not be adhered to on account of the weather. The soldiers were supplied with paper air balls and turned out into the verandahs and passages to play while the eggs and prizes were being hidden in the wards. They then went back to their wards, to search for the treasures.

THE PRINCE OF TURKESTAN.

The Prince of Turkestan has arrived in Japan and is now in Kobe. Interviewed by a representative of the Hochi Shimbun at Moji he says that his country is some 130 miles from the Russian frontier and has a population of 300,000, but does not possess a single soldier, and is a constant object of Russian aggression. He himself visited Liaoyang and Mukden during the war and being much struck by the superiority of the Japanese army to the Russian, he came to the conclusion that the only safety for his country lay in organizing a force according to the Japanese system. With that object ultimately but primarily for the purpose of his own education, he desired to proceed to Japan to study, but his father would not consent, and the Prince, with much difficulty, made his way to Peking where he submitted his petition to the Empress Dowager. Her Majesty immediately approved of the project and promised to furnish means, which was done by directing that a sum of 300 taels monthly should be transmitted to the Prince by Viceroy Yuan. The Prince adds that the Peking Government and also the Government of Turkestan looked to see some discussion of Mongolian affairs at the Portsmouth Conference, for Chinese administrative authority is not fully exercised in Mongolia and the place is now an arena of Russian intrigue. By way of prelude to such discussion the Peking Government had organized a special office in the Chinese capital under the direction of Prince Sü, but the subject of Mongolia had not been brought up at the conference to the great disappointment of that country as well as of China. Prince Sü had subsequently been ordered to proceed to Mongolia where he is now travelling. His report of the state of affairs there will doubtless have much weight with the Peking Authorities, but the Turkestan prince evidently thinks that, unless some drastic measures be taken, Mongolia will pass into Russian possession. The Prince will proceed to Tokyo where he will be joined by the Princess later on.

It appears that the Prince of Mongolia who has just reached Tokyo is chief of one of the Forty-eight Banner Corps and his father's principality is at the extremity of Mongolia on the borders of Turkestan. His desire to visit Japan is reported to have been inspired by Mr. Sasaki, whom he met in connexion with a negotiation which Mr. Sasaki was conducting in Peking with reference to mining affairs. The Fiji Shimpō attributes to the Prince great intelligence and an ardent desire for reform. Our contemporary adds that the Empress Dowager was not particularly pleased at the idea of the Prince's journey, but Her Majesty finally yielded to his insistence. The Russian Representative, however, tried earnestly to dissuade him, and, among other arguments, offered him an allowance of a thousand taels monthly if he would make Russia not Japan the scene of his studies. The Prince consulted Prince Sü about this proposal, but Sü warned him did he accept it he would certainly bring calamity on his country for the sake of trifling benefit to himself. Viceroy Yuan gave him the same counsel, and promised him an allowance of 300 taels monthly during his residence in Japan. Prince Clin, however, and Lu Tien-lin opposed the proposal of an allowance, mainly on the ground, it would seem, that the Prince's journey concerned himself personally and had no public import. They were persuaded finally to change that view.

We give these particulars in consideration of the fact that they are published on the authority of the Fiji Shimpō, but we fail to understand whence they were obtained. If from the Prince himself, then his discretion is not equal to his alleged intelligence, and if from one of his suite, the sooner he adopts means to close their mouths the better. The Prince is to enter the Shimbu Gakko which is under the presidency of Major-General Fukushima and numbers many Chinese among its pupils.

THE SAGHALIEN FISHERIES.

Judging from paragraphs circulated by news agencies and from comments in the Tokyo press, there seems to be much uneasiness lest the Foreign Office in Tokyo should concede the claims of the Russians with regard to the Saghalien fisheries. This matter hinges on the question whether fishery concessions are to be classed in the same category with ordinary rights of property. The Portsmouth Treaty pledges Japan to protect Russian rights of property in the ceded half of Saghalien, and Russia desires that the fishing permits granted by her to her own subjects—some of them granted during the war—should be recognised as such rights. It is obvious that if they be so recognised a very difficult complication arises, for Japan, on her side, invited tenders from her own people last year for these very privileges and made formal grants of them to the successful bidders. There are thus two holders of each fishery. Little doubt, we think, can be entertained as to the theoretical side of this problem, but a section of the Japanese public attribute to the Foreign Office a disposition to prefer expediency to right. The Foreign Office is represented as expressing the view that it would be very short-sighted policy to antagonise Russia with regard to this comparatively petty point on the threshold of the very much graver question concerning the fishery privileges to be granted to Japanese subjects by Russia in the waters of Siberia. The Saghalien concessions made by Russia cover periods of only four or five years at longest—one, however, is said to be for fifteen years—and it is not a very serious business to wait patiently until these concessions become null and void by lapse of time without girding against them now at the risk of sacrificing larger interests. Such is the disposition attributed to the Foreign Office. We can not tell whether the analysis be correct, but there is no difficulty in appreciating that a policy of that nature might well commend itself to sagacious statesmen. Writers in Japanese journals, however, show no inclination to cede anything to Russia. They hold that it is futile to look for any corresponding amiability on the part of the great Northern Power, and that Japan's wisest plan is to claim and insist upon receiving every part of her rights.

According to the Asahi Shimbun the officials of the Foreign Office, the War Office and the Department of Agriculture and Commerce, have come an agreement with regard to the problem of the south-Saghalien fisheries. Their decision is that fishery concessions cannot be recognised as rights of property according to international law, but that an exception may be made in favour of Russian subjects who hold such concessions under long leases in the waters of the southern half of Saghalien. It will be remembered that in previous journalistic accounts of this affair, the Department of Foreign Affairs was said to advocate a conciliatory policy, while the Departments of War and Agriculture and Commerce were resolutely bent upon asserting Japan's rights to the letter. The Asahi does not state the source of its authority but it publishes the news with all the pomp of double leading, as though the public were invited to place absolute credence in it.

THE AMERICAN-JAPANESE COPYRIGHT CONVENTION.

This convention is expected to be published in a few days. It is not welcomed in Japan. The veto upon the reproduction of American books will hurt the Japanese badly. Translation is permitted, but translated works are poor substitutes for the originals. The fact is that Japan's position in the matter of copyright is very unfavourable. She has everything to give and nothing to get. No American publisher, nor any European for the matter of that, would think of re-producing a Japanese volume; it would be quite unintelligible to American and European readers. But books in English, French or German find many readers in Japan, and when she pledges herself to protect the copyright of such works in exchange for having the copyright of her own protected in the countries concerned, she makes a very one-sided bargain. Had she consulted her own interests alone she would have declined altogether to enter into copyright conventions with any Western State. We remember pointing this out some 20 years ago, and we remember also that our words evoked a storm of indignation among good folks who professed to be animated by the highest principles of justice. However, considerations of mere expediency are quite out of date. Japan having entered into copyright conventions with European countries, is bound to do so with the United States also, though the latter step hurts her most of all.

THE SOCIALISTS IN TOKYO.

Mr. Nishikawa Kojiro and 20 of his accomplices have been remanded for public trial on a charge of exciting disturbance. Mr. Nishikawa is a socialist of the most pronounced type. He owns and edits the Heimin Zasshi, and his journalistic career has been of the most stormy type. He was the leader of the demonstrations made on the 11th and the 18th of March in the Hibiya and Ueno Parks respectively against the proposal to raise the electric-tram fares in Tokyo. Associated with him was Mr. Yamaji, a well known Christian and also a socialist, but a socialist of a very different type from Nishikawa. The meeting in the Hibiya Park with drums beating and red flags flying was too much for Mr. Yamaji. He seceded from the movement and thus a projected re-assembly on the 15th was prevented. But on the 18th Nishikawa and his fellow-fanatics met in Ueno Park, and after visiting the offices of the Tokyo City Council, where they made a demonstration, they proceeded to obstruct and stone the cars of the Shigai Tetsudo. These facts having been clearly proved, Nishikawa and 8 others have been remanded on major charges, and the remaining 12 of those apprehended will be tried as accomplices. This incident may be called the debut of socialism on the Japanese stage.

MARQUIS ITO.

In the course of a speech delivered in Seoul on the 8th instant and published by the Japan Times, Marquis Ito made use of the following words:—

I may, however, be allowed to say a word or two on one thing that caused me some anxiety on my arrival here; it was as to the possible attitude of this people—how His Korean Majesty would be disposed towards Japan, and what sort of attitude the Korean Cabinet Ministers were going to assume. This formed the subject of anxiety not only to myself but to our Cabinet Ministers at home. More than that His Majesty the Emperor, out of his gracious solicitude for the welfare of Korea, was pleased to order one of his aides-de-camp, Vice-Admiral Inouye, to accompany me here, and report to His Majesty on my reception here as Resident-General and other matters connected with my assumption of office. Vice-Admiral Inouye, as you all know, left here for home on the 1st inst, with the required report in his pocket.

In that report I have submitted to His Imperial Majesty a detailed representation on all sorts of affairs since my arrival here. At first there appeared to be a certain element of doubt and suspicion on the part of the Koreans. Even now I daresay there may be such tendency among a section of this people not acquainted with the real state of affairs. But according to what His Korean Majesty has repeatedly condescended to say to me, I may be permitted to believe that I have the honour to enjoy his confidence and trust in no small measure. He has on more than one occasion been pleased to assure me that he wished to rely upon my loyal services for the regeneration of the Korean administration. His Majesty has also given orders to his Ministers to carry out the said work of regeneration under my direction and guidance. As for the Korean Ministers, they have assured me of their determination to do their utmost to this end under my direction and guidance; they say that an opportunity like the present will not occur again. And as a matter of fact, they are now actively engaged in the work of regeneration.

Such being the case, you will have perceived that the present situation of affairs is most satisfactory. It is not necessary for me to tell you that my sincere wish is to promote the good of Korea to the utmost of my capacity; nor need I remind you of the necessity for this purpose of ripe knowledge of the country and its people, and the necessity of proceeding with the work in a cautious and orderly manner. The time has not yet come for me to disclose to you the plan of work under contemplation. All that I can say now, as I have already stated on some previous occasions, is that my dearest aspiration will always be apart from the improvement of the Korean administration, to secure, on the one hand, an increase of friendship between Japan and Korea, and, on the other, the promotion of the common interests of the two countries. I consider it a great honour to have been charged with such an important task, and I shall be most sincerely gratified if my efforts in any way meet with success, for then I should have been able to fulfill in some measure what I owe to my Imperial Master and to the Emperor of Korea for the gracious confidence and trust with which they have honoured me. I feel no little uneasiness on account of my limited acquirements and also of the fact that the affairs in my charge do not concern Japan only. I am, however, resolved in all sincerity to do all that my humble ability will permit me to do. I earnestly hope that my intentions will meet with your candid appreciation. Let me also hope that you will rightly understand Japan's position in this country, and that while pursuing your respective avocations, you will always take care not to do anything tending to injure the prestige of our Empire.

These words ought to furnish a complete answer to those who continue to circulate the falsehood that the last convention with Korea was obtained by force. Already indeed Marquis Ito had denied the slanderous statement in most emphatic terms, but the publicists who, for reasons best known to themselves, have undertaken the task of discrediting and traducing Japan's Far-Eastern policy seem to ignore any evidence except such as makes for their own view of the case. They will now, we do not doubt, ridicule Marquis Ito's utterances and probably call them mere diplomatic platitudes, but men of judgment and impartiality will have no difficulty in choosing between the public assertions of the greatest statesman in the East, a man whose long and brilliant career has been marked by sincerity as conspicuously as by ability, and the irresponsible utterances of journalists whose prejudice is so clumsily paraded as to be laughable, and whose sudden and violent espousal of the anti-Japanese party is Korea is commonly attributed to anything but honest conviction. Marquis Ito declares that he has the Korean Emperor's assurance of confidence; that His Majesty has instructed his Ministers to carry out the work of reform under his (Marquis Ito's) guidance, and that the Ministers, on their side, have declared their determination to do their utmost to that end under his direction and guidance. That is a sufficiently explicit analysis of the mood of the Sovereign and his Ministers, as displayed to Marquis Ito at all events. Whether they have two faces, and are turning the one towards him and the other towards his enemies, we can not say, but certainly without very convincing evidence no one will declare them guilty of such duplicity.

THE RAILWAY NATIONALIZATION BILL.

It transpires that the Government has no intention of putting this bill into operation during the current year in the case of any railway except the Seoul-Fusan line. This information was elicited by Baron Soga, President of the Japan Railway, who waited on the Premier to make inquiries, and was referred to the Minister of Communications, the latter being at the same time instructed to give the fullest possible information. Baron Soga's requests were that there should be no sudden action under the bill; that each railway should be given notice of the date of its intended purchase; and that if this latter procedure were impossible, the railways should at any rate be told what interval of non-purchase they might count on. Mr. Yamagata, Minister of Communications, replied that several months notice would always be given, and that it was not the Government's intention to effect any purchase during the current year.

This negation does not apply to the Seoul-Fusan and Seoul-Chemulpo lines, which will be nationalized at once. The price paid for them is said to be 34 million yen. This price is calculated, in the case of the Seoul-Fusan road, not on the basis of net profits realized in the six half-yearly terms prior to June 1904,—as will be the case with other railways—but on the basis of the Treasury's 6 per cent. guarantee. The price of the Seoul-Chemulpo line, however, is estimated on the general basis. From the total of 34 millions there have to be deducted two sums, the first of 1,600,000 yen lent by the Government on account of the Seoul-Chemulpo road, the second of 700,000 yen diverted by the company to the Seoul-Chemulpo line from the Seoul-Fusan.

SIR ERNEST SATOW.

Sir Ernest Satow has achieved a feat which we believe to be unique, at all events it is unique so far as our experience goes. He has retained Shanghai's good will from first to last during his career in Peking. The N. C. Daily News, alluding to his reported departure from China without any intention of returning, says, "we sincerely trust he is not going." It is an arduous feat indeed for any British Representative in Peking to remain in favour with his Shanghai nationals as Sir Ernest seems to have done. Shanghai's conceptions of diplomatic duties are largely coloured by the spirit which naturally grows up in any small body of foreigners who sit down to earn a livelihood among a nation of millions whom they despise and distrust. That spirit prevails in every foreign community at every port in the Far East, and the times would be troubled indeed did Great Britain send to Peking Representatives who made it a duty to be guided by such sentiment. Sir Ernest, it must be confessed, has been somewhat fortunate: it has not been his lot to press questions which very closely concerned the direct interests of his nationals at the treaty ports. Still he can certainly claim the great credit of having followed the via media with much skill, not erring either in the direction of excess of zeal or in that of deficiency of resolution. He did not escape from Japan entirely without attack from the Jingo extremists with whom he never had any sympathy. But he left Tokyo on the eve of problems which he would probably have treated in a manner not satisfactory to those gentry, and in that respect also fortune was not unkind to him. At all events he has achieved a record in the Far East, and we venture to offer him our congratulations. We have no certain news of his intention to quit the Chinese capital altogether, but doubtless if he entertains any such purpose he looks forward to serving his country elsewhere, for he is still in the prime of life as prominent diplomatists count age.

THE "KINROKU KOSAI."

The complete redemption of the Pension Bonds has been at length effected. These bonds were issued in the year 1877. They represent the pecuniary responsibility undertaken by the country in connexion with the abolition of the feudal system, a responsibility of 173,902,900 yen, being the aggregate of sums granted in commutation of perpetual revenues or life pensions enjoyed by the feudal nobles and the large crowd of samurai who constituted the bulk of the feudal community. Probably no transaction of corresponding magnitude was ever achieved so cheaply. Some historians have called it a "confiscation," but though the name found a certain measure of justification in the terms of the arrangement, we can not forget that the plan was evolved and all its details elaborated by representatives of the samurai themselves and that the system was accepted almost without audible murmuring. The bonds carried various rates of interest from 5 per cent. to 7 per cent. and their redemption was to be effected within a space of 30 years reckoning from the sixth year after their issue, the annual amount redeemed being fixed in accordance with the Treasury's convenience, and the numbers of the redeemed bonds determined by lot. It will thus be seen that redemption had to be finally achieved by the year 1907, but that it could be effected earlier if the Government so desired. Forty drawings took place up to the close of 1905, and the total face value of the bonds redeemed was 157,271,360 yen, so that 16,631,640 yen worth remained to be dealt with. These have now been paid at one coup, the Treasury doubtless desiring to get rid of its five-per-cent. liabilities as quickly as possible. We may say, therefore, that the last vestige of feudal times has now disappeared.

Primroses were much in evidence in Yokohama on Thursday, April 19, the anniversary of Lord Beaconsfield's death, nearly every other Britisher one met having some in his button-hole.

THE "JIJI SHIMPO" AND THE DIET.

The Jiji Shimpō publishes a remarkable article on the Diet; remarkable because its gist is a lament that the Upper House discharges more important functions in a legislative sense than the Lower. Our contemporary advances the remarkable assertion that the number of bills which have passed the Upper House in the exact form they bore when they emerged from the hands of the Representatives is smaller than the number which have been either rejected or amended by the Peers. It also makes the not less remarkable assertion that the preponderating influence now exercised by the Upper House is the outcome of an error made by the drafters of the Constitution, who desirous of erecting the Peers into a bulwark for the support of conservatism, now find that, while they have themselves stepped down and joined hands with the Representatives, their creatures in the Upper House, namely, the Imperial Nominees, contribute a serious obstacle to the democratic exercise of legislative, and constructively of administrative, power by party politicians. As to the former of these assertions we call it remarkable because it greatly contradicts the impression produced on the public by the working of the Diet. We venture to affirm that if public opinion could be analysed, it would be found to hold that the fate of a majority of all important legislative measures is decided in the Lower House. That bills originating among the Representatives and passed by them at official instance should be amended by the Peers seems natural and proper, for, as our contemporary frankly admits, the Upper Chamber includes a larger measure of legislative and administrative experience and perhaps competence than the Lower. But the total rejection of an important and plainly useful bill by the Peers is another matter, and we can not recall any instance of such an incident. The remarkable character of the Jiji's second statement lies in the epithet it applies to the Imperial Nominees. We do not specially refer to the fact that our contemporary's contempt for these legislators reflects indirectly on their nominator, but rather to the fact that whereas the Imperial Nominees of the Upper House include a large majority of men who have won high reputations as administrators and scientists, they should be thus openly discredited by the leading journal of Tokyo merely because they assert their own views in opposition to the views of popular nominees who, in many if not a majority of cases, are men of little standing and less reputation. The growth of democratic tendencies in Japan is very clearly indicated in the Jiji's article.

THE REVIEW.

It is stated that on the occasion of the grand review, or immediately after it, the following Lieut-Generals will be raised to the rank of full General:—

H.E. Lieut-General Terauchi, Minister of State for War.
Lieut-General Baron Oshima (Hisano) 9th Division.
Lieut-General Baron Oseko, 7th Division.
Lieut-General Baron Tatsumi, 8th Division.

Field Marshal Marquis Oyama is to command in chief at the Review on the 30th and General Viscount Kodama will be Chief of Staff.

The Minister of State for War has issued an injunction pointing out that the great victory won in the recent war was due to the virtues of the Emperor, the loyalty and courage of the Army and the support of the people. It was a victory of the nation at large not of the military alone, and His Excellency therefore conjures the latter to abstain from all exhibitions of pride towards the people, and by their circumspect conduct to establish their title to lasting fame. The great Review is intended to include representatives of all the troops which actually took part in the war. That is His Majesty's desire, and it consequently devolves on all commanding officers to inculcate the duties of reserve, decorum and humility.

SAGHALIEN.

It has been decided to grant holdings to one hundred Japanese families in the Susuya-River district of Saghalien near Vladimirofska. This arrangement will become operative from next month. It has also been decided to remove the seat of civil government from Korsakoff to Vladimirofska as a good road leading to the latter has been completed.

Accounts from Saghalien indicate that the cold of winter has worked terrible havoc among the horses and cattle left by the Russians in Southern Manchuria. Out of 1,600 animals, only 400 horses and 100 oxen are said to survive. There is a disposition to blame the Civil Government for not taking steps to avert this calamity, and to blame the troops for indiscriminate slaughter of oxen which might have escaped the cold. But, so far as we can see, the main fault of officialdom was reluctance to let the people take possession of the animals. Certainly it would have been wiser to save them alive than to see them perish, although the former entailed their transfer to private ownership.

THE FAMINE.

Contributions received from the United States for the relief of the famine sufferers in the North have now reached the formidable figure of about a half million yen, of which some 382,000 yen have been transmitted through Mr. Huntington Wilson, American Chargé d'Affaires, having been collected by the Christian Herald of New York with the assistance of the American Red Cross. Some 30,000 yen have been sent to the Foreign Committee at Sendai and the remainder conveyed through the Minister for Foreign Affairs to the Japanese Red Cross Society to be used for the purchase of food for the sufferers.

The total of other American contributions, which have come, not through the Embassy, but directly to the Sendai Committee, Bishop Harris, Bishop McKim and others, is in the neighbourhood of 100,000 yen.

The Executive Committee of the Yokohama and Tokyo Foreign Residents' Association for the Relief of Sufferers by the War gratefully acknowledge receipt of the following sums towards the Famine Relief Fund now being collected:—

Amount already acknowledged	Yen. 11,055.60
Mr. J. S. Hambleton, Jackson, Va.	2.00
From Sentaro Oyama, for M. Gustave Boissonade, Antibes, Alpes Maritimes, France	50.00

About the beginning of April the famine reached the worst stage. Two hundred thousand people are being given food every day and two or three hundred thousand more are being furnished employment on Government relief works.

There will be little change for the better until July and there will be more or less distress until the new crop of rice is harvested in October. However, the prime motive of our Committee, the enlisting of foreign sympathy, having been accomplished we plan to gradually close our work.

At a committee meeting held at the end of March a resolution was passed that "in order to expedite the work of the Committee we request that all funds be forwarded as rapidly as possible to the treasurer and that the last of the funds to be used by this committee be in the hands of the treasurer by May 31st in time for the final distribution."

The Committee at its meeting last week resolved to "request foreigners in Japan to send in any further contributions intended for this Committee, as far as possible, by the end of April."

THE FOREIGN COMMITTEE OF RELIEF.

WILLIAM E. LAMPE, Chairman.
CHARLES S. DAVISON, Sec. & Treas.
C. JACQUET.
J. H. DEFOREST.
M. B. MADDEN.
G. A. FORREST.
WILLIAM AXLING.

NOTES ON CURRENT EVENTS.

The new bridge and road at the Babasaki gate will be completed and opened for traffic by the date of the great military review at the close of this month. This is a place of sad memory. It was here that the terrible accident happened on the occasion of celebrating the Yalu victory in May, 1904. The gate, with its old-fashioned approaches, was a veritable death-trap, and only by means of extreme vigilance on the part of the police have frequent accidents been prevented under the conditions of modern traffic. The work of building the new bridge and straightening the approaches has cost 167,682 yen, of which the Emperor contributed 70,000. The improvement is most striking.

The death is announced of Mr. Hayashi Tadamasu, the well known dealer in Japanese works of art, in Paris. Mr. Hayashi was originally sent to France by the Kirin Kōshō Kaisha, an institution which only old residents interested in curios will be able to recall. He was their art interpreter, but he gradually worked out an independent position for himself, and at the time of the great French Exhibition, Baron Sone, then Japanese Representative in Paris, appointed him to be a commissioner in the Japanese section. The cause of his death is not stated.

Sir Malcolm McEacharn, Honorary Consul for Japan in Melbourne and Colonel of the Melbourne Militia, left Tokyo on the 12th instant for Australia where Lady McEacharn and Miss McEacharn await his coming. Sir Malcolm has to be in London by the middle of July; hence his brief stay in Japan and his consequent inability to avail himself of many of the hospitalities which the Japanese desired to organise in his honour, notably an entertainment by the Tokyo Municipality.

The Jiji Shimpō says that three large holes have been discovered in the Mikasa instead of the one originally supposed to be the limit of the damage. She will be raised, but a considerable time must still elapse. It is curious that the loss of a Brazilian warship by an explosion in her magazine should have intervened to confirm the theory as to the cause of the Mikasa disaster.

Admiral Togo having obtained permission to present to the Great Shrine at Ise one of the captured battle-ship Orel's 12-inch guns, the huge weapon has been duly placed in the enclosure of the Shrine surrounded by a fence the pillars of which consist of naval mortars while the fence itself is of torpedo-nets. On the gun, engraved in gold, is an inscription written by Admiral Togo himself, namely:—Nippon-kai Sensho Kinen ("Memorial of the victory in the Sea of Japan"). The ceremony of unveiling the gun and its environment took place on the 15th instant in the presence of Vice-Admiral Yamano-uchi, Port Admiral at Kure. Many naval officers and bluejackets were in attendance, and the precincts of the Shrine echoed to the music of a naval band.

Mr. Huntington Wilson, American Chargé d'Affaires, has received by cable official information to the effect that General Wright, the American Ambassador to Japan, is due at Yokohama on May 14th by the steamship Minnesota.

Shortly after General Wright's arrival Mr. and Mrs. Wilson will leave Japan to return home, when Mr. Wilson will take up his duties at Washington as Third Assistant Secretary of State.

On the 14th instant the Guards Division held their celebration in honour of their 6,500 comrades killed in the war. A very great number of people were present and the ceremony was most imposing. The Guards fought from first to last throughout the campaign.

The repairs of the battle-ship Suo (originally the Pobieda) having been completely she has emerged from dock at Nagasaki. She will proceed to Yokosuka. It has been stated in some quarters that the vessels taken by the Japanese from the Russians were not worth the great cost of repairing, and that the more economical course would have been to construct new ships. But that statement is not based on any acknowledged figures. We must assume that Japanese naval experts knew what they were about and had calculated the cost carefully before going to work. The Pobieda, for example, is almost a new vessel, one of the finest battle-ships Russia had on the Far Eastern station.

The bronze statues of Doctors Baelz and Scriba, which have been already alluded to in these columns, are now ready to be unveiled. The designer was Professor Tsukamoto and the chiseller Professor Naganuma. The work was undertaken in 1903 and the erection of the statues commenced last November. It had been intended to complete the statues by the time of the meeting of the Medical Congress now assembled in Tokyo, but a question then arose as to whether it would not be better to postpone the unveiling until the autumn of this year, when Dr. Baelz is expected to re-visit Japan. The latter opinion was finally adopted. To the expense of making and erecting the statues the 3,000 medical men who received instruction from the two eminent German physicians during the latter's sojourn in Tokyo have subscribed.

It is stated that a committee of the Tokyo City Council has recommended the construction of a public hall (kokai-do) in Tokyo. The plan advocated is for a building of brick, three storeys high, the ground floor to cover 1599 tsubo (1½ acres), and the attached buildings 996 tsubo. The place would accommodate something like 5,000 persons, an arithmetical calculation which we do not follow. Tokyo certainly wants a public hall, but a question is whether this is just the time to increase the already heavy taxes of the citizens.

The Jiji Shimpō follows the Nichi Nichi Shimbun in writing most sympathetically about the seismic disturbance in Italy. Both papers commiserate in the heartiest terms with the people of Italy, and express great admiration for the conduct of the King and Queen as related by telegraph.

We extract the following from the Evesham Journal and Four Shires Advertiser of March 3rd last:

To Lord Redesdale congratulations were due on Saturday on the sixty-eighth anniversary of his birth, his lordship having been born on February 24, 1837. Raised to the peerage in 1902, he adopted the title of Baron Redesdale on the exact centenary of the creation of the first barony of that name, which was conferred on his kinsman in 1802 on the occasion of his appointment to the Lord Chancellorship of Ireland, in succession to Lord Clare. The estates of the first Lord Redesdale of Batsford Park, Gloucester, subsequently went to his son, who was made an earl, and on his death, unmarried, in 1886, they were inherited by the present Lord Redesdale, who revived the title when he was raised to the peerage.

Lord Redesdale, formerly Mr. A. B. Freeman Mitford, of course, spent his 68th birthday in Tokyo.

Baron Dr. Takagi, whose visit to America and intention of subsequently proceeding to England were announced in these columns last fall, has now reached London and has promised to lecture at St. Thomas Hospital on the sanitary system pursued during the war.

Surgeon-General Koike has been appointed chief of the historiographers bureau organized for the purpose of compiling the medical records of the war. This choice seems to be universally approved.

Mr. Makino, Minister of State for Education, has agreed to discharge the duties of the Minister of Foreign Affairs pro tem. It is generally believed that the portfolio of Foreign Affairs will be offered to Viscount Hayashi, who is now en route for Japan from London, but nothing seems to be known as to the probability of His Excellency accepting the post.

The Emperor has been pleased to pardon H. B. Collins who, last year, was condemned to 11 years imprisonment with hard labour.

The Official Gazette promulgates the bill passed by the Diet in the last session relating to the prevention of collisions at sea. This measure provides that Japan shall adopt the system to which all the maritime nations of the West are parties: in other words, that Japanese ships shall in all respects conform with the regulations which guide the procedure of foreign vessels in navigating the high seas. It was at the instance of the British Government, if we remember aright, that this legislation was undertaken. The new law goes into force from May 1st.

The French Secretary of the Navy, in a recently delivered speech in Parliament, is reported (The Times) to have said of the projected additions to the German Navy:—"The details as to these great German ironclads were not accessible, but to judge from the credits, amounting to 45,600,000f. (£1,824,000), for this type, the several units would exceed 18,000 tons, thus equalling the French battleship. The same was true of the two German armoured cruisers, which were each to cost 34,350,000f. (£1,374,000), Germany's naval budget for the realization of her programme rose successively from year to year from 291,000,000f. (£11,640,000) in 1905 up to the maximum of 412,000,000f. (£16,480,000) in 1917." These prices seem very high. A ship of the Lord Nelson class—16,500 tons and 18 knots—costs in round figures £1,500,000, and it is evident that unless German builders are much more expensive than English, a vessel involving an outlay of £1,824,000 must be much superior to a Lord Nelson or an Agamemnon, which are the strongest vessels now under construction for the British Navy. This remark applies with even greater force to the new German armoured cruisers. They are to cost £1,374,000 each, which is approximately the price Japan pays for the battle-ships Katori and Kashima.

Our readers, to many of whom Major-General Fukushima is known personally, while all know him by name and fame, will be glad to hear that he has been gazetted Vice-Chief of the Head Quarter Staff. His promotion to the rank of Lieut.-General may be shortly looked for.

The necessary surveys are being made for telephonic communication across the Tsugaru Strait to Hokkaido. It is to be hoped that this activity in far distant regions may be regarded as an earnest of some reasonable amount of diligence nearer home. The Department of Communications—probably it would be juster to say the Department of Finance—still looks on calmly while hundreds, if not thousands, of applicants for telephones are patiently awaiting their turn to be supplied, and have been awaiting it for years. We have never been able to fathom the official policy in this matter. Here is an unquestionably lucrative investment which demands only development and of which the State has already a monopoly. Yet it left in a flagrant state of undevelopment, while the monopoly system is extended anxiously in other directions. The service of the Tokaido railway, too, promises to be soon classed in the same category with telephones. Every day that passes furnishes fresh illustrations of the Railway Authorities' incompetence to cope with the public demand. It is a common occurrence for passengers to be left behind because the trains are too crowded to carry them, and in order to secure a seat in a special train one must book a place several days in advance. Is there any excuse for this failure to satisfy public requirements and to exploit a palpable source of State income? If there be an excuse, no outsider has been able to conceive it and no official has been at the trouble to explain it.

Professor Takamine has been decorated with the Fifth Order of the Rising Sun in consideration of his great discoveries in applied chemistry. The reward seems scarcely adequate to the nature of the service, but the truth is that there is a radical defect in the present system of Japanese Orders, and indeed of all Orders for the matter of that. There should be a separate set of Orders, granted solely for merit, and another set granted as mere displays of international courtesy. It is little short of ridiculous to see a man like Professor Takamine decorated with the fifth class of the Rising Sun, while men whose only title to recognition is their inclusion in the suite of some potentate, prince or magnate, or who have helped some financial transactions in which they found their own account, are recipients of second or even first class decorations.

The great mausoleum on the summit of Peiyushan at Port Arthur, the construction of which was promoted by Admiral Togo and General Nogi, is progressing rapidly. The bones of 18,000 men have already been collected into the receptacle for their rest. We presume that these bones include Russians as well as Japanese,

MISSIONARIES IN CHINA.

ONE of our evening local contemporaries discusses the missionary problem in China, and marshals many arguments and considerations which have been before the public again and again during the last twenty-five years. Indeed, they are really very much older, for they were officially formulated in 1871 and had been frequently discussed before that date. Reasons and facts are none the worse for being old, especially when they embody much truth, as these do. But there are some points which, if stated without limitations, are very misleading. Such, for example, is the charge that missionaries intervene in Chinese local politics and protect native converts against the operation of the territorial laws. The term missionaries in this case requires to be definitely restricted. For doings of the nature here described have never been laid at the door of Protestant missionaries. They are abuses of the protectorate exercised by France over her missions in China and therefore they stand to the account of the Roman Catholics only. It should not be necessary in these columns to disavow all intention of discrediting Roman-Catholic missionaries. Our profound admiration for the heroic self-sacrifice of these men has been often recorded. But none the less it is to their account that this injudicious zeal for the temporal welfare of Christian converts stands, and the ultimate responsibility lies with the French Government. The Protestant missionaries are not to be included, and when the murder of women and children by the Chinese is referred to missionary meddling in local politics, a constructive mis-statement is made, since Roman Catholic Missionaries have no wives and Protestant Missionaries do not so meddle.

As to the question whether missionaries should be allowed to visit the interior of China, a question which our contemporary is evidently disposed to answer in the negative, it has been discussed in the past from every conceivable point of view, and the balance of opinion has been that missionaries are entitled to claim their conventional rights as fully as merchants or tourists are, and also to claim the protection of their lives and property by their Governments. You can not forbid a missionary to teach the gospel of Christianity in regions where you allow the trader to buy and sell and the traveller to journey in the interests of science or amusement. It is the Chinese who must learn tolerance. During the entire period of LI HUNG-CHANG's viceroyalty of Pehchili not a solitary anti-missionary outrage took place there. It might well have been so hitherto, and it might well be so now, in the other viceroyalties also.

Finally, we observe that our contemporary repeats what may justly be called the treaty-port formula, namely, that missionaries ought to stay at home where there is plenty of scope for their energies and where they would not endanger international relations.

In this matter missionaries obey the command of CHRIST, which has more force in their eyes than the sneering depreciations of their detractors. It is part of their duty of patience to endure such attacks quietly, and it stands to their perpetual credit that they do so endure them. Hundreds of thousands of pious men and women in the home-lands judge that the preaching of Christianity to non-Christian nations is an act of beneficence which they are morally bound to assist. They do not discover the same scope for doing good among the non-Christian elements in Christian lands, and since this estimate of theirs is many cycles old and has been acted on with ever-increasing persistence, it is a reasonable inference that they are right.

THE "NORTH-CHINA DAILY NEWS" ON KOREA.

WE find the following editorial utterances in our senior Shanghai contemporary:

For Japan's inevitable protectorate of Korea to be a success it is indispensable that the chief control shall be in the hands of Marquis Ito, and not of the Japanese military authorities, and that the interference even of Marquis Ito with the Koreans shall be limited as much as possible. In General Hasegawa and his officers there is a disposition to bully the Koreans which can only result in disaster to Japan; and the military must be subordinated to the civil power in Korea, if an active popular discontent which will render all Japan's efforts at pacification nugatory, is to be avoided. Then, what the Koreans really want is to be let alone. They do not want loans from Industrial Banks or any other Pactolus. They have no resources from which to repay the principal or interest, the money cannot be spent advantageously, and every loan is an entirely unnecessary burden on the country, postponing its possible future independence. The kindest thing Marquis Ito could do would be to push on making of roads all over the country, in which the people themselves would eagerly assist, and to stop the oppression of the people by their own officials. This is all Korea wants, and with this done, the Koreans could and would work out their own salvation. It is not a heroic programme, but a heroic programme must do more harm than good in Korea; it is a programme that meets all the present wants of the people, and the carrying-out of which would change the antipathy the Koreans feel now to the Japanese into genuine friendliness. This antipathy, which has existed for hundreds of years, has been increased by the high-handed action of the Japanese soldiers; and it is simply imperative that if General Hasegawa will not take his orders from Marquis Ito, he shall be recalled to Japan.

The impression produced by this article is that divided authority exists in Korea; that General HASEGAWA refuses to take his orders from Marquis ITO, and that the Japanese officers are disposed to bully the Koreans. Our contemporary may rest assured that these rumours are baseless. For the discharge of his military duties and the conduct of his troops General HASEGAWA is ultimately responsible to the Minister of War in Tokyo, but in all administrative matters Marquis ITO is supreme, and General HASEGAWA'S recall would follow very promptly did he attempt to take any measures not approved by the Resident-General, or did he decline to adopt any suggestion coming from the latter. The truth is, however, that this talk of Marquis ITO and General HASEGAWA suggests a conflict of authority which has no existence in fact. There is nothing to be laid to the charge of either the General—who is one of the kindest of men—or of his officers and soldiers. To expand the theme would convey an altogether false impression.

A word may be said, however, about our Shanghai contemporary's suggestion:—"What the Koreans really want is to be let alone." Such counsel is a little difficult to reconcile with the Shanghai journal's admission in the same article that Japan's protectorate of Korea is "inevitable." Has not Japan given ample trial to the policy of "let alone" in Korea? She may be said to have followed that plan for a quarter of a century, and its result was to plunge her into two great wars. The Koreans "let alone" inevitably devote themselves to intrigue. In their eyes the interests of party and of clan far outweigh the interests of the State. At this moment they have agents in Russia; agents whose object is to enlist the sympathies and engage the services of the Great Northern Power against Japan, though it admits of no question that did these solicitations succeed, either another war would result or Korea would become a Russian province. We entirely agree, every reasonable publicist must agree, with the Shanghai journal's verdict that Japan has no choice except to assume a protectorate over Korea. What we can not see is how a protectorate can be exercised simultaneously with leaving the Koreans alone.

It does not appear, however, that the Shanghai journal's conception of leaving alone is quite so thorough as the words suggest. Japan is to "stop the oppression of the people by their own officials." Only that and nothing more! How is to be done? We happen to know, on the authority of Marquis Ito himself, that no part of the problem awaiting him in Korea perplexes him so much or seems so difficult of solution as this very feat which appears to bulk so lightly in the eyes of the N.-C. Daily News, the feat of stopping the oppression of the people by their own officials. It means a total and radical reform of Korean administrative methods and Korean administrators. It means that the corruption which has hitherto been the ruling motive of Korean officialdom must be abandoned. It means that honest men must be found to manage matters which, from time immemorial, have constituted an unvarying field for chicanery. It means that the whole system of tax-collecting and of public accounts must be metamorphosed. It means that tribunals must be established where justice shall be administered without fear or favour, and to which the humblest individual may safely and confidently appeal against official extortion. It means that a thoroughly efficient police-force must be organized. And it means that good laws must be enacted and faithfully enforced. That is all that is involved in "stopping the oppression of the people by their own officials." Only that, and it is to be accomplished while leaving the Koreans alone!

Into the realm of finance also our Shanghai contemporary carries its criticism. It deprecates the policy of borrowing money, but, at the same time, it would have roads made "all over the country." Can roads be made without money and does the North-China Daily News seriously condemn the spending of funds for the purpose of developing Korea's resources? Such has certainly not been the policy pursued by Great Britain in Egypt, and English financiers as well as English colonial administrators are tolerably good models. It is one of the strong points in Korea's favour that she can borrow money, being debt-free thus far, since she is thus enabled to introduce reforms which without expenditure would be impossible. After all, these remarks of our Shanghai contemporary seem to suffer from a defect very common to criticisms of Japan: she is expected by her critics to perform miracles. She must leave the Koreans alone and yet accomplish radical changes in their morality and their habits; she must carry out an extensive system of reforms and achieve important public works without any outlay of money; she must do for Korea what no other country, least of all Korea, has ever done for itself and what no sober-minded economist now suggests, develop the national resources without incurring any debt. The N.-C. Daily News is such a good friend of Japan, and even the article from which we quote is written in such a friendly spirit, that we hesitate to make any adverse comment, but, on the other hand, the Shanghai journal's habitually favourable habit lends force to any criticism appearing in our contemporary's columns and thus persuades us to plead for a little closer reasoning.

THE NATIONALIZATION OF RAILWAYS.

THE law for the nationalization of railways having now been duly promulgated as amended by the House of Peers, occasion offers to make a few comments on points which do not seem to have hitherto received sufficient attention at the hands of foreign publicists.

In the first place it is to be noted that, from an economical point of view, the railway system of Japan was radically bad prior to this legislation. Speaking in round numbers, the private lines measured 3,200 miles in all, and these were held by 32 companies, showing an average of 100 miles per company. But the case was in reality still worse. For out of the 32 companies, 4 owned an aggregate of 1,870 miles, leaving a little over 1,200 miles for the remaining 28, or an average of 43 miles each. A moment's reflection will show what waste of money is involved in 28 different organizations for such petty enterprises, each with its own staff of operatives and officials and each with its own rolling-stock. In a country like England or America such costly division would not be endured for a moment. There, however, private enterprise would step in to correct the glaring defect. But in Japan private enterprise seems powerless. Private Japanese capitalists are not in a position to effect amalgamations after the American pattern, and it may be doubted whether business conditions are yet suitable. The grievously uneconomical state of affairs, however, and the obstacles which this fractional system of transport offered to facilities and cheapness of goods traffic, had been forcing themselves more and more upon public attention of late years, and a conviction had been gradually growing that the only remedy lay in State ownership. On the other hand, no Cabinet, unless it commanded a solid majority in the Lower House, could have hoped to obtain the passing of a bill empowering the Treasury to buy up the roads. It is probably correct to say that the SAIONJI Cabinet was the first to possess this qualification, and the SAIONJI Cabinet lost no time in approaching the Diet. Our readers know how the bill fared at the hands of the House of Representatives. It passed by 243 votes against 109. In fact the whole House may be said to have supported the measure with the exception of the Progressists whose opposition to any important bill introduced by a non-Progressist Cabinet is, on the whole, a foregone conclusion. But, though thus triumphant in the House, the Cabinet received a great shock in the resignation of one of its most prominent and brilliant members, the Minister of State for Foreign Affairs. Mr. KATO objected that such legislation was an unwarrantable interference with the rights of private property. The charters granted to the private railway companies are all for fixed periods, and pending the expiration of these periods the Government, even with the support of the Diet, has no just competence to take the railways out of the hands of the companies. As a question of business morality we find no answer to such an argument. The only extenuations are that the public good dictated the proposed change and that the companies themselves, with the exception of a few of their principal shareholders, seem to find satisfactory compensation in the price which the State proposes to pay. An objection which found larger support was of a fiscal nature. Financiers anticipated that if, within the space of a few years, bonds representing several hundred millions of yen were handed over to the railways' shareholders, these would unload large quantities of them and the market-price of Japanese securities would probably suffer correspondingly. But this apprehension did not seem to weigh with the Lower House. It passed the bill virtually as drafted by the Cabinet. The Peers, however, set themselves to modify the measure so as, if possible, to placate its opponents. In the first place they expunged the names of 15 lines from the schedule of the railways to be purchased. The reason assigned for excluding these roads was that, being purely local, they did not necessarily enter in to a general system. But the following table will show that the expunged railways are precisely the most flagrant examples of the abuse of divided ownership:—

THE FIFTEEN ELIDED LINES.

Name of Road.	Mileage.
Nankai .....	42.15
Kawagoye .....	18.36
Narita .....	45.06
Chuyetsu .....	23.06
Toyokawa .....	17.61
Koya .....	17.31
Bisei .....	15.46
Zuso .....	10.51
Omi .....	26.01
Chugoku .....	48.60
Kanan .....	10.22
Tobu .....	42.78
Jobu .....	14.15
Mito .....	12.11
Hakata-wan .....	14.48

353.487

But cutting out these fifteen roads the Peers materially altered the character of the bill, converting it from a measure of public expediency into an instrument of State finance. They did not, however, make any change in the proposed method of calculating the purchase price of the remaining roads. We append a list of these 17 railways, showing not only their mileage and the prices that are to be paid for them, but also the sums disbursed by the companies on their construction and equipment:—

Name of road.	Mileage.	Purchase price, being twenty times the average annual profit during on con- the 3 years struction and ended June equipment
		30th, 1904. Yen.	Yen.
Nippon Railway ...	861.07	130,532,540	54,479,359
Sanyo Railway .....	405.62	74,042,980	36,727,664
Kobu Railway .....	27.65	9,729,020	3,318,219
Kwansei Railway...	280.37	31,308,060	27,463,202
Kyoto Railway .....	22.16	2,055,240	3,471,700
Hankoku Railway..	70.16	6,274,780	6,429,074
Hokuyetsu Railway	85.65	7,061,900	7,706,021
Nishinari Railway..	4.46	563,480	1,956,505
Nanawo Railway...	34.27	1,345,520	1,515,231
Ganyetsu Railway..	49.36	1,312,980	2,584,596
Kyushu Railway...	444.28	97,654,600	51,397,153
Hokkaido Tanko Railway .....	207.51	29,168,180	11,704,726
Hokkaido Railway.	159.17	10,924,788	10,924,788
Sangu Railway .....	26.10	3,773,840	1,894,493
Sobu Railway .....	73.16	10,326,480	5,194,405
Boso Railway .....	39.32	1,772,440	2,070,601
Tokushima Railway	21.39	1,167,940	1,303,503

2,806,570 419,115,768 229,641,240

This table shows that for every 23 yen spent by the companies they will receive 42 yen, in round numbers. At first sight that appears a bad bargain for the State, but there are other factors in the calculation. Thus the Treasury incurs no expense, since the present earnings of the roads will suffice to meet the interest on the bonds handed to the companies, and it is calculated that the economy effected by single ownership together with the natural increment of traffic receipts will pay off the principal in 45 years, at the end of which time the State will be in the position of having acquired gratis a property bringing in a revenue of over 50 million yen annually.

The other changes effected by the Peers are not very practical. Thus they added a clause providing that any company objecting to the price at which its road is assessed may complain to the Minister of State for Home Affairs, but such a court of appeal plainly offers no certainty of redress. They also empowered the Government to extend the period of the purchase operation from 5 years to 10, and the period of payment from 2 years to 5; but since they left to official option the exercise or neglect of this latitude, the provision has no binding quality. Indeed the Lower House showed its appreciation of the utility of these amendments by accepting them en bloc without discussion.

It may be added that the bill contains provisions as to the companies' reserve funds, debts and so forth, and that it authorizes the Authorities to deduct from the purchase-money any outlays incurred on account of a company's neglect of its line or rolling stock pending transfer to the State.

There is a great deal to be said against State ownership of railways. But there is also much to be said in favour of it, and Europe offers at least one example of the system's eminent success. In Japan's case we do not see what other course offered.

THE BOOKSHELF.

Kakemono, Japanese Sketches, by A. HERBAGE EDWARDS: London, William Heinemann.

In the glossary attached to this excellently printed volume we read, "Kakemono * * * Roughly and quite untechnically, kakemono can be divided into two classes: those which seek to give only an impression, and those which are a kind of miniature painting." The authoress, for we judge by many subtle touch-scattered here and there throughout the pages, that the writer belongs to the gentler sex, has been well advised in selecting her title. Her appreciations of Japan are in part impressionist sketches in others well finished miniature paintings. Japan has been exceptionally lucky in the majority of her interpreters of recent years. Men and women have come to these shores possessed of the supreme gift of sympathy and imbued with the happy knack of appreciative selection, and the result is seen in many a pleasant book revealing the impressions which the land and its people have made on observant, well-attuned travellers. Few of their books, however, will be found couched in a more charming vein than the volume now under notice. A. Herbage Edwards has used her opportunities well and from the opening sketch on "Dai-Butsu" to the last exquisitely wrought cameo—"And she was a widow"—she weaves around her readers the reminiscent glamour which encircled her as she sped hither and thither in the "land of the gods." The story of her ascent and descent of Fuji is a capital piece of descriptive writing in which the authoress exercises such a wise restraint in the use of superlatives as to border almost upon the austere. The companion picture depicting an unsuccessful attempt to scale Asamayama is more flamboyant. The sketches, we might mention, are grouped together under the following headings: "The Faith of Japan," "Lord Fuji," "The Art of the Nation," "Scenes in Rain and Sunshine," "The Land of the Gods," and "The Heart of the People." We travel with the writer to many a famous spot already described by a hundred pens, but the charm of her style, the grace of her thought, create a sense of freshness amid old familiar things, revealing even to jaded intellectual palates, nay even to those whose lot is to read many a book upon Japan, beauties hitherto scarcely recognised or apparently unperceived. Altogether "Kakemono" is a delightful creation, a book to chase away the greyness and the gloom of disenchantment which gather ever and anon in the lives of residents in Japan, those unfortunates who are brought too much in contact with the sordidness which underlies so much which is but as a pleasant mirage to the eyes of the transient traveller.

Bardelys the Magnificent, by RAPHAEL SABATINI: London, Eveleigh Nash.

EVER since Mr. Stanley Weyman gave us those delightful romances of the cloak and sword, "Under the Red Robe" and "A Gentleman of France," a flood of similar stories has issued from the press both in England and in America. Imitation is said to be the sincerest form of flattery, but we fear Mr. Weyman, though he may have appreciated the delicate attentions thus bestowed, could have experienced little satisfaction at the craftsmanship displayed by the majority of his imitators. This can not be said of "Bardelys the Magnificent." The story of the strange wooing pursued by the Sieur Marcel de St. Pol, Marquis of Bardelys, and of the things that in the course of it befel him in Languedoc in the year of the Orleanist rebellion, is capital reading. The purist may object that the author has not realised the atmosphere of the time as Thackeray visualised the closing years of the Stuart regime in his immortal "Esmond;" that he puts words and phrases in the mouth of a sixteenth century gallant which could fall only from the lips of a man of the present year of grace; that his conception of the relations of the sexes in the days of Richelieu is rather too Victorian—these defects do not radically spoil the tale. Marcel de St. Pol, Marquis of Bardelys, the favourite of Louis XIII, surnamed the Just, holds the stage very effectively. His evil genius, the Comte de Chatellerault, is also a well-drawn character, while as a foil the despicable Monsieur de St. Eustace is excellent. We need not describe the story of how the Marquis of Bardelys in his hotel in Paris entered into a mad-brained wager which took him into Languedoc in search of a wife, against the express wishes of the King, just on the eve of the battle of Castelnaudary—the battle which Mortmorency lost for Gaston d'Orleans—or of the surprisingly narrow escapes he had of losing his head ere the troubles passed away at the close of the Assize of Toulouse; nor need we delay over the love-scenes at the castle of the Vicomte de Lavédan. Suffice it to say that Roxalanne, the daughter of de Lavédan, was a woman worth the winning—a "lily maid of Astolat" whom any Chevalier would have been proud to wear as "the Captain jewel of his carcanet."

Deborah's Life, by JAMES BLYTH: London, Eveleigh Nash.

WHEN Mr. James Blyth produced that novel of English rustic life called "Juicy Joe," the reading public rubbed their eyes and awoke to the fact that a new vein had been struck in the living rock of English letters. Many complained that he had by over-emphasis conveyed an erroneous impression of the degradation which has engulfed so much of the English peasantry; but others held a contrary opinion and contended that his shadows were none too black, that the vices, the squalor, the unutterable meannesses he depicted had been brought to light simply because they lay ready to the hand of the first man with courage to disclose them. It was a terrible tale which Mr. Blyth told of the dwellers in an obscure East Anglian village, but he had seen the life he portrayed from the inside and could quote chapter and verse for all his statements. "Celibate Sarah," his next book, was in lighter vein. He had abandoned the muck-rake for a cleaner implement, and in "Deborah's Life" he has gone even one better. Again he takes us into East Anglia, to that part of the ancient sub-Kingdom of the Heptarchy which borders on the Fens, and which received such a strong infusion of Danish blood in the stormy days of the Danelagh. Here he introduces us to characters the like of which we can remember to have met in our daily lives—at least those of us who have been bred and brought up in the quietude of rural England. The Squire, last of his race—"a boy of the olden time"—the parson, the dwellers at the Hall, the village shopkeeper, the provincial solicitor, the ale-house frequenters, the drabs, cadgers, and drunkards of the hamlet,—Mr. Blyth deals with the people in fact who make up the population of a country village at the present moment, thirty years after the Education Act has been enforced, ten years since the County and Village Councils came into being. There is no gainsaying that among these folks are several most loveable in their manners and dispositions: there are others from which the reader turns with abhorrent loathing. But the central character, Deborah Merdingill, stands out head and shoulders above them all. The Buddhist symbol of the lotus applies to her. Born in the slime, nurtured amid muddy waters, befouled in her innocence before it was given her to distinguish between good and evil, she came to flower in marvellous perfection. And as her whole life was one of continual sacrifice, so was her death—an offering freely given for the man whom she so strangely benefited. There is a touch of the old Greek drama in the composition of this book. All through we seem to catch solemn, insistent echoes of the still far off but inevitable tragedy: slowly the predestined victim moves towards her funeral pyre, though all unconscious of the fate prepared for her; and yet when all has been accomplished that it has been given her to do, she immolates herself as Iphigenia did of old, freely, unhesitatingly, nay, as one quite ready to pass "to where beyond these voices there is peace." For all its sadness, its glimpses of the sordid undercurrents of existence, its rustic villanies and degradation, "Deborah's Life" is a book to read and ponder over. Roland Bellamy, the hero, is a manly fellow after his lights; and the parson, Mr. Ives, one of God's Saints.

THE YA-AMI HOTEL FIRE.

Our Kobe correspondent telegraphs that the Yaami Hotel at Kyoto was totally destroyed by fire on Tuesday night. It is feared that two foreign ladies, guests of the hotel, have been burnt to death. The police are investigating. Over a hundred guests were staying at the Hotel. The loss is estimated at yen 400,000, and only yen 80,000 was covered by insurance.

In connexion with the disastrous fire that broke out on the night of April 17th in the Ya-ami Hotel, Maruyama, Kyoto, further details are given. The flames occurred in No. 1 room of the new building (at 11.30 p.m.) and at once spread throughout the hotel, destroying it and two adjacent tea-houses, Mine-gaye-ro and Yoshino-ya. Seventy-six of the foreign guests in the hotel narrowly escaped and were removed to the Kyoto Hotel, Miyako Hotel, the Buddhist temple Chion-en, etc. The hotel was established with a capital of yen 150,000. It was insured with the Nisshu Fire Insurance Co. for sixty thousand yen, the Osaka Fire Insurance Co. for twenty thousand yen and five other insurance companies for fifteen thousand yen each. The hotel was re-insured with a foreign insurance company for yen 15,700.

The Governor of Kyoto reports that eighty-seven foreigners, who comprised all the guests, escaped safely, news of two foreign ladies being missing turning out to be erroneous. It is stated that a strong smell of kerosene oil was noticeable on the ground floor of the building in the evening, but investigations failed to disclose anything. At half past eleven flames shot up and enveloped the building, and the efforts of the fire brigade to extinguish the fire were rendered futile owing to the lack of sufficient water in the locality, and the strong wind that was blowing at the time. At one time the Chion-in and Choraku temples, where religious services were proceeding, were in danger, but disaster was happily averted. The cause of the fire is being investigated, but incendiarianism is suspected.

EASTER.

When Easter comes she comes in white array
Of plum-flowers tossed along the trees like spray,
And cherry lighter still and sweet as May.
Along the grass her footsteps leave a trail
Of yellow daffodils and windflowers pale,
And daisies pelt the grass like sudden hail;
While in the crocus cups the wild bee hums
When Easter comes.

When Easter goes she leaves the world more clean
For her three days of triumph and of teen,
Her knees have touched the church floors and there left

Some such dim light as in the rocky cleft
Lingered when Death was of the Lord bereft.
And women seeking death to weep upon
Found angels sitting by the sealing stone.
Open are all Love's gates that were shut close
When Easter goes.

NORA CHESON.

MONTHLY SUMMARY OF JAPANESE
CURRENT LITERATURE.

The first number of the new literary magazine started by the Hakubunkan called Bunshō Sekai appeared on March 15th. The chief contributors to its pages are Messrs. Tokutomi, Toyabe, Shimoda, Kamada, Urahara and Dr. Haga. Mr. Tokutomi writes on certain rules which should be observed by all writers. He says that every sentence composed should be so clear that no reader need go over it a second time in order to apprehend its meaning. He points out that some writers aim at suggesting profundity of thought by the use of certain phrases. This he condemns. To make easy things appear difficult, an art much practised in China and in old Japan, by the use of language that few people understand, is a practice which cannot be too strongly censured. The readers, Mr. Tokutomi tells us, are by no means extinct who regard unintelligibility as a proof of profundity. He reminds us that it has been the fashion in England to admire Carlyle and attribute to him marvellous profundity because of the great obscurity, fragmentariness, and apparent incoherence of his sentences. Most sensible readers prefer Macaulay to Carlyle, because he had the art of stating his meaning in an unmistakably clear manner. The three principal qualities which, in Mr. Tokutomi's conception, constitute good writing are (1) Lucidity, (2) Minuteness and Accuracy and (3) Impressiveness.

Mr. Kamada Eikichi, head of the Keiōgijuku, urges the importance of abbreviating and simplifying Japanese correspondence as much as possible. This we think has already been done to a large extent. The postcard has helped to bring about this improvement.

Dr. Haga Yaichi deals with the subject of quotations. He says what is undoubtedly true, that quotations often tend to show the inferiority of a writer's style to that of the author from whom he quotes. He points out that no article or essay should depend on citations for its chief strength. They occupy a very subordinate place in good composition. Where quotations are made in order to give authority to a writer's statements, the case is different. Dr. Haga is of opinion that there is far too great a tendency in all Japanese writing to clothe thoughts in language quoted from ancient books. Even in the case of illustrations, instead of thinking out suitable illustrations for themselves, writers stick to the stereotyped ones borrowed from the classics. There is too slavish an adherence to the words of ancient classical literature in most of the writing of the present day. (Aiarashii tatoe wa tsukutte tsukau to iu koto wa hanahada sukunai. Mukashi no hito no uo shiyō suru no wa motoyori zōsa mo nai ga, mō sukoshi hōne uo otte, jibun de kufu suru koto nishilai to omou no de aru.) Quotation is sadly overdone, says Dr. Haga, and though it may appear a somewhat severe remedy, he would recommend all school teachers, in order to encourage originality of composition among their pupils, to discourage the present practice of hauling in classical quotations continually to hide if possible the poverty of the writer's own language.

Mr. Shimoda of the Peers' School writes on women's letter language. He thinks women should try and write in the semi-colloquial style known as Gembun-itchi as far as possible, but as yet that style has not assumed sufficient definiteness to be used as a model. So Mr. Shimoda recommends girls to write as they speak. Very sensible advice, it seems to us, for there is nothing more correct and charming than the speech of a highly educated Japanese lady.

A small portion of the Bunshō Sekai is devoted to English and German translations. The former are under the editorship of Mr. Takashima Suteta, of the Commercial School, the latter are under the charge of Mr. Nakano of the Military Academy. The English part does not rise above the standard of what is known as Japanese-English. We see no use in publishing ungrammatical English as an aid to the study of that language. But this is habitually done in this country by 20 or 30 different organs. The Japanese part of this new magazine covers 230 medium size pages and the foreign part 10 pages. The price is 15 sen per copy. It treats of almost every conceivable subject connected with literature, giving specimens of a great variety of styles.

* * *

For a great many years the compilation of school text-books has been thrown open to private competition with one or two exceptions. As a result Readers and other class-books have for a long time been contending against each other for school patronage. The want of suitable Japanese Readers for Middle Schools has long been felt. That want has now been supplied in a very satisfactory manner by the publication at the close of last year of a series of Readers known as the Meiji Tokuhon. They were compiled by Dr. Haga Yaichi, a very able writer and an advanced thinker on many subjects. They were published by the Fuzambō and sell at 25 sen per volume. In get-up, printing and material they are first-class books and are just the kind of thing that is needed in Middle Schools to-day. Dr. Haga is of opinion that in almost all the text books hitherto used in Japanese schools too much importance has been attached to ancient and mediæval Japanese, and pupils have received no regular drilling in the language now in use in this country. Hence he has made the language of to-day the standard language of the Readers. The pieces given have been carefully selected, being extracts from the books or articles of the best known writers of the Meiji era. Every style of writing is represented, from classical Chinese down to ordinary colloquial. Extracts from poems, plays, funeral orations, novels, newspaper and magazine articles, Imperial Rescripts, reports of speeches and the like have been made. General enlightenment and the awakening of interest in a great variety of subjects were the chief aims, the author tells us, he had in view. He has succeeded admirably. To colloquial Japanese he has given great prominence, every volume containing some colloquial pieces. Dr. Inouye Tetsujirō writes a very good colloquial style, we have observed for a long time past. Dr. Haga quotes largely from him. Dr. Y. Tsubouchi's colloquial is at once refined and very expressive, as may be seen from the extracts Dr. Haga has made from his colloquial articles. One of the objects Dr. Haga has had in view in the compilation of the Readers has been to familiarize the student with the modern Japanese world and to induce him to take an interest in science, commerce, industry and politics. At the same time he aims at cultivating in his mind noble sentiments. Special attention has been given by Dr. Haga to emotional development and to the strengthening of the student's volitional faculties.

The publication at a later date of a gigantic Medical Dictionary is announced by the Dōbunkan. It is being compiled by a committee of experts consisting of no less than 58 members. Each collector of words is confining his attention to one branch of medicine. This lexicon defines and explains 16,300 terms and the 6 volumes run into some 3,000 pages. For the compilation of an exhaustive dictionary a committee is necessary. This new work is called the Igaku Daijisho. It is being printed in No. 6 type. It will embrace the whole of medical science. The price of the work has not yet been announced.

The Sekai Tokuhon, written by Professor Ikeda Gishō, of the Kyōto University, gives an account of this gentleman's European travels and of western customs and institutions. It is intended for use as a Reader in schools. It is issued by the Yoshikawa Publishing Company and sells at 55 sen a copy. It is considered to be a very instructive and entertaining book and is having a large circulation.

The first number of the Nogyō Sekai (The Agricultural World) appeared on April 1st. It contains articles by the Minister of Agriculture and Commerce, Dr. Yokoi, Dr. K. Sasaki and a number of less widely known writers. They discuss the present state of agriculture in Japan and suggest remedies for its numerous defects and drawbacks.

* * *

Mr. Abe Isoo, connected with the Waseda Semmon Gakkō, contributes to the Taiyō a long and important article entitled, "The Present Middle School System and the Teaching of English." We have only space for a very brief statement of the conclusions reached by this writer. His essay undoubtedly voices general public opinion on the subject treated. The method of teaching English followed in the Middle Schools is all wrong, says Mr. Abe. Students who leave the Imperial University after 10 or 11 years' study of the language are unable to speak or write it correctly and only understand a part of what is said to them in that tongue. A short time ago great reforms were said to have been projected by Mr. Saitō Hidesaburō, who then was employed by the Imperial University. He maintained that new methods of teaching should be adopted in the High Schools, that the inefficiency of the University students in English had its root there. But in this he was quite wrong. The root of the evil complained of is in the Middle Schools. The High School course only lasts 3 years. The amount of progress students make during that time must largely depend on the knowledge of English they possess when they enter. If the High School English teachers have to spend most of the time at their disposal in teaching what ought to have been taught in the Middle Schools, how can they train the student in the more difficult parts of the language? The desired reform must begin with the Middle Schools. "The teaching of English in Middle Schools is an entire failure" (Chugakkō no eigo kyōju wa zenshen shippai de aru), says Mr. Abe. He proposes various remedies for the present state of affairs. One is that steps should be taken to encourage the study of English among Primary School boys. Classes should be formed for such lads. Pronunciation should be taught in a thorough manner. They should be grounded well in the elements of the language before entering the Middle School. The reforms in the Middle Schools proposed by Mr. Abe are three in number. (1) As far as possible the text-books used in these schools should be in English. (2) The weekly hours of study should be reduced to 20. (3) Only 6 subjects per week should be studied.

(1) The adoption of English text-books for all subjects with the exception of Japanese Geography and History, Oriental History and the Japanese language would present no formidable difficulty. Mathematics, Science, Botany and the like could all be taught by means of English books as easily as they are taught to-day, and would give the pupil a knowledge of ordinary English he does not now possess even after years of study. The fourth and fifth year students should be questioned in English and have to answer in English. If the students were accustomed to use English text-books and were obliged to understand them, it would no longer be necessary to spend so many hours over the Readers of which the pupils have long since grown weary. The examinations connected with the use of the text-books should all be in English. Mr. Abe answers fully every possible objection to the plan proposed by him. He argues, and we think conclusively, that to insist on a student's mastering the meaning of 3 or 4 pages of a text-book per day would in a few years give him double the amount of knowledge of English he now possesses.

(2) Coming to the reduction in the hours of study, Mr. Abe says that according to the present rules the first and second year Middle School pupils study 28 hours per week, third year students, 29, and fourth and fifth year students 30 hours a week. The reduction of hours would allow of the employment of a less number of teachers at higher salaries. This would permit the raising of the standard of teaching. The diminution in the number of hours spent in the class-rooms would give the students the time for preparation which they cannot possibly find at present, and thus our Middle Schools would cease to be the cramming institutions they now are. As things are now, there is no time for self-development among the students. Consequently the Middle School graduates, though in many cases nearing manhood, are in speech, knowledge and thought still children (Konnichi no Chūgakkō wo sotsūgyō shitaru mono wa mukoto ni kodomo no gōtoki mono de atte, gogaku ni oite mo, shisō ni oite mo, kenshiki ni oite mo, makoto ni yōchi naru mono de aru.) This is the result of the orraming policy (Chūnyū shugi) followed in our Middle Schools.

(3) At present the subjects taught in Middle Schools amount to 13 or 14 per week. There is nothing more foolish in the present system than this (Yō wa kore mo motte genseido chū mottomo bakarashiki ten to kangayete oru no de aru) That the pupils have no time for the proper preparation of these subjects goes without saying. Mr. Abe thinks that only 4 subjects besides gymnastic exercises and morals should be taught, and the students should be expected to master these subjects in a most thorough manner. He recommends the entire abolition of the practice of giving the students long lectures. If they thoroughly understand their English textbooks they can dispense with the lengthy and frequently irrelevant lectures now given to them. Mr. Abe goes into the subject of salaries and the employment of foreign teachers. He proposes that foreigners should be engaged to teach philosophy or science during 18 hours in the week at 150 yen a month and others are to teach conversation at 140 yen a month for 18 hours or more. Where competent men are to be hired at these figures he does not say. Mr. Abe concludes his article with the advice that the Mombushō give the Middle Schools liberty to fix hours of study, subjects and the like for themselves. The centralization of education as far as the Middle Schools are concerned having proved an entire failure, local autonomy should be tried.

In his "Monthly Character Sketches" Mr. Toyabe this month deals with Marquis Saionji and Mr. Katō Takaaki and their relations to each other during the early weeks of the year. In the minds of most people there is much that is mysterious, says Mr. Toyabe, in the action of Mr. Katō and Marquis Saionji some weeks ago. As regards Mr. Katō, people say he must have known quite well before he entered the Cabinet that Marquis Saionji proposed carrying out the programme of the Katsura Cabinet to the letter. With certain items in that programme he did not agree. He was opposed to the continuance of the war taxes, to the Bill for the consolidation of the National Debt, and to the Bill for the Nationalization of the railways, and yet he joined a Cabinet bent on pushing these measures through both Houses of the Diet. But seeing that Mr. Katō had given public utterance to his opinions before Marquis Saionji formed his Cabinet, why was he asked to join it in the face of the divergence of opinion that the Marquis knew to exist? If Mr. Katō's action is inexplicable, that of the Marquis is equally so. We can't help thinking, proceeds Mr. Toyabe, that Mr. Katō's acceptance of a seat in the Cabinet was a great surprise to the members of the Katsura Government. The most natural explanation of Mr. Katō's action is this that he joined the Cabinet without knowing the exact political situation, without knowing the real relationship of Marquis Saionji to the Seiyūkai members of the Diet. He did not quite know how far the new Government intended to go in the carrying out of the policy of the Katsura Cabinet. He hoped to modify some of the actions contemplated by the Saionji Cabinet by winning over some members of the Cabinet to his side. When he found this to be impossible he pitched on the Railway Bill as the most suitable measure on which to make a stand and this led to his resignation. There was no doubt a certain amount of inconsistency in his joining the Cabinet at all with his views, but he seems to have hoped for compromises which other statesmen were not prepared to make. Mr. Katō is no political idealist, but an intensely practical man, and this was shown by the nature of his objections to the Railway Bill. To the academic question whether in the abstract it is better for the Railways to be owned by the State or by private Companies he attached no importance. He confined his discussion to the practical aspects of the Bill. One thing is certain, and that is that the public is satisfied that Mr. Katō had no sinister design either in joining the Cabinet or leaving it. He acted from no self-interested motives on either occasion. Nevertheless his action was no doubt a very big surprise to Marquis Saionji. He did not realize till the time of the discussion of the Railway Bill in the Cabinet how great a mistake he had made in asking Mr. Katō to join the Government. But his resignation gave the Marquis no concern. He displayed the most wonderful light-heartedness throughout the whole proceedings. In a light-hearted manner Mr. Katō was asked to join the Cabinet; in a light-hearted manner the announcement of his resignation was received. In dealing with grave state affairs the Marquis shows marvellous coolness. Nothing vexes him; nothing upsets him; nothing hinders him. Marquis Saionji is undoubtedly the most interesting personality in our modern political world, says Mr. Toyabe. To thoroughly understand him is by no means easy. For a prime minister to swallow whole the policy of a former premier in the way the Marquis did is, to say the least, very rare. It might under certain circumstances be interpreted as weakness, but the Marquis strikes nobody that knows him as weak. He is denounced in some quarters as the slave of officialdom, as a mere tool in the hands of men who have fixed ideas as to how the country should be governed. His sudden downfall is predicted on the ground that he has hitherto shown no initiative whatever, that he is supported by props that might be removed at any time. But such, continues Mr. Toyabe, is not my opinion. By carrying out the Katsura Government's policy the Marquis has rendered the members of that Government under great obligations to him. So his position to-day is really very powerful and very unassailable. He has now an opportunity such has been granted to few statesmen in this country for inaugurating some special policy of his own. Will he utilize this opportunity? It is difficult to reply confidently either that he will or that he won't. Like Lord Rosebery, Marquis Saionji is a man of wide culture and many tastes. Politics have never been the all-in-all of his life. They have never absorbed his whole attention in the way they have done with Marquis Itō and Count Okuma and a few other statesmen in this country. He has used them as one among the many diversions, one among the diverse interests, of his many-sided life. This being his attitude to politics, naturally he is less keen in seeking office and keeping it than are the men who live for politics alone. But his ability is so great that when a measure has been decided on he may be trusted to carry it out with consummate skill. Though the Railway Bill was not of his designing, the plea that it is an anti-trust measure, that it is to all practical purposes a form of state socialism is doubtless his own idea (Kore kokka shakai shugi no fukuin [gospel] wo keishi (啓示) suru mono ni arazu ya?) If this interpretation is capable of being applied to the other acts of the present Government, it will constitute an entirely new banner around which many of our politicians may be found rallying. A new policy of this kind breaks up all existing political organizations. Just as in England Mr. Chamberlain's proposed fiscal reform has disorganized all the English political parties and produced entirely new combinations; just as President Roosevelt with his Imperialism and anti-trust notions has created a new Mississippi river to divide America into two political halves; so it may turn out here that Marquis Saionji's appeal to the Diet to save the country from all the evils of private monopolies by supporting a state monopoly may mark a new departure of no little interest in Japanese politics.

Dr. S. Nakamura writes in the Taiyō on "The Value of the Hague Peace Conference" in a very philosophical and sensible manner. While admitting that the potentialities of the Conference have been exaggerated by some writers, he sees that there is much that it can accomplish. After detailing the many improvements in the methods of conducting war and the changes in the attitude of neutral powers that may be secured by mutual agreement among the delegates at the Conference, he goes on to urge his fellow-countrymen to welcome the sitting which it is proposed to hold some time this year. Some, says Dr. Nakamura, cavil over the name "Peace Conference" unnecessarily and say the Conference will never lead to universal peace, and so on. It is called a "Peace Conference" because its object is to promote the cause of peace as much as possible by means of arbitration, while it mitigates the horrors of war by the enactment of a number of rules and restrictions. What it has already accomplished in this line is of no mean order, and it certainly will do still more in the near future. Here are Dr. Nakamura's concluding words:—"To object to Peace Conferences in the abstract is the height of absurdity. It makes no matter by whom the convening of such conferences was first proposed, nor where they are held, nor what kind of questions are submitted to them for settlement. All appeals to the Conference should be welcomed and treated seriously. The Conference will always have it in its power to alleviate a certain amount of human suffering and to restrict the disorder caused by war to some extent. Compared with victory over a foreign foe, compared with an alliance with another country, compared with winning the good-will of foreign countries by sending ambassadors to those countries, these Conferences are neither superior, as means to an end, nor inferior."

No less than 10 pages of the April Taiyō are occupied with a statement of Count Okuma's views on Korea, a country which for many years past the Count has studied closely. In the opening remarks the great services rendered to the cause of good government in Korea by Bishop Harris, of the Methodist Episcopal Mission, are referred to. The information collected by Bishop Harris while in Korea was handed on to Marquis Itō and to Count Okuma. Count Okuma refers to Bishop Harris as holding none of the views of the ordinary narrow-minded religious bigot (butsu no shūkyōka teki no henko naru kangaye wa sukoshi mo motanai hito de aru). The tone of Count Okuma's article is one of great solicitude, lest Japan should find the task of reforming Korea too great for her. The notion with which hundreds of Japanese have gone to Korea is that the Koreans can easily be "got over." Big profits they think are to be made in the peninsula. This for centuries was the policy of the European States engaged in colonizing, and it eventually led to all sorts of serious political difficulties and in many cases to war. Into the policy recommended by Count Okuma we have no space to go here.

* * *
The first number of the resuscitated Waseda Bungaku appeared on January 1st. The demand for the magazine has been so large that this first number has already reached the Fifth Edition. The former Waseda Bungaku was very ably edited by Dr. Tsubouchi Yūzō. Seven and a half years have elapsed since its discontinuance. The new magazine is edited by Mr. Shimamura Taketarō. The magazine, in addition to serving as an organ for Count Okuma's flourishing University, will throw open its pages to the general public. Freedom of thought is to be its watchword and in the opening pages of the first number we are informed that it will welcome literary contributions of every sort and that no kind of veto will be put on the discussion of any subject connected with literature. It will aim at raising the standard of literature throughout the country. Art, religion, education, history, philosophy, customs, and the drama will all be discussed in turn. The writers for the first number are, we observe, mostly Waseda men. A Society has lately been formed at Waseda called the Bungei Kyōkai, of which Count Okuma is the President. It is evidently a very strong body having all the old Waseda scholars as members. The papers read before this Society will be published in the Waseda Bungaku. The staff of the Magazine have issued a notice to the effect that they are prepared to act as a Committee of advice to would-be novelists and play-writers. If manuscripts are sent to them, they will be reported on and in certain cases portions of them will be published in the Magazine. There are numbers of young men who have talent for writing, but they do not know how to set about getting their manuscripts accepted by publishers; nor do they in many cases know whether their productions have any literary value or not. Promising authors will henceforth be pushed by the Waseda Committee. This plan strikes us as being highly commendable. The Waseda School has long been a great literary centre, but its present new activity seems to have been caused by recent events. The opening sentence of the new Waseda Bungaku refers to the year 1906 as the first year of an entirely new era in Japanese history, and the literary luminaries of Waseda are evidently determined to make a big stir in the Japanese literary world. There is so much literary talent at Waseda that great things may be expected from this new movement. Mr. Tokutomi Rokkwa, the brother of the editor of the Kokumin Shimbun, is one of the writers for the magazine. The style, tastes and opinions of the two Tokutomi brothers are reported to be entirely different, and for some time past Mr. R. Tokutomi has had no connection whatever with the Kokumin Shimbun. He has made a name for himself as a writer of articles, novelettes, and the like. The Waseda Bungaku appears on the first of each month and sells at 20 sen a copy. It varies in size. The March number covers more than 200 pages. A good deal of space is devoted to articles on Japanese plays and stage-acting.

* * *

Much appears in the magazines from month to month on Manchuria. The Japanese are engaged in the exploration of the province and the tone of what has appeared on the potentialities of that part of China is most hopeful. Mr. Matsuo Onjiro, writing in the Rikugo Zasshi, says that there could be no greater contrast between any two nations than that displayed by the Koreans and Chinese who live on opposite sides of the Yalu. By crossing that river from Korea you enter a new world, says Mr. Matsuo. Instead of idleness you witness activity everywhere; instead of filth you see comparative cleanliness. Instead of the miserable hovels of the Koreans you see substantially built houses with tiled roofs. Instead of listlessness and hopeless stupidity you find business keenness and great intelligence on every hand. Mr. Matsuo recommends his fellow-countrymen to go to Manchuria in preference to Korea. He describes at considerable length the various openings for business there.

Baron Kaneko has been giving a series of addresses to the Kokka Gakkai on his sojourn in the United States during the war. He says that at first the sympathy of the Americans was with Russia to a large extent, but that gradually it altered in favour of Japan. The Kokka Gakkai Zasshi publishes a number of learned articles from month to month. The Kokka Gakkai have had a discussion on the relations of the two Houses of the Diet to each other and the Constitution of the Houses, started by Professor Hozumi. In an article on this subject published in the Society's Magazine Mr. Uzawa Sōmei, B.L., makes the following remarks:—"Though the constitution of the two Houses is capable of some improvement, yet on the whole it may be said to suit the times in which we live and the state of political parties. But there is one particular in which the Houses fulfil their functions in a very indifferent manner, and that is in the opposition they offer to certain Government measures. Government in constitutional countries is largely a conflict between the wills of different statesmen, only ending occasionally in compromise. Here perhaps compromise is carried too far. In reference to the attitude of the Houses to each other, seeing that they represent different interests, it might be naturally supposed that it would frequently be one of opposition, and in case of the opposition being carried to a great length one of the Houses might always be expected to give way to the other. But it is not so. In England the general feeling in the country is in favour of forcing the Upper House to give way to the Lower, but in Japan general public opinion has hardly reached that stage. In the West in constitutionally governed countries numerous measures originate with the opinions of the mass of the people, that is to say, legislation begins from below and works upwards. Here it originates with the rulers in power and is subsequently acquiesced in by the people. There are many elements of popular government as understood in the West that do not exist here at all. Take the notion which is held so strongly in countries like England that a member of the House of Commons is sent there to represent the views of his constituents. Here in Japan the member of the Lower House is guided principally by his own personal views and the exigencies of the party to which he belongs in his attitude to the various measures brought up for discussion in the House of Representatives. The fact that the opposition offered to Government measures in either House cannot be carried to the extent of wrenching the reins of government from the hands of the men who hold them renders the whole attitude of the Diet to successive Cabinets something radically different from the attitude of Legislative Assemblies to Governments in more democratic states. But we have not only refrained from giving full power to the people who choose members for the Lower House, we have taken care that the authority of the Lower House shall be no more than that of the House of Peers. The granting of equal authority to the two Houses has led to all sorts of unsatisfactory compromises on grave matters of State.

WEDDINGS.

A very pretty wedding was celebrated in Christ Church, Yokohama, on Wednesday afternoon, the contracting parties being Mr. Fred. Pollard and Miss Augusta Rose Cameron, second daughter of Mrs. W. G. Cameron, an old and deeply respected resident of Yokohama. The church was nicely decorated for the occasion, one of the bride's names being taken as a motif, and the dresses of the bridesmaids followed out the scheme in pink and white also. The bride entered the Church on the arm of Dr. Wheeler, who gave her away. She wore a very becoming princess gown of white liberty satin with chiffon fichu and orange blossom, and her head was decked with a tulle veil and a wreath of orange blossom. Her only ornament was a pearl and ruby pendant chain, the gift of the bridegroom; and she carried a shower bouquet of white flowers. Two of her sisters were bridesmaids, the Misses Madge and May Cameron. They were prettily gowned in white and pink organdie trimmed with white lace and pink ribbon and wore hats of white point d'esprit trimmed with white liberty satin ribbon. They carried bouquets of pink and white flowers and wore gold heart-shaped lockets and chains the gifts of the bridegroom.

The Bride's mother wore a black gown trimmed with black taffeta and cream lace, and a black hat. Mrs. L. Pollard wore a handsome grey dress with a white hat. Mrs. J. F. Drummond, sister of the bride, wore white silk with a white hat, which was eminently becoming to her. Mrs. D. Crowe, from Nagasaki, aunt of the bride, wore pink and white and a stylish black liat.

The Rev. W. P. G. Field, Incumbent, officiated, and the service was fully choral, Mrs. Field being at the organ. The Best Man was Mr. J. S. Cartwright, and the Ushers, Messrs. W. J. White, J. H. C. Goodban, C. von Fallot, and H. W. Kilby.

A reception was afterwards held at the house of the bride's mother, when a large number of friends gathered to wish happiness to the young couple. The presents, which were numerous and handsome, were here on view.

Later in the afternoon the happy pair left for Tokyo en route for Nikko, where they will spend the honeymoon. The bride's going away gown was a white serge coat and skirt costume trimmed with white silk braid and white hat trimmed with pink roses.

On Wednesday at Englewood, New Jersey, Mr. Charles Hastings Thorn of Yokohama, and Miss Lilian McAlister Morse, second daughter of Mr. J. R. Morse, President of the American Trading Company, were to be married. The happy couple are expected in Yokohama on June 3rd. Many congratulatory cables left this port on Wednesday for Englewood.

"Happy is the bride which the sun shines on," runs the old proverb. There was sunshine in abundance on Thursday when the marriage took place in the Union Church of Mr. Robert Campbell Edwards, of Belfast, and Miss Helena Deborah Louise Page, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Finch Page of Togo-nohama, Dzushi, Kanagawa Prefecture. The church was very prettily decorated with cherry blossoms, bamboos and palms, and the service, which was conducted by Rev. E. S. Booth, was choral, Miss Mendelson singing the solo "Vater Unser," by C. Krebs, and Mr. W. Karl Vincent presiding at the organ. As the wedding party entered the Church, the hymn "O Father all-creating" was sung, and they departed amid the strains of Mendelssohn's "Wedding March."

The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a dress of ivory duchesse satin trimmed with repossé lace panel and collar, having a band of the same lace round the hem of the skirt edged with pleatings of satin and a veil of tulle fastened with orange blossom. She was accompanied at the altar by her sisters, Miss Gertrude Page as Maid of Honour, and the Misses Dorothy and Hilda Page as Bridesmaids, who wore white organdie dresses trimmed with lace insertion, and insertion shamrocks over green silk,—in compliment to the nationality of the bridegroom—and white panne and chiffon hats with pink roses. The Maid of Honour and the Bridesmaids wore each a gold bracelet, the gift of the bridegroom.

Mrs. Page, mother of the bride, wore grey bengaline trimmed with tan lace and a black and silver toque trimmed with spring flowers. The ladies carried beautiful bouquets.

Mr. A. B. Lowson officiated as best man, Messrs. Libeaud and Lambert as groomsmen, and Mr. G. G. Brady and Mr. O. Strome as ushers.

Later in the afternoon a reception, which was largely attended by friends of the happy pair, was held at No. 62 Bluff, where the numerous and valuable presents were on view, and subsequently Mr. and Mrs. Edwards left to spend the honeymoon at the country residence of the bride's parents at Dzushi.

The bride's travelling dress was of pale green cloth trimmed with white silk braid and she wore a black picture hat with ostrich plumes. It is hardly necessary to say that interest in this event was greatly enhanced by the well-known musical gifts of the bride, which she has always so cheerfully shared with the members of the community, or that the most cordial and sincere good wishes accompany the couple in their new path of life.

YOKOHAMA CUSTOMS.

In connexion with the revised Customs Tariff Law which will come into force on Oct. 1st, the Yokohama Customs makes the following announcements:—

The present tariff duty will be imposed on cargo arriving not later than the last hour of Sept. 30th, if the application for import permit is presented to the Customs during that day.

2.—Art. 26 of the Extraordinary Special Tax Law will also be enforced after the enforcement of the revised Tariff Law: namely, sugar not over No. 15 of Dutch Standard and molasses stored before Oct. 1st in the bonded warehouse will be dealt with under the new tariff if it be taken out after Oct. 1st.

3.—To enjoy the benefit of the Conventional Tariff, certificates of origin are required to be presented together with the application for import permit. However, the presentation of the certificate is now waived on importers asking for grace of time and promising to do so within the required period. After Oct. 1st, such grace will not be granted but Art. 2 of the Administrative Law of the Customs Tariff Law will be strictly enforced.

The trial of O. Takebayashi, formerly O. Noguchi, who is charged with having murdered Mr. Neisai Noguchi, the well-known poet, was resumed on April 18th in the Tokyo District Court. Several police inspectors and others were examined as witnesses. Discussion took place between the Public Prosecutor and Messrs. Saito and Hanai employed for the defence. The case was then adjourned.

A CHAPTER OF KOREAN HISTORY.

(COMMUNICATED)

One of the important results of the recent war between Japan and Russia is the blotting out of Korea as a disturbing factor in the political affairs of the East. To some this may seem a national misfortune, and to be regretted, but when one becomes familiar with the history of misrule and oppression that have been going on in the Hermit Kingdom for generations past it becomes rather a cause of thankfulness that a new era has dawned upon the unfortunate land. One who has been prominent in the history of the country, and perhaps the most able and progressive man that Korea has yet produced, has furnished the following history of what has occurred there in the not distant past.

About fifty years ago there lived in Korea a man named O Kyung-suk, who went to China for the sale of ginseng and other products of the country and on his return brought back some books descriptive of the customs and institutions of other lands. These books were eagerly read by a few individuals, and in this way a knowledge of the outer world was obtained.

One of these persons was Kim Ok-kin. He was a man of only medium rank but possessed of great energy, quick perception and a personal power and magnetism which made him an acknowledged leader of men. He saw and recognized the fact that civilized countries were much superior to his own; and, by the help of a younger brother of the King (who was still young), he was able to make known to His Majesty what he had learned, and also his own views as to the best interest of the country. These opinions met with the King's approval; and some others of the nobles and more enlightened young men; and thus the progressive Party of Korea came into being. At first they were few in number; and they dared not express their opinions publicly, for to do this was to provoke opposition and endanger their lives. At this time the King's father, the Tai Won Kun, was regent. He was a strong and cruel man; and had caused the death of several of the French priests, together with some 10,000 of their followers. The foremost object of the Progressive Party was to make Korea an independent and civilized nation. They opposed the conservative and pro-Chinese policy which then prevailed and advocated among other reforms:

- (1) The abolition of the office of Royal Attendants, who were the immediate servants of the King, and His Household. They numbered many thousand; and had almost limitless power, as all petitions from the people and all royal edicts passed through their hands.
- (2) The organization of a Gendarmery and police system, after the model of that in Japan. (Of these two organizations Pak Yong Hyo was to have been the head. He was a nobleman of high rank, who had married a daughter of the former King and was a great favourite at the court.)
- (3) The enfranchisement of the common people. This measure was heartily supported by the King; and all classes were thus permitted to win distinction in the service of the State.
- (4) Alteration of the system of taxation so as to prevent corruption, and encourage industry and enterprise on the part of the people.
- (5) The abolition of certain corporations or guilds, that were in many cases simply bands of ruffians and object of terror to peaceful citizens.

Besides these there was proposed a discontinuance of the annual tribute to China, and the assertion of complete independence.

One of the first steps in the way of progress was to secure some suitable medium of circulation for the purpose of trade. The Conservative, or Pro-Chinese Party, advocated the use of the Chinese cash, or coins of similar character. This was also urged by Mr. Mollendorf, who had been sent from China by Li Hung-chang as adviser to the Government. Mr. Mollendorf also proposed the introduction of European machinery for its manufacture. He further recommended that the coin should be debased so that it would contain but one-tenth of its face value, and thus secure a large profit to the Government. These views were strongly opposed by Kim Ok-kin and his followers, and the King agreed with them. Then by royal appointment Kim Ok-kin was sent to Japan, to raise a loan for the purpose of establishing an honest currency and the facilitation of trade.

During Kim's absence in Japan continued efforts were made to thwart his plan, and by the misrepresentations of his enemies the whole scheme resulted in failure. Then as a matter of necessity the King gave temporary permission to manufacture coins like the Chinese. The privilege of making this money was sold by the officials to any person who was willing to pay; and no guarantee was required as to the value of the coins produced. The money received by the officials for the privilege of coinage was kept by them; and thus large sums were accumulated by a few, and the people were cheated and robbed. The result was that the currency became more and more debased; and there was great distress everywhere. Then the very persons who had advocated these measures proposed that the King should issue an edict forbidding the circulation of such a poor currency. But foreigners holding this money were excepted; and as a result the Chinese and Japanese tradersmen purchased large quantities of it at a mere nominal price and compelled the Government to redeem it at its face value. Trade was killed; no produce came from the country; and men died in the streets of starvation.

The King took counsel of Kim as to what to do; and at last revoked the decree. The men who had brought the distress and ruin upon the country united to thwart the plans of Kim, but he retained the sympathy of the King and also of the representatives of other nations, with the exception of China. The members of the Cabinet quarrelled bitterly among themselves; and cared very little for the interests or welfare of the people. The one thing which they sought after was to get Kim and his party out of their way.

At this time a large number of the ruffian class who belonged to the Conservative party were gathered in the Capital. The Progressists knew that plots were being formed for their destruction, and suspected that the coming of so large a band of reckless men was for this very purpose. They therefore were constantly on the watch lest they be taken by surprise and put out of the way.

On the 4th of December, 1884, a supper was given by the Head of the Postal Department at the new post office, to celebrate the inauguration of a postal system in Korea. At this supper given by the Progressists, there were present the American and English Ministers, and Min Yong-ik, a nephew of the Queen, who had been at the Head of the Embassy which visited the United States and Europe. He was not a member of the party; but having been so much abroad, entertained more liberal views than his associates.

While at supper there was raised in the street a cry of fire; and Min Yong-ik, being the Head of the Army as well as Mayor of the City, went out to ascertain the location and extent of the conflagration. He was at once struck down by the assassins, who were there in wait, and returning to the room where the supper was going on fell helpless and bleeding to the floor. Who these assassins were, and the object of their attack, is a matter of dispute. The progressists say that they were the emissaries of the Conservatives, and the cutting down of Ming Yong-ik was a mistake,—he being taken for one of the Progressists. This is confirmed by the fact that the street was filled by a wild rabble who were in sympathy with the Conservatives and ready for any such work. The attack upon Min Yong-ik was the signal for a general stampede. Kim Ok-kin and his followers fled through a back door, over a wall and by a narrow lane to the palace, and reported to the King what had taken place. The leaders of the Conservative Party were sent for and six of them cut down in succession as they entered the court. The King then asked for the protection of the Japanese troops, which was given.

A new cabinet was then formed, of which I Jai-wan was the Minister of the Left, Hong Yong-hi, Minister of the Right, Pak Yong-ho and Soh Kwan-pon, Commanders of the Army, and Kim Ok-kin was the Minister of Finance. These persons entered at once upon the discussion of plans for the inauguration of various reforms and the introduction of a better state of things.

Until one o'clock of the next day there was no interruption; and the Japanese and Korean troops together were guarding the palace. Then there was an assault by the Chinese soldiers, in far superior numbers. The King with his attendants fled from court to court in order to get out of range of the bullets that were flying about.

For a time the Japanese troops kept back the Chinese (who were reinforced by the mob) but at length they were driven back and compelled to make their escape as best they could. Kim and his associates, with the exception of one (Hong Yong-sik who remained and was instantly killed) accompanied the Japanese soldiers in their retreat.

On reaching the Japanese Legation they asked the Minister for protection, but he replied that he had more than he could do to protect his own people and they must take care of themselves. The soldiers, however, kindly gave them shelter; and disguised in Japanese clothing they passed out of the city in company with the Japanese fugitives of all classes and under the escort of the troops.

The journey of 25 miles to Chemulpo was made on foot in a cold December night, and they nearly died from the exposure and fatigue. On reaching that port it so happened that a Japanese steamer was lying at anchor; and getting on board secretly, they were kindly protected by the captain and brought safely to Japan.

Mr. Mollendorf followed and made every possible effort to have the Japanese Government give them up that he might take them back and put them to a cruel death. But in this he was not successful, and they were spared to serve their country and the world in other ways.

The youngest of the party was named Sah Jai-pil, who afterwards changed his name to Philip Jaisohn. He went to the United States; and after graduating at an academy in Pennsylvania, went to Washington, D. C., and secured a position in the Smithsonian Institute, and at night attended a medical course until he received a doctor's degree. He then became an assistant in the Garfield hospital and was entrusted with the preparation of the antitoxin for the city of Washington. Subsequently he was induced to go back to Korea and assist in securing for an American Company the privilege of constructing a railroad from Chemulpo to Seoul. He accomplished this, and was appointed an Adviser to the King. In the meantime he devoted his time and energies to the establishment and publication of two papers,—one in English, and one in Korean. In these he exposed the corruption and evils that prevailed and urged their correction. He also insisted upon the appointment of efficient and honest officials, and the needed changes in their laws and customs. As a consequence of his boldness in exposing the corruption that prevailed his life was in constant danger, and it was necessary for him to be attended by a guard wherever he went. At length his denunciation of wrong aroused such bitter hatred, and found so little support from those of influence and ability that he was notified by the weak and vacillating King that his services were no longer wanted. Being thus discharged he returned to the United States. His departure, however, did not end his influence; for good as the ideas which he had disseminated by his voice and pen had made an impression upon many minds, and the leaven of his teachings had spread throughout the Kingdom, awaking new hopes and aspirations in many hearts.

The second was a nobleman named Soh Kwan-pon, who had been one of the members of the Embassy that visited the United States and other countries in 1882-3. He had thus been able to learn of the great superiority in the conditions of other countries over his own. He also went to the United States and graduated at Lincoln University. For some time he likewise had a position in the Smithsonian Institute. After a time he returned to Korea and was appointed Minister of Justice and of Education. Subsequently he was appointed Minister to the United States. This position he filled until the failure of his health. He died of consumption in Washington about ten years ago. The third was Pak Hong-ho, a nobleman of high rank, who had married the former King's daughter and was a special favourite of the King. In the year 1881 he was the Head of an Embassy to Japan, where he also imbibed new and progressive ideas. He also went to the United States, but soon returned. After some years spent in Japan he went back to Korea and was appointed Mayor of Seoul and Minister of Home Affairs. His institution of some radical changes in the habits and customs of the people aroused much hostility on the part of his countrymen; and his bold opposition to the aggression of Russia made such enemies that he was obliged to flee for his life. Coming to Japan he has been the object of suspicion and hatred on the part of the officials in Korea; and various plots have been formed to assassinate him, but have failed. He now lives in comparative seclusion, but is still admired, and followed by many young and ardent advocates of reform. The leader of all, Kim Ok-kin, remained in Japan; and being energetic and restless was unable to restrain himself. His conduct caused considerable trouble to the Japanese, and no end of anxiety to those who were in power in his own country. Various schemes were formed for his destruction, but for some time he was able to escape. At last a Korean came to Japan, and professing great devotion to the Reform movement, so won his confidence that he was persuaded to go to China, with the promise that an interview would be granted with Li Hung-chang; and probably in this way the reform of Korea hastened. Allured by this promise Kim Ok-kin went with his supposed friend to Shanghai, where he was at once shot by his companion. His body was taken by the Japanese, and was being brought back to Japan, when some Chinese soldiers took it away and put it on board a Chinese man of war, which then sailed for Korea to take it back to his enemies. On reaching that country the body was taken from the coffin, the head, hands, and feet chopped off and stuck up in public, while the naked remnant was thrown out into the field and left exposed with the inscription above it: "The Great Traitor, Kim Ok-kin." This conduct on the part of the Chinese and Koreans so enraged the Japanese that it proved to be the culminating cause of the war between Japan and China.

Soon after this an English transport was on its way from China to Korea, laden with Chinese soldiers, when the Japanese man of war under the command of Capt. Togo (now the famous Admiral) attacked and sunk it. This was followed by the landing of a Japanese army in Korea, which attacked and drove out the Chinese forces; then pushing on to Port Arthur brought the Chinese to accept humiliating terms of peace.

In consequence of the interference of Russia, France, and Germany the fruits of the victory were in part taken from Japan, but the result in Korea was an end to the Chinese control; and thus an opportunity was given for the country to develop along new and progressive lines. So the death of Kim Ok-kin made possible what he had desired and striven for during his life, but failed to accomplish.

Had the King only realized his opportunity, and had honest and efficient men around him, and been devoted to the welfare of his country instead of his own comfort and safety, there would have been a very different state of affairs in the East to-day. Instead of a mere subject power Korea would have a place and voice among the nations of the earth.

But lack of patriotism, honesty and ability on the part of the King and court has brought about the struggle between Japan and Russia; and the latter also has been swept out of the Middle Kingdom and an end made of her domination there. While the Progressive Party in Korea has come to an untimely end, what it stood for has not been utterly lost to the country. New ideas have permeated the people's minds and since their own ruler has, like Belshazzar, been recreant to his duty Japan has taken the reins in her hands and now stands before the world as the embodiment of liberty and reform for the long down-trodden and distracted nation.

THE LAW COURTS.

CLAIM FOR OIL-CAKE.

A case instituted by the China and Japan Trading Co., No. 89, Yokohama, against Shikano Keijiro of Utsunomiya, Tochigi prefecture, claiming yen 1,715.70 and interest at the rate of 6 per cent per annum till the execution of judgment, came up on April 13th in the Yokohama District Court before Judge Nakanishi.

Plaintiff's firm was represented by Mr. H. Sato. Defendant, who was absent, was unrepresented.

Plaintiff's Counsel said that defendant ordered from plaintiffs in April, 1904, 250 bags of oil-cake. The manure was imported in June the same year and subsequently it was delivered to defendant. The manure was valued at yen 2,815.70. On October 15th, the same year, defendant paid eleven hundred yen to plaintiffs through the Hamaguchi-Shoten, Tokyo. The remainder of the bill is still left unpaid.

After a few questions as to the nature of the business transactions between the parties, the Court delivered judgment in favour of plaintiffs with costs.

THE "MONNA VANNA" CASE.

On April 12th, in the Osaka District Court, Ikeda Sadajiro prosecuted Mr. O. Kawakami, the well known actor and his company, on a charge of having encroached upon plaintiff's acting rights in Monna Vanna, and further presented a petition asking for the seizure of the Nakaza theatre, Osaka, where the translated drama is being performed.

It may be remembered that Mr. F. Uda, a merchant of Tokyo, filed a petition in the Yokohama Local Court against Mr. O. Kawakami, who is now in Osaka, asking for the seizure of the translation of the drama Monna Vanna. As a result, the acting rights in the drama were sold by auction on April 9th for eighty yen at the office of Mr. Kusakabe, one of the bailiffs belonging to the Yokohama Local Court. Ikeda Sadajiro, the plaintiff, purchased the acting rights.

The actor, the same day, presented a statement to the Court through Messrs. S. Mori and F. Yamaguchi in which he admitted the sale of the translated drama but urged, however, that the legal conveyance of the acting rights had not yet been affected, consequently he incurred no liability in continuing the performance.

The drama in dispute, says the Asahi, was translated by Mr. Yamagishi. Another translation was made by Mr. Takasu Baikei, which was published in the Taiyo in its December issue, in 1905. The last named translator presented his work to the actor. The performance at the Nakaza Theatre will be continued till April 15th as previously arranged.

In the case instituted in the Yokohama District Court by the Chinese Chamber of Commerce against the Tatung School, Yokohama, for possession of the building and claiming yen 3,255 alleged to be rent unpaid and yen 2,325 alleged to be damage, judgment has been delivered by Judge Nakanishi dismissing the plaintiff's petition. The essential points of the decision were that the representative of the school leased the building from the plaintiff and employed it for the purposes of the institute, and that rent was duly paid. The lease between the parties being still in existence the employment of the building for the school could not be taken as an illegal occupation.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

According to telegrams in Tokyo papers dated April 16th, a Captain Worth, of the British Army, has been arrested at Nagasaki on a charge of fraud. There is not yet any detailed report.

A sailor named Martinerie Jacqueson (19) serving on board the French steamer Louqsor which arrived at Yokohama on April 11th, was arrested on April 13th and removed to the Yokohama District Court on a charge of having assaulted a Japanese coolie who was working on the ship. The Frenchman is said to have inflicted severe injuries on the man's head. The Harbour police report that previous to the occurrence some other Japanese coolies quarrelled with the sailors on the vessel but the trouble was settled through the efforts of the officers of the ship. The assault committed by Jacqueson seems to have resulted from some misunderstanding on his part.

The Mitsui Bussan Kaisha has established an Office in Shanghai with a capital of taels 250,000 jointly with a Chinaman named Yongsz-Ho. Their business is to supply the Chinese Government with military stores.

A Hongkong telegram recently reported the death of the Governor of the Straits Settlements. It is now ascertained that the notice referred to the demise of Mr. John Anderson, father of Sir John Anderson, the Governor, who is now at home on short leave. The deceased was 85 years of age.

The Education Bill introduced in the House of Commons by Mr. Augustine Birrell, President of the Board of Education, provides for public control of all schools, strictly undenominational teaching, and for the abolition of religious tests of teachers. The Bench of Bishops are up in arms against it.

The Cunard Company have decided to name the two new fast turbine steamers now being built under the agreement with His Majesty's Government by Messrs. John Brown & Co. Limited, Clydebank, and Messrs. Swan, Hunter, Wigham, Richardson (Limited), Wallsend, Lusitania and Mauritania respectively.

According to investigations by the Department of Communications made at the end of February, Japanese merchant steamers of over twenty tons gross numbered fourteen hundred and the tonnage aggregated about one million tons. The details are as follows:

Steamers.	Tons.	Gross Tons.
649.....	20-100	29,884
248.....	100-300	41,868
89.....	300-500	34,442
121.....	500-1,000	85,881
121.....	1,000-2,000	182,119
98.....	2,000-3,000	237,940
39.....	3,000-4,000	132,215
11.....	4,000-5,000	48,633
5.....	5,000-6,000	26,755
18.....	6,000-7,000	112,138
1.....	over 7,000	7,463

The tea season is now at hand and samples of new crop are continuously coming in from Shidzuoka and other places to Yokohama. The quality is good. On April 21st, samples will probably be shipped by the Doric through foreign traders who are believed to have received orders from New York, Canada, Chicago, etc. The nominal prices are as follow, compared with those of last year:—

	1906. Average. Yen.	1905. Average. Yen.
Special Choicest .....	—	66.00
Choicest Choice .....	50.00	55.00
Finest Fine .....	45.00	43.00
Medium Good .....	40.00	—
Common good common.....	35.00	—

It is generally believed that the first big shipment of new tea will take place at the end of this month.

The commanders of the various army divisions will hold a meeting on April 23rd at the Army Department. The present commanders are as:—

Imperial Body Guards.....	Lieut.-Gen. Asada.
First Division.....	Prince Kan-in.
Second ".....	Lieut.-Gen. Nishijima.
Third ".....	Matsunaga.
Fourth ".....	Tsukamoto.
Fifth ".....	Kigoshi.
Sixth ".....	Okubo.
Seventh ".....	Oseko.
Eighth ".....	Tachimi.
Ninth ".....	Oshima (Hisanao.)
Tenth ".....	Anto.
Eleventh ".....	Sanajima.
Twelfth ".....	Inouye.
Thirteenth ".....	Haraguchi.
Fourteenth ".....	Tsuchiya.
Fifteenth ".....	Ohihara.
Sixteenth ".....	Yamanaka.

The last four divisions were organized during the war.

ENGLISH PUBLIC SCHOOLS AND UNIVERSITIES.

The lecture delivered by the Rt. Rev. Bishop Welldon at the Higher Commercial School, Tokyo, was, as we indicated on Friday morning, listened to by a large company of students from the chief schools in the capital and by many invited guests, both Japanese and foreign.

The proceedings were opened by the Chairman, H.E. Mr. Makino, Minister for Education, who said it was a great privilege and a great honor for him to preside that afternoon over such a vast meeting consisting largely of leaders of intellect and scholastic circles as well as of students coming from some of the principal educational establishments in Tokyo. They were assembled to welcome and to hear a most distinguished authority on the training of English gentlemen in public schools and universities in England. It was a subject that aroused keen interest in Japan, especially at this moment. The people of Japan had come to appreciate the meaning and worth of an English gentleman. He thought he voiced the prevailing feeling of all in that hall when he said that they considered it a rare fortune to hear such a notable authority on such a subject. Recently they had had several visits of distinguished personages from England. Admiral Noel had visited them and recently they had had a visit from Prince Arthur of Connaught who came to them charged with an important mission from his Royal uncle to His Majesty the Emperor. Under all those circumstances he thought they would welcome Bishop Welldon's presence as a spontaneous expression of the high regard with which their great ally laid stress on matters appertaining to Japan. He hardly needed to remind them that the public schools in England—of which they had a representative among them that day—were the birthplaces of great men who had made the British Empire what it was. Referring to the presence of Sir Claude and Lady MacDonald he said that when he called on the British Ambassador to ask his presence there and mentioned the subject on which Bishop Welldon was to speak, Sir Claude said that there was no higher authority on that subject than Bishop Welldon. Those words, he thought, were eloquent and he would not add to them but would simply introduce the Rt. Rev. Bishop (Applause).

The Rt. Rev. Bishop Welldon said his first and pleasantest duty was to thank His Excellency for the suggestion of the subject and also for his presence in the chair at the meeting. To him it could only be a pleasure to do all in his power to strengthen the good understanding between the two peoples of Great Britain and Japan, who had many things similar in their lives. The Minister had said that the term "gentleman" as understood in England had some charm for Japanese ears and had almost become a naturalized Japanese word. To bear the name of gentleman was the silent if not expressed ambition of most young English hearts. It was largely due to the public schools and the universities, but after all a great deal of education, it might be the part best worth considering, was given at home. But it was also true that the British Empire, one of the most astonishing institutions under the sun, had been strengthened and developed by men who were trained for the task in public schools and universities. He quoted Canning's saying that, if he were asked how it was that England had been able, for so many generations, to supply a series of men qualified to serve God, both in Church and State, he would ascribe the production of such men to the education in the public schools and universities. The public schools and universities had many things in common among themselves, but if he spoke rather more of the public schools than of the universities the reason was that he thought that in the shaping of character the schools played a more important part than the universities. The latter were the homes of the learned professors whose names are known all over the civilized world. But the schools were under the control and influence of men of character themselves, as the names of Dr. Arnold and Dr. Thring went to show, the former one of the headmasters of Rugby, and the other headmaster of Uppingham, which school was attended by Sir Claude MacDonald. There were differences between the universities, as between the schools, so he would limit his remarks to those most known as fitted for the training of character,—to Oxford and Cambridge, and Eton and Harrow. The object of these institutions was not wholly intellectual, but essentially social and moral,—to form gentlemen, to send out men who would be manly, scorn effeminacy, and despise mean, shabby conduct as "unworthy of a gentleman." The boys were taken out of their homes at the most impressionable age, about 13, to live in the boarding houses of the schools and kept there till 18 or 19. Thus they spent more years in the schools than in the universities. They were allowed to go home one-third of a year, while at the universities they were allowed to rest at home about one-half. The school masters received them not only to teach them their lessons, but to set them high ideals of honour and duty and to spare no pains in developing in them an elevated conception of patriotism. The school masters stood in a most intimate relation to the boys. The masters' influence was always moral, aiming at the formation of character. Thus it was that the schools had come to elicit deep affection from their scholars. As an example, the speaker referred to the case of Marquis Wellesley, elder brother of the great Duke of Wellington, who, even as Governor-General of India, kept up correspondence with his old master at Eton, reporting his doings and even asking advice about his administration; and when dying wished to be buried in the chapel of the school, with his own verses inscribed as an epitaph on his tomb. It was always inculcated upon the pupils that they must keep up the honour of their schools. Should they ever bring dishonour upon their school, then their names were removed from the list. The lecturer had known cases where boys had incurred disgrace during their public school life and had waited years until they could retrieve their positions. So great was the ambition to do their school honour, and so great was the fear to do the contrary that one master, called a tutor, associated with the boy, watched over him, understood, corrected and sympathized with him. That one tutor followed him from the first to the last of his school life. The master first of all demanded obedience, implicit obedience. The master who argued was lost. He must lay down the law: Aristotle had said no body was fitted to command unless he had learned first to obey. This nurtured the high sense of duty which had been remarkable in many English heroes. Nelson's words, "England expects that every man will do his duty," or Wellington's saying at Waterloo, "Whatever happens, Uxbridge, you and I will do our duty," were among the most notable examples. Further to make gentlemen of the boys they must be trusted so that they should come to act so as to be worthy of their master's trust. Espionage was utterly hateful to English ideas. Put weight on their honour, so that they could not but respond to the trust, and the boys would come to feel it better to incur punishment than to escape at a sacrifice of honour. The speaker told from his experience as head master of Harrow of an instance of a boy who was accused by him of an offence, but who replied "no!" His word, as is the practice, was accepted as final, and the thing ended there. But a few years later the master, while crossing the Channel, met the young man on board the ship, and there the latter made confession of his false denial, which had haunted him ever since. They could not form or attain the character of a gentleman as the name was used in England unless their word in Society, in business and any other aspect of life was utterly beyond reproach or suspicion. He referred to the fact that the masters never employed unfair means for finding out a boy's fault from another boy. His own word always held good. With a passing allusion to corporal punishment he went on to say that the boys' character is moulded by the public opinion of the school. Naturally it cannot be perfect, but imperious and irresistible as far as it goes. Among the boys, social inequality is done away with entirely. The book "Tom Brown's School Days" seemed to have given rise to misconceptions of the English school as something barbarous. But those old days are past, and hardly any inhuman treatment of boys is nowadays known. The fighting days are also gone. The boys' sense of responsibility was cultivated by giving a great deal of authority and privileges to older boys, who are thus brought into a closer relation with their masters in the work of imparting discipline to the younger and inferior boys. This "monitorial" system has proved good at least for the monitors themselves. It has been an excellent training for the discharge of public duties. The intellectual education of England was dwelt on, and described as resting on the two pillars of exact science (principally mathematics) and languages. The former gave training in the power of discrimination between truth and falsehood; and the latter in the understanding of human nature. Then he passed on to athletics as a training force for English boys. In playing games, English boys learnt the value of fair play, to scorn "foul play," and to "pull together." The spirit of honourable equity was implied in the expression: "He doesn't play the game." The boy learns obedience by explicit acquiescence in the decision of an umpire. The strain often experienced on the athletic grounds helps to develop his iron "nerve," which will support him later in difficult situations of life. Then they learn the virtue of unselfishness, from co-operating with others. The very result of this is to produce modesty in the boys, the virtue of putting one's own merits in the background.

The lecturer was delighted to see the zeal which the native Calcutta youths displayed in the game of cricket, as a hopeful sign of mutual understanding and drawing together of the English and Hindoos. Pluck, also, was developed. Dread of pain, reluctance to meet danger in a boy was held to be effeminate, and would meet with contempt from his fellows. Striking were the young Nelson's words, "What's fear? I never saw fear; I don't know what it is," but it was the characteristic of all English boys. The lecturer then passed on to study the result of such education, as illustrated in the British government of India. An empire of 300 million people, that is one-sixth of the entire population of the world, is governed, not counting the army in the Punjab, by a number just below 1,000. One Englishman over 300 thousand. The speaker saw with his own eyes, during a great famine, at an interior station, the chief of the station lying sick in bed, his secretary just dead, and the whole onerous duties of administering the government of some million people performed by a young Englishman. How the boys keep up their fraternal feeling after leaving school was then told. Some instances of school or class mates occupying in the same period important positions in government or in the army were given. It was a feeling of patriotism for their schools that united them. Their successors in schools too rejoice over their successes and honours; and they mourn their deaths. No wonder an officer in a South African battle was heard crying, at his last moment, "Floreat Etona!" Some of the works of these students were mentioned. Notably philanthropic work in London is associated with public schools. No undertakings of the schools, however, are of lasting success, unless these rest upon religion, and the chapels are made the centre of life and interest in the schools. They are made to commemorate the past glories of the schools, hold up their dignity and consecrate their very existence. Finally, the lecturer turned to the students and told them they must not imitate in toto the English schools and boys, for they had demerits and defects. But he hoped they would in the characteristic spirit of "imitative originality" of the Japanese, develop something better. He prayed for a better understanding between the allied peoples,—an entente cordiale not of arms but of sympathy and intelligence. Japan and England, different in many respects, are so similar in history. The speaker seemed to discern something better coming in the condition of men. The wished-for consummation may yet come for intellectual, moral, and even in the end, spiritual fusion of the East and the West.

Baron Suematsu proposed a vote of thanks to the lecturer.

Professor K. Mitsukuri seconded and the vote was passed by acclamation.

Bishop Welldon acknowledged the compliment.

Mr. Suzuki, Secretary of the Privy Council, proposed a vote of thanks to the Chairman.

Sir Claude MacDonald seconded. The Bishop had mentioned that he had received part of his education at Uppingham. He was proud of that and he was proud also to add that he received at the hands of that great and good man, Mr. Thring, on a certain never-to-be-forgotten occasion corporal punishment. He had committed an act of the most deliberate and flagrant disobedience. He knew he was due for a certain lesson and yet he deliberately avoided it in order to see two of his friends punch each other's heads. He deserved the punishment and he had been good friends with the master afterwards.

Mr. Makino thanked the audience for the attention with which they had listened, and closed the meeting.

WASEDA ENGLISH SOCIETY.

The following programme was presented on Saturday at the entertainment organized by the Waseda English Society. The proceedings were characterized by all the heartiness which we have come to associate with everything done by Japanese students in this line:—

PART I.

MUSIC.

Opening Address ..... Dr. Hatoyama.
Japan since the Visit of Commodore Perry .....
(Original) ..... S. Yoshimi, (pol. 1.)
"Mrs. Hardcastle's Journey" (Dialogue, by Oliver Goldsmith) ..... Com. Prep.
Mr. Hastings ..... W. Tsuda.
Tony Hardcastle ..... S. Takashima.
Mr. Hardcastle ..... H. Minami.
Mrs. Hardcastle ..... K. Oshiba.
"Christianity from a Commercial Viewpoint" .....
(Original) ..... N. Ishibashi, (com. 1.)
"The Roman Father" (Dialogue, by Pyne), com. 1.
Brutus, a Roman Consul ..... Y. Oka.
Titus, his son ..... E. Asakawa.
Valerius, a Roman Officer ..... H. Kishi.

"The Bishop's Silver Candlesticks" (Dialogue, by Victor Hugo).....Com. Prep.
Bishop Bievenu .....T. Yamana.
Madame Magloire .....K. Hayakawa.
Jean Valjean .....Y. Sugiura.
A Corporal of Police .....S. Mizuno.
Police Constable .....K. Aoyama.

PART II.

MUSIC.

"The New First-class Power" (Original)
T. Takeichi .....(com. 11.)
"The Mock Doctor" (Dialogue, by Molière).....com. 1.
Gregory, a wood-cutter .....H. Shigeyama.
Dorcas, his wife .....T. Nakamura.
A Squire.....H. Hata.
James, a steward .....Y. Kimura.
Harry, a coachman.....R. Ban.
Jasper, a Lord .....K. Mishina.
Charlot, his dumb daughter .....M. Imanishi.
The Trial Scene from the "Merchant of Venice" .....com. 11.
Duke of Venice .....R. Mikoshiba.
Shylock .....S. Nakase.
Antonio .....T. Hayase.
Bassanio.....K. Yoshida.
Gratiano .....K. Kanatsu.
Portia .....S. Ijichi.
Nerissa .....T. Harada.
Solanio .....S. Maruyama.
Salarino .....G. Tachikawa.

CORRESPONDENCE.

A GLOBE-TROTTER'S SUGGESTIONS.

(TO THE EDITOR OF THE "JAPAN MAIL.")

SIR,—I have seen various references of late in the local papers to the importance of encouraging the globe trotter (with his purse) to visit and to stay in Japan. As I belong at present to that species, may I be allowed to air a few grievances and humbly to offer a few suggestions?

Of course I have the usual long list of complaints against the Tokaido Railway, the management of which seems to me to be, if possible, worse than when I was in this country before, some six years ago, but which I presume it is hopeless to criticise: although it seems obvious that the first necessity for the tourist should be comfortable and punctual trains in which to tour. I feel bound to add that the officials at various stations, in which we were in difficulties, were most courteous and obliging.

Complaint number two is the state of the roads in Kyoto. It is simply astonishing that there should be moderately good roads in nearly every other town while the seeing of sights and the buying of "curios" at Miyako is made a veritable penance by the discomfort of a jinrikisha jolting over such tracks.

Naturally, number three is the manure cart. Surely it is not impossible to restrict this traffic to the early hours, say before 9 a.m.?

Number four will perhaps appear odd, and yet I think it important. It is a long growl at the Japanese hotel as arranged for foreigners. Most of us Globe Trotters come here for a visit to a land of beauty: we lodge and feed comfortably enough, but we live in rooms which a third rate lodging house at home could not beat for sheer ugliness. Should any of your readers have visited Egypt, they will understand what I mean when I say that a hotel in Japan should bear the same relation to Japanese architecture and art as Mena House Hotel does to that of Cairo. Here is a suggestive fact: last winter we arrived as a party at Mena, intending to remain there a few days. We did not leave for nearly three months. There is a capital stable, laundry, dairy, etc., and everything else to match. The hotel is an almost faultless example of Arab art. If there should exist an association of hotel keepers in Japan, it would be well worth their while to send one of their most observant members to see and report upon the methods by which Mena is kept full throughout the season eight miles from a town crowded with hotels.

Now considering the national genius of the Japanese for beauty and cleanliness, it appears curious to the stranger that the ordinary furniture and accessories supplied for the use of foreigners in some of the larger and all the smaller inns should be usually of a sort, and in a condition in which those foreigners would be ashamed to offer to their servants.

I do not know whether there is a school of architecture and its allied arts in Japan, but if there is, it would give me pleasure to offer a small prize for the best design of an hotel building for the use of foreigners, which should be an extension and a modification, not a destruction, of native methods and native ideas. The design would include the re-modelling of all furniture, electric fittings and such like accessories, and the cost would in all probability be considerably less than that of the usual type of building.

It is also extremely likely that the turning of Japanese taste into this channel would lead to a new and profitable industry in the export to other countries of beautiful yet simple furniture for the household.

If this should happen to meet the eye of any teacher of architecture, who wishes to accept the above offer to his school, a post card to the address below will find me during the next four weeks.

Lastly, one small suggestion more. It would add enormously to the interest of a visit to such places as the wonderful Castles of Kyoto and Nagoya if the attendant officers and caretakers were instructed to wear the ancient costumes of the soldier and of the court. It would be a similar idea to that of keeping the "Beefeaters" of the Tower of London in their ancient garb, and the expense would be a mere trifle. Indeed, no one could possibly object to the payment of a fee for the privilege of admission to these places, and the expense would vanish.

Apologising for the length to which this letter has run. Yours truly,

ALEC WILSON,
(Member of Japan Society, London).
Hotel Metropole, Tokyo.

Tokyo, April 16, 1906.

PRESIDENT STARR JORDAN ON JAPAN.

(TO THE EDITOR OF THE "JAPAN MAIL.")

SIR,—When you skin a man alive you do it well, as you do everything, and there is not much left of Professor Jordan after your editorial of the 11th. But let us at least save some of the pieces of the carcass. Even the Devil is not as black as he is painted. Oui ni mo namida aru.

With your kind indulgence I would like to say that my acquaintance with the genial Doctor dates from a certain evening when I sat in the chancel of Trinity Church, San Francisco, by special invitation of the Rector, and listened to two gentlemen address an assembly of 1500 men (mostly) who could not be restrained from loud applause even in the sacred edifice. What the President of the Leland Stanford Jr. University said was all very good ethically, but it might have been said by a Turk, Brahmin or Buddhist as well. There was not one jot or tittle of Christianity per se in it. The President of the other University, being a Baptist, was more pronounced. When it was all over and I bade these heads of the great educational institutions on the Pacific Coast goodbye at the church door, I said to them:—"I belong to Japan and if I can get in a graft on either one or both of you for the benefit of the Japanese I am going to do it." They both responded most cordially that I was welcome to try. I have tried on one and succeeded. My private secretary is now in Stanford. I will venture the assertion that with the possible exception of Professor Benjamin Ide Wheeler, of Berkeley, Cal. State University, there is no man on the whole Pacific Coast who is now doing more for the education of Japanese youth than Professor David Starr Jordan, the President of Stanford. I do not dispute one word of what you say. I would not dare to even if you were wrong. But in fear and trembling I venture to ask you to look again at what the Doctor writes about the matter of Japanese agriculture. The Mayor of Sendai, the venerable Mr. Hayakawa, is the most progressive agriculturist that I have met in now nearly two decades of residence. He uses American agricultural machinery, and methods borrowed from other lands as well. If there were more men like him we would have no famines. With improved methods learned in our country and in Europe it is quite possible for the North East to feed four, yes ten, times its present population. If you print this and give me more space, I should like to preach a little more on this subject, for I am quite sure that it will save the people from starvation in the future. You ought to give the Doctor a chance to prove his statements about education and fishing, also both apostolic subjects.

Yours, etc.

H. S. JEFFERYS.

ENGLISH VERSUS JAPANESE MORAL EDUCATION.

(TO THE EDITOR OF THE "JAPAN MAIL.")

SIR,—When Canon Welldon delivered his excellent lecture on "the training of gentlemen in the English public schools and universities" at the Tokyo Higher Commercial School on the twelfth inst., this right Reverend Doctor dwelt upon the idea of gentlemen as the ideal character most charming to the boys and young men of his country and he pointed out with much impression how this root idea of English moral education works out itself into commendable features of the strong character of his countrymen. His lecture, which lasted for more than an hour, uninterpreted, was eagerly listened to by the whole audience overcrowding the great hall and was quite suggestive to those who are engaged in school work, as his theme referred mainly to the education of young men from 13 to 18 years old, corresponding exactly to that of our middle school boys. The present writer who has never been abroad, is in no position to give any criticism upon the Doctor's lecture, nor is it necessary to try that after the candid lecturer replied to the remarks of Baron Suyematsu about what the latter saw personally in England and said that he spoke then only of the best parts of English education. However it may be, no one can deny the fact that our ally, the English nation, is composed of individuals who are brought up as gentlemen and who always strive themselves to attain that personality and that her national strength lies in the strong sense of honour and duty of the majority of her people. He told us that the term gentleman has an immense charm for English boys and young men. They try themselves to become fine gentlemen before they think of their future work or livelihood. By the teachers and educators they are not only treated, but also trusted, as gentlemen, nothing being done to nor expected from them which is below their sense of honor and duty as gentlemen. Even in cases of misdoing they are punished only on their own confession of their misconduct. Much is left to their own conscience which is always fostered and strengthened by the healthful tone of the common opinion among themselves.

What a different sight from what we perceive generally in our schools! If such an education be right, the state of ours is more like that of things in a prison or in the hospital at best. If our painstaking and always troublesome way of school management be a proper one, then the English school described by the Canon is a place not adapted to bring up men, but intended only to please them. However admirable one may consider the English way of education, it is of course foolish enough to try to import these things from outside. They must be of internal growth and never be of external annexation. Nor do we deem the ideal of gentleman as the only standard possible of recommendation on earth. Every nation has to set up before her young men her own ideal, indigenous to her history. But the one thing we must discuss is the need of a standard personality of some kind or other as the central and consummate figure to be put before young men in their moral culture. Desirable virtues analyzed and arranged in a scholarly form will be of some consideration in ethics; yet there is no vital power to unfold one's character in such a system. Any ethical system must have a personality in or behind it to have a lasting influence upon one's character. Piles of golden rules and heaps of proverbial sayings have no force to reach the inmost heart of men and what does not reach these has no part in the formation of one's character, in whatever elaborate style they are patched together and under whatever authoritative name they are presented. They may be mechanically recited by the students' class and they might be pedantically expounded by the moral talkers. Yet all they can do is formal and not spiritual, simply because there is no personality in them. Perhaps our young men of to-day know their moral lessons much more and better than those of olden times. But that is no surety for their superiority in moral character; on the contrary we hear often of the complaints raised about their more glaring misconduct, which are quite well-grounded in some cases. Bushido has been talked of so much recently as the soul of the Japanese morals. But the secret of its vital power which was really so inspirational that we cannot but admire it even after so long a period is in the personality of Bushi representing the highest culture of the age and not in the idea of loyalty and gallantry dissected from it. Chinese culture transplanted in the Japanese soil produced many noble and strong characters in the Tokugawa period and this was not the effect of its cardinal virtues in their separate action upon the scholars. Kunshi was the name of a personality embodying all these virtues into one living form. The scholars of the age conceived in their heart each an ideal personality of that name and spent strenuous efforts in attaining that standard character. Success of the moral culture in both the past age of our chivalry and that of our scholasticism thus proves for the place of a personality as an indispensable agent in character building and what does this point to in regard to the ethical instruction of the present age of materialism and science worship with no, or very vague, conception of a personality as the basis of the system?

It is needless to say that such a personality must be the common standard equally binding and charming for both the educators and the educated. In this respect the teachers' past must correspond exactly with the student's past. No one would become enthusiastic over what we ourselves are not earnest at. The second person plural, you, must be dispensed with and the first person, we, needs to be taken up instead in moral instruction. "As the students' part" is the favourite expression used by teachers in reproving or exhorting young men; but that very position hinders both parties from conceiving the same earnestness towards a high ideal. Without such a common sentiment any moral instruction is of no effect. Only when the common opinion among the teachers and the taught is pervaded with the earnest spirit for the standard personality and when the school life and its management are always moulded by its benign influences, the much-desired character of young men will be attained so far.

It is beyond the scope of the present letter to discuss what kind of a personality ought to be set up for our boys and young men; this next topic I leave to you and other scholars more fit to take up such subjects. I am, Sir, very truly yours,

B. URAGUCHI.

Koishikawa, Tokyo, April 17, 1906.

CUSTOMS TARIFF.

(CONCLUDED FROM NEXT ISSUE.)

GROUP XVIII.

CARS, CARRIAGES, WAGONS, SCIENTIFIC IMPLEMENTS, CLOCKS, WATCHES AND MACHINERY.

	Revised.	Former.
	Ad val. Duty.	Ad val. Duty.
	%	%
419—Locomotives and coal and water tenders.....	20	10
420—Locomotive engines and coal and water tenders, parts thereof.
1. Wheels and axles ... 100 kin	4.70	10
2. Tyres.....	1.54	10
3. Others.....	20	10
421—Railway passenger carriages and freight vans...	20	10
422—Railway passenger carriages and freight vans, parts thereof.
1. Wheels and axles ... 100 kin	1.51	10
2. Tyres .....	1.32	10
3. Buffers.....	2.33	10
4. Springs .....	2.00	10
5. Others.....	20	10
423—Horse tramway and electric railway cars, and other tramway cars and parts thereof.....	20	10
424—Carriages, automobiles, and parts thereof.....	50	10
425—Bicycles and Tricycles.....	40	25
426—Parts of Bicycles and Tricycles.
1. Tyres.....100 kin	95.60	25
2. Others.....	40	25
427—Drays and Carts.....	20	10
428—Dredgers and parts thereof.....	15	5
429—Steamship, sailing vessels, boats.....	10	5
430—Philosophical, chemical, medical or surgical, drawing, surveying, and other scientific instruments ...	20	10
431—Eyeglasses.....	40	10
432—Microscopes and parts thereof.....	20	10
433—Binocular glasses.....	40	20
434—Telescopes.....	20	10
435—Compasses and chronometers (mariners') and parts thereof.....	10	10
436—Clocks, standing and hanging.....	40	20
437—Clocks, standing and hanging, parts thereof.
1. Movements...100 kin	40.10	20
2. Springs.....	2.15	20
3. Hair springs.....	10	20
4. Others.....	30	20
438—Watches.
1. Gold or platinum ...	50	30
2. Others.....	40	25
439—Watches, parts of.
1. Cases.
a. Gold or platinum...	50	15
b. Others.....	40	15
2. Springs.....100 pcs.	1.10	15
3. Hair springs .....	0.80	15
4. Dial plates .....	4.10	15
5. Others.....	40	15
440—Balances, measuring scales and tapes.....	20	10
441—Thermometers and barometers.....	20	10
442—Hydrometers, gas-meters, pressure-gauges, ampere-meters, volt-meters, and other similar meters.....	20	10

443—Musical instruments and parts thereof and their accessories.....	40	15
444—Magic Lanterns and parts thereof.....	50	10
445—Photographic apparatus and parts thereof.....	50	15
446—Photographs and parts thereof.....	50	25
447—Sewing machines.
1. Worked by hand ... 100 kin	11.10	10
2. Worked by foot .....	8.25	10
448—Parts of sewing machines.....	20	10
449—Diving dresses and parts thereof.....	20	10
450—Typewriters.....	20	10
451—Telegraph and telephone apparatus and parts thereof.....	20	10
452—Boilers.....	15	10
453—Steam, gas, kerosene oil engines, dynamos and all other motive power engines and parts thereof.....	15	10
454—Metal-working implements, wood-working implements, and parts thereof.....	15	10
455—Spinning and weaving machines and parts thereof.....	15	10
456—Other machinery and parts thereof.....	15	10
GROUP XIX.
MISCELLANEOUS ARTICLES.
457—Copra.....	free	free
458—Funori.....	free	0.286
459—Sekikasai.....	free	0.590
460—Bark for tanning..... 100 kin	0.42	...
461—Rattan.
1. Split.....	1.32	0.482
2. Others.....	0.94	0.482
462—Bamboo.....	20	...
463—Cork.
1. Bark.....100 kin	1.66	0.990
2. Corks.....	8.92	...
3. Others.....	10	6.530
464—Timber and Lumber.
1. Rosewood, tagasan (a grained hard wood) boxwood, redwood, red sandal wood and ebony ... 100 kin	0.63	...
2. Lignum vitae .....	...	...
3. Teak ...100 cubic ft.	11.80	...
4. Oregon pine, fir and cedar.
a. Board and plank ... 100 sq. ft. (1 in. thick)...	0.60	...
b. Round timber and square timber..... 100 cubic ft.	4.56	...
5. Kiri (Paulownia)..... 100 kin	0.52	...
6. Others.....	15	...
465—Firewood.....100 kin	0.05	...
466—Charcoal.....	15	5
467—Bone charcoal...100 kin	0.79	...
468—Carbon rods for electric light.....100 kin	6.86	...
469—Pulp for paper manufacture.....100 kin	0.25	0.342
470—Sparterie.....	20	10
471—Straw braid.
1. Not exceeding 1/4 inch in width.....100 kin	20.30	...
2. Not exceeding 3/4 inch in width.....100 kin	7.76	...
3. Others.....	3.35	...
472—Felt hat body... ..	19.70	...
473—Hat leather (imitation leather included) 100 kin	30.50	15
474—Matting.
1. Packing mats.....	free	...
2. China mats.....	30	...
3. Cocobark matting 10 sq. yds.	1.61	...
4. Others.....	30	...
475—Oakum.....100 kin	0.66	0.749
476—Tarred felt, tarred paper, malthead, and other similar materials for roofing and ship's bottoms.
1. Tarred felt...100 kin	2.10	10
2. Others.....	20	10
477—Yeast.....	15	...
478—Malt.....100 kin	2.00	0.581
479—Fodder.
1. Hay .....	0.16	0.126
2. Others.....	5	...

480—Fishing gut.....100 kin	108.00	32.075
481—Sealing wax.....	20	15
482—Putty.....100 kin	0.97	0.291
483—Roller composition .....	9.19	...
484—Caoutchouc.
1. Crude.....	free	5.885
2. Sheet.
a. Soft.
i. Not exceeding one millimetre in thickness.....100 kin	87.80	17.905
m. Others.....	35.90	17.905
b. Hard .....	37.80	17.905
3. Rod .....	31.60	17.905
4. Piping.
a. Soft .....	84.20	20
b. Hard .....	63.20	20
5. Others.....	20	20
485—Gutta percha.
1. Crude.....	free	5.855
2. Sheet.....100 kin	39.40	7.905
3. Others.....	20	...
486—Manufactures of Caoutchouc and gutta percha, (not otherwise provided for).
1. Comb .....	161.00	22
2. Teeth .....	171.00	20
3. Others.....	60	25
487—Dental rubber.....	60	20
488—India rubber in liquid... (with vessel).....100 kin	18.00	...
489—Waste and old caoutchouc (only fit for re-manufacturing).....	free	...
490—Hard fibre (rod, sheet, pipe or tube, etc.) 100 kin	10.90	...
491—Celluloid (tape, rod, sheet, pipe)...	25.60	...
492—Manufactures of Celluloid (not otherwise provided for).
1. Combs.....	67.50	20
2. Others.....	40	20
493—Brushes and brooms ...	40	20
494—Emery cloth.....100 kin	2.67	5
495—Sand paper.....	1.86	5
496—Emery grindstone wheels .....	6.16	5
497—Crucibles.....	20	10
498—Portland cement .....	0.33	0.102
499—Asbestos, in sheet .....	2.05	1.268
500—Packing for steam engines.....	7.50	5.835
501—Belling and hose for machinery.
1. Leather.....100 kin	25.30	10
2. India rubber. ....	12.50	10
3. Canvas .....	13.50	10
4. Others.....	15	10
502—Saddles, bridles and harness.....	40	25
503—Trunks, portmanteaux, and travelling or courier bags.....	40	20
504—Leather and hide, manufactures of (not otherwise provided for).....	40	20
505—Picture frames and moulding.....	50	20
506—Wooden manufacture (not otherwise provided for).....	40	...
507—Bamboo, rush, rattan manufactures (not otherwise provided for).....	40	...
508—Lamps, lanterns and parts thereof.
1. Incandescent electric lamps.
a. Not exceeding 32 candle-power 100 pc. ....	5.80	20
b. Others.....	10.20	20
2. Asbestos mantels .....	5.10	20
3. Others.....	30	20
509—Canes, sticks, whips, umbrella handles.
1. Ornamented with gold or silver, or of plated metals.....	50	20
2. Others.....	40	20
510—Umbrellas, or parasols.
1. Of silk, wholly or in part.....	50	25
2. Others.....	40	20
511—Handles of umbrellas, canes, sticks and whips.
1. Of gold and silver, or gold and silver plated .....	50	20
2. Others.....	40	20

512—Films for photographs.
1. Undeveloped .....	40	...	20
2. Others .....	40	...	...
513—Artificial flowers.....	50	...	25
514—Figures of men and animals (excepting those of gold) .....	50	...	...
515—Ivory manufactures not otherwise provided for...	50	...	20
516—Tortoiseshell manufactures (not otherwise provided for) .....	50	...	25
517—Coral work (not otherwise provided for).....	50	...	30
518—Imitation precious stones and pearls .....	50	...	35
519—Toilet or dressing cases	50	...	25
520—Toilet or perfumed water, oil, dentifrices and all other cosmetics and perfumery .....	60	...	30
521—Soaps.
1. Toilet.....100 kin	...	24 70	20
2. Laundry purpose.
a. Marseilles...100 kin	...	3 92	1 25 6
b. Others .....	...	3 54	1 25 6
3. Others .....	30	...	10
522—Articles for use in billiards, tennis, cricket, chess, and all other games, and their accessories ..	50	...	30
523—Gymnastic implements	30	...	...
524—Toys .....	50	...	25
525—Manufactured tobacco	250	...	150
526—Incense sticks .....
100 kin (with packing)	...	4 15	...
527—Matches .....	40	...	20
528—Fireworks .....	100 kin	...	6 41 30
529—Explosives.
1. Gunpowder (smokeless powder excepted)
100 kin	...	6 30	4 94 4
2. Dynamite ..	...	5 90	15
3. Detonators ..	...	30 30	15
4. Fuses .....	100 kin	...	22 80 15
5. Others .....	25	...	15
530—Cartridge cases, bullets and shells .....	40	...	25
531—Sporting guns .....	40	...	25
532—Cannon, muskets, revolvers, side-arms, swords and other arms .....	40	...	25
533—Models and specimens.	free	...	free
534—Signboards .....	free	...	free
535—Manures (brans, bean-cake, dried fish unfit for food, bone powder, blood powder, bone ash, guano, calcium super-phosphate)	free	...	free
536—Raw materials not otherwise provided for .....	10	...	10
537—Semi-manufactured articles not otherwise provided for .....	20	...	20
538—Manufactured articles not otherwise provided for.
1. Rough .....	30	...	20
2. Fine .....	40	...	20

TELEGRAMS.

(REUTER'S SPECIAL SERVICE)

THE ITALIAN DISASTER.

London, April 13.

The King and Queen of Italy were welcomed with delirious enthusiasm on returning to Naples. The inhabitants there were in a state of panic; and wailing crowds were marching in religious procession through the streets all day. The general use of masks, goggles and dust-coats (to guard against the showers of cinders) makes Naples seem like a city full of motorists. The rain of ashes and sand diminished last night.

FRANCE AND MOROCCO.

London, April 14.

M. Bourgeois, new Minister for Foreign Affairs, has made a statement in the French Chamber of Deputies, commending the Algeiras settlement as a satisfactory one, which could only be secured by fair, mutual concessions. French interests and dignity were in no wise impaired, and France's special interests in Morocco were fully recognised.

ENGLAND AND THE JAPANESE FAMINE.

The Lord Mayor of London has handed to the Japanese Embassy a further instalment of £2,000 towards the Japanese Famine Fund.

VESUVIUS.

There is a general improvement of the situation with regard to Mount Vesuvius. It is believed the eruption has spent its force. The rain of ashes continues, though greatly reduced in volume.

THE NAPLES ERUPTION FINISHED.

Later.

At Naples the rain of ashes has completely ceased. The sky is clear and the sun is bright. Vesuvius is visible. The public are regaining confidence and resuming their normal avocations.

THE POSTMEN'S STRIKE IN FRANCE.

There is another widespread strike of the postmen in France. The Paris Government has superseded 300 of the strikers.

RUSSIA AND THE HAGUE CONFERENCE.

Russia is willing to postpone the Hague Conference.

ROOSEVELT AND THE KAISER.

At Washington the German Ambassador presented 50 German veterans to President Roosevelt, who in his speech said that no strain imparted better qualities to the American people than that of the Germans. It must be the primary object of statesmanship to knit the two nations closely. He congratulated the Kaiser on the work accomplished at Algeiras.

THE SPEECH OF M. BOURGEOIS.

M. Bourgeois, in his speech in the Chamber of Deputies, paid a tribute to the unwavering support of France's steadfast ally, Russia, and of France's loyal friend, Great Britain.

A HEAT WAVE.

Extraordinary heat prevails in Great Britain.

THE KAISER'S TELEGRAM TO VIENNA.

London, April 15.

A sensation has been caused in Vienna by the publication of a telegram from Kaiser Wilhelm to Count Goluchowski, thanking Austria for the unwavering support she accorded Germany at the Algeiras Conference, "which," the telegram continued, "was a splendid deed of a loyal ally and in which you have shown yourself a brilliant second upon the duelling ground. You may rely on my rendering a like service on a like occasion."

NEW RUSSIAN LOAN.

The Russian five per cent. loan was signed in Paris. The price is 88 and it is stated that France's share is forty-six millions sterling. The German refusal to participate in the loan has caused soreness in Russia.

AMERICAN NAVAL DISASTER.

London, April 16.

An explosion has occurred on board the American warship Kearsage during gun practice. A Lieutenant and five men were killed and many injured.

AMERICA'S COLOSSAL FORTUNES.

President Roosevelt, in a speech, said that it would be ultimately necessary to consider the adoption of a progressive tax on the transfer of unhealthily swollen fortunes in order to prevent any individual from inheriting unearned wealth beyond a certain amount.

JABEZ BALFOUR.

Jabez Balfour, the ex-M.P., has been released from prison.

THE UNITED STATES AND THE BANKERS.

For the purpose of encouraging the import of gold into the United States the Secretary of the Treasury has arranged to lend money to the banks during the transit of gold from Europe.

THE KAISER'S TELEGRAM.

London, April 17.

The German press is inclined to deplore the Kaiser's telegram to Count Goluchowski, the Austrian Foreign Minister, which is everywhere regarded as an indirect reprimand to Italy for her attitude in the Algeiras Conference, just as the boycotting of the Russian loan by Germany demonstrated Germany's displeasure with Russia's attitude.

ANXIOUS MILLIONAIRES.

President Roosevelt's speech has caused an unequalled sensation in America. The passage in which he alludes to "unhealthily swollen fortunes" is described as "advanced Socialism," and it is anticipated that this will overshadow economic questions already pending.

GERMAN OPINION.

Later.

The Frankfurter Zeitung says that the Kaiser's telegram is a clear indication that the Triple Alliance cut a poor figure at the Algeiras conference; perhaps it had already gone to pieces.

INTERNATIONAL SYMPATHY.

The German Ambassador at Rome has tendered official condolences with reference to the Vesuvius disaster.

THE NEW RUSSIAN LOAN.

London, April 18.

It is expected that the Russian loan will be issued next week. The bulk of the proceeds will probably be allowed to remain at the various monetary centres concerned; hence it is not likely there will be much withdrawal of gold.

The French holders of the 1904 issue of bonds are to be given preference in the allotment.

ENGLISH EDUCATION BILL.

The Bishop of London has published a letter condemning the Government's new Education Bill. He announces the summoning of a mass meeting to be held in the Albert Hall on the 11th May, the first of a series of meetings.

THE TIES OF KINDRED.

Later.

The Zulu Chiefs Sigheanda and Nambi, in the vicinity of the Ukhandha forest, have refused to cooperate in the movement against Bambaate.

Reinforcements of militia are being despatched from Remopenlsing. The situation is quieting.

THE RUSSIAN LOAN.

It is officially announced that the Russian loan is for 89½ millions sterling, bears 5 per cent. interest and the issue price is 89. Twenty millions will be issued in Russia; 48 millions in France; 13 in Great Britain, and the rest in Austria and Holland.

JAPANESE OFFICERS FEASTED IN LIVERPOOL.

London, April 19.

The officers of the Japanese battleship Katori were given a banquet by the Lord Mayor of Liverpool.

THE U.S. AND CHINA.

President Roosevelt and the Dowager Empress of China exchanged greetings on the occasion of the completion of the "All-American" cable to Shanghai (via Hawaii, Guam and the Philippines).

THE NATAL RISING.

The Natal Government is advertising for volunteers to form a "Special Service Corps," for active service in Zululand, at five shillings per day.

Later.

The mobilization of the whole of the Militia in Natal, apart from the Transvaal Irregulars, is regarded as inevitable.

AMERICAN DIVORCES.

The Supreme Court at Washington has decided that a resident of one State cannot procure divorce from a resident of another State. This invalidates thousands of remarriages, including those of prominent people in America and elsewhere.

INSURANCE SCANDALS.

President Roosevelt in a Message to Congress urges the necessity of special legislation to provide against the recurrence of insurance scandals.

(BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT WITH THE "ASAHI SHIMBUN.")

THE ALGERIRAS DUEL.

Vienna, April 14.

The German Emperor has telegraphed to Count Goluchowski, Austro-Hungarian Minister for Foreign Affairs, declaring that the latter was a brilliant second to the German representative on the duelling ground at Algieras. The Austrians are offended at the imputation of Austria's secondary position.

THE KAISER'S TELEGRAM.

London, April 16.

Diplomatists in Paris believe that the Kaiser's telegram was intended to make mischief in Austria and Italy. It is considered to be a failure.

PUBLIC OPINION IN GERMANY.

London, April 17.

At Berlin the general feeling is that the foreign and domestic general political situation is unsatisfactory; that international relations are assuming entirely new aspects and that the nation shows serious lack of interest and energy in home affairs.

MANCHURIA.

London, April 18.

The Times expresses confidence that Japan will do her utmost to secure the fulfilment of China's pledge to open Manchuria. The question is, will Japan's firmness and patience overcome the resistance of classes interested in maintaining the old abuses.

(FROM THE "HOCHI SHIMBUN.")

EARTHQUAKE IN SAN FRANCISCO.

San Francisco, April 19.

A terrible shock of earthquake has visited San Francisco. The city is burning. The municipal offices and other public buildings all collapsed. The destruction of the city by fire is expected. Three hundred persons have been killed. The damage is so far estimated at over one hundred million dollars.

THE UNION INSURANCE SOCIETY OF CANTON.

The report presented at the thirty-third yearly meeting of the Union Insurance Society of Canton on April 28th showed as follows:—

The Board has now to lay before the Shareholders a balance sheet containing a summary of the property and liabilities of the Society on the 31st December, 1905, and a statement of the 1905 Working Account to the same date. It has been found inconvenient to continue the system hitherto adopted of closing the Working Account on the 30th June of the following year, and it is proposed now to close the 1905 Working Account until the 31st December, 1906. It is also proposed to hold in future the annual meetings in April of each year instead of in October, 1905. Account.—The balance at credit of Working Account on the 31st December, 1905, was $2,792,271.71 as per annexed statement.

The Board recommends that an interim dividend of $30.00 per share be paid to shareholders out of interest, absorbing $300,000.00, and that a bonus of 20 per cent. be paid to contributors absorbing about $275,000.00 and that the remainder be carried forward to be dealt with in April, 1907.

New issue of Shares.—Since the 31st December, 1905, the Society has obtained power to increase its capital by the creation of 2,400 additional shares, to be issued, so far as shall be necessary for the purpose, to the Shareholders of the China Traders' Insurance Company, Limited, in exchange for their shares in that Company. Nearly 2,000 of these new shares have already been issued and will rank pari passu with the old shares for the interim dividend recommended above. The dividend thus paid on these new shares will be charged as part of the purchase price of the China Traders' shares taken in exchange for them, and not against the profits of the year 1905. Similarly any dividend which may be received from the China Traders' Insurance Company in respect of the year 1905 on the shares purchased by the Society will be credited against the purchase price of the shares.

BALANCE SHEET.

On the 31st December, 1905.

Dr.
To Capital 10,000 Shares of $250 each—$2,500,000 upon which $100 per Share called and paid up $1,000,000.00
„ Reserve Fund,—
Silver .....	$2,000,000.00
Sterling ...£40,000=	389,847.72
	2,389,847.72
„ Unclaimed Bonus and Dividend ...	27,799.36
„ Exchange Fluctuation Account ...	299,977.84
„ Investment Fluctuation Account ...	31,153.29
„ Working Account 1905, Balance ...	2,792,271.70
„ Reinsurance Fund ...£118,389.55	1,153,844.66
„ Underwriting Suspense, Account ...	£58,410.94
„ Sundry Creditors .....	569,279.66
„ Bills Payable .....	318,133.20
	15,517.65
	$8,597,825.01

Cr.

By Cash on Current Account at Hongkong .....	$ 58,022.29
„ Cash on Deposit with Banks in Hongkong, Shanghai & Singapore ..	521,787.72
„ Amount invested in Mortgages, Debentures and other Securities in Hongkong, Shanghai and Singapore .....	2,940,613.82
„ Amount invested in London, viz:—
Deposited in Banks...£103,000.00
Other investments... 289,684.10.1
	£392,684.10.1
„ Amount invested in Melbourne, viz:—
Deposited in Banks...£ 2,000.00
Other investments... 16,421.3.0
	£ 18,421.3.0
„ Amount invested in Yokohama ...	179,536.08
„ Amount at debit of Branches and Agencies .....	109,547.21
„ Sundry Debtors .....	769,151.74
„ Furniture and Office Leases.....	161,817.77
	30,169.53
	$8,597,825.08

WORKING ACCOUNT, 1905.

On 31st December, 1905.

Cr.

To Net Premium from 1st January to 31st December, 1905 .....	$ 4,784,834.08
„ Interest.....	368,485.39
„ Exchange .....	11,000.92
	5,164,320.39

Dr.

By Agency Commissions.....	$ 108,952.99
„ Head Office, Branches and Agency Charges .....	426,051.80
„ Remuneration for year ending 31st December 1905, to Directors, Committees and Auditors .....	27,347.97
„ Losses and Claims paid.....	1,809,695.92
„ Balance .....	2,792,271.71
	5,164,320.39
Sterling Exchange taken at 2s. 0½d.

MAIL STEAMERS.

NEXT MAIL IS DUE

From	Line	Steamer	Date.
Europe .....	N. L. D.	Sachsen 1	Sa. April 21
Vancouver....	C. P. R.	Em. of Japan 2	M. April 23
Vancouver....	C. P. R.	Tartar 3	Tu. April 24
America.....	P. M.	Siberia	Tu. April 24
Europe .....	M. M.	Polynesien 4	W. April 25
Tacoma.....	B. T.	Tremont 5	Th. April 26
Hongkong....	C. P. R.	Em. of India	Th. April 26
Hongkong....	P. M.	Manchuria 6	Th. April 26
America.....	T. K. K.	America Maru 7	Tu. May 1
Hongkong....	T. Y. K.	H'kong Maru	Th. May 3
Hongkong....	G. N.	Dakota	Su. May 6
Hongkong....	B. T.	Shawmut	Th. May 10

- 1 Left Nagasaki on the 18th inst.
- 2 Left Vancouver on the 9th inst.
- 3 Left Vancouver on the 6th inst.
- 4 Left Hongkong on the 17th inst.
- 5 Left Seattle on the 10th inst.
- 6 Left Hongkong on the 17th inst.
- 7 Left San Francisco on the 13th inst.

NEXT MAIL LEAVES

For	Line	Steamer	Date.
Europe .....	M. M.	Ernest Simons	Sa. April 21
America.....	O. & O.	Doric	Sa. April 21
Vancouver....	C. P. R.	Athenian	Sa. April 21
Portland.....	P. & A.	Numantia	Su. April 22
Hongkong....	C. P. R.	Em. of Japan	M. April 23
Europe .....	P. & O.	Manila	Tu. April 24
Hongkong....	C. P. R.	Tartar	Tu. April 24
Hongkong....	P. M.	Siberia	Th. April 25
Shanghai ...	N. Y. K.	Hakuai Maru	Th. April 26
Hongkong....	B. T.	Tremont	Th. April 26
Vancouver....	C. P. R.	Em. of Japan	F. April 27
Europe .....	N. D. L.	Sachsen	Sa. April 28
America.....	P. M.	Manchuria	Sa. April 28
Europe .....	N. Y. K.	Awa Maru	W. May 2
Hongkong....	T. K. K.	America Maru	Th. May 3
America.....	T. K. K.	H'kong Maru	Sa. May 5
Australia ...	N. Y. K.	Yawata Maru	Sa. May 5
Seattle .....	G. N.	Dakota	Tu. May 8
Seattle .....	N. Y. K.	Kaga Maru	W. May 9
Tacoma .....	B. T.	Shawmut	F. May 11
Hongkong....	P. & A.	Aragonia	Th. May 17

LATEST SHIPPING.

ARRIVALS.

Sanuki Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,793, D. Ohno 13th April.—Ujina, Ballast.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Urmston Grange, British cable steamer, 2,213, W. Kestlake, 13th April.—Guam via Bonin Islands.—Mitsui Bussan Kaisha.

Kokura Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,591, Y. Yamanouchi, 13th April.—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Kosai Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,419, K. Homma, 13th April.—Shanghai via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Lyra, American steamer, 3,516, G. V. Williams, 14th April.—Hongkong via ports, and Kobe, 12th April, Mails and General.—Dodwell & Co., Ltd.

Kilburn, British steamer, 2,111, E. Le Templier, 14th April.—Saigon via Hongkong, Rice.—Samueli Samuel & Co.

Filippo Artelli, Austrian steamer, 3,832, — 14th April.—Trieste via ports, Shanghai 10th April, Mails and General.—Heller Bros.

Yechigo Maru, Japanese steamer, 712, A. Yamashita, 14th April.—Yokkaichi, 13th April General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Matsuyama Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,959, Y. Kishi, 14th April.—Otaru via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Needles, British steamer, 2,906, J. P. Turner, 15th April.—Yokosuka, Ballast.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Shinano Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,835, M. J. Curran, 15th April.—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Taihoku Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,733, 15th April, —Takao, General.—Yamagata-ya.

Ismaila, British steamer, 3,381, A. E. Stebbing, 15th April.—Rangoon via Hongkong, Rice.—Samueli Samuel & Co.

Banhs, British steamer, 2,662, A. W. Wooster, 16th April.—London via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Tairen Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,796, A. Christensen, 16th April.—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Karasaki, Japanese cruiser, 5,627, 16th April.—Yokosuka.

Pvona, British steamer, 4,878, C. R. Longden, 16th April.—London via ports, Mails and General.—P. & O. S.N. Co.

Ohio, U.S. battleship, 12,440, Capt. Leavitt C. Logan, 17th April.—Shanghai via Kobe, 16th April.

Wisconsin, U.S. battleship, 11,525, Captain Franklin Drake, 17th April.—Shanghai via Kobe, 16th April.

Concord, U.S. gunboat, 1,710, Com. C. J. Boush, 17th April.—Shanghai via Kobe, 16th April.

Inaba Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,839, W. Bainbridge, 18th April.—Otaru via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Coptic, British steamer, 2,744, Wm. Finch, 18th April.—San Francisco via Honolulu, 31st March, Mails and General.—O. & O. S.S. Co.

Prinz Sigismund, German steamer, 1,844, D. Lenz, 18th April.—Sydney via ports and Hongkong, Mails and General.—H. Ahrens & Co., Nachf.

Santhia, British steamer, 3,353, R. Phillips, 18th April.—Rangoon via Hongkong, Rice.—Samuel Samuel & Co.

Taiyuan, British steamer, 1,459, L. Dawson, 18th April.—Sydney via ports and Hongkong, Mails and General.—Butterfield & Swire.

Tategami Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,673, K. Sudzuki, 18th April.—Yokkaichi, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Arayo, British steamer, 2,307, Clough, 18th April.—Kobe, Ballast.—Mitsui Bussan Kaisha.

Tyr, Norwegian steamer, 1,417, D. Nielsen, 18th April.—Rangoon, Rice.—Samuel Samuel & Co.

Lowther Castle, British steamer, 2,961, W. Lightoller, 19th April.—New York via ports, and Manila, 11th April, General.—Cornes & Co.

Tenshin Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,580, W. Hunter, 19th April.—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Manila, British steamer, 2,711, A. W. Anderson, 19th April.—London via ports, Mails and General.—P. & O. S.N. Co.

Yamaguchi Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,038, Irizawa, 19th April.—Otaru via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Doric, British steamer, 2,936, Harry Smith, 19th April.—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—P. & O. S.S. Co.

DEPARTURES.

Louqsor, French steamer, 4,444, Casanova, 13th April.—Marseilles, Havre and Antwerp via ports, General.—M. M. S.S. Co.

Mike Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,060, I. Shimizu, 13th April.—Otaru via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Machao, British steamer, 4,277, G. W. Long, 13th April.—Genoa, Marseilles and Liverpool via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.

Segovia, German steamer, 3,796, Schoenfeldt, 13th April.—Havre and Hamburg via ports, General.—C. Illies & Co.

Empire, British steamer, 2,843, P. T. Helms, 14th April.—Australia and New Zealand via ports, Mails and General.—Cornes & Co.

Prinz Eitel Friedrich, German steamer, 5,001, E. Malchow, 14th April.—Bremen and Hamburg via ports, Mails & General.—H. Ahrens & Co., Nachf.

Nippon Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,437, W. W. Greene, 14th April.—San Francisco via Honolulu, Mails and General.—Toyo Kisen Kaisha.

Lyra, American steamer, 3,516, G. V. Williams, 14th April.—Tacoma, Wash., via Victoria, B.C., Mails and General.—Dodwell & Co., Ltd.

Bengali, British steamer, 3,619, P. Gibson, 14th April.—Vladivostok, Ballast.—Dodwell & Co., Ltd.

Fushiki Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,110, A. Keith, 14th April.—Shanghai via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Tategami Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,673, K. Suzuki, 14th April.—Yokkaichi via Handa, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Seefahrer, German bark, 3,073, E. Rohdies, 15th April.—Vancouver, B.C., Ballast.—Standard Oil Co.

Kokura Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,591, R. Yamanoichi, 15th April.—Otaru via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Neddes, British steamer, 2,906, J. P. Turner, 16th April.—Royal Roads, B.C., Ballast.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Yechigo Maru, Japanese steamer, 712, A. Yamashita, 16th April.—Yokkaichi, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Matsuyama Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,959, Y. Kishi, 16th April.—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Calabria (26), Italian cruiser, 3,800, Captain F. Moriondo, 16th April.—Kobe.

Mishima Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,197, K. Kinoshita, 16th April.—Takao via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Karasaki, Japanese cruiser, 5,627, 17th April.—Yokosuka.

Taishoku Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,733, 17th April.—Kobe, General.—Yamagata-ya.

Filippo Artelli, Austrian steamer, 3,832, A. E. Radonich, 17th April.—Trieste via ports, General.—Heller Bros.

Falladon Hall, British steamer, 2,206, F. Wickham, 18th April.—Mojil, Ballast.—Jardine, Matheson & Co.

Kawachi Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,782, H. Peterson, 18th April.—London and Antwerp via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Tanen Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,796, A. Christensen, 18th April.—Otaru via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Fuerst Bismarck (36), German cruiser, 10,700, Capt. Wilken, 18th April.—Kobe.

Choko Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,216, C. Misaki, 19th April.—Newchwang, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Kosai Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,419, K. Homma, 19th April.—Shanghai via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Shinano Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,835, N. Ohno, 19th April.—Seattle, Wash., via Victoria, B.C., Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Santhia, British steamer, 3,353, R. Phillips, 19th April.—Nagahama Quarantine Station, Rice.—Samuel Samuel & Co.

Tategami Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,673, K. Suzuki, 19th April.—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Kisakata Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,470, K. Roshira, 19th April.—Anping and Takao via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

PASSENGERS.

ARRIVED.

Per Japanese steamer Kosai Maru, from Shanghai, via ports:—Mr. J. Y. Thomas, Mr. H. C. Thomas, Mrs. T. Kusano, Mrs. R. Kimura, Miss M. Kimura, Miss T. Kimura, and 2 Chinese, in cabin: 5 Japanese, in second class: 135, in steerage.

Per British steamer Coptic, from San Francisco via Honolulu:—Mr. J. M. Howells, Mr. R. K. Macnamara, Mr. Otis A. Poole, Mrs. Ethel H. Robertson, Mr. Richard Salomonsen, Dr. Edward Taussig, Mrs. Louis Taussig, and Mr. S. B. Hickox, in cabin. For Kobe:—Mr. A. C. Breyer, Mr. C. W. Clifton, Miss M. B. Robertson, Mr. M. Woodley, Mr. P. H. Wootton, and Miss S. T. Wootton, in cabin. For Nagasaki:—Mr. E. C. Jansen, Mr. D. Percebois, and Mr. E. L. Esternaux, in cabin. For Manila:—Mr. E. Behrendt, Mr. Guy A. Bisset, Mrs. G. A. Bisset, Mr. R. W. Butcher, Mr. David A. Collins, Mr. F. A. Crowhurst, Mrs. F. A. Crowhurst, Mr. John W. Inglesby, Mr. John Latta, Miss Olive Maxon, Mr. W. F. McLaughlin, Mr. H. M. R. Rodman, Mrs. H. M. R. Rodman and infant, Mrs. M. E. Rouzee, Master Hobart Rouzee, Lt.-Com. John H. Rowen, U.S.N., Mr. O. L. Simpson, Mr. Wm. Skyrme, Lt. James E. Walker, U.S.N., Mrs. C. Wilson, Mrs. G. E. Wolf, and Mr. G. E. Wolff, in cabin. For Hongkong:—Mr. T. Chas. Cuvelier, Mr. H. Hancock, Mr. Ames Howlett, and Mr. A. J. White, in cabin.

Per German steamer Prinz Sigismund, from Sydney via ports:—Dr. Hatton, Mrs. P. Hatton, Dr. Ross, Mrs. Ross, Mrs. Macken, Miss M. Macken, Mr. R. Jackson, Miss M. B. Rosa, Miss G. R. Ross, Mr. J. E. Painter, Mr. R. M. Gilfillan, Mr. A. Moulart, Mrs. G. K. Wilder, Miss E. L. Barnes, Mr. T. Rietmann, Mr. S. W. Cartright, Mr. T. McQuaide, Mr. Miller, Mrs. Miller, Captain Bailey, and Mr. Gubbins, in cabin; Mr. M. Protzen, Mr. Ishikawa and son, Mr. A. A. Brims, Mr. Robert Lieb, Miss S. Iwano, Mrs. Th. Leonard, and Mr. C. Miller, in second class; Mr. Kok Dih, Mrs. Kok Dih, Mr. Mo Ki Paw, and Mrs. Kiko, in third class.

Per British steamer Doric from Hongkong via ports:—Col. G. C. Goodloe, Mrs. G. C. Goodloe, Miss Morton, Miss C. R. Bowie, Mr. C. H. Potts and native servant, Mrs. C. H. Potts, Mr. Paymonville, Mrs. Paymonville, Mr. Chandler, Miss Chaddier, Mrs. A. E. Peck, Mr. M. Schellingberger, Lt. R. de la Mothe, Baron P. Barante, Hernt de Anker, Mr. F. R. Daniel, Mrs. H. J. Neville, Miss Neville, Mr. M. Homann, Mrs. M. Homann, Mr. Nelson Lee and Mrs. Nelson Lee. For Honolulu:—Miss Maud F. Witherby. For San Francisco:—Mrs. L. D. Margis, Mrs. C. S. Smith, Mrs. K. Rumeys, and infant, Mr. J. W. Osborn, Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Higley, and child, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Connolly, Mr. C. B. Baker, Mr. L. Premyslaw, Mr. Mirio, Mr. L. Reoder, Mr. A. Schernikau, Mrs. C. Hayward, Mr. and Mrs. F. Davies, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. D. Young, and Mrs. J. F. Wilbur, in cabin.

DEPARTED.

Per German steamer Prinz Eitel Friedrich, for Europe via ports:—Mr. and Mrs. Saenger, Mr. and Mrs. Homann, Mr. Hellyer, Mr. R. Henzler, Mr. and Mrs. Pollak, Mr. Blum, Mr. Guggenheim, Mr. Solomon, Mr. M. Russell, Mr. Charles G. Helm, Mrs. Neuberg, Mr. Leybold, Mrs. Neville, Mr. Sandberg, Mrs. J. Liddle, child and amah, Mr. P. McGregor Grant, Mr. Georges de Man, Mr. W. Sand, Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Anthony, Mr. and Mrs. de Freitas, son and amah, Miss Mayer Brun, Mr. Paul Brandt, Mr. Hensolt, Capt. Trummler, Mr. Cesar Wegener, Mr. Henri Verleyesen-Nyysseus, Mr. and Mrs. E. Schaeffer, child and amah, Mr. Jungius, Mr. and Mrs. Read, baby and amah, Mrs. Bensted, Mr. James W. Price, Miss Preston, Mr. Riggs, Mr. Ludden, Mr. Buller and 4 children, Miss Warner, Mr. S. Warnock, Miss Ballard, Mr. Lerdikoff, Mr. Mui Hing, Mr. J. Y. Yun, Mr. Wong Yut, Rev. J. W. van Kirk, Mr. G. R. McLean, and 32 Chinese, in cabin.

Per Japanese steamer Nippon Maru, for San Francisco via Honolulu:—Mr. C. L. Bax, Mr. O. D. Bax, Mrs. E. Bent, Count de Blois, Le Comte V. de Bocarme, Mr. G. Bovard, Miss Brand, Mr. J. H. Buford, Rev. E. Cannon, Mrs. G. Clinton and infant, Mrs. O. V. Curtis, Mr. Hugo Dahms, Mr. C. F. Davis, Mr. M. Djachenkoff, Miss Downie, Dr. J. D. Fowler, Mr. S. Fulcher, Mr. G. Furukawa, Mr. J. George, Mr. H. H. Glover, Mr. W. Hadert, Mr. H. J. Haslett, Mr. S. A. Henry, Mr. F. Hitch, Mr. T. Takiuchi, Mr. A. Kolwitz, Mrs. A. Kolwitz, Capt. H. Kondo, I.J.A., Mr. Lan Quan, Miss E. P. Lange, Miss Linker, Lieut. M. Lovell, Mr. Frank Lovitt, Mr. G. M. Lukish, Mr. K. Maeda, Mr. C. E. Maltby, Mr. J. McGregor, Mr. Frank Macnaghton, Mr. K. Moore, Mr. T. Murakami and servant, Mr. J. Mustavos, Mr. H. Northy, Miss B. Northy, Mr. E. Ono, Mr. E. W. Pattison, Mrs. E. W. Pattison, Mrs. M. Paxton, Mr. A. Penner, Miss Mary Penner, Miss Quesnelle, Mr. B. Rempel, Mrs. J. H. Rice, Miss Rice, Lieut. W. L. Reddes, U.S.N., Mr. T. Saito, Mr. H. Sakurai, Mr. K. Sayeki, Mr. H. H. Seebree, Mr. D. N. Singh, Mr. K. Suzuki, Hon. J. C. Sweeney, Mrs. J. C. Sweeney, Miss Sweeney, Mr. W. Tagore, Mrs. S. W. Taylor, Miss Tencate, Mr. J. T. Thompson, Mr. A. G. Wessennich, Miss Waiars, and Mr. Yuki, in cabin.

CARGO.

Per American steamer Lyra, for Tacoma:—

	Canada.	Chicago & West.	New York & East.	Pacific Coast.	Other Cities.	Total
Hongkong	—	—	—	100	—	100
Kobe	—	2	—	—	—	2
Yokohama	—	262	—	—	—	262
Total	—	264	—	100	—	364

SILK SHIPPERS.

Raw & Waste silk shipped per steamer Prinz Eitel Friedrich:—

	RAW.			WASTE.
	Genoa.	Lyons.	Marseilles.	Genoa.	Marseilles.	Trieste.
Siber, Wolff & Co.	22	—	—	—	—	—
Sulzer Rudolph & Co.	45	—	—	—	—	—
Jewett, Bent & Co.	—	12	—	—	27	—
Otto Streuli & Co.	—	12	—	—	—	—
Ulysse Pila & Co.	—	68	—	—	—	—
Jardine, Matheson & Co.	—	—	—	—	29	—
Cl. Eymard	—	—	—	—	53	—
Total	67	92	—	—	109	—

Shippers of silk per steamer Nippon Maru, for San Francisco, 14th April:—

	Bales.
Vivanti Bros.	186
Herbert Dent & Co.	102
Bavier & Co.	34
F. Strahler & Co.	37
L. Mottet	20
China and Japan Trading Co.	20
Jewett and Bent	14
Kiito Gomei Kaisha	245
Mitsui Bussan Kaisha	284
Doshin Kaisha	56
Total	904

LATEST COMMERCIAL.

[SPECIALLY COMPILED FOR THE "JAPAN MAIL."]
IMPORTS.

Yokohama, April 20.
The Yarn market is dull and prices are down yen 10 all round. In Shirtings there is no business but prices are maintained. No change in Fancy Cottons and Woollens.

COTTON PIECE GOODS.

White Shirting—{ 40 yds. 36 in. } ... 0.10 to 0.16
                                  { 50 yds. 36 in. } ... 0.10 to 0.16

Grey Shirting—8 1/2 lb. 38 1/2 yds. 36 inches ... 4.00 to 4.50
Grey Shirting—9 lb. 38 1/2 yds. 45 inches ... 4.50 to 5.25
Prints—Assorted, 24 yards, 30 inches ... 2.85 to 4.65

Cotton Italians and Satteens ... 0.20 to 0.40

WOOLLENS.

Flannels ... 0.50 to 0.65

Italian Cloth, 32 in. ... 0.35 to 0.50

Mousseline de Laine,—Crape, 24 yards, 30 inches ... 0.16 to 0.32

Cloths—Pilots, 54 to 56 inches ... 0.50 to 1.00

Cloths—Presidents, 51 to 65 inches ... 0.90 to 1.00

Cloths—Union, 54 to 56 inches ... 0.50 to 1.00

Blankets—Assorted 3 to 5 lb per lb ... 0.60 to 0.80

Velvets—Black, 35 yards, 22 inches ...	PER PICH.	9.20 to 12.50
Victoria Lawns, 12 yards, 42 inches ...	9.90 to 1.80
Turkey Reds—2.8 to 3.0lb 24-25 yards,
30 inches ...	1.90 to 2.25
Turkey Reds—3.8 to 5lb, 24-25 yards,
32 inches ...	2.50 to 3.65

Nos. 2/60, Gassed ...	PER KAL.	290.00 to 300.00
Nos. 2/80, Gassed ...	365.00 to 375.00
Nos. 2/100, Gassed ...	455.00 to 465.00

American Middling ...	33.50 to 34.00
Indian Broach ...	28.50 to 29.00
Chinese ...	25.00 to 27.50

METALS.

No sales reported.
Iron or Mild Steel, Bar, flat, round and square	PER PICH.	4.20 to 4.40
Iron or Mild Steel, Plate ...	4.35 to 4.65
do Sheet ...	4.70 to 6.95
do Hoop (34" to 1 1/2")	5.00 to 5.50
Galvanised Iron Sheets No. 30 G ...	11.75
Wire Nails, Ordinary assortments ...	6.60 to 7.20
Tin Plates, 90lbs. L.C.W. ...	7.40 to 7.65
Pig Iron, No. 3 "Redcar" ...	2.30

The market is steady.
American ...	$3.46
Russian ...	3.12
Langkat ...	0.55

SUGAR.

The market is quiet.
Brown Takao ...	Y. 7.70 to 8.10
Brown Manila ...	8.70 to 9.70
Brown China ...	7.40 to 12.00
White Java and Penang ...	12.60 to 13.60
White Refined ...	14.70 to 17.00

INDIGO.

Forward contracts are now coming along but there is little new business.
Java, Medium to best ...	Nom. 250.00 to 300.00
Calcutta, Medium to best ...	Nom. 180.00 to 200.00
Madras (Kupah), Medium to best ...	Nom. 130.00 to 160.00
Madras (Dry Leaf), Medium to best ...

EXPORTS. RAW SILK.

Spring reeling is beginning to arrive in fairly large quantities, and the quality is about average. Business has been on a rather restricted scale. We leave prices unchanged.

Quotations.
Filatures—Extra Best, Coarse ...	1,120 to 1,130
Filatures—Extra, Fine ...
Filatures—Extra, Coarse ...	1,060 to 1,070
Filatures—No. 1, Fine ...
Filatures—No. 1, Coarse ...	1,040 to 1,050
Filatures—No. 1 1/2, Fine ...	1,100 to 1,120
Filatures—No. 1 1/2, Coarse ...
Filatures—No. 2, Fine ...	1,070 to 1,080
Filatures—No. 2, Coarse ...	1,030 to 1,040
Common—Coarse ...
Re-reels—Extra ...
Re-reels—No. 1 ...
Re-reels—No. 1 1/2 ...
Re-reels—No. 2 ...	1,055
Kakedas—Gold Cup Chop Extra ...
Kakedas—Veiled Woman Chop No. 1 ...
Kakedas—One Horsehead Chop No. 1 1/2 ...
Kakedas—No. 2 ...
Kakedas—No. 2 1/2 ...

WASTE SILK.

The market is unchanged and the business passing is chiefly in Kibiso Filature.

Quotations.
Noshi—Filatures, Best ...
Noshi—Filatures, Good ...
Noshi—Oshiu, Best ...
Noshi—Oshiu, Good ...
Noshi—Oshiu, Medium ...
Noshi—Shinshiu, Best ...
Noshi—Shinshiu, Good ...
Noshi—Bushi, Best ...
Noshi—Bushi, Good ...
Noshi—Bushi, Medium ...
Noshi—Joshiu, Best ...
Noshi—Joshiu, Good ...	80 to 90
Kibiso—Filatures, Extra ...
Kibiso—Filatures, Best ...	110 to 120
Kibiso—Filatures, Second ...	100 to 105
Kibiso—Joshiu, Good ...	40 to 60
Kibiso—Bushi, Fair ...

HABUTAE.

The market, which had been for some weeks in a dormant state seems to be growing active. Enquiries have come from Europe and America but transactions are not yet so brisk as to cause any rise in price. Generally speaking, the market promises well for the future.

KANAZAWA.
Inches.	3 1/2 me.	4 me.	4 1/2 me.
19 1/2	Yen. 10.10	9.75	9.65
22 1/2	9.90	9.45	9.45
27	9.65	9.45	9.30
36	9.45	9.25	9.25

"PINE-LEAVES" MARK.
6 me.	6 1/2 me.	7 me.	7 1/2 me.	8 me.
Inches.	Yen.	Yen.	Yen.	Yen.	Yen.
22 1/2	9.35	9.10	9.20	9.25	9.20
27	9.00	8.80	8.80	8.70	8.90
36	8.70	8.70	8.75	8.60	8.60

"GOLD" MARK.
4 1/2 me.	5 me.	5 1/2 me.	6 me.
Inches.	Yen.	Yen.	Yen.	Yen.	Yen.
19 1/2	10.30	10.70	9.60	9.40
22 1/2	9.80	9.50	9.40	9.00
27	9.60	9.50	9.40	9.00
36	9.40	9.30	9.80	8.80

RICE.

Tokyo.—As already reported, the market was suspended on April 17th owing to embarrassment created by serious speculative purchases. Since then, the market has been involved in difficulties.

Osaka and Kobe.—Business is being carried on in an active and orderly state although there have been fluctuations.

Osaka.—The market is weak.

Kobe.—No notable transaction; slight fluctuations.

Domestic rice in Fukagawa ...	1,283,804
Foreign rice in Fukagawa ...	193,212
Closing Price.	Yen.
April
May
June

RICE AT WHOLESALE: STANDARD PRICE.

(Tokyo.)	per koku.
Superior	Yen 14.71
Medium	14.09
Common	13.51
Average	14.10
koku, 4,9629 bushels.
(Osaka.)
April	13.80
May	14.1475
June	14.165
(Kobe.)
April	13.41
May	13.75
June	13.945

STOCK EXCHANGE.

Tokyo.—During the week, there has been no notable change. The market, however, has a promising tendency for the future. It is generally reported that the inactive condition of the money market has induced capitalists to invest in stocks; that under the foregoing conditions, sellers are trying to re-purchase what they had sold; that purchasers strongly maintain their attitude despite slight fluctuations; and that at the end of the month when delivery is to take place settlements will be difficult.

Osaka.—Transactions are active in shares of the Kyushu and other railway companies, and of some leading cotton spinning companies. There is a rumour that Mr. K. Den, formerly vice-minister for Communications is purchasing shares of the Kyushu Railway Co. under instructions of the Government, with the view of nationalizing the lines at a lower price than the estimate mentioned in the last session of the Diet.

COTTON YARN (Osaka).

Throughout the week, the market was very inactive.

April delivery	Yen. 128.40
May delivery	127.45
June delivery	127.65

TEA.

Small supplies are coming in and there will doubtless be shipments at the end of the month. There is as yet, however, no market, and we reserve prices. The quality is good.

EXCHANGE.

Yokohama, April 19.
London silver unaltered and Hongkong sterling quotations unaltered, but Shanghai is 1/8 higher and has caused local rates on Shanghai to rule easier accordingly.

London—Bank T.T.	1/0 1/2 @ 1/8
— Bills on demand	2/0 1/2 @ 1/8
— 4 months' sight	2/0 1/2
— Private 4 months' sight	1/0 1/2 @ 1/8
— 6 months' sight	1/0 1/2 @ 3/8
Paris & Lyons—Bank sight	256
— Private 4 months' sight	260 @ 59 1/2
— 6 months' sight	261 1/2 @ 1
Hongkong—Bank sight	per $100 101 1/2
— Private 10 days' sight	do 99 1/2
Shanghai—Bank sight	70 1/2
— Private 10 days' sight	72 1/2
India—Bank sight	152 1/2
— Private 30 days' sight	154 1/2
America—Bank sight	49 1/2 @ 1/8
— Private 30 days' sight	50
— Private 4 months' sight	50 1/2
Germany—Bank sight	208 1/2
— Private 4 months' sight	212 1/2
Bar Silver (London)	29 1/2

* Nominal.

SHARE REPORT.

Yokohama, April 19, 1906
LOCAL STOCKS.—Owing to the intervention of the Easter Holidays, business has been curtailed and transactions which have taken place have been principally in Japanese Stocks. Kirin Breweries are on offer at yen 130. Club Hotels are enquired for. Engine and Iron Works, sellers at yen 120. Offers of Nickels are wanted. For quotations see below.

CHINA STOCKS.—According to latest telegraphic advices—Hongkong and Shanghai Banks, $860 buyers. Indo-Chinas at Tls. 67 1/2 sellers. China Traders, $96 buyers. Hongkong and Kowloon Wharfs $103 sales. Hongkong Lands, $116 buyers. Humphreys' Estates, $11 1/2 sellers. Green Island Cements, $29 1/2 sales. Farnhams, Tls. 119 buyers. Shanghai Lands, Tls. 120 sellers.

STOCKS.	Capital.	No. of Shares.	Issue Value.	Amount Paid Up.	Reserve Fund.	At Working A'nt or Carried Forward.	Date.	Last Dividend.	For Term.	Closing Quotations.
Brett & Co. Ltd.	28,000	2800	10	10			30.6.03	6%	for 1	6.50 N.
Club Hotel, Ltd.	185,000	1850	100	100			31.3.04	7%	" 1	60 N.
Grand Hotel, Ltd.	250,000	2500	100	100		Y. 6,179.25	30.6.05	10%	" 1/2	225 Sa.
Helm Bros., Ltd.	186,000	3720	50	50		Y. 8,349.06	31.12.04	17 1/2%	" 1	87 1/2 S.
Langfeldt & Co. Ltd.	150,000	1500	100	100		Dr. 28,875.52	31.12.05		" 1/2	45 S.
C. Nickel & Co. Ltd.	500,000	20000	25	25		5,106.41	31.10.05	12%	" 1	34 Sa.
Japan Brewery Co. Ltd.	450,000	9000	50	50	200,000	8,702.28	31.12.05	20%	" 1	130 S.
Y. E. & Iron Works.	130,000	2600	50	50	20,000	20,149.17	30.11.05	10%	" 1/2	120 S.
Hirano M. W. Co. Ltd.	125,000	5000	25	25				1st y.r.	" 1/2	25 S.
Oriental H.I. L. old ord.		1490	50	50			31.8.05	12%	" 1	75 N.
" " new	251,000	1510	50	25
" " old pref.		750	50	50	60,542.50			8%		63 Sa.
" " new		1250	50	25
" " Founders		8012 1/2	12 1/2					Y.37		500 Sa.
Oriental Consolidated	G.	G.	G.	G.
Mining Co. Ltd.	$5,000,000	500,000	$10	$10	None	G. $672,093	31.12.04	$1	" 1905	G. $18 S.
Raub Australian Gold	£	150,000	£1	18/10		£4,873	31.3.05	40cents.	" 1901	$3 1/2
Mining Co., Ltd.	200,000	50,000	£1	£1

Debenture Loans.	Amount of Loan.	Face Value of Debentures.	Rate of Interest.	Interest Payable.	Closing Quotation.
Japan Brewery Company, Ltd.	200,000.00	100.00	7 per cent.	1 April and 1 Oct.	108 Sa.
Brett and Company, Ltd.	11,500.00	100.00	7 per cent.	1 June and 1 Dec.	85 S.
Yokohama United Club	250,000.00	100.00	7 per cent.	30 June and 31 Dec.	108 Sa.
C. Nickel and Company, Ltd.	50,000.00	100.00	8 per cent.	1 May and 1 Nov.	110 S.

A. C. HUTTON POTTS,
Share and General Broker,

Skin-Tortured Babies AND TIRED MOTHERS Find Comfort in Cuticura

INSTANT RELIEF and refreshing sleep for Skin-tortured Babies and rest for Tired Mothers in warm baths with CUTICURA SOAP, and gentle anointings with CUTICURA OINTMENT, the great skin cure and purest of emollients, to be followed in severe cases by mild doses of CUTICURA RESOLVENT PILLS, to cool and cleanse the blood. This is the purest, sweetest, most speedy, permanent, and economical treatment for torturing, disfiguring, itching, burning, bleeding, scaly, crusted, and pimply humours, eczemas, rashes, irritations, and itchings, with loss of hair, of infants and children, yet compounded.

MILLIONS USE CUTICURA SOAP

Assisted by CUTICURA OINTMENT, for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, for cleansing the scalp of crusts, scales, and dandruff, and the stopping of falling hair, for softening, whitening, and soothing red, rough, and sore hands, for baby rashes, itchings, and chafings, in the form of baths for annoying irritations and inflammations, or too free or offensive perspiration, in the form of washes for ulcerative weaknesses, and for many sanative, antiseptic purposes which readily suggest themselves to women, especially mothers, and for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. No other medicated soap ever compounded is to be compared with it for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, scalp, hair, and hands. No other foreign or domestic toilet soap, however expensive, is to be compared with it for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. Thus it combines in ONE SOAP at ONE PRICE, the BEST skin and complexion soap, and the BEST toilet and BEST baby soap in the world.

CUTICURA RESOLVENT PILLS (Chocolate Coated) are a new, tasteless, odourless, economical substitute for the colorated liquid CUTICURA RESOLVENT, as well as for all other blood purifiers and humour cures. Put up in screw-cap pocket vials, containing 60 doses.

CUTICURA Remedies are sold throughout the world. Australian Depot: R. Towns & Co., Sydney. British Depot: 27-28, Charterhouse St., London. French Depot: 4 Rue de la Paix, Paris. Forcena Dams and Cases Co., Sole Props., Boston, U. S. A.

Lea and Perrins' Sauce.

By Royal Warrant
to
His Majesty the King.

THE ORIGINAL AND GENUINE WORCESTERSHIRE.

Taking

BOVRIL

means fortifying yourself against disease.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS

Cure Indigestion,
Bile, Sick Headache, Giddiness,
Palpitation,
and all Internal Disorders.

THESE PILLS
ARE PURELY VEGETABLE;
they contain no deleterious
matter, and may be taken by the most delicate.

Manufactured only at 78, New Oxford St., O. to 233, Oxford St., London. Sold by all Chemists and Medicine Vendors.

VESSELS ON THE BERTH.

For KEELUNG, via Moji (from Kobe), 3rd, and 18th every month, at Noon, the "SAIKIO MARU,"—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
For KEELUNG, via Moji (from Kobe), 10th and 25th every month, at Noon, the "KOSHUN MAU,"—Osaka Shosen Kaisha.
For TRIESTE, via Kobe, Hongkong, Singapore, Penang, Colombo, Bombay, Karachi, Aden, Suez, Port Said, and Fiume, about April —, the "FILIPPO ARTELLI,"—Heller Bros.
For SYDNEY, via Hongkong and New Guinea, April 18th, the "PRINZ SIGISMUND,"—H. Ahrens & Co., Nachf.
For SHANGHAI, via Kobe, Moji, and Nagasaki, April 26th, at 10 a.m., the "HAKUAI MARU,"—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
For HONGKONG, via Kobe, (Inland Sea), Nagasaki, and Manila, about April 19th, the "COPTIC,"—O. & O. S.S. Co.
For SEATTLE, Wash., via Victoria, B.C., April 10th, at 2 p.m., the "SHINANO MARU,"—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
For AUSTRALIA and New Zealand April 20th, the "TAIYUAN,"—Butterfield & Swire.

(毎土曜日一發行)

編輯人 エフ・アインハイム
發行兼印刷人 エー・ヤー・アラオン
發行所 横濱市山下町五十五番
ロイヤル・バンク・ビル・新聞社

The Japan Weekly Mail.

寄土曜日 A REVIEW OF JAPANESE COMMERCE, POLITICS, LITERATURE, AND ART. 一回刊行

No. 17.

REGISTERED AT THE G.P.O.
AS A NEWSPAPER.

YOKOHAMA, APRIL 28TH, 1906.

明治廿五年三月廿日
第三千四百零四號

VOL. XLV.

CONTENTS.

Summary of News	431
The San Francisco Earthquake	432
The Saghalien Fisheries	434
The Great Military Review	434
The Meeting of Provincial Governors	434
China	434
The Minister of Home Affairs and the Metropolitan Police	436
The Ex-Minister of State for Foreign Affairs	436
Tokyo Harbour	436
Formosa	437
Waste Lands and Sheep in Japan	437
Rembrandt	437
Korea	438
Formosan Finances	438
The Tax Investigation Committee	438
The Prize Ships	438
Mr. Robert Little	439
The Minister of Finance and Foreign Tourists	439
Departure of an Old Resident	439
The First Census of the British Empire	439
Construction of State Railways During the Current Fiscal Year	439
Notes on Current Events	439
Reception to Rev. and Mrs. E. S. Booth	439
Leading Articles	439
An Accuser of the Japanese	439
Hotels	439
Yielding	439
St. George's Hall	439
Presentation to the Honorary Pastor of Union Church	439
Reviews	439
The Boy's Brigade	439
Fires	439
The Famine	439
Yokohama Foreign Board of Trade	439
Opening of the Fujimi-cho Kyokwai	439
L'Alliance Française	439
Beattie-Cox Wedding	439
The Captives of Babylon in Tokyo	439
The Law Courts	439
The Colonist's Cry	439
News of the Week	439
Correspondence	439
Japanese Agriculture	439
Missionaries in China	439
President David Starr Jordan	439
Japan's Future Influence in the Far East	439
Telegrams	439
Latest Shipping	439
Latest Commercial	439

"FAIS CE QUE DOIS: ADVIENNANT QUE POURRA!"

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

No notice will be taken of anonymous correspondence. What is intended for insertion in the "JAPAN WEEKLY MAIL," must be authenticated by the name and address of the writer, not for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

It is particularly requested that all letters on business be addressed to the MANAGER, and Cheques be made payable to same; and that literary contributions, be addressed to the EDITOR.

YOKOHAMA: SATURDAY, APRIL 28TH, 1906.

BIRTH.

On April 25th, at No. 186 Bluff, Yokohama, the wife of W. J. HAM, of a Son.

MARRIAGE.

On April 9th, at San Rafael, Cal., FREDRICK OLDS to JULIA, daughter of Peter Murphy, of San Francisco, Cal.

DEATHS.

Entered into life, April 23rd, 1906, FLORENCE D. S. SCUDDER, wife of Rev. F. S. Scudder, in the 32nd year of her age.

At his Residence, Shiba Koyen, No. 11, 8 ban L. C. M. LANGGUTH, of Messrs Siemens-Schuckert D.K.K., at the age of 54.

At Saigon, Cochinchina, on the 11th instant, ARTHUR VINCENT OLIVIER WOODWARD, aged 33 years.

SUMMARY OF NEWS.

ON April 23rd a case of supposed cholera was reported in Tsukijima, Tokyo.

THE strikes in France are spreading and a serious disturbance on May Day is expected.

A CASE of plague was reported in Osaka on the morning of April 23rd, the patient being a workman.

THE Japanese Consul-General in New York wired on April 21st to the Foreign Office that a government bill regarding the imposition of a new tax on tea and coffee has been submitted to Congress. There is no sign that the bill has affected trade.

GENERAL Viscount Kodama, Chief of the Military Staff Office, has been promoted to Junior Second Rank.

ABOUT 4.30 a.m. on April 21st, a slight shock of earthquake was felt in Tokyo and at points to the westwards.

THE Japanese training squadron under Admiral Shimamura left Thursday Island on April 21st for Townsville.

ONLY a quarter of San Francisco remained standing when heavy rains put out the fires started by the earthquake.

THE Emperor of Austria has decorated Mr. Makino, Minister for Education, with the Grand Cordon of Leopold.

IT is reported by the Hochi that the Government has decided to purchase the Seoul-Fusan Railway on July 1st.

MR. R. W. LITTLE, for seventeen years editor of the N. C. Daily News, died in Shanghai on the 1st April from typhoid.

THE battleships Kashima and Katori will leave London on May 1st and are expected to arrive at Yokosuka on August 14th.

MR. Matsubara, Japanese Consul at Honolulu, has wired to the Foreign Office that two cases of black plague have appeared in the city.

MR. K. Nakagawa, Secretary of the Kyoto University, has been appointed confidential secretary to Marquis Saionji, the Premier.

THE Japanese Consul at Singapore reports that cholera is prevalent there. During the week ended April 14th, eighteen cases were reported.

THE first squadron—consisting of the Yakumo, Asama, Iwate, Iwaki, Adzuma, etc.—under Admiral Katooka arrived at Shinagawa on April 22nd.

MR. Kato (Tsunetada), Minister in Belgium, has been ordered to attend the wedding ceremonies of the King of Spain, which will take place on June 1st.

THE Tokyo Rice Exchange, which has been closed since last week owing to embarrassment caused by speculative purchases, was re-opened on April 24th.

ON March 21, the U. S. Senate Committee on Foreign Relations favourably recommended an appropriation of $250,000 for building an American Consulate in Shanghai.

PROFESSORS Omori and Nakamura, the well-known seismologist and architectural expert, have been ordered to proceed to San Francisco to investigate the recent earthquake.

MR. M. Tani, proprietor of the Kaneda Coal mine, Kyushu, has made a contract with a foreign capitalist for a loan of a million yen, the price being 9 per cent and the interest 6 per cent.

THE British steamer Teucer (2564 tons) and the Norwegian steamer Babelsberg (2181 tons) have been purchased by a shipping company of Kobe and re-named the Chusa Maru and Kinko Maru respectively.

AT 7 o'clock on Tuesday morning, it was discovered by Messrs. Pollak Bro., No. 26 Settlement, that the godown at the back of the office, opening on the side street, had been broken into during the night and two cases of habutae, valued at about yen 2,000, abstracted. A heavy padlock on the door had been smashed, the woodwork broken and the door forced open. The next night Messrs. Mendelson Bros. silk go down was entered.

BARON Mumm von Schwarzenstein, German Ambassador to Tokyo, who is now in Peking, will arrive in Yokohama on May 5th by the cruiser Fuerst Bismark, which left Yokohama on April 19th for Taku to receive him.

THE British Museum has declined to purchase the Nelson memorandum outlining the plans of the battle of Trafalgar, which was recently sold at auction for £3,500 and offered to the Museum by the purchaser at the same price.

THE well-known Buddhist temple Hongwanji, Kyoto, is negotiating with a foreign firm in Yokohama for a loan of two million yen. The estate belonging to the temple, five million tsubo in area, is to be offered as security for the debt.

A LONDON telegram was received on April 25th at a Tokyo bank to the effect that the new 5 per cent. Russian loan has been issued there at the price of 89 but this was lowered to 88. Owing to the steady state of the money market, the loan was not well received.

Mrs. Archibald Little, before leaving England for China, handed the manuscript of a novel to Mr. Fisher Unwin. He was to publish it last month under the title, A Millionaire's Courtship. A millionaire's yachting tour in the Far East forms the groundwork of the story.

IT is stated, says our Seoul weekly contemporary, that at 9 p.m. on the 8th, inst., two trains collided at a point six miles south of Sin-Chu-Mak Station on the Seoul-Wiju Line. One engine driver and one stoker were killed on the spot, and three other men were wounded.

MR. T. Uchida, Japanese Consul-General in New York, wired to the Foreign Office on April 24th that there was no notable change in the raw silk market. Owing to the earthquake in San Francisco, business in cotton was in a dull state. The stock of cotton throughout the country was a little over 1,080,000 bales.

LEADING citizens of Yokohama held a very crowded garden-party on the afternoon of April 22nd at the cricket ground and entertained soldiers returned from the front. The same evening the soldiers organized a lantern procession and paid visits to the Kencho and the City Office, after which they proceeded to Noge.

THE Asahi reports that the negotiations of the Osaka-Kobe Electric Railway Co. for a foreign loan have failed. It is said that Sir Malcolm McEachern, representative of a British syndicate proposed that the interest should be 4.5 per cent and the issuing price 92, but the Japanese company asked that the issuing price be 93.

A CASE of suspected plague was reported among the crew on board the British steamer Savitha which arrived at Yokohama on April 18th. The ship was removed to Nagahama Quarantine Station the following day. The patient was a fireman. Later it was reported by the Harbour Office that three cases of small-pox were found among the crew.

IT is stated that Prince Wi-wha was received in audience by the Korean Emperor on the 8th inst., and on that occasion His Majesty bestowed upon the Prince two decorations, viz. that of the Grand Cordon of the Golden Measure, and that of the Grand Order of Merit. Prince Wi-wha having spent most of his early life abroad had not as yet received any decoration from the Emperor.

THE SAN FRANCISCO EARTHQUAKE.

Friday, April 20.

Throughout Friday the excitement caused in Yokohama by the news of the San Francisco earthquake was at fever heat. The newspaper offices, prominent American houses and the banks were besieged with callers seeking information. Reuter's message, which we print elsewhere, gives a few more particulars, but they are meagre compared with what we should like to see. The collapse of such immense buildings as the City Hall, the Phelan, the "Call" and the mammoth hotels evidently did not occasion such a terrible loss of life as was at first feared. The hour at which the shock occurred of course reduced the death list very considerably, for it was evidently the manufacturing and industrial districts which suffered most.

Reuter speaks of the collapse of an hotel on Valencia street, in the Mission, as being the deadliest accident, involving as it did so many lives in its ruin. The Fiji Shimpō's telegram tells of a reign of terror prevailing in China Town, and of the San Jose lunatic asylum being destroyed, though here most of the residents escaped. A private telegram reaching Yokohama says the whole of the district from the water front to Kearney Street, which comprises the heart of the business part of the city, has been destroyed, which thus confirms Reuter's message. Again, Mr. A. Rosenberg, of San Francisco, now in Yokohama, received a cablegram stating that his warehouse on Brannan Street, near the Pacific Mail Dock, had been saved, but that his office on California between Battery and Front, about  $1\frac{1}{2}$  miles away from the warehouse, had been burned. This office is in the heart of the business section of the city, being close to the California Bank, and not very far from the lower end of Market Street, the main artery, and the water-front district.

The Japanese population of San Francisco, we might mention, numbers 11,032 souls.

On the morning of the 18th at 9.30 the seismometers at the Imperial University were violently agitated but no shock was felt. The conclusion came to at the University was that a severe earthquake had taken place in some region about 10,000 kilometers distant. In Osaka also the seismometers were much disturbed. They indicated the recurrence of a shock either heavier or closer than the earthquake of the 1st of February when Panama and South America were visited by a tidal wave.

According to the seismologists of the Imperial University as quoted by the Asahi Shimbun, there is no reason whatever to assume any connexion between the recent earthquakes in Italy, Formosa and America. Everything goes to show that these disturbances had quite different origins. There are on record many instances of several earthquakes and volcanic eruptions occurring within a brief state of time in various parts of the world without any inter-relation of cause. Of course the superstition among the Japanese are talking of the Hi-no-ye-Uma year, which has thus far indubitably justified its traditional reputation in the matter of fires and earthquakes. The superstition will sink deeper than ever into the hearts of the uneducated masses, who attach more importance to concrete incidents like conflagrations and earthquakes than to all the reasoning of scientists.

The Great Northern Telegraph Co., telegraph from Shanghai that owing to the recent earthquake in San Francisco, damage has been caused to the Pacific cable and communication by that route is interrupted.

The Yokohama Specie Bank has received no further telegraphic news regarding the earthquake in San Francisco from its New York branch.

Saturday, April 21.

The nearest available station for the despatch of telegrams is Stockton, 90 miles from San Francisco. This explains, of course, much of the delay in sending out details of the disaster. The Hochi Shimbun says that the police fled when the shock occurred and that advantage was immediately taken of their absence by the roughs, who proceeded to pillage the Chinese quarter and from thence extended their violence to various parts of the city. It became necessary to proclaim martial law, and to employ the military for restoring order. We can not discover where the Hochi obtained this information, nor does our contemporary itself give any indication. Of course the hour of the earthquake's occurrence—5 a.m.—was most fortunate. Had it happened in the daytime when the factory hands were all at work the mortality must have been much greater. The wholesale destruction of the gas and water-mains is mainly due to the fact that the "down-town" portions of San Francisco are built on made ground. Messrs. Shibata and Co., the well known curio dealers of Yokohama, have received a telegram announcing the complete destruction of their San Francisco store. Mr. Shibata thinks that Mr. Consul Uyeno and his subordinates are probably safe, as they do not inhabit the building used for offices, and he farther thinks that the Japanese element of the population have probably suffered little as their residences were not in the badly wrecked regions.

Mr. Kajima, a telegraphic engineer of the Government, who was visiting the Izu Archipelago in the S. S. Okinawa Maru, reports that on the 14th instant volumes of smoke were seen ascending from a point in the sea south-east of Aoyashima (Onigashima). There had been no appearance of this eruption 3 days previously when the steamer passed. The smoke continued to ascend in increasing volume, and when the vessel left the vicinity on the 15th instant, the white column seemed to be about a thousand feet high. Through a distance of some 20 miles from the scene of disturbance pumice stones were seen floating in the sea.

A telegram to the Nichi Nichi from London attributes to Professor Milne the opinion that as the earth revolves the inclination of its axes produces displacements of matter, and earthquakes result from the shock caused by this matter subsequently re-adjusting itself. Such, so far as we can gather, is the meaning of the telegram. Evidently Professor Milne can not have intended the explanation to be exhaustive for there can be little question that heat, as exhibited in volcanic eruptions, is responsible for many earthquake shocks.

The experts of the seismographic department of the Imperial University say that the seismographs began to show signs of the disturbance at 10h. 24' 11" p.m. on the 18th instant. Deducting 11 minutes for the time of transmission and correcting the time for difference of longitude, this would correspond to 5p. 03' a.m. on the 19th, which was exactly the hour of the San Francisco shock. The instruments showed a disturbance lasting 4 hours, an interval sufficient for the shock to have travelled right round the world, from which fact its violence may be inferred. Professor Inamura computes that this earthquake was of about the same magnitude as that which occurred in India last year. Both were of extraordinary vehemence, and it is noteworthy that the seismographs in the Imperial University showed a disturbance lasting 4 hours on the occasion of the Indian shock also. The Professor believes, from surveying the records of the past 50 years, that although nothing can be certainly predicted as to the advent of some correlated seismic disturbance in Japan, there is, on the whole, no reason to be apprehensive. He notes that, although the general impression is that San Francisco has always been free from earthquakes, such is not the case. History shows that the city was visited by a very violent shock in 1868, when great damage was done. Witnesses of this disaster are living in Yokohama at the present moment. Nevertheless immunity for a space of 38 years is enough to beget complete confidence. Professor Inamura takes the same view as Professor Milne with regard to the proximate cause of the shock, namely, a land slide, but he does not attempt to say how these land-slides are produced. He attributes the Indian earthquake of last year to the same agency and he remarks that if the site of the original convulsion was on shore, the effects were probably proportionately terrific.

The Fiji Shimpō and the Japan Times have started a subscription for the sufferers by the earthquake. Sums from 2 yen upwards will be accepted by the Fiji. The Yomiuri recommends that Japan at once send two men-of-war to render all possible assistance.

Sunday, April 22.

The latest telegrams—received by Messrs. Shibata & Co., the Specie Bank and the Mitsui Company—show that the town was burning on the 19th, 20th and 21st. Messrs. Mitsui's offices were at first reported safe but they seem to have been subsequently destroyed by the conflagration.

Messrs. Mendelson Bros., of Yokohama, have received news of the safety of relations of the firm living in San Francisco.

The offices of the Toyo Kisen Kaisha are in Market Street, which is the very centre of the destruction. No news has been received, and the conviction is that the building has been destroyed.

The store of Messrs. Komata & Company, in Ogden, appears to have fared in the same way as did that of the Mitsui Company: it escaped the earthquake only to be destroyed in the fire that followed. As to their San Francisco store, they have received no intelligence.

It is almost decided that the Japanese Red Cross Society will send a hospital ship to the scene of the disaster.

It is expected that the Department of Education will send Professors Tanakadate and Omori to investigate the catastrophe.

Japanese newspapers express profound sympathy with the inhabitants of the ill-fated city. They speak of the incident as though it had occurred in Japan, such is the friendship this country entertains towards the people of the United States.

The Nippon discountenances the idea of getting up subscriptions in Japan for the relief of the sufferers. It thinks that most of those upon whom the loss will fall are millionaires, and that any pittance which Japan might succeed in collecting would be a mere drop in the ocean. A wiser step therefore would be to contribute for the succour of the Japanese residents who have probably suffered losses such as are crushing in many cases. This is the opinion held by prominent members of the American community in Yokohama.

The Mikado has addressed a message of condolence to the President of the United States.

Monday, April 23.

A telegram to the Fiji Shimpō puts the losses caused by the earthquake at 600 millions of yen. Of this amount 480 millions are covered by insurance, British offices being involved to the extent of 100 millions and those of continental Europe—principally Germany, we presume—to the same amount. These are evidently rough figures.

The Japanese and Chinese inhabitants are said to be suffering greatly. Quantities of rice have been supplied to them by the War Department, but it is evident that the American markets are not in a position to furnish suddenly any large amount of this staple.

The Nichi Nichi publishes a telegram received by a Japanese resident from New York, saying that another severe shock was felt on the 20th instant, and that it wrought great additional destruction.

Mr. Ichihara, Mayor of Yokohama, sent a telegram on April 22nd to the Mayor of San Francisco conveying the profound condolences of this city in the recent disaster.

Mr. B. C. Howard, Agent in Yokohama for the Pacific Mail Steamship Company the Occidental and Oriental S.S. Co., and the Toyo Kisen Kaisha sends out the following notice:—"Kindly note that we are in receipt of advices from San Francisco that there will be no sailings from that port until further notice."

It must have occurred to many persons that the question of insurance in San Francisco is not so simple as the telegrams suggest. Here in Japan the Japanese fire insurance companies expressly exclude from the risks taken by them all loss resulting from volcanoes, subterranean fire, or earthquakes. Mr. Abe Taizo, Managing Director of the Meiji Fire Insurance Company, speaking to a representative of the Fiji Shimpō, explains that in a country where earthquakes are so frequent as in Japan, no insurance company could possibly accept such risks, and he claims that, in view of this exceptional circumstance, the Japanese companies took the lead in expressly excluding losses resulting from earthquakes. He further alleges that the practice of foreign companies also is to exclude earthquakes, unless an addition is specially made providing for the inclusion of that particular risk. We presume that Mr. Abe is well posted on this subject. Certainly policies granted by foreign companies do contain a saving clause which exempts the insurer from any liability connected with volcanoes, subterranean fires, earthquake or hurricanes. But we are not aware that immunity from these dangers can be specially purchased by paying a higher premium, and we are disposed to think that if such a precaution be possible, the companies willing to concede it are exceptional. At any rate it is not unlikely that the policies granted to San Francisco citizens contained the usual clause exonerating the insurers from earthquake risks, and that very few citizens were so provident as to pay extra premiums for their inclusion. Yet the telegrams speak positively of 480 million yen worth of property being covered by insurance, from which statement the plain inference is that this question of special risk has not yet presented itself.

Tuesday, April 24.

It is certainly a difficult question from a purely practical point of view whether the Japanese people should make any effort to give pecuniary aid to the sufferers by the earthquake in San Francisco. The difficulty consists in the fact that there would scarcely be any hope of raising a larger sum than a hundred thousand yen, and such an amount, representing a national contribution, would attract attention by its smallness rather than by its intention. Hence the really practical course for the Japanese to pursue would be to succour their own nationals, some ten thousand in number, who are reported to be in dire straits, and to confine themselves to expressions of sympathy with the American sufferers. But it is plain that the Japanese themselves do not take that view. Their idea is that, considering their country's relations with America and considering the exceptionally kindly feeling that the American people have always displayed towards them, they are morally bound to show their sympathy in the most substantial form possible, and that, whether their offering be large or small, it will at all events be an expression of their friendly sentiment. Hence some of the leaders of public opinion are engaged in collecting money for transmission to San Francisco. Berlin telegraphs that President Roosevelt has announced America's determination not to accept aid from foreign countries, but we are inclined to agree with the Fiji Shimpō that the President has been misinterpreted, for a wholesale refusal of that kind would scarcely be gracious in the face of the liberality that American citizens themselves have always displayed when the calamities of foreign nations were in question. On the other hand, it is hard to endorse the Japanese view in its entirety. For evidently unless the subscriptions made in this country reach, at all events, a respectable figure, there is the strong risk that, so far from evoking gratitude, their smallness may be taken as an evidence of indifference. Up to the evening of the 23rd inst. the Fiji Shimpō had collected only 2,026 yen, and though the Beiyu Kyokai and the Chagyo Kumiai are spoken of as likely to enter the field, there are no signs of great spontaneity or munificence. Indeed it may well be conceived that many of the most wealthy men are hesitating about associating themselves with an effort which may prove little better than a fiasco. To us it appears that the best way to save the situation would be for the Red Cross Society to send a hospital ship and the Government a cruiser, whatever sums are contributed by the people being handed over to the Red Cross Society in partial defrayment of the expenses incurred. The sympathy of Japanese would thus be very conspicuously shown and the danger of strikingly inadequate dimensions would be avoided.

A well-known insurance agent in Yokohama, in the course of conversation on Wednesday, expressed the opinion that all fire-insurance policies issued in San Francisco during late years have had the earthquake clause elided, in consequence of the keen competition among the rival fire companies. Property lying a few miles out of San Francisco, however, could only be insured under the conditions existing among foreign companies here, that is, an earthquake clause is inserted in every rural policy. Under these circumstances there can be little doubt that the British and other Fire Insurance Companies have to face some enormous losses in San Francisco.

Thursday, April 26.

A telegram from Washington says that among all the nationalities composing the population of San Francisco the Japanese were most successful in saving their belongings at the time of the earthquake, a fact which is attributed to their greater skill in reducing their effects to a portable condition. Many of them speedily improvised neat little shelters outside the city, but they could not improvise food. It is added that they received exactly the same treatment as the American citizens themselves in connection with the distribution of provisions.

Latest accounts correct the low estimate of fatal casualties—300—reported some time ago to have been officially made, but there is evidently uncertainty on this point, one telegram speaking of 2,000, another of 1,500, and another of 1,200. Inasmuch as some 500 bodies are said to have already been recovered, however, the loss of life will probably be found in the end to have been very heavy.

Similar contradictions are observable with regard to the loss of property. At one time it was computed as high as six hundred millions of dollars, but now the figure mentioned is only one half of that total. As might have been expected, several insurance companies are said to have been bankrupted by the immense liabilities incurred.

The private subscriptions in the United States for the relief of the sufferers are now reported to have reached the immense total of 15 million dollars (3 millions sterling). The Treasury has already paid out a sum of 3½ million dollars. It is again asserted that contributions from foreign countries are refused, though foreigners in America are allowed to subscribe, but the Fiji Shimpō notes that no such refusal has been intimated to the Government of Japan, or to any corporation, firm or individual in Japan. Our contemporary infers that this rumour, which emanated originally from Berlin, is incorrect, since, if such an intention were entertained by the United States Authorities, the fact would have been speedily communicated through official channels in order to avert the embarrassment which would confront foreign peoples were they left to collect funds destined to be rejected in the end. The Fiji therefore continues to collect, but its list, when last published, showed a total of only some 5,000 yen.

The Japanese Red Cross Society have decided to send a hospital ship to the scene of the catastrophe. They have applied for the steamer Kusuho Maru, originally the Aviol, which was one of the finest ships employed by the Russians for hospital purposes, and was made a prize in the Battle of the Sea of Japan for abuse of the Red-Cross flag. The Society's regulations do not contemplate any assistance of this kind rendered to foreign peoples, but an exception is made in the case of the American nation with which Japan is on terms of such conspicuous friendship. The Society have also determined to raise a subscription for the relief of the sufferers, using all the machinery at their disposal to facilitate the effort. Apparently the project is approved by the Ministers of State, for General Terauchi, Admiral Saito, Mr. Sakatani and Mr. Makino invited over fifty of the leading residents of Tokyo and Yokohama to the Foreign Office on the 26th inst. to consult about the best method of proceeding. The Beiyu Kyokai are also interesting themselves in the matter of subscriptions.

On Thursday at the instance of the Red Cross Society a meeting of leading merchants and bankers of Tokyo and Yokohama was held in the official residence of the Minister of Foreign Affairs. There were present representing the Government Mr. Makino, acting Minister of Foreign Affairs, the Ministers of War and the Navy, and Count Matsukata, Vice-President of the Red Cross Society. The merchants and bankers of Tokyo and Yokohama were represented by Barons Shibusawa and Iwasaki, Messrs. Yasuda, Matsuo, Kondo (Rempei), Ikeda, Okura and several others. The sum of two hundred thousand yen was subscribed on the spot.

We learn that His Majesty the Emperor has subscribed a similar sum.

THE SAGHALIEN FISHERIES.

We read in the Kokumin Shimbun that the grants made, or which will have to be made, to Russian subjects in accordance with the benevolent policy said to have been adopted by the Japanese Government in the case of southern Saghalien, represent over 60 per cent. of the value of the whole fisheries. When the 222 fisheries were recently put up for sale to Japanese subjects the aggregate amount of the successful tenders was 547,948 yen, and if the amount of the 37 fisheries claimed by the Russians be considered on this basis, they are found to represent 345,203 yen, or over 60 per cent. of the whole. Tokyo journals state that the principal beneficiaries are three, namely:—

- M. Clemenko, who has leased 9 fisheries from 1899 to 1910, these nine fisheries amounting to 48,993 yen in the Japanese tenders.
- M. Semianoff, who has leased 17 fisheries from 1900 to 1910, the 17 amounting to 172,533 yen in the Japanese tenders.
- M. Birridge, who had leased 11 fisheries from year to year before the war and who is believed to have obtained a fresh lease, these 11 amounting to 123,677 yen in the tenders.

There is further the Kamchatka Trading Company which is said to have obtained a lease of Robben Island from 1900 to 1911, but which has not yet applied to have the lease confirmed, probably because the Japanese Government has closed the seal fisheries there and is employing men-of-war to guard them, with the object of restoring them to something like their old wealth of fur-giving animals. It is well understood that the Japanese Government does not acknowledge these fishing leases as rights of property. No right whatever is recognised in respect of Russian subjects. The leases are to be confirmed—if such a policy be ultimately followed—wholly as a matter of international courtesy. And indeed this question is of very trifling importance compared with the question of the fishing privileges which are to be conceded by Russia to Japanese subjects in the three seas of Japan, Behring and Okotsk, in accordance with the Portsmouth Treaty. The only comment to be made is that it would seem advisable to discuss and arrange the limits of the latter privileges before making the Saghalien concessions. Otherwise Japan may find that she has indulged in a fruitless display of magnanimity.

Contradictory rumours continue to circulate with reference to the problem of the Saghalien fisheries. A few days ago, on the authority evidently of a news agency, Tokyo journals asserted that the Government had resolved to confirm the privileges held by certain Russian subjects from St.

Petersburg, which resolve involved the necessity of revoking concessions subsequently made by Tokyo to Japanese subjects for the same fisheries. It is now denied with equal confidence that any such decision has been reached. The point is made that the Japanese Government can not reasonably cancel grants already openly sold by it to Japanese subjects and paid for by the latter. If then these fishing privileges held by Russians must be recognised, or if it be deemed expedient not to ignore them altogether in view of possible developments in another direction, then the simplest course is to indemnify the Russian holders out of the money paid by Japanese purchasers of the same privileges. There could not be any particular difficulty in buying out the Russians, and such a plan would seem the plainest after all. Some publicists ridicule the notion of trying to purchase Russian placability by concessions. They say that no policy could be more shortsighted, and that the best manner of dealing with St. Petersburg is to abate no jot of lawful rights. But these voices are in a decided minority, and the device of compensating the concessionaries out of the funds paid in by Japanese bidders appears to be the most approved.

THE GREAT MILITARY REVIEW.

Several correspondents having asked us whether admission can be obtained to see the great review on the 30th, we have made inquiries at the War Office and have ascertained that the only hope is by application to the Welcome Society in Tokyo. It is most improbable that accommodation can be provided for all the sight-seers, whatever form these applications take, and we understand that, as a pis-aller, some kind of structure will be erected at the northern side of the Hibiya Park, whence what may be called the over-flow of the review may be witnessed. The troops will parade at Aoyama, where the Imperial inspection and the march past will take place, but as fifty thousand men are to be assembled in Tokyo and as such a number can not find space on the Aoyama ground, a large contingent will be posted on each side of the street from the Palace to the parade. The Emperor's cortège will pass between these lines, and after its passage the men will close in and march four deep towards Aoyama. This part of the affair will be visible in some measure from the Hibiya Park, and very likely a great many Tokyo citizens will think it quite worth while to witness even that much. But for those who desire to see the parade, the inspection and the march-past the only chance is application to the Welcome Society, and on the whole we should not imagine that it is a very hopeful chance.

The line of the Imperial Procession on the 30th instant will be over the new bridge at the former Baba-saki Gate; then at once to the right along the moat; then by the road running on the north side of the Hibiya Park as far as the Sakurada Gate, where the procession will turn to the left until reaching the north face of the Foreign Office compound; whence it will wheel to the right, pass in front of the German Legation and then enter the direct road for Aoyama. The return journey of the troops will be the same as far as Akasaka Mitsuke, when the procession will take the Miyake-zaka (at the back of the War Department); then via the Hanzo Gate; then along the inside of the moat to the Take-bashi; then along the outside of the moat to Wadakura; thence by the Gaisen-doro to the Hibiya Park.

The immense park of captured guns are now in position on the Gaisen-doro—between the front gate of the Palace and the Baba-saki Gate. They make a very imposing spectacle.

The dimensions of the chief hall of entertainment in the Shinjuku Park, where over 6,000 officers will lunch on the 1st of May, are said to be 396 feet by 156 feet. The work of construction is nearly completed. There is also an ante-room measuring 120 feet by 240. All the members of the Imperial Family and all the Princes of the Blood will form part of the procession which will thus be quite unprecedented in Japan. Troops are daily arriving from the provinces.

THE MEETING OF PROVINCIAL GOVERNORS.

The Provincial Governors, to the number of 43, together with the Head of the Hokkaido Administration and the Governors of the three Cities, met on the 25th instant in the Home Department. General Terauchi, Minister of State for War, read an address on behalf of the Minister President of State. It consisted in the main of an exhortation to discountenance any disposition on the part of the people to indulge in extravagance as a result of the late victorious war, and an injunction to encourage the spirit of economy in every possible manner, as finance lay at the root of national greatness. The address alluded specially to the law for the nationalization of private railways, which measure the Premier attributed to the Government's desire of promoting the country's financial welfare.

Mr. Hara Kei, Minister of Home Affairs, then spoke. He said that every war since the Restoration had been attended by a measure of national progress, and the same result must be looked for now, especially as the recent triumph came at a time when the season was ripe for Japan's development. But this development was not to be confined to economics and politics, it must be universal. The local Governors could contribute largely to this end. Within the limits permitted by law they should spare no pains to encourage and promote progress of every kind. They might rely on being left a free hand by the Central Government, and they should not shrink from any responsibility incurred in the sequel of their own acts. He believed that nothing was more pressing at the present juncture than improvement of official procedure with a view to rendering it more facile and less tedious. Such a reform might not be possible to the extent contemplated by outsiders, who did not take full note of the history of regulations or of the inter-relations of laws. But a great deal might undoubtedly be done and the doing of it should not be postponed for a moment. Turning to post-bellum measures, he declared that nothing was more important than to foster the people's financial development. That was the fundamental necessity, and in obeying it all differences of political parties should be ignored, everyone endeavouring to further a result which made for the good of the country. It had hitherto been the custom for the Home Department to submit questions and proposals for the consideration of the Governors, but on this occasion the Department intended to invite suggestions from the Governors themselves, which suggestions would be adopted so far as the law permitted.

CHINA.

Monday, April 23.

Telegrams from Peking represent that certain Chinese statesmen are incensed because Japan has promised the opening of Antung and Tatung-kau on May 1st. and of Mukden on June 1st. They allege that it is not within Japan's competence to fix these dates and that by so doing she has trespassed upon China's sovereign rights. If the Chinese Government takes that line the opening of Manchuria will be postponed, we presume, though it is quite obvious that since the final decision in this matter must always have rested with China, her alleged protest is an example of somewhat excessive self-assertion. As a matter of fact Japan may be said to be in military occupation of all Southern Manchuria, and she will remain in possession until the expiration of the originally fixed period of 18 months, unless the Russian evacuation having been effected sooner, she agrees to step out simultaneously with the latter consummation. Evidently, therefore, China is not in a position to open Mukden, Antung and Tatung-kau without Japan's cooperation. Nevertheless we should have imagined that Japan would not take the step without consulting China, and we strongly suspect that she did consult her, and that the mood attributed to "certain Chinese statesmen" has its origin in the fancy of a newspaper correspondent.

A telegram to the Jiji Shimpō from Peking says that Viceroy Yuan has three times addressed the Waiwupu urging that Japan be asked to discontinue work of construction on the Mukden-Hsinmintun Railway, that the price be assessed, and that the line be purchased by the Chinese Government. If this message be correct, it indicates that the Japanese are actually engaged converting into a permanent way the military road taken by them from the Russians. It must be confessed that the whole problem of Manchurian railways is very obscure.

There is said to be talk of changing the present Governor-General of Mukden, who has not shown himself competent to deal with difficult situations.

Sir Ernest Satow, in accordance with instructions from home, is reported to have postponed his departure by two months, in order that he may bring to a conclusion the Nanchang and Tibetan negotiations. A delay of two months will mean that instead of getting away in the spring, Sir Ernest will have to remain until the hot weather fully sets in.

A telegram to the Asahi Shimbun from Shanghai says that France is showing a more yielding mood in the matter of the Nanchang trouble. She has withdrawn her demand for a yearly payment to the support of the Roman Catholic church in the district—did she ever make such a demand?—and she has expressed her desire to re-consider the remaining five propositions. China has appointed Tang Shiao-i and Lien Shun (?) as Commissioners to deal with this affair.

Tuesday, April 24.

One of the Japanese subjects who was apprehended by the Russians at Harbin and incarcerated for some time on suspicion of being a spy, has returned to Nagasaki. He says that the prison at Harbin is full of accused persons, some 360 of whom are held for grave offences. The greater portion of the prisoners are charged with the crime of insurrection. Mr. Itanaga, who had been sent by the Japanese authorities to purchase horse-fodder, is still detained as a spy and is said to be experiencing very harsh treatment. But the strangest part of this man's story is that troops are constantly reaching Harbin from Russia, and that they are distributed to various points. He also alleges that Nicholisk is to be a great military depot and that stores are being carried thither in large quantities.

Several Japanese journals publish this statement. The incredible part of it is that relating to the arrival of troops at Harbin. Possibly the assembly of troops there to be entrained for Russia has been misinterpreted.

The Japanese and Russian commissions for arranging the transfer of the railway northward of Changtu met at Shahotsu on the 22nd instant, the Japanese being under the command of Major-General Nakamura and the Russians under Major-General de Witte. The Japanese reached the rendezvous at 9.20 a.m. but the Russians did not appear before 10.40. The latter were escorted by a sotnia of Cossacks. A telegraphic account of the meeting is published by the Asahi, which receives it from a correspondent at Tieling. We learn that the programme was that the section of 100 miles between Changtu and Supingchieh should be handed over at once, and the section between Supingchieh and Changchun on the 1st of August. Major-General Nakamura preferred two requests. The first was that as the Portsmouth Treaty entitled Japan to receive the railway, all its appurtenances and the mines connected with it, and as the Japanese were naturally without exact information concerning the details of this property, the Russian should produce all books and documents throwing light on the matter. To this Major-General de Witte assented, and two boxes full of books and documents were transferred to the Japanese. The second request was that opportunity should be taken of the meeting of the commissions to hand over not merely the Changtu-Supingchieh section but also the Supingchieh-Changchun. Major-General de Witte was at first disposed to plead that his powers did not extend to such an arrangement, but on its being pointed out that his powers were identical with those of Major-General Nakamura, he agreed to settle all the preliminaries then and there, but to defer the actual transfer until further instructions from the Commander-in-chief.

The conference lasted until 4.30 p.m. No building connected with the railway could boast a roof, and a Chinese farmer's house supplemented by a tent had to be used. It was consequently agreed that the next meeting should take place at Supingchieh. Major-General Nakamura complained strongly of the condition of the line. He said that, according to the Portsmouth Treaty, the Russians were bound to hand over the road in a fair state, whereas many of the rails had been carried away and a large part of the sleepers. The Russian commissioner replied that since the signing of the treaty not so much as a nail had been extracted by them. All the havoc had been wrought by Chinese marauders, and in so far as this was due to insufficient supervision on the part of the Russians, he begged to apologise.

Wednesday, April 25.

A telegram to the Asahi Shimbun from Peking, dated the 23rd, says that the treaty with reference to Tibet has been at length concluded. Its main points are (1) that England recognises Tibet to be under China's protection; (2) that, so long as no outside Power interferes, England will abstain altogether from any meddling in Tibet's domestic administration; (3) that to increase trade between Tibet and China, markets shall be opened in the former and shall be connected by telegraph with India; (4) that England shall have preferential rights in the matter of Tibetan railways, mines and all other profitable concessions; (5) that, with the exception of Chinese subjects, no aliens shall be employed in the domestic administration of Tibet; and (6) that China shall pay to England, in reimbursement of the military outlays incurred by the latter, a sum of 2,400,000 taels.

Evidently the second and the fourth of these conditions are the backbone of the Treaty. It must have gone hard with the Chinese Government to concede the latter, for it is directly opposed to the policy now understood to be adopted in Peking.

It is telegraphed to Tokyo that the Nanchang complication is likely to be settled on the basis of China paying 500,000 taels to France and 400,000 to England. Such is the meagre intelligence sent across the wires to the Asahi Shimbun. We find it very hard to credit the idea that this affair has been disposed of by a simple monetary payment. If that be true, the finale will bear the aspect of a fiasco.

A prominent official in Peking is credited with saying that the negotiations between China and Russia are at a standstill. This is attributed to the fact—if it be a fact—that whereas it had been agreed to ignore the secret treaty formerly concluded between the Russian General Grodikoff and the Chinese Governor of Kirin, Mr. Chou, nevertheless M. Pokotiloff is preferring demands identical with the stipulations of the treaty. In short, he is attempting to restore a convention which the two Powers had agreed to consign to the waste-paper basket. The time of this convention's signature is placed in the days when General Grodikoff acquired Blagovestchensk notoriety and before he replaced Linevitch as commander-in-chief. This reference to date certainly strengthens the probability of the story now told as to the Peking negotiations, for it may well be supposed that, in his capacity of commander-in-chief, General Grodikoff is urging M. Pokotiloff to resuscitate by diplomacy in Peking the agreement formerly signed by the General in Kirin.

Thursday, April 26.

As was easy to conjecture, the news received on the 24th that the Nanchang complication had been settled on a purely monetary basis, is now contradicted. So far as England is concerned the payment of a small indemnity by China—thirty thousand taels is spoken of, in marked contrast to the four hundred thousand of the previous telegram—will suffice, but France demands much more than pecuniary indemnification and the punishment of three minor officials. Her money claim is said to be 735,000 taels. She asks for the degradation of the governor and another high official, as well as the punishment of three of the leading gentry, and she asks that the other leading inhabitants shall proceed to the Christian church to make public apology, and that a monument should be erected to the memory of the sufferers. The latest news is that negotiations are about to commence on this basis, and it thus appears that the previous telegram was about as incorrect as possible.

It is stated by Tokyo journals that the Tibetan treaty having now been concluded, Sir Ernest Satow will probably leave Peking almost immediately. It is also stated that a strong protest may be anticipated from Russia on the basis of her secret treaty with China. There is always talk of secret treaties between Russia and China whenever any complication arises. But it is evidently extravagant to suppose that such agreements can be set up against conventions openly concluded by third Powers with one of the parties to the alleged contract.

Friday, April 27.

The report compiled by Surgeon C. H. Daws, R.N. of a post-mortem performed by him on the body of Mr. Chiang, magistrate of Nanchang, has been published verbatim in Shanghai. Dr. Daws, after a most detailed and minute description of the condition of the deceased, arrives at the definite conclusion that he died by his own hand, and that, in addition to the first wound inflicted, he made two subsequent efforts to hasten the catastrophe, one by stabbing himself with a scissors or shears, another by dragging open the wound with his fingers. To persons without surgical knowledge it seems scarcely credible that examination of the body of a man more than two days after his death, can disclose whether his fate was the result of suicide or murder. And indeed Dr. Daws himself does not pretend to speak with absolute assurance. But the particulars he gives—particulars too lengthy to be reproduced here—are convincing, and after their perusal no one can retain any credence in the allegation that the magistrate was done to death by the late Father Lacruce. That attempt to impute the guilt of murder to a zealous propagandist of Christianity is now completely discredited.

THE MINISTER OF HOME AFFAIRS AND THE METROPOLITAN POLICE.

H.E. Mr. Hara, Minister of State for Home Affairs, proceeded on Thursday morning to the head offices of the Metropolitan Police, and delivered a lecture in explanation of his recently issued instruction. He did not pretend to say anything new. His predecessors had often inculcated the very same obligations which he now urged upon his hearers; namely, the obligation of uprightness and freedom from corruption (seiren keppaku); the obligation of suavity and politeness (shinsetsu tenrei) in the discharge of their duties; the obligation of brevity and expedition (kani hinsho) in dealing with affairs instead of adhering to useless formalities and multiplying forms of procedure, and finally the obligation of absolute fairness and impartiality (kōhei), recognising no differences of political parties, ranks or degrees but treating all citizens exactly alike. The Minister alluded to the rapid growth of the Tokyo population; to the consequent increase of police duties, and to the fact that the numerical strength of the force was insufficient. From every point of view it was absolutely necessary to augment the salaries of the force. But we gather from His Excellency's speech that this step is not to be taken immediately.

This was the first instance of a Minister of Home Affairs proceeding in person to the offices of the Police and addressing the Inspectors. Mr. Anraku, Chief of Police, called attention to the fact and expressed a conviction that the results of the visit would be beneficial.

The Asahi Shimbun, speaking of the reorganization of the Police, says that the 75 separate stations (bunsho) which were established some years ago by the advice of the Tokyo Municipality, are to be abolished, and that, on the other hand, the number of police-boxes will be largely increased. As for the establishment, which now numbers 3,500, it will be raised to 5,000, and each constable will receive an addition of 2 yen monthly to his salary.

Governor Senge also has addressed an instruction to the Police, the important part of which is that they are required to dispense with formalities and be content if a document is clear and comprehensible whatever the language it be couched in. We may mention in connexion with this a story told by Professor Hozumi of how he tried for 3 days to pen a document which would meet the approval of the formalists at a police station and how he was finally obliged to spend 2 sen upon having it written by a professional amanuensis who lived hard by. The Governor also directs the Police to abandon their habit of summoning citizens indiscriminately to the stations. Further, when they do summon them they are to choose convenient hours, and they are to take care that the persons summoned are not kept waiting and are not sent back owing to the absence of the inspector or constable charged with the business.

The Governor has issued similar instructions to all the local offices in the municipality. They are enjoined to make celerity and freedom from formalities their prime object in transacting business, and to substitute the telephone as far as possible for documents and interviews.

If these reforms be carried out they will mark the beginning of a new and most earnestly desired era for Tokyo. The newspapers are delighted. They declare that they raise both hands in praise. But they justly note that such a reform demands a great deal more than the mere issue of instructions from Ministers and Governors. It demands discretion, courage and intelligence, to say nothing of zeal, on the part of subordinates.

THE EX-MINISTER OF STATE FOR FOREIGN AFFAIRS.

In the Japan Times we read that, probably on the strength of a scurrilous article in a low-class Tokyo Journal, the correspondent of some Canadian and other foreign newspapers wired a statement charging Mr. Kato, the recent Minister of State for Foreign Affairs, with resigning his portfolio because the pecuniary interests of a millionaire connexion were menaced by the bill for the purchase of State railways. The Japan Times writes an able editorial refuting this accusation, but we venture to think that our contemporary might have dispensed with the task of marshalling arguments in refutation of a slander so obviously sensational. It is the curse of modern journalism that it gives employment to correspondents who, to maintain their positions, are compelled to supply striking items to the newspapers for which they cater. These men invariably seek the worst discoverable explanation of every incident, and generally find it in mercenary motives, not recognising that the motive which inspires their own sacrifice of truth and decency on the altar of sensation, is essentially the pursuit of pecuniary emolument. In the particular case treated by the Japan Times, the Japanese journal which originally sinned and its foreign followers paraded their complete ignorance of facts, or their total indifference to truth, by taunting Mr. Kato because he endorsed the Cabinet's programme of continuing the war taxes and establishing a large amortization fund, whereas he objected to the Railway Bill. There is not the faintest analogy between the bill in question and the former two measures. Any one bracketing them together must either be quite careless of truth or inconceivably ill-informed. The war taxes and the amortization fund were simply questions of financial convenience; the Railway Bill involved a principle which lies at the very root of sound administration and national prosperity, the principle of the inviolability of rights of property. As a point of theory the compulsory sale of private railways before the periods of their charters have expired is distinctly a violation of rights of property. It may have been palliated in Japan's case by national expediency and by the tacit—if not previously ascertained—assent of a majority of the shareholders. But if these extenuations failed to satisfy Mr. Kato's conscience, his resignation evinced not only a high sense of legislative integrity but also readiness to subserve political ambition to the dictates of upright statesmanship. His retirement from office under the circumstances must have meant a most painful sacrifice; a sacrifice quite beyond the conception of persons like the Canadian correspondent or his Japanese prototype, and it is therefore very natural that these men should wholly misinterpret the incident.

TOKYO HARBOUR.

It is 20 years, we read in the Nichi Nichi Shimbun, since the day when at the instance of the Home Department, then under Count Yamagata, the Tokyo Municipality appointed a committee to consider the feasibility of providing a harbour for Tokyo. Dr. Furuichi, the well-known engineer, was the principal expert employed, and he and his assistants drew up a plan the gist of which was to build an embankment from Shibaura to the forts, reclaim all the land on the Tokyo side of the embankment except the approaches to the harbour, and have the latter outside the embankment. This would have placed the centre of the port somewhere in the vicinity of the present Shinagawa railway station, or, in other words, opposite Takanawa. The cost of this work was estimated at 41 million yen, one half of which sum the municipality hoped to obtain from the Treasury and by the sale of the reclaimed land, while the other half would have to be put up by the city. This would have involved an addition of 400,000 yen annually to the present taxes of the citizens. But the taxes already amounted to 2 millions of yen and showed a constant tendency to increase. Therefore the committee sought for a less expensive plan and found it in a scheme to fill up all the space within the Forts Nos. 4, 1 and 5—except of course the channels to the mouths of the Tokyo rivers—thus bringing the centre of the harbour to the region of southern Shinagawa, or, in other words, to the vicinity of Omori. By this means about 1¼ million tsubo of land would be reclaimed, which would fetch a sum of at least 35 million yen, leaving only a comparatively small burden to be shouldered by the city. But when this scheme was submitted to Professor Furuichi, he denounced it utterly. Tokyo might almost as well have no harbour at all, he said, as a port so distant as Omori, and to proceed with such an undertaking would be madness. The Municipality are now represented as being in an almost despairing condition. They see only one of two courses; either to employ a foreign engineer for drawing up a new scheme, or to dissolve the 20-years old committee and drop the whole project.

FORMOSA.

Great strides have certainly been made in the pacification of Formosa, but with regard to a large part of island, it is evident that the "pacification" of the inhabitants is a term for which we should be more correct in writing "extermination." The Hochi Shimbun has just published a series of seven articles on this subject, and the gist of them may be given here without any fear of wearying our readers. Not more than two-fifths of the island have been brought completely under civilized sway. This portion consists of the extreme north and south, and a belt comprised between the west coast and a high range of hills that form the backbone of the island. By the Japanese the pacified aborigines are called Juku-ban and those that still remain implacable are known as Seiban. The former are partly Chinese by birth. They sided with the Chinese against the Japanese at the outset, and naturally with the Chinese they afterwards bowed to the situation. Accurately subdivided there are said to be twenty races of the Seiban, but broadly speaking there are only eight. They occupy the mountainous and thickly wooded strip of territory comprised between the east coast and the median line of mountains. But they are not equally distributed throughout this strip. In the southern half many have become pacified, whereas in the northern half all are as savage as ever. It is in this northern half that the "head-hunters" have their habitat. So far as can be ascertained, they were not originally savages. Their ferocious disposition was developed gradually under the pressure of Chinese raids. Driven by the Chinese from the plane country on the west and pursued again and again into their refuges among the hills, they became veritable Ishmaelites, and there grew up in their bosoms a thirst for vengeance which they lose no opportunity of slaking. There are 15,000 of these aborigines in the southern half of the island's eastern zone and 40,000 in the northern half. All attempts to pacify them having failed, the Japanese have been obliged to resort to a system which may be described as one of gradual invasion. The operation partakes in some respects of the nature of hunting wild beasts. The Seiban utilize the mountains, the ravines, the riverbeds and the rocks, just as hunted beasts would use them, and in all essential respects they are hunted beasts, the hunters being a long line of armed detachments which push gradually eastward into the unpacified zone. These detachments are called Aiyu (village braves) their units—Aitei, or village youths—being Chinamen. To each Aiyu there is an assistant-constable (native) who acts as corporal, there is a Japanese constable who discharges the function of sergeant, and there is a police-sergeant who fills the post of officer. The total strength of these invading corps is 10,900, namely, 3,300 Japanese police-sergeants and constables; 3,500 native assistant constables, and 4,100 native privates. They carry the arms of soldiers but are under the ultimate control of the civil administration. The extent of front along which they operate is about 500 miles, so that there are some 20 men per mile. We gather that the whole front of the unpacified zone—in other words, the length of the mountain range forming the backbone of the island—is a thousand miles, but in the southern half of it measures of conciliation alone are relied on, and the iron line of troops operating steadily eastward advances from the border of the northern section only. The invading bodies take care to keep in touch of each other constantly, but to do so does not appear to be always possible, for news occasionally arrives of successful attacks organized by the savages against isolated bands. The system seems, however, to be as nearly perfect as human ingenuity can make it, and there can be no question that the zone of resistance is being gradually and steadily narrowed. Force alone is not relied on. The two great necessities of the Seiban, salt and ammunition, are carefully excluded by the Japanese. It is not possible, however, to make this exclusion radical. Small quantities of the contraband articles are supplied by Chinese boats visiting the eastern coast and by the Jukuban in the south. Still the strictness of the blockade has raised the price of salt to 1½ yen per sho and that of 3 cartridges to 1 yen. Application was made to the naval authorities to prevent smuggling over-sea, but they declined, and small steamers are now to be armed for the service. Thus the doom of these misguided people creeps nearer day by day, and ultimately the 7,500 square miles occupied by them will pass into Japanese hands. But the operation is not without loss as the following table shows:—

LOSSES OF CORDON CORPS.
	Killed.	Wounded.	Total.
1902 .....	17	1	18
1903 .....	30	24	54
1904 .....	105	43	148
Totals .....	152	68	220

The Hochi justly observes, that there are no Orders of the Golden Kite or Shokonsha festivals for the men who die in this service. They go down to the grave unwept, unhonoured and unsung.

There appears to be much distress in Formosa in consequence of the recent earthquake. Baron Goto reports that shocks of greater or less violence continue daily, and that they cause ceaseless uneasiness. On the 17th instant there was a tremendous downpour of rain which made it impossible for the people who are camping out to cook any food. On that day and the following measures had to be concerted for specially preparing provisions, and rations were served out to 10,483 persons, the amount of rice employed being 444 koku. From the 19th it was determined to supply food only to the most indigent. Assistance has also been given towards the re-building of the inhabitants' houses. Baron Goto says that the Emperor's benevolent gift and these efforts on the part of the local government have produced a most excellent impression, and that voices of gratitude are loudly heard. The streets of Kagi were so littered with the debris of fallen houses that special measures had to be adopted to render them passable.

WASTE LANDS AND SHEEP IN JAPAN.

A correspondent writes:—"Sheep-raising in Australia has failed again and again, but the British subject never says die, and, as Napoleon observed of him, never knows when he is beaten. The Bushido warrior is made of similar stuff, and if the order is 'Up guards and at them,' behind a plow-handle he will make the desert blossom as a rose and bring forth abundantly. The history of California shows what labour put on land can do to feed the world. Read the History of San Francisco Missions, 'Dana's Three Years Before the Mast etc.' Almost all recent works on social science show that land and labour are the great sources of wealth and that a diversity of crops is the great panacea for famines and all sorts of bad times. Compare the people of the north of Ireland with those of the south who suffered famine because they depended on potatoes only. Labour can replace the bamboo-grass with alfalfa. Goats can eat and thrive on anything."

All this is very true with certain reservations and it would be more convincing were it less romantic. The questions to be considered are very simple. We expressed, and again express, a doubt whether moors like Nasu-no-hara, which are thickly covered with volcanic scoria, could be made productive however diligently they were ploughed. On such moors every patch that possesses any apparently arable potentialities has been utilized by the Japanese peasant, and the idea of attempting more does not seem to have presented itself to his mind during centuries of observation. We do not venture to allege that the feat of growing crops in such places is out of the question, but we do think that it presents difficulties imperfectly appreciated by critics like our correspondent. As to goats being able to "eat and thrive on anything," it remains to be proved whether they can live on bamboo grass. Certainly sheep can not. Sheep will not live upon any grass indigenous in Japan. Foreign grass must be cultivated specially for their benefit, and the officials of the old Colonization Department, as well as those of the Imperial Farms, could tell something of what that means. Of course if bamboo-grass could be replaced by lucern as easily as our correspondent suggests, the problem would look different. But could it? Bamboo-grass is about the most obstinate tenant to which nature ever leased a plot of land. Then there is the further obstacle that the Japanese people must first be trained to eat mutton and goat's flesh. At present they have a radical dislike for mutton, and we may take it for granted that they would loathe goat or kid flesh. However there is no knowing what the future may bring forth. Our faith in time is large. But we adhere to the point that those who glibly condemn the Japanese for not growing wheat on their moors and feeding sheep and goats on their hills, show a little "previousness" of judgment.

REMBRANDT.

Mr. William Heinemann, the celebrated London publisher, is bringing out a series of ten albums containing facsimile reproductions of Rembrandt's most famous pictures, with an illuminating preface and text by Mr. Emile Michel. These albums, which cost only half a crown cash, certainly possess the greatest interest. Two numbers have already appeared, and they show that the complete series will be intensely attractive to lovers of fine art. It is only in the era when the science of illustration has attained such remarkable development that a publication like these Rembrandt albums is possible. They afford the public an opportunity of enjoying and appreciating the works of the great Dutch master as fully as would the galleries where the originals are displayed and where these perfect facsimiles have been obtained at the cost of great trouble and outlay. The pages are arranged so that the completed series can be bound into one volume of convenient dimensions. We presume that the albums are obtainable at Messrs. Kelly and Walsh's library.

KOREA.

The Tsushin Kanri-Kyoku (Bureaus for managing communications), established by the Japanese in Korea, are to be henceforth intrusted with the duty of receiving and transmitting State funds in districts where the Central Bank has no office or branch. For this service the bureaus are to receive an annual grant of 250,000 yen.

Marquis Ito left Seoul on the 21st instant for Japan.

It has been suggested to us by a correspondent that the Weekly Province of British Columbia either greatly exaggerated or grossly misrepresented the Venerable Archdeacon Jeffries when, in a recent issue, it put into his mouth the extraordinary charge that Japanese soldiers in Korea fusillade Korean subjects if the latter object to being despoiled of their property by Japanese, and our correspondent asks us to advise that judgment should be suspended until the exact words used by the Archdeacon are clearly ascertained. Our article (21st instant) which constitutes the subject of this suggestion did in fact aim at conveying precisely a qualified view. In two places we clearly indicated the possibility that the Archdeacon had been misquoted. In one part we said:—"It is impossible to distinguish how far his assertions have been distorted by the newspaper publishing them, but that they have been in some degree distorted we can not entertain any doubt." And in another part we wrote:—"We have not the slightest hesitation in denouncing that assertion"—the fusillading of Koreans because they objected to being robbed—"as a shocking lie, and we regret greatly that it should have come from the lips of a clergyman, if indeed it did so come." No means at present offer of judging between the Archdeacon and the newspaper which quotes him, though of course there is the strong inherent improbability that such slanders should have emanated from Christian divine. It remains, however, for Archdeacon Jeffries to set himself right with the public. If, as we are disposed to think, he has been grossly misrepresented, he must give as much publicity and emphasis to a disavowal of the Weekly Province's report as have been given to the report itself, and in the meantime it is permissible to entertain the hope that he has been the victim of an unscrupulous and remarkably inaccurate reporter. Evidently the Weekly Province must have come under his notice, and if he was misrepresented by it, there can be no doubt that he took immediate measures to contradict the slander, in which event the subsequent number of the British Colombian journal will bring to us his denial.

The Hoan Kisoku recently enacted in Korea by the Residency General appear to be a compound of the Peace Preservation Regulations (Hoan Jorei) and the Warning Regulations (Yokai-rei) which, when enacted years ago in Japan, created so much commotion. The first article empowers Residents (riji) to order that any persons who, having no fixed abode or occupation, speak or behave in a disorderly manner, shall, within a fixed period, acquire a fixed abode or adopt a fixed trade, and shall duly report the fact of having done so. The second article provides that, without authority from a licensed barrister or from a Resident, no Japanese subject shall undertake matters of a legal character. This provision is obviously intended to correct an abuse not uncommon in Japan, namely, the interference of sashi in cases where, by the exercise of intimidation, they seek to bring about a settlement without recourse to the law courts. The third article requires that previous notice must be given to a Resident and his consent obtained before making any attempt to collect money or to promote the formation of an association, for any purpose whatsoever. Then follow articles forbidding the employment of violence, fraud or menace to influence the acts or opinions of others or to further demands, or to enhance prices, or to increase or decrease the cost of labour. There is also a veto against exacting or accepting high commissions or fees for services rendered in connexion with the raising or discharge of loans in coin or in kind, as well as against the use of violence, menace, fraud or forceful restraint in connexion with the collection of debts or the recovery of articles. Finally, it is forbidden to receive, or promise to receive, money or other form of reward for assisting men to obtain office. The punishments for violating these rules vary from 3 months major imprisonment with a fine not exceeding 50 yen, to 1 year's imprisonment with 200 yen fine. The Rules go into operation from May 1st.

The pasture ground of which mention was recently made as about to be formed in Korea under the auspices of the Imperial Households of that country and Japan, has been chosen by Viscount Fujinami. It is said to measure 15 miles by 10.

The compilation of an Imperial Household Law (Koshitsu Tenpan) for Korea after the manner of Japan is proceeding apace. This project has received most zealous approval from the Emperor of Korea. It is expected that the new law will very shortly be promulgated.

FORMOSAN FINANCES.

Formosa has now an income of 25 $\frac{3}{4}$  million yen and is self-supporting. The figures for the current fiscal year as compared with those for last year are as follow:—

	1906-7.	1905-6.	Difference.
Ordinary Revenue	25,364,426	19,997,408	+5,367,018
Extraordinary Revenue	405,674	15,786	+389,888
Totals	25,770,100	20,013,194	+5,956,906
Ordinary Expenditures	19,467,044	16,247,056	+3,229,988
Extraordinary Expenditures	6,303,056	4,459,122	+1,843,934
Totals	25,770,100	20,706,178	+5,063,922

It is further to be noted that the budget for the current fiscal year includes a sum of over 2 million yen allotted for amortization of the Formosa public works debt, and a further sum of 3 millions for the construction and repair of railways, an outlay hitherto defrayed out of the proceeds of bonds. Baron Goto, when speaking before the Budget Committee of the Lower House, said that nothing had assisted Formosan finance more than State monopolies, and that by improving this system considerable increases of revenue might be looked for in the future. The monopolies bring in the following sums:—

	Yen.
Salt Monopoly	847,000
Camphor	6,620,000
Opium	4,140,000
Tobacco	3,270,000
Total	14,877,000

Thus it is seen that these monopolies produce more than a moiety of the whole revenue. But the Keizai Zasshi justly observes that the expenditure involved in working the monopolies is also very large, namely, 8,600,000 yen for the current year. In other words to obtain a gross income of 12 yen an outlay of 7 yen is required. Moreover, it has to be remembered that the establishment of these monopolies has demanded the fixing of large sums of capital, so that, on the whole, the monopoly system does not make such a fine showing as might be imagined at first sight. Our contemporary further observes that tea is taxed to the extent of 430,000 yen, that there are outward harbour dues aggregating 170,000 yen, and that the export duties aggregate over 300,000 yen. Against all these imposts the Keizai Zasshi strongly inveighs, declaring that so long as such trade-crippling taxes are levied, it is impossible to be satisfied with the Formosan fiscal system.

THE TAX INVESTIGATION COMMITTEE.

In the last session of the Diet the Government introduced a bill providing for the appointment of a Tax Investigation Committee and introduced also a budget appropriating the necessary funds. This project—which was chiefly concerned with the war taxes—obtained the approval of the Lower House but was rejected by the Upper on the ground that the responsibility of making such investigations rested on the Government and that no special provision need be made for the discharge of a duty which, under any circumstances, had to be performed. The Government has been guided by the opinions of both Houses. It has organized an investigation consisting entirely of officials. The purpose is thus composing the personnel is that the committee approved of by the Representatives included non-official members, whereas the Peers virtually decided that, if such a committee was formed at all, it must be purely official. Thus while the committee now appointed is not in contravention of either House's decision, it accomplishes the Government's original purpose, in part at all events. The chairman is Mr. Wakatsuki, Vice-Minister of Finance, and the members are ten. It is expected that the committee (called Zeiko Shinsa-kai) will work with all expedition, and will complete its labours within six months,—instead of the two years proposed by the original bill—so that the results may be communicated to the Diet next session.

THE PRIZE SHIPS.

Out of the 15 prize steamers recently put up to tender by the Naval Department, eleven were sold and it was announced that fresh tenders must be sent in for the remaining four as the offers made did not come up to the lowest official figure. The vessels sold were as follow (we omit the names of the Japanese purchasers as none of them is likely to be known to our readers):—

Name of Ship.	Price.	Purchaser.
Toppi Maru .....	151,500	Messrs. Samuel
Henri Balkow .....	21,500	Samuel & Co.
Lydia .....	41,000
Montara .....	134,750	Messrs. Samuel
Yatsura Maru .....	45,000	Samuel & Co.
Utsun Maru .....	44,800
King Arthur .....	30,000
Bawtry .....	79,867
Antiope .....	14,300	Messrs. Libaud Co. (?)
Scotchman .....	55,000
Nagara Maru .....	31,000

Total ..... 648,217

This represents 34.16 yen per ton,

MR. ROBERT LITTLE.

The news is confirmed of the death of Mr. Robert W. Little, Editor of the North China Daily News. Typhoid fever was the cause but as yet we have no particulars. Mr. Little, it need scarcely be observed, was one of that remarkable family whose members have done so much to make China known to the English-speaking world. He came to the East originally with the intention of pursuing a mercantile career, but little success attended his efforts, and in 1889 he became Editor of the leading Shanghai journal, which post he had filled for 17 years when death overtook him. It is as a journalist that we are familiar with him. He had a light and pleasant style, and he brought to his task not only great industry but also remarkably sound judgment. The latest occasion on which he exercised this latter quality conspicuously was in connexion with the Russo-Japanese war, when he took the right side all through, showing keen insight into the situation. He was not equally happy in connexion with the conflict between China and Japan ten years previously, but in extenuation of his want of perspicacity on that occasion it must be noted that his error was shared by the great majority of foreign onlookers and that his sympathies naturally impelled him to espouse the cause of the country he lived in. Speaking broadly, no one will deny that he very greatly improved the quality of the North-China Daily News, raising it to a most prominent position among Far-Eastern journals and winning for it a large degree of popularity. In the ordinary course of events several years of active work should have lain before him, and it will be difficult indeed to find any worthy successor in the editorial chair or any occupant of the important place he filled in Shanghai Society.

Later.

The death of Mr. Robert Little, editor of the N.-C. Daily News, took place on Friday, 21st inst., at his residence on The Bund, Shanghai. The deceased was in his 67th year. In an "In Memoriam" notice our senior Shanghai contemporary says:—

We do not need to ask the sympathy of our readers this morning in the loss—the irreparable loss—which the words above written mean for us. Our sorrow is Shanghai's. It is not for us who have lived with Mr. Little, who have worked under him, who have looked to him for unfailing leadership, to praise him. As our chief we honoured him, as our friend we deplore him. Everyone knew him. To half Shanghai he was invariably "Uncle Bob," and to know him was to love him.

A son of the late Dr. W. J. Little, late senior physician of the London Hospital, Robert Little proceeded from St. Paul's school to Oriel College, Oxford, where he graduated. He came out to Shanghai rather more than forty years ago, making the tedious voyage round the Cape before the days of steamers or Suez canal. He was engaged for some years in different branches of commerce, as a tea merchant and as Secretary to the Shanghai Electrical Company, among other things until he joined the staff of the North-China Herald first as Sub-Editor, and succeeding Mr. J. W. Maclellan as Editor, some years later, in March, 1889. His fellow journalists showed their appreciation of his worth by electing him one of the few Fellows of the Institute of Journalists outside the home country. Before undertaking newspaper work Mr. Little had already taken the keenest interest in public affairs and from 1879 to 1881 was Chairman of the Municipal Council. A polished scholarly writer, he was also a fluent public speaker, with the rare gift of saying the right thing at the right time in the right way.

There was no keener sportsman in his day. Mr. Little was an original member of the Hook and Ladder Fire Company, now the Mibholoongs; he rode with the Shanghai Rangers, the dashing predecessors of our present Light Horse, and was a member of the Reserve Company of Volunteers till quite recently. As an oarsman he was captain and also secretary of the Shanghai Rowing Club. He knew the river intimately and nothing in the way of watercraft came amiss to him. In matters theatrical he took always the keenest interest and he was long one of Shanghai's most popular amateur entertainers. The ending of so full a life leaves a gap in our community which will not be easily filled. He passed away peacefully, surrounded by his near relatives, full of years and honour, and his memory will long be cherished in the city to which he gave so much.

THE MINISTER OF FINANCE AND FOREIGN TOURISTS.

His Excellency Mr. Sakatani, speaking before the Economic Society in his private capacity of member, laid great stress on the necessity of arrangements for the accommodation of tourists. He mentioned the improvement of railway services and of connexions between steamers and railways as a reform easy of attainment but hotels belonged, he said, to a different category, and unless vigorous measures were taken in this direction tourists would continue to find Japan what a distinguished traveller had recently called it, virtually a closed country. His Excellency thought that this was distinctly a matter calling for official intervention, and he spoke of not only giving portions of public land free for the erection of hotels, but also of remitting the business tax in the case of these concerns whether run by foreigners or by Japanese. It was pointed out, however, that the Diet could never be brought to consent to remission of the tax, and that special consideration in the matter of sites was all that could be reasonably asked for.

We should like to be able to share the Minister's confidence as to improvements in railway service. Daily complaints are heard about the service on the Tokaido line, which is the main trunk route of Japan, and there does not seem to be any valid ground for asserting that anything like adequate steps have been taken to adapt this line to the demands of the great traffic passing over it.

Mr. Sakatani alluded also to the guides. That is a very hackneyed subject. It has often been discussed in these columns. The Welcome Society and Mr. Minami's agency have done much but there is much still to be done, and how to do it is a veritable puzzle.

DEPARTURE OF AN OLD RESIDENT.

By the Royal Mail steamship Athenian, of the C. P. R., departs this morning Mr. Fred. G. Woodruff, of whom it may be said, without stretching the meaning of the words one jot or one tittle, that he was the best known man in Yokohama. Coming to the East originally with the intention of joining the Hoochly pilot service at Calcutta, young Woodruff, who came of seafaring folk located at Deal in Kent for generations, arrived in Nagasaki by sailing ship in the spring of 1869. Passing on almost at once to Yokohama he entered the service of Messrs. Burgess and Burdick, ship chandlers and compradores. He was soon in charge of their outdoor staff, and when we mention that in those days it was the custom for the ship-compradores to go right down to Sagami and board the incoming vessels on the open sea before even the pilot had put off, some idea of the strenuous life which Mr. Woodruff led can be gathered. In those days all the cattle slaughtered here for food were killed at the abattoirs at Honmoku and eight firms were engaged in the business. Mr. Woodruff's early training as a butcher stood him in good stead and he was soon starting in business on his own account.

Trade must have been brisk for him, for he speaks of boarding nineteen ships in one day, and all of them down the Bay. In 1874, tiring of the life, he sold his share of the business to the immediate predecessor of Mr. Langfeldt, and taking passage on the Scotch clipper ship Cathay, carrying home the first cargo of Japanese rice ever shipped to England, he arrived off Falmouth in the record time of 120 days. Six months in the old country and Mr. Woodruff came out East again. For a while he pursued his old line of business, but 21 years ago he shouldered the now familiar leather bag and with the good wishes of all the community began work as a bill-collector. Faithfully has he discharged his duty to all his clients in this direction, and no man leaves Yokohama with a finer record for uprightness and sterling honesty of purpose, and none deserves a holiday better than he. Mr. Woodruff intends spending a week with his son, at school in Canada, and then joins the Empress of Britain on her first trip to England, expecting to reach Liverpool by May 29. From thence he makes his way home to Deal, to renew his associations with the "Garden of England—Kent—" as a good Kentishman should.

THE FIRST CENSUS OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE.

The first census of the British empire has been taken. It relates to the year 1901. The difficulty of including South Africa and the immense labour of tabulating figures which relate to such a vast expanse of territory and such a multitude of inhabitants delayed the work so that it seems a little belated. The area of the Empire is found to be 12 millions of square miles, in round numbers, and The Times thus sums up the other leading features of the census:—

The King has in Asia more than 300 millions of subjects; in America 7½ millions; in Africa about 43 millions; in Australasia over five millions; and in Europe over 42 millions. Classifying them broadly by religions, there are 208 millions of Hindus, 94 millions of Mahomedans, 58 millions of Christians, 12 millions of Buddhists, and 23 millions of various pagan or non-Christian religions. It should be said that this last item represents a very wide generalization, since it contains Parsees, Sikhs, Jains, Jews, and Confucians, as well as very primitive forms of superstition. Every attempt in this country to add a column for religions to the census returns has been met with an opposition hitherto successful. It would seem that a large part of our population are possessed by an unaccountable reluctance to declare the faith that is in them. There does not seem to be much of this singular reticence in other portions of the Empire. There is no difficulty in getting people to say what their religion is, but there is a good deal in classifying them after the information is obtained. People have the courage to declare themselves Calathumpain, Canopist, Hoke, Hylozoist, Tipon, Thesian, Sung Quong, Millennial Dawnite, and so on. Their particular fancies make good reading, but they are apparently so distracting to a serious statistician as rather to spoil his humorous enjoyment. Even among what he hesitatingly describes as minor Christian sects, such titles as Dipper, Tunker, Forward Movement, and Tolstoronian Christian must cause misgivings.

Mr Burns and his friends may be directed to that portion of the returns which shows that at least a million and quarter of Chinamen are reckoned among British subjects. If they will pursue the line of inquiry thus suggested they will learn from other, though not more recondite, sources of information that these Chinese are exemplary subjects, merchants, bankers, and country gentlemen, as well as industrious and efficient workmen. A curious fact brought out in the returns is that during the last decennial period there has been a falling-off in the rate of increase of the population throughout the whole Empire. It is well marked even when India, whose circumstances have been exceptional, is excluded. The fact would seem to call for revision of theories founded upon the same phenomenon in these islands.

CONSTRUCTION OF STATE RAILWAYS DURING THE CURRENT FISCAL YEAR.

From 1904 "the situation"—to use the Japanese euphemism for "the war"—caused a cessation of railway-building by the State, all the money which would have been devoted to that purpose under ordinary circumstances having been applied to meet the expenses of the war. But the result of measures submitted to the Diet last session, is that some of the suspended work is to be resumed and some new roads are to be commenced. The following table will show what is to be done:—

KAGOSHIMA RAILWAY.

(Between Kagoshima and Yatsushiro, 94.34 miles.)

Already the section of this road between Kagoshima and Yoshimatsu (40.55 miles) has been opened to traffic and the work is now to be continued, the Diet having granted an appropriation of 1,170,000 yen for the purpose. Some heavy operations have to be undertaken. Thus the upper waters of the Kumagawa, a very rapid river, have to be twice crossed by bridges of 200 feet and 80 feet span respectively, and the lower reaches have to be crossed twice by bridges of 200 feet span and three times by bridges of 80 feet span. There is further the formidable Yadake Tunnel, 6,883 feet long. These 53.79 miles of road will therefore require some time to build.

SAN-IN RAILWAY.

During the current year 18.8 miles of the Fuku-chiyama-Wadayama section of this road will be surveyed and the land required will be purchased. If, thereafter, any of the money assigned for the year's work on the line remain over, it will be applied to tunnelling purposes.

On the Wadayama-Shironosaki section 23.10 miles have already been surveyed, the route has been laid out, and work on the whole is expected to commence this year.

On the Tottori-Awaya section work had been suspended entirely owing to the war with the exception of the Awaya tunnel which could not be abandoned. This has now been completely pierced and as the work on the line will be vigorously renewed, it is expected that the road will be opened to traffic about March next.

The 38.40 miles between Yonago and Imaichi will, it is expected, be completely surveyed in the course of the year, the necessary purchases of land will be made and work will be commenced.

The sum allotted for the San-in Railway during the current year is 1,590,000 yen.

THE MAIZURU RAILWAY.

The unbuilt section of this railway between Sonobe and Ayabe measures 26.6 miles. It has however been surveyed and the route laid out. This year the land will be bought and some of the work of construction commenced. Meanwhile operations will be continued on the section already nearly completed.

The grant is 240,000 yen.

THE CENTRAL (CHUO) RAILWAY.

The portion of this road eastward of Shiojiri (in Shinshu) has been virtually finished. There remains the section (16.73 miles) between Okanoya and Shiojiri, and this will be opened to traffic, it is expected, at the beginning of June next. When that is effected the whole route east of Shiojiri will have been completed.

With regard to the portion west of Shiojiri, the bridging of the rivers Kiso and Kawakami and the building of Sakashita station will be continued, and work will be undertaken on one section.

The appropriation is 610,000 yen.

O-U RAILWAY.

The programme for the year is to increase the rolling stock, to build the Tsuchizaki workshops and to complete all the remaining constructions.

The appropriation is 1,100,000 yen.

SOYAMA-NAOETSU RAILWAY (75 miles).

The survey will be effected, the route marked and the purchase of land commenced.

The appropriation is 300,000 yen.

THE HOKKAIDO RAILWAY.

The joining of the Takachi-Kushiro line will be effected; the Ochiai-Obishiro line will be completed; work will be completed on lines already under construction, and the survey of new lines as well as of lands required in connexion with them will be commenced.

The appropriation is 73,000 yen.

NOTES ON CURRENT EVENTS.

We read in Japanese journals that certain foreign residents of Yokohama have applied for permission to erect at their own expense a department in the Tokyo Exhibition which is planned for next year, and to furnish it with foreign exhibits. At first the committee of the Municipality was disposed to reject the application on account of the very limited space available at Uyeno, where the Exhibition is to be held, but finally it was decided to grant the desired permission—a wise resolve, we venture to think, for it is not less important that the Japanese should have an opportunity of seeing and examining foreign products than it is that they should exhibit their own.

The plans for the art section of the Exhibition have already been completed and the building is to be commenced at once. It is to be 282 feet long and 84 feet wide and will cover an area of 404 tsubo.

It is stated that the invitations issued for Friday's Imperial Garden Party totalled 5,672, including 254 to the officers of American men-of-war now in port, 81 to German naval officers, 60 to British naval officers and 35 to French. The day was beautiful and the cherry-blossoms were quite perfect.

The commotion caused by the Kaiser's telegram to the Austrian Prime Minister continues. It is not obliterated even by the San Francisco earthquake. One has to confess, however much one may be disposed to admire the versatile talents and the untiring industry of the Kaiser, that His Majesty can scarcely be called a model of discretion, if we estimate discretion by the standards hitherto accepted. Perhaps it is part of the Imperial policy never to let the world's interest flag. His Majesty may possibly think that there is political wisdom in keeping himself prominently and perpetually before the eyes of Europe. We do not presume to assert that he may not be right, but when we recall the various excitements he has caused by spectacular telegrams and startling utterances, we can not refrain from thinking how happy for the nations' peace it is that he has the European stage to himself. Were there two such Richmonds in the field, something would surely happen. However, Germany is great enough to have such a Sovereign, and Germans probably feel that the momentary shocks which these doings impart to international relations are more than compensated by the Kaiser's solid work on behalf of his country's progress.

Investigations made by the Home Department are said to show that the number of soldiers throughout the empire who have lost limbs or been otherwise crippled in the war is 31,088. It is not supposed, however, that the whole of these will have to enter the asylum (haihei-in) which has been established in accordance with a vote of the Diet last session.

Messrs. Kono, Ogawa, Otake, Sakurai and 8 others have been discharged, the evidence against them being deemed insufficient. These are the 12 men charged with inciting to disturbance on the occasion of the peace riots last September.

The President and Vice-President of the Japan Trading Company, Messrs. Ikeda Kaizo and Otani Kahei, have addressed to the Government a representation urging that the duties levied on Japanese imports into Russia's East-Asian dominions via Siberian ports are prohibitive, and that when the new commercial treaty between Japan and Russia comes to be negotiated, every effort should be made to obtain a reduction of these imposts, Japan on her side undertaking to grant corresponding tariff concessions to Russian products imported from Siberia. They further petition that Japanese Consuls and commercial agents should be appointed at Siberian centres of trade.

A new Japanese fire insurance company has been formed in Tokyo on a coöperative basis. The terms are that 5 per cent. of the net profits having been set aside as the legal reserve, and 10 per cent. as rewards to officers, a dividend of 6 per cent. will be paid to the shareholders, after which 20 per cent. of the remainder will be paid back to the policy-holders and 80 per cent. will be employed for a further dividend, for special reserves and for carrying over. The capital of the company is 500,000 yen and all the shares have been subscribed. The names of the principal promoters are Messrs. Inouye Kakugoro, Kadono Ikunoshin, Murakami Sada, Murai Teinosuke, Kataoka Naotera, &c.

The Nichi Nichi writes about Japanese maritime enterprise since the war. First among new undertakings is the Toyo Kisen Kaisha's service to South America, and the Nippon Yusen Kaisha has followed with a service from Hongkong to Siam. One steamer will be despatched each way every fortnight. There are plenty of vessels keeping up the communication between Japan and Hongkong, but there is no Japanese ship plying between the latter and Bangkok. Germany does the bulk of Siam's over-sea carrying trade. In 1903 the number of vessels entering Bangkok was 613 with an aggregate displacement of 514,000 tons, which total was divided thus:—England 60,000 tons; Norway 87,000 tons; Germany 32,300 tons. Siam has not a very large foreign trade. Her imports in 1904 were 35 million yen and her exports 40 millions. But even these figures indicate a marked development as compared with a few years ago, and in this development Japan has a prominent share, for she sends to Siam large and increasing quantities of silk stuffs, figured matting and matches, making a total of some 5 million yen. On the other hand she receives nearly six million yen worth from Siam in the form of rice, teak and minor articles. These figures show a very remarkable degree of development. Under the circumstances, a steamship service might have been opened between Hongkong and Bangkok some time ago, especially as the Germans, though taking such a large share in Siam's maritime carrying business, have no fixed service farther east than Singapore, their steamers thence to Hongkong sailing on varying dates. Our contemporary heartily congratulates the Nippon Yusen Kaisha on this display of enterprise.

The original intention was that the monument on Pehyushan (1,500 feet above the sea) should be erected at the expense of Admiral Togo and General Nogi, but the idea has taken hold of public sympathy, and the present purpose is to appeal for general subscriptions. The dimensions of the erection will be correspondingly increased, and the cost will be 400,000 yen. There will be a nokotsu-do (sepulchre of bones) in which the remains of twenty thousand men, Japanese and Russians, are to be interred, or have actually been interred, and immediately to the south of it will be erected a huge obelisk, surmounted by a 12-inch shell. Port Arthur will thus be dominated by a conspicuous memento of its terrible story.

The following paragraph taken from the Dry Goods Economist will be of interest of many:—

That a telegraph company is responsible for errors in the transmission of despatches was the ruling of Supreme Court Justice Maddox, of Brooklyn, this week. The case turned on an error made in a telegram sent by a southern mill in response to the request of a bag concern in New York for prices on a quantity of cotton cloth. The mill wired, "two eighty for narrow three eighty for wide cloth." The message as delivered read, "two-eighth" and "three eighth," and as a consequence the bag firm made a contract which netted them a loss of $2,193.75. They sued the Postal Telegraph Cable Company for the amount, and the verdict of the lower court has been sustained.

As the first steamer of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha's re-opened service to Australia the Yawata Maru received a very warm reception. Moreover, she came back to Japan with all her cabins full, and it is stated that all the berths in the Nikko Maru, which is the next of the same Company's steamers Japan-bound, have already been engaged.

It is confidently expected that the Government will fall in with the plan proposed by Mr. Sonoda, Chief of the Hokkaido Administration, and will place the island on an independent financial footing after the manner of Formosa. The idea is that the colonization of Ezo has been retarded by the island's connexion with Japan proper; a connexion which has exposed it to all the financial vicissitudes of the latter. When the Treasury found any pressure on its income, it naturally began to lop off outlays in distant regions and thus Hokkaido was the first to suffer. Apparently Mr. Sonoda's idea is that by handing over to the island's administration all the State forests, an income of 1½ million yen could be realized as a permanency, and this, if regularly appropriated, would suffice for all essential public works.

The Gakushi-kai in Japan corresponds to the Royal Society in England and the Academy in France, and has its counterparts in other European countries. It was founded in 1878, on the basis that its membership should be limited to forty, of whom fifteen should be Imperial nominees and twenty-five should be elected by the members. At present it numbers only twenty-six. In 1898 the Royal Society of England proposed that there should be a general convention of the learned societies of the world (bankoku rengo gakushi-kai) every third year, and the proposal having been enthusiastically taken up, the first convention met in 1901 in Paris, the second in 1904 in London, and the third is to meet next year in Vienna. The Japanese Society has been asked to join the convention and to send delegates to Vienna, and the invitation has been gladly accepted, to the great satisfaction of the Japanese public. It is pointed out that the people of this country have made several important inventions during the past few years, but that very little is known of them by the world at large owing to lack of any means to make them generally familiar. Indeed, as we have often ventured to predict, the saying once so common among foreign observers that the Japanese have the faculty of imitation without that of initiative, has now been pretty conclusively contradicted by facts, and it is desirable that these should be more widely published. The Gakushi-kai labours, however, under one disadvantage, as a Tokyo contemporary points out, namely, that among its twenty-six members sixteen owe their scholastic fame to literary abilities and only ten are men of science. Now a literateur in Japan means a man versed in the Japanese or the Chinese language, or both, and evidently such a person can not hope to make any mark at a meeting of European learned societies. A suggestion is therefore made that the vacancies in the ranks of the Society should be filled up speedily. But does that course imply any sound remedy? It appears to us that if the Gakushi-kai has not hitherto recognised the eligibility of any candidates for admission above the twenty-six now forming the Society, no good would be done by suddenly adding ineligible. There is no room for haste in such matters. The Japanese are going on excellently. They have already obtained a measure of recognition which no one could have ventured to predict for them, and so far from enhancing it they may achieve the opposite result by precipitancy.

Among the honours conferred by the King for distinguished service on the part of officers attached to the Japanese forces during the recent campaign, the rank of Colonel is conferred on Lieutenant-Colonel C. Vernon Hume, Royal Artillery, D.S.O. This promotion will be universally approved and welcomed. Colonel Hume's qualities as a soldier, already well attested, were displayed more conspicuously than ever in the Russo-Japanese war, and nothing could exceed the tact and tireless courtesy shown by him in discharging the arduous duties of military attaché to the Legation during the trying time when newspaper correspondents and officers waiting to go to the front were filling Tokyo with complaints and laments. We offer our hearty congratulations and our hopes that the next step will come for Colonel Hume as rapidly as the last two have come.

On Wednesday the Local Governors, who have all assembled in Tokyo with three or four exceptions held their first meeting at the Home Department. It is stated that very few questions will be submitted to them by the Minister of Home Affairs. His course will be rather to invite suggestions from the Governors themselves, which suggestions will be collated and adopted as far as possible.

The Generals of Division also are now in Tokyo and their first meeting at the War Department took place on the 25th.

Marquis Ito accompanied by General Murata, Captain Miyaoka of the Navy and others, reached his Oiso villa on the 24th. He was welcomed by Mr. Kato Takaaki, Baron Iwasaki, Mr. Takata, Mr. Tsuzuki Keiroku, Baron Suyematsu and several others.

It is stated that the list of rewards in connexion with the war will number as follows:—

General Officers .....	170
Staff Officers.....	2,200
Captains and Lieutenants .....	21,600
Sergeant Majors. Warrant officers ...	6,300
Sergeants and Corporals.....	223,000
Privates .....	867,000
Non-combatant Officers.....	102,000

Total ..... 1,223,270

A correspondent of the Hochi Shimbun who has visited the Mikasa describes her condition as very disheartening. She has suffered heavy injury, but the exact extent of it is difficult to ascertain. The force of the explosion must have been enormous, for half-inch iron plates are crumpled like paper. She is sunk 20 feet in the mud, and her wood-work shows signs of decaying. Two attempts to pump her out have failed. The workmen find great difficulty in accomplishing anything, on account of the sand, which constantly increases. It is therefore quite impossible to form any accurate idea of the time when she will be re-floated but there is no sign whatever of despondency. The present plan is to stop the leaks temporarily and then to stir up the the mud and sand so that they can be pumped out with the water.

Prince Nakonchansi of Siam, Commander-in-Chief of the Siamese Army, has arrived in Tokyo to attend the review on the 30th instant. Japanese journals publish a brief record of the Prince's career, and note that he is an accomplished linguist, speaking no less than four European languages.

RECEPTION TO REV. & MRS. E. S. BOOTH.

Under the auspices of the Union Church Ladies Auxiliary a farewell reception was given at Van Schaick Hall on Friday evening to the Rev. E. S. Booth, honorary pastor of Union Church, and Mrs. Booth, previous to their departure on a well earned holiday trip to the home land. There was a large attendance of personal friends, as well as those connected with the Church, to whom the reunion afforded an opportunity to wish Mr. and Mrs. Booth a pleasant journey and safe return. The hall was charmingly decorated with the beautiful pink and white blossoms of the season and adapted to the purposes of a salon with seats around the sides and tea tables and lounge chairs scattered about the auditorium. A varied programme of music occupied the earlier portion of the evening, interspersed with intervals for social converse. This opened with a pianoforte duet, by Mrs. Brockhurst and Mr. W. K. Vincent, "Poet and Peasant," followed by a song, "The Vedette," by Mr. S. H. Somerton. Mrs. Irwine, who was in excellent voice, gave a beautiful rendering of the song "For all Eternity," accompanied by Miss Burdett Leach, after which Mr. H. A. Poole, accompanied by Miss Page, gave a violin solo. Mrs. Irwine and Miss Burdett Leach sang a duet with much expression, after which Mrs. Dearing read a very beautifully worded poem of farewell to Mrs. Booth, written by herself. Quite a pleasant surprise was sprung upon the guests by the appearance of the Misses Page in a vocal duet, Tosti's "Beauty's Eyes," which was rendered with a freshness and verve fully appreciated by the audience, to most of whom the vocal talent exhibited by these young ladies was quite new, though as clever musicians they have oftentimes delighted the community. Mr. Booth, in a few heartfelt words thanked those present for their appreciation of his past labours in the cause of Union Church and trusted to return to Yokohama ere long better equipped for more work; and particularly on his own and Mrs. Booth's behalf, to Mrs. Dearing for her touching and beautifully expressed farewell address. Mr. Somerton brought the musical programme to an end with a spirited rendering of the song "The Devout Lover," and the Rev. Dr. Dearing, who had acted as chairman throughout, delivered a short address, dwelling upon the welcome back to Yokohama which would be accorded to Mr. and Mrs. Booth on their return. Refreshments and social intercourse then filled up the time till the last hand shake and bon voyage of the assembled guests with Mr. and Mrs. Booth, after a very pleasant evening had been spent.

Mr. N. N. Adis, Straits Settlements, and Mr. Montagu Kirkwood, late of Japan, have been elected Fellows of the Royal Colonial Institute.

AN ACCUSER OF THE JAPANESE.

THE Weekly Province of British Columbia quotes Archdeacon W. M. JEFFRIES as preferring an extraordinary indictment against the Japanese in Korea. The Archdeacon is of the American Episcopal Church and spent some time in Yokohama, where he conducted a special mission in Christ Church. He declares that he has been an eye-witness of the cruelties he describes and he shows photographs in confirmation of his charges. It is impossible to distinguish how far his assertions have been distorted by the newspaper publishing them, but that they have been in some degree distorted, we can not entertain any doubt. Almost entirely against Japanese soldiers his accusations are preferred. "When a Korean objects to confiscation of his property," says the Archdeacon, "he is falsely charged with being a spy and is probably shot or hanged the same day." The truth of this singular allegation is declared to be attested by photographs, one of which "shows the execution of a Korean by hanging who had been accused of being a spy" and the other "shows a number of prisoners tied up to crosses with their arms extended and about to be shot by a squad of soldiers." To enhance the horror of this latter tale, Mr. JEFFRIES is made to add:—"Frequently the first bullet does not end the unfortunate man's existence and he is left hanging on the cross arms until a second bullet kills him." This rider is quite enough to demonstrate the spirit animating the whole tale. For when "a squad of soldiers" fire volleys at men placed at a distance of 15 places to be executed, there is no question of "the first bullet," and as to the occasionally protracted nature of death when such a form of execution is employed, the thing is not only common but sometimes inevitable. The main point, however, is that no evidence whatever is adduced to prove that these punishments were unjustly inflicted because their victims had refused to submit tamely to the confiscation of their estates. It is well known that during the war Koreans were executed for spying. Many of them acted as spies in Russian pay, and, being occasionally apprehended, were put to death, just as Chinese and Japanese subjects were put to death by the Russians in Manchuria for a similar offence. Such things are unavoidable features of war. It was reserved for the Venerable Archdeacon WILLIAM M. JEFFRIES, however, to allege that Japanese soldiers in Korea made a habit of executing as spies Koreans who objected to being robbed of their property. We have not the slightest hesitation in denouncing that assertion as a shocking lie, and we regret greatly that it should have come from the lips of a clergyman, if indeed it did so come. That there has been occasional, if not frequent recourse to violence by low-class Japanese subjects in Korea can not be gainsaid, and we hope to see some of these roughs deported under the provisions of the very stringent law which has now been enacted by the Resident-General. Equally it is not to be gainsaid that there has been and that there still is occasional, if not frequent, recourse to violence against Korean subjects by Occidentals who have not always the excuse of being low-class. Such wrongs, however, when perpetrated by Europeans or Americans, as they were once in Japan and as they still are in China, India, and all the world over when white men have to do with coloured human beings, find no loud-voiced denouncers in Korea: the spirit of racial solidarity silences criticism. But if the Japanese err in the same direction, there is an immediate outcry. And it is well that there should be. Two wrongs do not make a right, neither could there be any policy more destructive to Japan's best interests than the propensities displayed by certain of her subjects in Korea. The people of Japan may be sensible that the standard prescribed for them is higher than that lived up to by their critics, but it is not in this matter of Korea alone that such to the case. A similar disposition to play the Pharisee used to be displayed by many foreign observers of Japan's modern career, and is still displayed by them. We heard the same charge preferred often enough and loudly enough in the early days of her colonization of Formosa, but the era of accusation did not last long in that case because, perhaps, there were none who found their account in protracting it. Nevertheless these considerations do not excuse the forceful doings resorted to by some Japanese in Korea and we trust, as indeed we are confident, that Marquis Ito will soon correct the abuse. But the point we wish to make here is that this accusation advanced publicly against the Japanese troops by Archdeacon JEFFRIES, is heard of for the first time from his lips, though he distinctly alleges that "these incidents which I describe are of recent date and so far as I am informed they continue to this date." Japan has in Seoul more than one inveterate enemy who attack her in season and out of season with a degree of blind prejudice which fully discredits their assaults. Yet even by these men it has never been hinted that her troops are employed to murder in cold blood unfortunate Korean subjects whose only crime is to protest against their own spoliations, and we venture to assert emphatically that, whether wittingly or unwittingly, the Venerable Archdeacon W. M. JEFFRIES is guilty of one of the most infamous slanders ever uttered.

HOTELS.

THERE is quite a mania for hotel building in Japan. Tourists have come in a deluge and every corner capable of accommodating them is occupied; so much occupied, indeed, that the over-flow has extended to places miles away from Tokyo. The Imperial Hotel with 70 rooms has 93 guests and the Metropole with 50 rooms has 80 persons staying there. It appears to be thought that the stream of tourists will not only continue but even increase. We doubt the latter forecast. This, in our opinion, is the tourists' year par excellence. It is the year immediately after the war, and the average Occidental is extremely curious to see the first Oriental nation that has ever held its own in the lists against a Western Power, above all against the champion—or well nigh the champion—military giant of Europe. When that curiosity is satisfied, Japan will lose much of her attractive force. There will always be many tourists but in our opinion 1906 will hold the record for some years at all events. However, hotel-projectors and hotel-owners do not appear to share our view. The proprietors of the Hotel Metropole are said to be about to erect a new three-storeyed building with large accommodation, and those of the Imperial Hotel entertain a similar intention, while a third project embodies the building of a monster hostelry in Shiba Park at a cost of some three-quarters of a million yen. The Hotel Metropole, which is said to be owned by Japanese, should not have any special difficulty in increasing its capital by 200,000 yen—the rumoured amount—but the Imperial Hotel is peculiarly situated as to capital, inasmuch as the funds for its construction were furnished by the richest men in Tokyo, not as a money-making enterprise, but because they thought that not to possess a suitable hotel was a disgrace to Tokyo. Would they be willing to put up a further amount? It is doubtful. However, the required sum can easily be raised by debentures. The Shiba project is connected with the name of Mr. OKURA KIHACHIRO, and rumour says that the Municipality are prepared to grant a free site in Shiba Park. That would be an immense advantage, for the cost of land in any suitable locality constitutes a heavy item in the expense of setting up a hotel. This munificence on the part of the Municipality is primarily due, of course, to the desire of promoting the city's prosperity, but it said to be also due in no small degree to the Minister of State for Finance, who has commented in strong terms on the economical folly of not making every effort to attract the Pactolean stream of tourists.

Yokohama too is not inactive. There is talk of re-building the Club Hotel, so as to convert it into an edifice with 150 bed-rooms and of commensurate magnificence in all respects. So long as Yokohama is the port of Tokyo the mail steamers will call at the former, and so long as the mail steamers call there, Yokohama will continue to offer special hotel attractions to tourists. The question is, how long will that be? Probably pretty long. Tokyo seems to be still far distant from any practical step towards furnishing itself with a harbour, and even when it has done so—say ten years hence at the soonest—one may reasonably query whether Yokohama will not remain as hitherto the sole place of call for big passenger steamers in Tokyo Bay. It will scarcely be worth while for these steamers to go on to Tokyo, only 18 miles distant. With cargo-boats the case would be different, but so far as mail steamers are concerned, Yokohama looks likely to enjoy a protracted monopoly. There may be room then in Yokohama for another hotel, but certainly the Tokyo rivals have to be taken into account, especially such a rival as the projected Shiba Park Hotel, which would start with the great advantage of paying nothing for its site, whereas a Yokohama hotel would be saddled with an initial charge of 150 yen per tsudo on that account.

"YIELDING."

THE author of "Bushido in the Past and in the Present" uses these words:—"Yes, peace has come at last but with what a sense of national humiliation! These glorious victories and noble sacrifices are rewarded with the thought that we have had to yield more than we were prepared to yield in order to secure this welcome but costly peace." Mr. IMAI writes "St. Andrew's Hostel, Tokyo" under his signature. We wonder whether this idea of "humiliation" and "yielding" is entertained at St. Andrew's. There is indeed humiliation for Japan; great humiliation. But not the kind of humiliation spoken of by Mr. IMAI. It is the humiliation that her publicists had not the courage to raise their voices against the clamorous condemnations of the ignorant masses when these fell into a mood of utter unreason over the peace terms. It is the humiliation that not one Japanese journalist of note—the Kokumin excepted—has attempted to re-habilitate Baron KOMURA's reputation and to assert for him what really belongs to him, the credit of having worn the crown of thorns unflinchingly for his country's sake. We should like to know from the author of "Bushido in the Past and in the Present" whether in his historical studies he has ever discovered a country which, having lost a campaign in a foreign land and being entirely free from all menace to its own borders, nevertheless consented to pay a great indemnity to its conqueror. The thing is wholly unheard of and will probably remain unheard of for all time. What would Mr. IMAI have done had he been charged with the conduct of the negotiations on Japan's behalf? What would any of his fellow-thinkers have done? He and they talk of Japan having yielded and of national humiliation, but we doubt whether he or they have ever seriously considered their country's position towards Russia. The alternatives were either to dispense with an indemnity which, under the circumstances, there was neither reason nor precedent for levying, or to resume a campaign which would have been incomparably the most terrible and the most costly in all human experience. Can there be a moment's hesitation in deciding which was the wiser course? But some may say, why then ask for an indemnity at all. Would it not have been far more dignified to exclude the money question altogether? The obvious answer is that Japan was absolutely bound to ask for more than she was prepared to receive. Had she entered the conference chamber and at once presented a note containing the irreducible minimum of her requirements, either peace would never have been obtained or some really humiliating concession would have had to be made. International negotiators do not say their last word first. That is not the way settlements are reached, nor is there any record that a settlement ever was reached in such a fashion. We ourselves entertain the conviction that the issue of the Portsmouth Conference was the most signal triumph won by Japan throughout the whole war, and that Baron KOMURA, instead of being a discredited official, deserves to rank with Admiral Togo and Marquis OYAMA in the nation's esteem. Russia suffered her greatest defeat at Portsmouth. For six months her adversary's armies had lain inactive in the face of her troops, clearly confessing by their quiescence that they recognised the magnitude of the task of advancing. She herself had contrived, during that interval, to amass vast forces in the field, and she was fortified by assurances from their commander-in-chief that, in spite of previous defeats, now certainly would he lead them to victory. Had Japan, been in Russia's place, what would she have instructed her plenipotentiaries to say at Portsmouth? It is quite plain. She would have bade them say:—"We offer you the terms you yourselves formulated before the war began, and beyond these terms we are not prepared to budge one inch." What then would have been Russia's reply? And what would have been Japan's reply, had Count WITTE and Baron ROSEN used that language? It is astounding to think of the terms that Baron KOMURA succeeded in obtaining and that Russia was induced to concede. She handed over one half of Saghalien, a surrender of territory such as Great Powers are not wont to make except in the sequel of complete defeat. She gave up the Liaotung Peninsula with Port Arthur, its impregnable fortress, and Dalny, its invaluable gate of access to the Pacific, thus abandoning for ever her centuries' old struggle for exit to ice-free waters in East Asia. She ceded the main part of her Manchurian Railway, thus consenting to effacement in the Three Provinces, a field where she had been supreme when the war broke out. And she bowed to the adoption by the Japanese of any rôle they pleased to act in Korea, thus allowing them to dominate both of the maritime avenues to her sole remaining naval base, Vladivostock. Nothing need be said of minor concessions. The major here quoted are sufficiently wonderful. To obtain such terms under such circumstances was a feat of diplomacy without parallel, so far as our reading of history goes, yet the man who obtained them is discredited, and even now, after there has been full time to reflect, we find writers of Mr. IMAI's ability, who date their books from a centre of Christian refinement and high erudition, propounding the extravagant doctrine that Japan suffered a national humiliation at Portsmouth, and we do not find one publicist of note sufficiently clear-sighted and courageous to expound the true worth of Baron KOMURA's achievement. It is this lack of perspicacity or lack of courage, we know not which to call it, that constitutes a real humiliation to Japan, not her failure to extract from Russia some millions of yen. Her opinion has been moulded by political agitators and speculators on the stock exchange, and she tamely surrenders herself to their guidance.

ST. GEORGE'S BALL.

St. George's Ball given in the Public Hall, Yokohama on St. George's Day was a most successful and enjoyable affair. The interior of the building was charmingly decorated, for which acknowledgements are due to Mrs. Manley, to Mr. Curjel, to Mr. C. Murray Duff and to the Hon. Secretary Mr. H. J. Sharp. Various large floral mottoes were displayed among others, "God for England, Edward and St. George," "St. George for Merrie England," "Our Ancient Word of Courage, 'Fair St. George,'" and "Oh to be in England now that April's there." The attendance beat the record, we believe, but though in the early part of the evening there was much crushing later the dancing proved very enjoyable. The guests were received by the President of St. George's Society (Mr. L. J. Healing) and Mrs. Healing. The committee and stewards responsible for the arrangements were as follow:—

COMMITTEE:—Messrs. L. J. Healing, President; V. A. C. Hawkins, Vice-President; E. Edmondson, Hon. Treasurer; H. J. Sharp, Hon. Secretary; F. J. Abbott, E. C. D. Davis, F. L. Elliott, C. Thwaites, A. Bellamy Brown.

STEWARDS:—Messrs. Duke Marshall, F. J. Hall, F. W. Hill, L. S. Hudson, E. J. Libeaud, E. P. W. Skrimshire, James Walter, A. G. M. Weale, Cyril Allen, I. Fletcher, W. S. Moss, W. Y. Showler, H. W. Kilby, A. C. H. Potts.

A telegram from the St. George's Society of England, with which the local society is affiliated, reading, "To-day we think of England and of you," was posted in the hall, attracting much attention.

PRESENTATION TO THE HONORARY PASTOR OF UNION CHURCH.

The Trustees of the Union Church on Thursday morning presented to the Honorary Pastor, Rev. Eugene S. Booth, who is sailing for America on Saturday by the Manchuria, the following Testimonial signed by more than 50 members and friends of the Church, together with a cheque for yen 505.

To the Rev. EUGENE S. BOOTH:—In view of your approaching departure from Yokohama on a well-earned furlough, the Members and Friends of the Yokohama Union Church and Congregation take this opportunity of expressing to you their deep and heartfelt appreciation of your services for so many years as Honorary Pastor of the Church, a position which for more than two years you have filled as a labour of love. Your sympathetic and unflagging services in the public ministrations of the Church, in the Bible Class, in our homes, and in the community at large lead your many friends whose names appear below to cordially respond to the suggestion of the Trustees of the Church in uniting in this practical expression of our regard for you and for Mrs. Booth, and we beg that you will accept this accompanying check for yen five hundred and five as in some measure expressing the love and cordial regard in which you are held in Yokohama.

Yokohama, Japan, April 24th, 1906.

Mr. and Mrs. Booth leave a large circle of friends in Yokohama who will miss them sorely but all hope for their early return.

REVIEWS.

"A Staff Officer's Scrap Book," by Sir Ian HAMILTON; Kelly and Walsh, Yokohama.

THIS is certainly the most interesting and, in our opinion, the most valuable of all the books that the war has hitherto inspired; with the single exception of "The War in the Far East" by the Military Correspondent of The Times. Sir Ian Hamilton surprises us, it must be confessed, by his opening chapters—surprises us in two ways, first by his insight and secondly by his sans gêne. In a daily record written on April 1st, 1904—and reproduced in the opening chapter of his book—he tells us with reference to correspondence already indited and posted:—"In these letters just despatched the last poor shreds of my military reputation have been staked upon a forecast that the Japanese army will beat the Russian army wherever they meet them on terms even approaching equality;" and he adds:—"Further, I have fairly let myself in for the opinion that the Japanese army, battalion for battalion, surpasses any European army except only the English army at its best, not at its second best, which is the state in which it usually finds itself." To appreciate the remarkable perspicacity and courage of these declarations, it has to be remembered that Sir Ian reached Tokyo on the 16th of March, and that, consequently, he had spent only two weeks in Japan when he arrived at this singularly accurate estimate of the Japanese army's capacity. How many of his own nation, how many of any Western nationals, would have endorsed him at that time? Is it not true that the vast majority of even those who posed as, and passed for, authorities on Japan, believed and were openly declaring their belief at the time of Sir Ian's arrival in this country, that while the Japanese might hold their own against the Russians at sea, they would make but a poor show against them on shore? The British General, however, came to Japan with a solid foundation for his judgment. He had campaigned in India and he had fought in South Africa, and from experiences gained in those fields he had already learned what all the world began with bated breath to tell itself a year later, namely, that a nation which preserves certain primitive traits and supplements them by the implements of war and its arts as furnished by the Occident, reaches a far higher standard of military virtue than a nation which represents up-to-date civilization. Carrying with him that conviction, and observing how closely the Japanese resemble the Gurkhas whom he knew "in camp, on the march, in war and in peace," he had no difficulty in convincing himself that the soldiers of even this little Oriental Empire would be able to cope successfully with the renowned and immense hosts of huge Russia. "I ought to know the Gurkhas well," he says, "and, if so, I know the Japanese soldier also. He is a very old friend. Lord Roberts had a faithful orderly, a splendid fighting Gurkha, who watched over him jealously from '78 to '81, and is now a respected native officer retired on his pension. We called him 'Bullethead.' Behold, in one Japanese company, at least a dozen 'Bullethead,' as small as life, and quite unmistakable in their resemblance to that splendid old soldier of the Afghan war."

Incidentally the reader will infer that Sir Ian Hamilton thinks Indian troops fully competent to fight the Russians should the latter venture to invade India. That is precisely what he does think, and what he is at some pains to elaborate. But we can not follow him into this part of his subject, fascinating as the digression is.

The second way in which Sir Ian surprises us is in the second chapter of his work. He there undertakes to give pen-and-ink sketches of many of the prominent Japanese whose acquaintance he made in Tokyo—Baron Komura, Count Katsura, General Terauchi, Marquis Yamagata, Marquis Ito, Marquis Oyama, Baron Kodama and General Fukushima. The laws of grace and courtesy have perhaps undergone much modification in England during the past 30 or 40 years. Yet however greatly they may have changed in the direction of laxity, we doubt whether this second chapter of Sir Ian Hamilton's work can escape the reproach of containing a multitude of solecisms. It is not well, it can not be well, that a guest, above all a man of high station and wide reputation, who has been kindly and hospitably treated, should set himself at once to compose and publish descriptions of the personal appearances and mental characteristics of his hosts in terms frequently so candid as to be actually offensive. We wish that Sir Ian Hamilton had omitted this chapter, though we confess to have read it with keen interest and to be fully conscious of its fascinations. We wish that it had been omitted for another reason also, namely, that, speaking of two of the Japanese Generals, Sir Ian concludes that chapter with these words:—"Yet these are the two who, more than any of the other Japanese men or women I have met, make me realise that East is East and West is West; as it was in the beginning, is now and ever shall be." There can not, we think, be any greater fallacy: it is a freak of Occidental imagination. The difference between a Japanese and an Englishman is in no sense radical. It is a difference almost wholly of habits and traditions. That is our solid conviction after 40 years of observation, but we must confine ourselves here to the bare statement.

Sir Ian Hamilton's book does not cover the whole war. It stops short at Liaoyang and even with that limitation it refers to one part of the field only, the part where the First Army fought under Kuroki. He was not present at the Yalu but he gives an unequalled account of it, and the other fights described by him are only "an affair of outposts," "the battle of the Heaven-reaching Pass" (Motien ling), "Chatao," "the battle of Yashirei" (Yangtsu-ling—unfortunately Sir Ian uses sometimes Chinese place-names, sometimes Japanese—), and "the Disastrous Retreat from Penlin." His descriptions are thrillingly interesting. Not alone does he give us a bird's eye view of each engagement, but he subsequently follows the battle through all its details, bringing to each feature the ripe knowledge of a great General and explaining clearly where each side excelled or failed, and what opportunities were neglected or utilized. With his usual insight he discerns that the extraordinary caution shown by the Japanese in the preliminaries to the Battle of the Yalu were due to a lingering uncertainty as to the quality of Western troops. They had never previously faced an Occidental Army. For forty years they had been borrowing models of everything from the West, and unconsciously they had borrowed also a latent conviction of Western superiority. They knew well, too, that the campaign would derive its moral colour from the opening fight. If they themselves were defeated their future conduct would inevitably reflect that shock whereas the Russians would be confirmed in the confidence which is such a powerful factor of victory. Therefore although numerically far stronger than the Russians—we do not share General Hamilton's belief that they knew exactly how much stronger—they spared no precaution however petty, however meticulous, to ensure success. From that time no trace of the misgivings that prefaced the Yalu was apparent. General Hamilton fully recognised this. Indeed, there seems to be nothing that he does not recognise and trace from first to last with unerring instinct. It is impossible to lay down his book. Once opened, it may not be closed until the last page is reached. Shorn of the second chapter it ought to be in keen demand in Japanese military circles, and so far as concerns our own countrymen or any English-reading nationals, we strongly recommend them not to lose time in realizing the enjoyment this volume confers.

"Bushido in the Past and Present," by Mr. T. F. Imai, of St. Andrew's Hostel, Tokyo.

THIS book is written in the interests of Christian propaganda. Its object is to demonstrate that the conditions favourable to Bushido as it existed in feudal days, have disappeared or are rapidly disappearing, and that unless the old cult be reinforced by new ethics it must lose its practical value. This object is not set forth in the opening pages of the book. On the contrary, it is carefully kept out of sight. The author's method is first to discuss what Bushido really is, and then to show its incompatibility with present circumstances. He conducts his inquiry with much erudition and admirable lucidity. But it appears to us that he is not always consistent. Thus he denies that Bushido is a philosophy, or that any such questions as the universe, time, space or life ever suggested themselves in its origin or progress. Yet in a series of well chosen extracts from the writings of Yamaga Soko, the greatest exponent of the Bushi's cult, he shows plainly, as we think, that Bushido was a philosophy, and in denuding it of all thought for the universe, time, space or life, he seems to forget the moral illumination which the true Bushi sought and found in the practice of sazen, an illumination which revealed the universe in a new aspect, obliterated from it all traces of passion, interest, or affection, and hid the perception of birth, death, growth or decay. Mr. Imai will probably reply that this is not Bushido but Buddhism; the teaching of the Zen sect not the precepts of the Samurai. The answer, it seems to us, is that Bushido and this particular form of Buddhism can not be differentiated, and that the revelations of the latter were only a well defined expression of the former's spirit. Apart, however, from this apparent discrepancy between description and analysis—a discrepancy easily understood when we recall the author's purpose—Mr. Imai gives us a really excellent insight into Bushido; an insight which goes more deeply into the subject than even Professor Nitobe's and is translated into examples of great beauty. In these respects we have nothing but applause and admiration for the book. But when we are asked to believe that the Bushido cult can be "purified, renewed and perfected in union with Christ," we can not fail to observe that whereas it is the very essence of Bushido to exalt the institution above the individual, Christianity teaches precisely the opposite; and whereas life is incalculably precious in Christian eyes, it is altogether inconceivable in the Bushi's creed as compared with the dictates of duty. Assuredly Christian ethics may graft upon Bushido many grand and ennobling doctrines in which it is now defective, but it is equally certain that in some essential features the creed of the Nazarene and the cult of the Bushi are not compatible. If there is to be any attempt to weld the two, it must result in the rejection of one or the other. The question to be determined, then, is not how they can be united but which should be preferred.

THE BOYS' BRIGADE.

THE second annual inspection of the 1st Yokohama Company of the Boys' Brigade took place in the Public Hall on Wednesday afternoon before a crowded and deeply interested audience. The Boys' Brigade keeps up its numbers splendidly despite many disadvantages, and that the lads are keen on their drill was seen in the excellence of the evolutions gone through, all showing a decided advance upon the display of last June. The hall was decorated with national flags. The inspecting officer was again Col. C. V. Hume, R.A., D.S.O., military attaché of H.B.M.'s Embassy, whose comments will be found below. The proceedings began with an inspection of the Company by Colonel Hume, after which the hymn "Underneath the Banner," was sung, followed by prayer by the Chaplain, the Rev. J. L. Dearing, D.D.

Mr. Jas. Walter, who presided, then said:—Colonel HUME, the Boys' Brigade 1st Yokohama Company; Ladies and Gentlemen:—This is the second Annual Inspection of this Company and for this express purpose Colonel HUME R.A., D.S.O., Military Attaché H. B. M.'s Embassy, has again so kindly come down from Tokyo and will with his keen, critical eye report to us (parents and all interested in the welfare of the Boys' Brigade) what progress, if any, has been made in the matter of military drill, and coming from a soldier we expect and welcome his criticism which we know will be given without fear or favour. With your permission I will give a brief sketch of the work of our Boys' Brigade during the second year of its activity, which commenced in October last year. The various parades have been held regularly week by week and the excellent attendances of last session have been well maintained during this session, the average weekly possible attendances at the drill parades of the Company being 97.62 per cent. and at the Sunday morning services 98.03 per cent. These figures give abundant evidence of the keenness evinced by the members. Rifles were issued to the Company in October and have added very largely to the effectiveness of the parades. Whilst on this subject of rifles I would like to draw the attention of the Officers and Boys of this Brigade to what Lord Roberts has recently said in outlining the policy of the National Service League:—

"As much military instruction as possible must be given to all boys previous to their reaching the military age, and stress is laid on the fact that the early training will have a beneficial effect on the moral and physical conditions of the population at large. It is urged that the spirit of patriotism should be instilled in all boys by the teachers; that instruction in the use of the rifle be given and rifle shooting should be made a national sport."

Your Capt., Mr. Tebb, is considering with myself the ways and means for having rifle shooting at the Omori butts for the elder boys of this Brigade and before long we hope to be able to report progress. The Inter Company Challenge Medal, which was offered for competition last session between the 1st Shanghai Company Boys' Brigade and this Company, the award being based on the securing of the highest average weekly percentage of possible attendance per month, the most number of months during the session, has been again won by this Company after a keen contest with our competitors. The Ambulance Class for instruction in "First Aid" and stretcher drill has been a most popular one and the majority of the members have taken advantage of the exceptional opportunities afforded them for becoming useful members of society in intelligently ministering to cases of accident which may arise. I can assure you, boys, that a great number of the older visitors present here today much regret that they never had the opportunity, when young, of joining an Ambulance Class, so you boys will require no urging to get and retain all the knowledge you possibly can in the matter of "First Aid" to the injured. The Company has been exceedingly fortunate in having as its Instructor Dr. W. J. E. Davies, who has given his valued services week by week absolutely gratuitously. His continued interest in the welfare and improvement of the Company has been very greatly appreciated. The Sunday morning services have been a source of considerable profit and encouragement to the members who have been privileged to hear a series of excellent addresses from various members of the community Sunday by Sunday. The subjects chosen have been specially helpful in the up-building of character and the benefits accruing cannot be readily estimated. As, however, "all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," Company recreations have not been overlooked. Last Summer the first Annual Camp was held, when nearly 20 boys availed themselves of a four days' holiday at Koshiba down the bay of Tokyo. The Camp was voted a grand success by all who attended; there were no cases of sickness. The Football Club, which was organised in October, gives promise of a bright future. A "Route March" was held in February, when the Company marched out to Negishi and were very hospitably received by Mr. and Mrs. C. V. Sale, who had provided many and sundry delicacies dear to boys' hearts. Fireworks were afterwards discharged in the garden and the Company returned home by torchlight; the effect being most impressive. I will not detain you longer as the programme must be carried out, but before closing these remarks I would like to say how highly this community appreciates the work Captain Tebb is doing so successfully amongst our boys and we tender him our hearty thanks, also to his officers who have so ably seconded his efforts, and to you, the 1st Yokohama Company of the Boys' Brigade, we give you the assurance of our entire support and trust you will attain even greater successes in the future.

Following this came Squad Drill with arms, Mr. H. W. Kilby, 1st Lieut. in command. The evolutions were smartly gone through and evoked applause. A song by Dr. Emerson, "When the Boys Come Home" (Allison), formed an interlude, and then, what to some was the most interesting feature of the entertainment was announced—Ambulance Drill. Dr. W. J. E. Davies has been instructing the lads in "First Aid to the Wounded," all through the winter, and the drill now shown included exercises with closed stretchers, and then stretcher drill by the N. C. O. squad, including "first aid" bandaging on scalp, knee and foot. The 2nd Lieut. of the Company, Mr. P. E. Nicolle, was in command, and the professional manner in which the lads carried out the drill spoke volumes for the manner in which he handled them and for the way in which Dr. Davies has taught them the first principles of the art and craft of "first aid." After a song by Mr. S. H. Somerton—"A Soldier's Song" (Mascherani)—the Captain, Mr. L. D. Tebb, put the whole company through evolutions, and then Colonel Hume rose and said that was the second time he had had the pleasure of inspecting the company, and he was very glad indeed to be able to tell them that he would make a most favourable report on what he had seen that evening. He was delighted to hear the excellent report read by the Chairman. The attendance at drill could not have been better. He was also pleased to hear the Company had beaten the Shanghai Company this year. (Applause.) Referring to the Chairman's statement that there was a chance of some rifle shooting being done in the near future, Colonel Hume said it would afford him the greatest possible pleasure to offer a prize for competition, the conditions to be decided by the officers of the Company and the Committee. (Applause.) The boys had turned out smart on parade, and the drill with arms as well as the stretcher drill reflected very great credit on the members, on Captain Tebb and his officers, and also on Dr. Davies, who had instructed the boys in stretcher drill. Colonel Hume pointed out one or two things which had caught his eye as requiring improvement, and commented on the remark of Lord Roberts, quoted by the Chairman as to the need for boys being versed in the use of arms.

Captain Tebb on behalf of the officers and members of the Company, thanked Colonel Hume for having honoured the Company by inspecting them for the second time, and for the interest he had always shown in their work, and also for the offer to present a prize for competition. On behalf of the Company he also desired to congratulate the inspecting officer on his recent promotion to the rank of Colonel as a mark of King Edward's appreciation of the gallant officer's services as Military Attaché with the Japanese Army during the late war. (Applause.) Captain Tebb also thanked the Chairman for presiding that evening.

At the call of the Captain, the Company gave three cheers and a "tiger" each for Colonel Hume and the Chairman.

The American and British National Anthems brought a very enjoyable entertainment to a close.

FIRES.

On the evening of Tuesday, April 24th, a few minutes before seven o'clock fire broke out in the barber's shop near the Tokyo Club. For a time the Club and Mr. Brindley's offices were in great danger but the flames were happily brought under control after consuming the barber's shop and part of the adjacent houses.

The whole of the building erected by Mr. Masujima was destroyed in the fire of the 24th instant. It contained Mr. Masujima's offices, a barber's shop (where the conflagration originated), the offices of the Progressist Party and some other offices. Owing to the rapidity with which the flames spread and the inconvenient hour, the archives of the Progressists, were all burned. The building was insured for 20,000 yen.

At 9.40 p.m. on April 21st fire broke in the Shimabara-za theatre, Kyoto, destroying the building and six others. About four hundred persons who were in the theatre escaped.

Fire broke out at 10 a.m. on April 22nd in the village of Yakuno near Kyoto, destroying twenty houses.

On Sunday evening, a fire occurred in Sarugaku-cho, Kanda, Tokyo. Owing to a strong southwesterly wind, the flames, which originated in the Tokyo Academy, spread at once to the adjoining buildings, burning down about a hundred houses.

On April 21st, fires occurred in Oita-machi, and the village of Bekki, Oita prefecture. In each case, about a hundred houses were destroyed.

At 4.10 a.m. on April 24th, fire broke out in Fukutomi-cho, Yokohama destroying six houses and damaging three. The accident originated in the shop of a lamp dealer named H. Nagase. The cause is not yet known.

A telegram from Sendai says that on April 25th two fires broke out in the villages of Kanegase and Onoda, destroying 167 and 80 houses respectively.

THE FAMINE.

Messrs. Pollak Bros. have donated through the Swiss Consul-General yen 2,500 towards the relief of famine sufferers.

Mr. Donald McKintyre of Sydney, Australia, has sent five tons of salt-beef to be given to the famine district in the North-East.

Through Baron Kaneko, Mrs. Potter, the wife of the Bishop of the Episcopal Church in New York, U.S.A., has made a donation of $1,000 towards the North Japan Famine Relief Fund.

The Executive Committee of the Yokohama and Tokyo Foreign Residents' Association for the Relief of Sufferers by the War gratefully acknowledge receipt of the following sums towards the Famine Relief Fund now being collected:—

	Yen.
Amount already acknowledged .....	11,105.60
A reader of the "Fukui Geppo," per
Rev. W. B. Langsdorf .....	.50
Rupees.
Mr. Tata .....	1,500
Messrs. Vussonji Tricunji and Co. ....	1,001
" Breul and Co. ....	1,000
" Balchand Oogherchand and Co. ....	501
" Prier de Saone and Co. ....	500
" Mitchell and Co. ....	500
" Sethna Dady Captain and Co. ....	500
Mr. Damoder Gordhandas Sukhadvala .....	500
Messrs. Mathuradas Callianji & Co. ....	301
" Shamji Ludha and Co. ....	251
" Bhimji Shanji and Co. ....	201
" N. S. Gazoda and Co. ....	101
" Greaves Cotton and Co. ....	101
" Dharamsey Jeitha and Co. ....	101
" Madon Bhimji and Co. ....	101
" Jethabhai Vurdhman and Co. ....	101
" Bhagwandas Visram and Co. ....	100
Mr. N. D. Dadysett .....	51
Messrs. Damji Arjoon and Co. ....	51
" Vussonji Velji and Co. ....	51
" Cursondas Lukhmidas .....	51
" P. Chrystal and Co. ....	51

Total ..... 7,615

In Northern Korea, rinderpest is prevalent. Some Japanese medical officials have been sent from Seoul.

YOKOHAMA FOREIGN BOARD OF TRADE.

At a meeting of the Committee of the Yokohama Foreign Board of Trade, held on the 23rd instant, Mr. C. V. Sale was elected Chairman, and Mr. M. Beart Vice-Chairman for the ensuing year. Committee—Messrs. W. T. Payne, D. H. Blake, V. A. Caesar Hawkins, J. A. Harmsen, V. R. Bowden, and J. T. Griffin.

TELEGRAMS.

The following letter was read:—

We have experienced much inconvenience through the mutilated condition in which our telegrams have been received during the last few months. We have taken up the subject with the Superintendent of the Telegraph Department at Yokohama with the special object of ascertaining the point at which the errors occur and have elicited the following information:—

1. That the proportion of errors originating with the Japanese lines is very small compared with that originating from the foreign portion of the lines.
2. That according to International Conventions no enquiries are permitted outside the country of origin.

From this it would seem that there is no means of placing the responsibility for the vexatious and annoying errors which so constantly occur.

We enclose copies of the correspondence exchanged with the Superintendent of the Telegraph Department.

Resolved.—That in view of clause 2 in reference to enquiries, this Board will communicate with the cable companies through the Chambers of Commerce of London and New York.

PHARMACOPEIA JAPONICA.

From enquiries made in reference to this work, it has been ascertained that it will probably be published in three or four months and be in the Japanese language. It will contain about double the quantity of matter as compared with the last issue, which was in Latin and contained 300 pp. crown octavo. It was thought this Board might have been able to issue an English translation of the work, but as a German version will be published the Board has decided that there is not room for two translations.

MAILS TO AND FROM KOBE.

The following letter was read:—

I beg to hand you enclosed an extract from the Kobe Herald of 19th inst. the information contained in which appears to me to merit the serious attention of the Board.

The delay in delivery of Mails between this and Kobe has already been very inconvenient and it was hoped that the improvement in the train service would expedite the mails, but so far from this being the case it would appear that the service will be slower than it was before. If it is found impossible to carry heavy mails by the first evening express, an arrangement might be made to carry privileged letters charged with an extra postage.

Another communication on the same subject was read:—

We desire to call your attention to the fact that while a faster and more complete train service has been arranged between this port and Kobe the result so far as mails are concerned is of a retrograde nature.

Under the former service mails posted for train leaving

Yokohama 6.45 p.m. arrived Kobe 9.30 a.m. next morning

Kobe 6.20 p.m. arrived Yokohama 9 a.m. next morning

Under the new service the fast evening express leaves Yokohama at 7.11, but we are informed by the Imperial Post Office that the combined Tokyo and Yokohama mails carried by this train are limited to ten bags. Consequently it will frequently happen that part if not all of the Yokohama mail will be held over until the later train leaving at 8.12 p.m. and arriving in Kobe at 11.30 a.m. the next morning. According to our experience mails despatched by this later train are not delivered in Kobe until about 2 p.m.

A similar change has been made in the despatches from Kobe, so that instead of receiving our mails at about 11 a.m. they are delivered at about 2 p.m.

We shall feel obliged if your Board will take up this matter with the proper authorities, with a request that an acceleration of mail service should accompany the acceleration of train service.

Resolved.—That, in view of the importance of the subject, the Authorities be communicated with without delay, the first step to be taken being that the Chairman of the Board obtain an interview with the Director of Posts.

MAILS TO KOBE.

The Chairman of the above Board has been informed by Mr. S. Iida, Director of Posts at Yokohama, that, representations having been made by him to His Excellency the Minister of State for Communications, an arrangement has been effected by which all local mails received in time will be despatched to Kobe by the fast evening express. The thanks of the business community are due to Mr. Iida for his very prompt and courteous attention to the request placed before him.

In reference to the comments on the mail service to Yokohama, which appeared in our issue of the 24th inst. the Kobe Herald publishes the below communication from the local Post Office:—

Sir,—With regard to your comment on Kobe-Yokohama Mail Service, appearing in your issue of the 19th inst., I am directed by the Director to state that the matter has been engaging best attentions since the inauguration of the new train service, and, after, various considerations, a new arrangement has now been made in order to meet the requirement of the business community, by which the mails only for Yokohama will be forwarded by 6.30 p.m. train from Kobe.

The closing hours of the above mails will be 5.20 at Sannomiya office and 5.40 at Sakaimachi Head Office every evening. It should, however, be noted that as the above express train attaches no postal car, the mails could not be received direct by the train and that, therefore, the mails intended for transmission by the above express should better be posted at either Sannomiya or Head Office to ensure the quick despatch.

OPENING OF THE FUJIMI-CHO KYOKWAI.

On April 14th was opened at Fujimi-cho, roku-chome, Tokyo, the new church building of the Fujimi-cho Church, which takes the place of the Ichiban-cho Church of the Nihon Kirisuto Kyokwai, a church which was organized in 1886 as an independent congregation, but united with that body in the following year with the Rev. Uemura Masahisa as pastor.

Mr. F. Usawa, one of the church, gave a history of the undertaking to provide a new building in the course of which he said:—The project was definitely formed in March 1899, when it was thought the sum of eight thousand yen would suffice for the land and the building. In 1902 it was seen that this amount would be quite insufficient and it was proposed to raise thirty thousand yen, but, on the opening of the war in 1904, it was considered inexpedient to try to raise so large a sum. In 1905, 180 tsubo of land was bought for 5,600 yen. As we needed more than money the sympathy of the churches in the early part of 1904 the pastor made an evangelistic tour through the country in order to obtain the help of the churches. The total amount of money obtained was, in round numbers, yen 18,000 of which yen 16,000 was raised by those connected with the Ichi ban cho Church; yen 1,500 was given by the members of other Churches and non-Christians; and yen 500, by foreign missionaries and friends.

A letter was received from a missionary who was at that time in New York in which he kindly said that if he were authorized to lay the matter before the Presbyterian Churches in America probably five thousand dollars could be obtained, but this offer was not accepted. It is now 34 years since the beginning of the present stage of development in Japan, and we believed it to be in accord with the will of God that we should build the church ourselves, and show the spirit of sacrifice. In taking this course there is no anti-foreign feeling whatever, we desire the sympathy of our foreign brethren and are grateful for their kindness and help in the past. I feel sure that our church is not lacking in the spirit of hospitality toward them.

The Rev. Y. Honda, D.D., preached the opening sermon from the texts, "Ye are the temple of God," and "In this place is one greater than the temple." He recalled the time when the pastor and he were students together in Yokohama, when they were satisfied with a room in a tea-house as a preaching place, referring to the fact that the church should always be one in which the Resurrection is preached as a historical fact; and that the new church, beginning its work on Easter Day, should rise to a life of even greater activity and service than the church whose work it continues.

Representing the Fukui Domei Kai (Evangelical Alliance) Rev. H. Kozaki referred to his long friendship with Mr. Uemura, and quoted with approval the saying of Dr. Jefferson who, on being asked whether he proposed to make the new Broadway Tabernacle an institutional church, replied that he hoped to make it an inspirational church.

Mr. Uchigasaki, an assistant of the Rev. D. Ebina, pastor of the Hongo Church, said that he spoke, though his name was not on the programme, for the Hongo Church which is usually considered to be the opposite pole of the Ichi ban cho Church. He expressed his own personal obligations to Mr. Uemura and said that the Church throughout the country needed the power that was manifested in the church of which he is pastor.

L'ALLIANCE FRANCAISE.

The reunion of the Alliance Francaise held in the Van Schaick Hall on Thursday afternoon proved a very enjoyable entertainment. The literary portion of the programme was provided by the Rev. Père Papinot, who read a most interesting and historical paper on the relations of the French people with Japan before the opening of the country in 1859. This was followed by a second part which opened with a song, "Rondel de l'Adieu," (Isidore de Lara) capably rendered by Mr. Ruinat, who has a very pleasant light tenor voice. Mr. Salinger followed with a solo on the violoncello, Rubinstein's "Romance No. 3," which it is almost superfluous to say, was excellently played and greatly enjoyed by the audience. The third number was a recitation, "La Gervaise," by Jacques Normand, which afforded the reciter, Madame Ruegg, to display, to full advantage her very high elocutionary and dramatic powers. The lady was enthusiastically applauded and was presented with a beautiful bouquet. Mr. Ruinat followed with another song, H. de Fontenailles' "Saistu" a dainty little chanson which was much appreciated, and the programme concluded with a piano forte duet, a "Polonaise" by Dvorak, which was most spiritedly executed by Mr. and Mrs. Saenger. Mr. Saenger also played the accompaniments to Mr. Ruinat's songs most sympathetically. There was a very fair attendance, including a considerable number of visitors from Tokyo, who, unfortunately had to leave before the conclusion of the entertainment.

BEATTIE-COX WEDDING.

A quiet little wedding took place in Christ Church, Yokohama, on Wednesday, when Miss Beattie Beattie was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Douglas Cox. The Rev. W. P. G. Field officiated and the service was fully choral. The bride, who was given away by Mr. W. H. Talbot, was attired in a heavy white embroidered silk, and wore a lace and straw hat with plumes. She had as bridesmaids the Misses Ethel and Amy Talbot, the former in pale blue chiffon and the latter in white. Mr. H. Macdonell was best man. The hymn "O Perfect love" was sung and also "The voice that breathed o'er Eden," while Mendelssohn's Wedding March resounded as the bridal party left the church. A reception was given at the residence of Mr. Talbot, where the best of good wishes were expressed for the newly married pair. The bride's going away dress was of white serge, trimmed with white silk braid. After a short stay in Tokyo and Kyoto, Mr. and Mrs. Cox will take up their residence in Kobe.

"THE CAPTIVES OF BABYLON" IN TOKYO.

In response to an invitation from the Young Men's Christian Association of Tokyo, the augmented choir of Union Church, under the leadership of Mr. W. K. Vincent, gave a repetition of Shinn's Oratorio, "The Captives of Babylon" in the Y. M. C. A. Hall, Kanda, Tokyo, on Saturday evening. The performance was fixed for 6 p.m. and the forty odd members of the choir left Yokohama by the 4.20 express train, arriving at Shimbashi before 5 p.m. The arrangements for transport of the members were admirably carried out by Mr. Clarence Griffin, collaborating with members of the Y. M. C. A., by rail and tram cars, and the whole company arrived at their destination well before the necessary hour. Tokyo audiences, however, are, we understand, not accustomed to punctuality, and as there was a very small house assembled at 6 p.m. a rather tedious wait ensued till about 6.30, by which time the large hall was more than half filled. Then a start was made, and after that the audience continued to increase until the thousand or so seats in the body of the Hall and large gallery were fairly well filled—we should say at least 600 to 700, which was certainly better than Yokohama afforded to the performers. The singers' seats were raised in tiers on the stage and were filled to their utmost capacity, the piano being on the lower level. As on the last occasion in Van Schaick Hall, Mr. W. K. Vincent conducted, Miss Blundell officiated most admirably at the piano, the soloists comprised Miss Mendelson, Mrs. Thom, Mr. Cooper, Mr. Kendall and Mr. Somerton, and the Choir was the same as before, with the exception of a tenor and a soprano who were absent on a honeymoon trip. The hall seemed to be for the most part well suited acoustically for orchestral work and solos, concerted pieces and choruses all went well. At first, the same doubt appeared to rest in the minds of the audience, as appeared in the Van Schaick Hall, whether to give vent to applause or not, but before the performance was through this doubt was solved, and several of the solos, notably the last of Mr. Cooper's, and several of the choruses, were warmly applauded, while at the conclusion the whole house joined in an ovation of hand, clapping and applause, proving most distinctly that the performance had been fully appreciated. After the performance the members of the company were most liberally provided with a cold collation in the salons of the Y. M. C. A. Hall and then took the trams again in time to catch the 9.30 train back to Yokohama, after what was described by most as a very enjoyable excursion.

THE LAW COURTS.*CLAIM FOR SHORT DELIVERY.

The hearing of the case in which Messrs. Mendelson Bros. claim twelve hundred yen from the Yokohama agents, Messrs. Butterfield and Swire, of the Ocean Steamship Co. and the China Mutual Steam Navigation Co. was resumed on April 20th in the Yokohama District Court.

Capt. A. Weston, and Messrs. M. Beart and J. T. Lias were examined as witnesses.

Mr. Montague Beart deposed that Captain Weston was landing agent appointed by Messrs. Butterfield and Swire. Before Sept. 14th last, the firm bought the lighters, etc., from Capt. Weston and provided a landing department which was now in existence. Witness described the practical routine of the landing business, and added that the landing department of Messrs Butterfield and Swire always received bills-of-lading from the consignees before the completion of the delivery of cargo. Referring to Exhibit A-1—a bill-of-lading—the Court asked witness why the document was left in the hands of the plaintiffs after the defendants were insisting that the goods had been all delivered to the consignees. Witness replied that the bill-of-lading was returned to Messrs Mendelson Bros. in a friendly way when Mr. McIvor asked for the documents and that the defendants had no responsibility to return them to the plaintiff.

Capt. A. Weston deposed that he gave a certificate to the consignees by endorsing on the bill-of-lading, whenever there was short delivery. The landing agent did not always attend to damage caused to cargo. Damage was settled between the consignees and ships agents. Claims for shortage or damage, were, however, not allowed after the time notified by the ship's agents.

Mr. F. J. Lias stated that tin plates were imported by many steamers belonging to the defendants. A portion of the lots brought by the Machaon and Deucalion were still left undelivered. The short delivery was certified in the Customs permit concerned. The bill-of-lading was surrendered to the landing agent before the consignee commenced to take delivery of the cargo. Consequently, the shortage was not specified in the bill-of-lading.

At the conclusion of the examination of the witnesses, Counsel had a brief argument, after which the case was adjourned.

CLAIM FOR DAMAGE.

The case filed by Mr. J. C. Wilkinson of Kobe against the Crown Cork Co. L'td of which Mr. E. Mendelson is the local representative, claiming yen 161,019.47 was brought up on April 20th in the Yokohama District Court.

Plaintiff was represented by Mr. H. Nakamura and the defendants by Mr. H. Sato.

The statement of the plaintiff's Counsel as to the grounds of the petition was that some fourteen years ago, during 1892, the plaintiff discovered a mineral spring, at Takaradzuka, Settsu Province, which proved to be one of the best of drinking waters. He planned to bottle the water and offer the same on the market. Preparations were made, machines purchased, and works erected, and at length, in 1894, the water made its first appearance in the market under the name "Tansan." The water was favourably received, its sales increased daily. In these circumstances, the plaintiff did his best to improve the machinery, equip the works, and enlarge the scope of the business, so that he might be enabled to meet the ever increasing demand. In 1899 a certain Harold Robert Smythe, who was the Managing Director of the defendant company (which had its head office in London, England) came to Japan, and taking cognizance of the big business carried on by the plaintiff he, the said Mr. Smythe, asked the plaintiff to use in his business his "Crown" corks relative to which the defendant company held patent rights and was engaged solely in the manufacture and sale. The plaintiff went to London in May 1900, and personally inspected the "Crown" corks, bottling machinery, the method of bottling, and the results thereof. The "Crown" corks were than apparently better than ordinary corks and, above all, the defendant company having guaranteed that the "Crown" corks were the best articles in the world, and that the contents of any bottle fitted with these corks would never leak, the plaintiff was finally persuaded to use the patent corks in his business, and gave orders accordingly to the defendant company. The use of the corks continued from 1901 to 1903, and the result was always satisfactory. In the meantime, the plaintiff was informed by the London offices of the defendant company to the effect that the defendant company was going to establish a manufactory of the "Crown" corks at Yokohama, Japan, to manufacture corks of exactly the same quality as the London corks, and that they desired plaintiff would use the Yokohama made Crown corks in future.

The first shipment was made on the 4th August 1903, and thenceforth, in the aggregate, 262 cases of the Yokohama Crown Corks were purchased, for which the plaintiff paid the total amount of yen 22,307 till August 1904. The Yokohama "Crown" corks were, notwithstanding the guaranty and assurances of the defendant company, so very inferior in quality to those of London make, that they were useless for the plaintiff's business.

After the statement by plaintiff's counsel the defendant's counsel denied the allegations in toto. Plaintiff's counsel produced twenty-nine exhibits in support of the claim,

The Court said that owing to the large number of documents submitted it was impossible to proceed further without investigating them and for this reason adjourned the case until May 16th.

PETITION FOR DECISION IN BANKRUPTCY.

The action filed by Messrs. Samuel Samuel & Co., asking for a decision in bankruptcy against R. Okawa, a drug trader, came up again on April 23rd in the Yokohama District Court.

Defendant's counsel produced several letters—Exhibits Nos. B—5 to 7—and said that the defendant's business was taken over by his younger brother Tomijiro Okawa, and transactions were being carried out under the name of the successor, though sometimes the name of Ryonosuke Okawa was used for the convenience of the business. One of the letters produced was an order from Messrs. Simon Evers and Co., given to Tomijiro Okawa on Jan. 18th this year and Counsel added that the name of the defendant was not used in such an important communication as he had no direct responsibility. Counsel asked the Court for leave to examine Yasui, an employee of Messrs. Simon, Evers and Co., as a witness and said that he wrote the foregoing order for a quantity of peppermint.

Plaintiff's Counsel also producing several letters said that the business was practically attended to by the defendant and not by Tomijiro Okawa, his younger brother, who was merely an employee in the office. Many important documents were signed by defendant.

The Court, at this stage, said that the man required by defendant's Counsel could not be examined as a witness.

The parties then entered into discussion. Plaintiff's Counsel said that defendant's business was practically carried on under the name of Ryonosuke Okawa and on his account. When the defendant received advances from Messrs. Samuel, Samuel and Co. they were not for Tomijiro Okawa as defendant's Counsel insisted. Should the defendant still maintain his contention that he had no direct liability in the business a question would arise as to who was responsible for money—received on several occasions,—from Messrs. Samuel, Samuel and Co. Counsel concluded by saying that if the defendants' contention was upheld then there would follow a criminal action for fraud.

Defendant's Counsel contended that it was a true fact that defendant had transferred his business to his younger brother, Tomijiro Okawa. The successor was responsible for the accounting of any money received from the plaintiffs' firm.

The Court declared the hearing concluded and that judgment would be given at 1 p.m. on April 25th.

CLAIM BY TRANSPORTATION AGENT.

The hearing of a case instituted by H. Kawai, forwarding agent, against Messrs. Faber and Voight, claiming yen 258.50 began on April 24th, in the Yokohama District Court before Judge Nagata.

Plaintiff was represented by Mr. S. Ota and defendants by Messrs Ikeda and Akiyama.

Plaintiff's Counsel stated that on February 13th last year, plaintiff received forty-five bags of pea-nuts from Shizuoka via a forwarding agent, the Maruichi-Unsoten, which merchandise was consigned to the defendants. The draft, amounting to yen 250, was attached to the way-bill and sent through the Thirty-fifth Bank. On the arrival of the goods in Yokohama, they were delivered to Messrs. Faber and Voight before the draft was honoured. Later, the defendant's firm refused to pay the draft, and it was left unpaid till May 8th the same year, when the plaintiff paid the amount to the Thirty-fifth Bank together with interest yen 8.50, incurred.

Defendants' Counsel held that the pea-nuts were sent from Nagashima, a wholesale merchant of Shizuoka, to the defendant. Some advances had been made by the defendant to a third-person before the present goods were consigned. Consequently, the defendants had incurred no obligation to pay for forty-five bags of pea-nuts valued at yen 250. Further, the defendants were not bound to take up the draft on the bank.

The parties discussed the technical questions raised, after which plaintiff's Counsel asked the Court for leave to examine S. Arai, an employee of the Thirty-fifth Bank, as a witness. The Court gave consent and decided to summon him on May 12th.

CLAIM AGAINST A LANDING AGENT.

In the Yokohama District Court, the case instituted by K. Iwai, a hard-ware merchant of Osaka, against Captain A Weston, claiming yen 1,276.50 came up on April 24th before Judge Nagata.

Plaintiff was represented by Messrs Imamura and Uzawa, and the defendant by Mr. H. Sato.

Plaintiff's Counsel stated that on April 2nd 1905, plaintiff imported 60 cases containing galvanized sheets by the steamer Oanfa; on June 29th 378 cases of similar goods by the Prometheus; and on July 23rd, 60 cases of similar material by the Jacques. These cargoes were landed by Capt. Weston. Among the lots, nineteen cases—2 cases among the lots on the Oanfa, 17 cases on the Prometheus, and 3 cases on the Jacques—were short delivered. The shortage was valued at yen 1,260. Further, on April 8th, a lot of 100 casks containing chloride of potash was brought by the Kaisow being consigned to the plaintiff. One cask was short delivered, the value being yen 16.50.

Defendant's Counsel admitted that the plaintiff's claim as to shortage against his bills of lading was correct, but that the landing agent had no responsibility.

Plaintiff's Counsel requested the Court to adjourn the case for further preparation of evidence. The Court gave consent and adjourned the hearing till May 12th.

CLAIM FOR SHORT DELIVERY.

The hearing of a case in which Messrs Siber, Wolff & Co claim yen 1,541.80 from Messrs Butterfield and Swire, Yokohama agents of the China Mutual S. N. Co. and the Ocean S. S. Co. was resumed on April 25th in the Yokohama District Court.

Four Japanese were examined as witnesses. Mr. T. Sone, one of the tidewaiters of the Yokohama Customs explained the customs regulations with regard to landing of cargo and the passing through the Customs and deposed that the goods landed in the compound of the Customs were under the supervision of the Customs authorities. The owners or the landing agents sometimes watched the goods they were concerned with. In April or May, last year, a few cases of white shirting and flannel were stolen from the Customs compound. The merchandise was consigned to Messrs Siber, Wolff and Co.

Nagasawa, a cotton and woollen piece goods merchant, was examined. He stated that in April or May last year, the market price of British flannel was sen 51—51½ not including the war tax. If the tax and commission of the importer be added to the cost, the price would be sen 58-59. Referring to an invoice shown by the Court, witness said that the home cost should be about 10½ pence. If the freight, insurance and other various charges be added to the cost, the price for Yokohama delivery will be 12 or 12½ pence. Further witness stated as to white shirting that the cost was about 8s. and 10d. per piece, being equivalent in Japanese money to yen 5.40 or 5.45. If the import duty and the war tax be added the price would be yen 6.20 or 6.25.

B. Nambu, a convict now in the Yokohama jail, was summoned as witness. He stated that he confessed in the criminal section to having stolen eleven cases containing flannel, shirting, woollen cloth, etc. in April or May last from the compound of the Customs. He was unable to describe the marks, etc., on the packages as he had forgotten them. Heishiro, one of his accomplices, forged the official stamp pressed on the packages, after the import duty was paid. Witness put the false stamp on the cases containing white shirting, etc., and took them from the shed in the Customs compound.

Watanabe, another convict from Yokohama jail, said that he purchased the foregoing goods which had been stolen by Nambu and others from the Customs, and he sold the merchandise in several places.

After the conclusion of the examination, Counsel spoke briefly. The hearing was then adjourned till April 30th.

PROTEST ON DISTRAINT.

The case instituted by K. Kanda against Mr. H. V. Gielen petitioning for the release of two billiard tables and eight other articles which defendant seized together with the property of a third person, came up on April 25th the Yokohama Local Court.

Plaintiff was represented by Mr. S. Ota and the defendant by Mr. R. Ideura.

Plaintiff's Counsel stated that on March 5th and 7th this year, Mr. Gielen seized the property of a third person, T. Watanabe, No. 156, Yamashita-cho, together with two billiard tables and eight other articles belonging to the plaintiff. Counsel added that the plaintiff purchased these things in March, 1904, from a Chinese merchant named Ah Phon, residing at No. 146, Yokohama. On the 30th of the same month, the plaintiff lent the goods to the third person.

Defendant's Counsel held that the statement of the plaintiff could not be correct and that there was no definite evidence. He refused to admit plaintiff's petition.

The parties discussed the question of the place where the billiard tables, etc. were being kept. The Court decided to see the place in dispute and adjourned the hearing till May 2nd.

SENTENCE ON L. H. ABEL.

In the Yokohama District Court, sentence has been given against Mr. Louis Henry Abel, formerly secretary of the International Oil Co. Ltd. No. 8, Yokohama. Accused has been sentenced to eight years' minor confinement on a charge of having forged private letters and committed fraud. The accused is not at present in Japan.

The essential points in the charge against L. H. Abel (37), an American citizen, formerly secretary of the International Oil Co., Ltd. No. 8, Yokohama, are given by the Public Prosecutor of the Yokohama District Court as follows:—

The International Oil Co. was established on Dec. 13th, 1900, and Mr. Abel was engaged by the firm up to January 1905. He was elected on Oct. 20th, 1903, auditor and was instructed to superintend the book-keeping and accountants' work. Availing himself of his position he made out several vouchers for false accounts and drew cheques payable by the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation which he drew himself, the amounts and dates being:—

	Yen.
1903.
Jan. 9th.....	2,000.00
April 18th.....	800.00
July 23rd.....	2,500.00
Nov. 21st.....	3,000.00
1904.
Jan. 21st.....	1,000.00
July 25th.....	1,000.00
Sept. 14th.....	1,000.00
Oct. 10th.....	2,000.00
" 29th.....	2,500.00
Dec. 22nd.....	2,018.98
" 30th.....	5,000.00
" 31st.....	3,500.00
1905.
Jan. 21st.....	3,600.00

Many of the cheques were made out as though they were paid to Ishikawa, Mr. F. Woodruff, and Mr. Akiyama. Besides the foregoing frauds, the accused drew the following amounts from the same bank on the private account of Mr. Copmann:—

	Yen.
1903 November 22nd .....	826.00
December 21st.....	10.17
" 31st.....	51.15
1904 February 8th .....	1,100.00

The first three presented were to meet bills of the American Trading Co.

TOKYO DISTURBANCE CASE.

In connexion with the acquittal of Mr. H. Kono and other politicians charged with having instigated the Tokyo disturbance, Mr. Kobayashi, Chief Public Prosecutor of the Tokyo District Court, informed them on April 25th that the public procurator concerned had decided not to appeal against the decision given on April 21st. On April 26th, the grace of appeal having expired, the acquittal was confirmed.

The trial of S. Hosaka and 103 other coolies who are charged with having created a riotous tumult on September 5th last will take place on May 23rd in the Tokyo District Court. Sixty-eight lawyers are employed for the defence.

Takahashi Yeikichi (46), a naturalized Japanese, formerly a British subject named Frederick Curtis, residing at No. 2,275, Negishi, Yokohama, was arrested on April 25th under a warrant issued by Preliminary Examination Judge Hasegawa of the Yokohama District Court. It is said that he tried, on the evening of April 12th, to set fire to his dwelling with the purpose of obtaining two thousand yen insurance from an insurance company.

THE COLONIST'S CRY.

It's cruel of you, Springtime, when folks are growing old,
To set their hearts a-longing for banks of prim-rose gold,
Green willows by the river, gold kingcups by the Colne
Where every breath is perfume, a jewel every stone.
Lambs call about the meadows, the rooks are on the plough,
The thrush is singing anthems, buds gem the apple bough;
The dreamy shadows nestle in streets of sunlit grey,
Whilst we're away from England, six thousand miles away.
I see Mount Baker's summit, a cone of rosy snow—
Where waves broke, bloom the lilies: the fields of ocean glow
As God's sign gleams in heaven: the rocks are pink with foam
Of ribes and of stoncrop—our hearts cry out for Home!
For the narrow lanes of England, where may meets overhead;
Where living hamlets cluster round dreamlands of their dead;
Where Hope has met fulfilment, Ambition reached its goal,
Each acre had its story, each homestead found its soul.
Where all the earth is mellowed, and Nature's wood lyre strung
To loves our maidens whispered, the songs our people sung;
Where some girl's face is smiling in ev'ry op'ning rose,
Some heart of England speaking in ev'ry wind that blows.
O England, England, Springland! we wander whilst we live:
To broaden Britain's Empire, the best we have we give:
Surely they sleep the soundest in Mother's lap who lie,
We have worked, our strength is ended: ah! call us home to die.

CLIVE PHILLIPPS-WOLLEY.

Pier Island, British Columbia.

In the Spectator.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

A Russian mine was washed ashore on the morning of April 25th at Arahama, Kashiwazaki, near Niigata.

Further modifications of the plans for the increase of the police force in Korea have been issued, and it is now stated on good authority, says the Seoul Press Weekly, that the proposed reforms will be put into execution on June 1st. It is now said that 26 District Police Stations (with a Japanese Police Sergeant, a Korean Police Sergeant, 6 Japanese policemen and 8 Korean policemen each) and 122 Sub-Police Stations (with 2 Japanese policemen and 4 Korean policemen) shall be established in the interior, and for this 590 Japanese (which includes 20 Police Sergeants and 520 policemen and several interpreters) and 1,039 Koreans (including 26 Police Sergeants and more than 1,000 policemen) shall be employed. Recruits for the force, after being trained from June to October will enter as regulars, and the Japanese contingent will be selected from those who are in active service in Japan. For this scheme the sum of yen. 274,000 will be defrayed by the Financial Office.

It has been arranged that the steamers of the Toyo Kisen Kaisha plying between Yokohama and ports in South America will hereafter convey mails and parcels intended for Peru and Chili. The S. S. Glenfarg, which is to be despatched for Callao (Peru) and Iquique (Chili) on Wednesday, the 25th inst., will for the first time take mail for these districts. The mail closes at the following hours:—Ordinary Mails, 10.30 a.m., Registered Articles, 9.30 a.m., Parcels, 9.00 a.m.

The Kobe Herald announces the death on April 18th, of Mrs. Atkinson, wife of Dr. J. L. Atkinson, who has been closely identified with religious and philanthropic work in Kobe for upwards of thirty years. Mrs. Atkinson has been an invalid for some time past but with characteristic energy she kept about until a few days ago. The cause of death was Bright's disease. Mrs. Atkinson leaves three sons and three daughters, two of whom (Mrs. McKay and Mrs. Wm. King) are married.

The convenience of the railway and the fact that Pyengyang is an interesting place was attested last week (said the Seoul Press Weekly of April 14th) when some 15 visitors were guests of the little Anglo-Saxon community here. Pyengyang has about 30 men and women missionaries belonging to the Presbyterian and Methodist churches, and two Frenchmen. About 60 li out east from here is the Poong Poo Coal Mines—a Government enterprise, which is in charge of Mr. J. Kavanagh. The Presbyterian Mission is soon to "hive" again for on May first Dr. & Mrs. Whiting, Mr. and Mrs. Koons will officially become members of the new station at Chairyong. Rev. and Mrs. C. E. Sharp, of Seoul, are also appointed members of the new station. Chairyong is about 12 miles west of the railway station of Sarawun which is the next station to Whangju going south. A very large and promising developed work is in the territory. The British Gold mine at Gwendoline is gradually closing down, the gold having "run out." Not however before it proved a paying investment for the last company which took it. Dr. Campbell, the surgeon, left a few days ago. There are 5 men left now, not including the Manager Mr. Holloway.

The first-class cruiser Monmouth has been selected to replace the first-class cruiser Donegal on the China Station, the latter having been injured on the voyage outwards by going ashore. The Monmouth, like the Donegal, is a fine new cruiser of the well-known "county" type. She was built by the London and Glasgow Company in 1900-01, and was the third of her class finished. Her chief dimensions are:—Length 440 ft., beam 66 ft., mean draught 24½ ft., displacement 9,800 tons at the ordinary load line. She is fitted with four cylinder triple expansion engines of 22,000 h.p., supplied by 31 Belleville boilers with economisers, which have done very well in the cruiser. With regard to protection, a steel belt of from 4 to 2 inches in thickness runs on each side from the after turret to the bows; the casemates, turrets and barbettes are protected by from 4 to 5 inch armour, whilst a protective steel deck of ¾ inch to 2 inch armour, and the main deck, armoured by 1½ inch plates, and further protection to the engines, boilers, magazines and other vital portions. The conning tower, from which the cruiser is controlled in action, is guarded by 10 inches of armour. The armament consists of four 6 inch guns in pairs in turrets on special double mountings; ten 6 inch guns in casemates on broad sides; ten 12 pounders, three 3 pounders, eight machine guns and two 18 inch torpedo tubes. Of the latter she carries nine 18 inch, and five 14 inch, the last named torpedo being for boat service. When in commission the Monmouth carries 700 officers and men. The Monmouth, which, said an exchange, will be completed to full complement on April 13th, has served one commission with the First Cruiser Squadron, which she joined when it was formed.

CORRESPONDENCE.

JAPANESE AGRICULTURE.

(TO THE EDITOR OF THE "JAPAN MAIL.")

SIR,—One good turn deserves another. You were so good in publishing my former letter that I venture to once more trespass upon your patience. Suru mo Kiyori Otsuru. In my last I ought to have written "If there were more men like him we should have no famines." Now every crow thinks his own crow is the whitest. You have made modern Japan and naturally you do not like to have any one find fault with your creation. But even the diamond may be polished, and with your kind permission I will give a rub or two in the place cut by Professor David Starr Jordan. I will preface the sermon with a story. Once upon a time in the dim ages of the past a certain missionary priest was leading to their flocks in the north east district two gentle shepherdesses, when by chance they found themselves in the company of a very polished Japanese gentleman who very kindly advised them to pay no attention to the conversion of the nobility but to devote themselves to the people in the back-country who being more easy of approach would come in large numbers to the Church, etc. This doctrine was combatted with considerable warmth by the missionary party, and examples from ancient and modern history were poured in upon the head of the adversary until he, being a gentleman and perceiving that the situation was uncomfortable for one of the ladies, made a masterly retreat into another railway carriage to soothe his nerves with a good Havana. On his return the priest in the subtle Socratic manner opened up the attack from the agricultural side and asked the gentleman why ploughs were not used in Japan. This brought forth the indignant retort that they were used in the neighbourhood of Osaka. "But why are they not used here on Nasu no Hara?" retorted the ecclesiastic. "Here you are going to shoot rabbits on land that could be cultivated with a steam plough to feed thousands." Oh! said the victim, "It is impossible for you foreigners to appreciate the conservative character of the Japanese peasantry." "Well," said the other one, "You have been in Europe." "How do you know that?" retorted the Japanese gentleman.

"That is another story, as R. K. says. You have been in Switzerland and Germany and know that thousands are nourished by goats. Your mountains could support untold thousands of these useful animals whose flesh and milk might nourish very many of your people who now are steeped in abject poverty."

This was met by the former formula, "It is impossible for you foreigners to appreciate the Japanese peasantry."

The subject of "sheep" was shelved with the same diplomatic formula. Jig-saws and circular saws and the power going to waste in the mountain streams was damned by the same soft statement, "It is impossible, etc. etc." Then the worm turned and said: "Well sir! If your people are so stupid that they will not have flocks of sheep and goats to put food in their bellies, and coats on their backs, nor saws to make roofs over their heads because of their conservative character, can you not give us a generation or two before you expect any great results from the teaching of a foreign religion?"

The gentleman owned himself beaten. He did not give his card, but his photograph was seen later and recognised as a former Minister of Agriculture, and he is now in a position to send experts in practical agriculture to teach his people to plough and raise sheep and goats and rig up jig-saws and circular saws and all the rest. There is no necessity for any future famines if the educated classes of Japan will put into peaceful projects onethenth of the Bushido energy that they do into methods of wilful and deliberate murder; for that is just what war is.

Let us call a spade a spade and use it; as well as ploughs, sheep, goat jig-saws and circular saws.

H. S. J.

Would the ploughing of Nasu-no-hara or other Japanese moors produce any return for the expense and labour, and would goats thrive on Japanese hills where there is nothing but bamboo-grass? How can sheep be kept in Japan? Every effort to keep them may be said to have hitherto failed.—Ed. J.M.

MISSIONARIES IN CHINA.

(TO THE EDITOR OF THE "JAPAN MAIL.")

SIR,—In the Article with the above heading which appeared in your issue of the 15th inst. you quote what you say may be called the treaty-port formula, namely, that missionaries ought to stay at home where there is plenty scope for their energies. The following extract from a speech made by the Hon. Mr. Campbell, a prominent member of the Legislative Council of the Colony of Natal, as recorded in the Natal Mercury of Nov. 10th last, may be of interest to some of your readers. Mr. Campbell stated that he had been deputed with ten other gentlemen to study and report on the Native question, and among his experiences he related the following.

"In my travels I went to a mission-station, and met there a Scotchman from my own native town of Glasgow. He had made his fortune there, and had come to South Africa. I went through the schools, and through the workshop, where the industrial part of the Mission was carried on. I found him a level-headed business man. I told him I wanted to ask him one question, a question I had never asked before of any missionary. I said to him, 'You are managing this station in a business like way. I hope you will not be offended at my question. You made your money in a city where there are thousands of people suffering from cold and hunger, and you left them to come and help those who do not suffer in this way. Explain that, if you please?' He said to me, 'Mr. Campbell, I will answer that question. I used to go into the slums, and I found there were too many workers there already. At one house I visited, the workman's wife exclaimed upon my appearance at her door, 'Oh, good gracious, another missionary! You're the third I've had this morning. How am I to cook my husband's dinner?' and other forceful illustrations he gave me to show the influences which induced him to come to South Africa."

Hakodate, April 20th, 1906.

F.

PRESIDENT DAVID STARR JORDAN.

(TO THE EDITOR OF THE "JAPAN MAIL.")

SIR,—Perhaps the most regrettable feature of your very severe criticism of a recent address by President David Starr Jordan on Japan, is the fact that it conveys the impression that Dr. Jordan is animated by a spirit of unfriendliness toward Japan. Without taking space to go into the question of the merits or defects of his address I would like to say that Japan has probably no stauncher and more influential friend on the West Coast than the president of Stanford University. He is a sincere admirer of Japan, as both his public and his private utterances show, and the cause of Japan's further progress in science, in government, in economic and social conditions lies near his heart. As to the Japanese who emigrate to the West Coast, in addition to extending a cordial welcome to all who come to Stanford University for study, the weight of his position as a leading citizen of California and his relations of personal intimacy with the President of the United States, are wholly thrown into the scale in favour of fair and friendly treatment of the Japanese.

Dr. Jordan's second visit to Japan this summer will be a fortunate event, especially for the progress of science in this land. It will be the visit of a sincere, though not indiscriminating, friend.

Respectfully yours,

D. B. SCHNEDER.

Sendai, April 20th, 1906.

JAPAN'S FUTURE INFLUENCE IN THE FAR EAST.

EDUCATIONAL, HUMANITARIAN, RELIGIOUS.

(By Rev. J. H. PETTEE, D.D., Okayama.)

(A paper read at the spring meeting—held March thirteenth, at Osaka,—of the Missionary Association of Central Japan.)

Prologue. Three introductory remarks are in order,

1.—This subject calls for prophetic powers in its treatment. I can make no just claim to such distinctive ability. However since true prophecy means insight rather than foresight and all missionaries ought to have some of that quality I yield to request and make this attempt.

2.—The subject as well as writer was the selection of the committee. They form a powerful not to say amusing contrast. The one is as large as the other is small. But it will be noted that extensive as is our subject-to-day the committee have wisely restricted it. It does not quite cover the whole habitable globe of even Far Eastern life and leadership.

Politics, trade, art, at least are not definitely included. Difficult as the task may prove I shall try to be as brave and self-restrained as the committee though some references to these tabooed parts of the subject will performe be needed.

3.—As to method of treatment two courses out of several specially commended themselves to my mind, viz:

A.—By first collating the views of many writers, especially Japanese and then modestly adding my own or.

B.—By simply stating my own view and the reasons for holding such an opinion. I have decided to combine the two methods somewhat but on the general basis of this second course.

1.—Coming now without further delay to the subject in hand I would sum up my own view in a sentence.

Japan is and is destined to remain the Oriental Pioneer of Modern Civilization in the East.

Before considering in detail just what this means let me mention a few of the reasons why we may feel assured of its general correctness.

1.—Her geographical position at the gateway of the Orient. Herself of the East, she looks out upon the West. She stands where a herald should stand who has a message from the West to give to the East, and likewise a message from the older East to the newer West.

2.—Her diminutive stature (I mean as a nation and not as individuals) which greatly aids compactness and unity of purpose and movement. Dr. Arthur Smith, the veteran missionary of China, says in his latest written message to the West:

"At present the leaders of the Chinese are more or less perplexed and disunited. Whenever they find out how to act, and how to act as a unit they can easily make the world 'tip up.' That may be true but it will be a long while yet before China does get together. Japan can do it any day and if she is not heavy weight enough to tip up the world which she nearly accomplished in her latest balancing feat, she is a sufficiently agile light weight to lead in the dash races and to tip the wink to her club-footed rivals among Oriental athletes."

3.—Her desert preparation as an insular nation extending back many times the old Mosaic rule of forty lonely years.

4.—Her latest forty years of marvellous transformation and accomplishment.

5.—The recognition she has wrung from a none too willing but keen-sighted West of her prowess and her prospects as evidenced by the Anglo-Japanese Alliance; the sympathy of the world in her recent grapple with the Northern Bear; the treaty of Portsmouth; the investiture of her Emperor with the most noble Order of the Garter, of her three great men of war with the Order of Merit, of Premier Saionji, Foreign Minister (now ex-minister) Kato and many others with further British decorations; the raising of her legations to embassies at the leading capitals of the world; the steady lifting of her financial credit even during and following a burdensome war, the constant enlargement of her trade and manufactures, and the well nigh unanimous pro-Japanese sentiments of recent leading writers in American and western Europe on far eastern matters. So much for the consensus of opinion in the West.

6.—Turning to the continent of Asia we find a striking similarity of testimony as to a recognition grudgingly granted of Japan's acknowledged leadership. The change in China's attitude since the war of 1894 and in Korea's more recently still; the sending to Japan for education of thousands of the youth of both countries; the recently issued instructions by the Department of Education in China to Viceroy and governors-general that Chinese students who intend to visit Japan for study should first be given Japanese lessons in Chinese schools; the acceptance however reluctantly by Korea of Japan's suzerainty over the peninsula empire; the recent appointment of a Manchurian Investigation Commission with Gen. Kodama at its head to take note of conditions there that Japanese may be prepared intelligently to seize favorable opportunities for pushing trade and general intercourse; the accompanying fact that 16 cities and towns in that and of much promise are already formally thrown open to foreign trade and practically the whole are of residence and trade; the great strengthening of Japan's hold on China since the war and especially her signing of the Komura-China treaty with a corresponding weakening of Russia's and even America's influence; Japan's recent warning to China about her attitude toward foreigners; the growing intimacy between Siam and Japan, the Malayan Peninsula and Japan, India and Japan, Turkey and Japan through the bond of Buddhism of secluded Tibet with this vigorous young giant of the far East. These are suggestive proofs that the fame and fortunes of Japan are increasingly recognized and rejoiced over by all the countries of the East.

7.—Japanese magazines and newspapers during the past six months have abounded in such utterances as the following.

"Japan must take a leading place in the development of Manchuria."

"Japan's safety lies in the regeneration of China."

"Japan's present position in China is the outcome of persevering effort during the past forty years."

"It is Japan's clear duty to free Korea from the misrule of the past and lead her in the paths of modern enlightenment."

"Japan has shown the world how she can fight. Now she must show it how she can trade and teach and govern."

"Japan is the prophet of the Eastern world."

"Japan has a message for India."

Last September or October there was an article in the Kiristo Kyo Sekai on Tokyo Bummee no Tancho (The Simplicity of Eastern Civilization.) I quote the Japan Mail's summary "It (simplicity) reveals itself in architecture, in the arrangement of streets, in family and social customs, one is uniform the other multiform. Development of the original Japanese was arrested midway by the introduction of the stereotyped Chinese system, to which the Japanese have adhered with scrupulous punctiliousness. But during the past thirty years a new current has set in and now Japan must undertake the task of moving her neighbours out the political, educational and social ruts to which they have kept for ages."

8.—There are certain characteristics or tendencies of Japanese nature that lead up to anticipate continued progress and the power of aggressive leadership. I must not delay to go into this part of the subject at all exhaustively but simply hint at three of these most striking traits.

(1) Her passionate patriotism and abounding national ambition. I agree with Dr. Gulick that her patriotism is more truly a passion than an idea. "It is an emotion rather than a conception," and for that very reason it is a characteristic to be reckoned with in our forecast here to-day. It is those nations as well as those individuals that have had a passionate devotion to some cult or some cause, some faith or some fancy, which have blazed the paths of progress and been given positions of masterful leadership all out of proportion to their size or strength or numbers or other qualifications. Judea and Sparta of the olden time, Holland and Scotland of the later centuries are quartet of diamond nations that shine with great brilliancy on the coronet of Time's majestic crown. Japan determined to justify the great name she adopted for herself, with her Bushido training in loyalty to Eastern ideals, believing in her mission as saviour of the East and mediator between the civilizations of Asia and of Europe. Japan with sentiment added to sense, (and sometimes its substitute), flushed with victories that have shaken the world and yet conscious of unrealized ambitions, Japan, I repeat, is peculiarly fitted by temperament to add her name to those I have mentioned above and make the quartet a still more illustrious quintet.

(2) Then there is her rare combination of lightness and seriousness, of sombre pessimism and a sang froid optimism.

(3) One other characteristic only will I delay to mention, but I deem it of supreme importance in the treatment of this subject. I refer to Japan's marvellous love of change and her power of mobilization. Whether it be in fads or families, arts or armies, creeds or cabinets, trees or trades, plants or philosophies, roads or religions, she can change easily and it need be in bulk. No other established oriental nation at all approaches her in facility and speed of movement and hardly any nation of the West is her equal here. During the late war she mobilized her armies abroad and her trades at home with equal facility and celerity. She bolts her food, material or mental, everything from rice to philosophy, and openly boasts that she has broken the world's record as the champion lightning-speed taster of new foods, new machines, educational systems or schemes of metaphysics. Call her fickle, superficial, if you like, though longer acquaintance usually modifies that charge which is often made in annoyance and is derived from judgment at a single point rather than from a wide generalization. She is as lively as the tiny insect that haunts her wadded house mats in summer, or the darning needle, her appropriately chosen national emblem, that darts about her gardens and her marshes.

You cannot trust an individual or an institution to stay just where he or it is placed, but you can trust the general movement forward of society, at large. All I claim now is that this national trait or accomplishment peculiarly fits her to be the faster and the better, for her slower moving neighbors, whose rich courses she has so often sampled in the centuries that are gone.

I have characterized Japan's position past, present and probable future by the one word Pioneer. Let us now inquire more in detail what this means. It must of course be conceded that the first pioneers of modern progress in this or other Eastern lands were men from the West. Merchants and missionaries, consuls and commodores, soldiers and shipwrecked sailors, Dives and doctors of every description from over the sea have played their useful part in opening these hermit nations of the Orient.

That work must still go on. Outsiders can do some things that those to the manor born may not attempt. To be more exact then let us say,

1.—Japan is the Oriental pioneer of modern progress in the East. In saying this I do not forget the many individuals among Chinese, East Indians, Persians and even Turks who have done yeoman service in the cause of progress and exerted a helpful and far reaching influence for humanity's good. But these were individual exceptions to the trend of their national life. The remarkable thing about the Japanese is that a little coterie of such progressive minds rules the nation at large and shapes its destiny. It is Japan in miniature. It claims to be the incarnation of the national spirit and to speak with the authority of the nation as a whole. It follows therefore that Japanese are the first Oriental people to choose voluntarily through the masterful minds of their own nationals the path of modern progress which means largely Western civilization. They have passed the stage of their foreign tutelage and become in their own rights and by virtue of their own choosing, joint heirs with the great nations of the West, of the round world's heritage of wealth, of wisdom and of unbounded possibilities of service. For a nation of the Orient to climb to these dizzy heights, while still retaining so much of the spirit of an Asiatic past, cannot fail to give her enormous prestige and power with less favoured Orientals. "What Japan has done we may do," they are already saying. The disturbances still shaking China and the periodic agitation in British India mean this. Nothing but a stupendous blunder on Japan's part can unseat her in her commanding position as the peerless charioteer among Eastern nations on the highway of the world's progress. She has seized this place of influence by a splendid coup d'etat. It is hers already. The only question is how much will she use it? How much will she abuse it?

(1) Take the matter of Educational influence. Already the fame of Japanese schools has reached and penetrated all the newer nations of the East. Chinese, Korean, and other youths are sent here by the thousands. Chinese are starting schools of their own; Mission schools in China like private schools in Japan are daily growing in favour; among the tons of advice gratuitously offered to Marquis Ito which have cumbered the papers and magazines of the past month, many writers have emphasized the importance of education for Korea. Morioka Kingo, a Presbyterian evangelist who returned last month from Korea after a year or more of work there, says the Koreans of the better class are very anxious to learn Japanese, and that Japanese by combining educational and evangelistic work could render timely and influential help to Korea at very slight expense to the Japanese churches. He urges that this form of Christian service be undertaken at once. There is possibly no one particular in which Japan's marvellous progress during the past quarter century is more strikingly shown than in the matter of girls' education. Japan is now thoroughly committed to the modern conception of educated womanhood. It needs no prophet to tell what this example must mean in the near future for the girls of Korea, of China, and of Chinese dependencies. Minister Inagaki returns from Siam with Siamese maidens to place in the schools of Japan. The wife of Dr. Torii, ethnological instructor in the Tokyo university, has gone to Mongolia to instruct the women of the nobility in modern arts of living. Japanese instructors are beginning to supplant in Korea and China proper those from America and Europe. These are but samples of what is now occurring and will increasingly occur provided goods are kept up to sample and the brand is not changed so frequently as to confuse and irritate a people steeped in conservatism.

(2) In matters of philanthropy Japan's influence should be equally sane and strong. In no department of life's activities has Japan preserved her balance better than in that of humanitarian works in the difficult transition from a state of feudal communism to twentieth century individualism.

By the noble benefactions of her Emperor and Empress; by the admirable handling of large charity funds in times of special calamity, by the honorable recognition given to praiseworthy private enterprises, especially Christian ones during the past three years; by the steady growth of an intelligent spirit of wide-spread charity both individual and collective, a spirit led and stimulated by the Imperial court; Japan is in position not merely to set a high example but to interest herself practically in her neighbor States. Although the Chinese have placed the term Benevolence at the head of their list of Five Constant Virtues, it is a matter of common knowledge that they are very defective in its practical application. Dr. A. H. Smith, the trenchant well-informed writer on "Things Chinese," closes his chapter on Benevolence as follows:

"The Chinese character for benevolence, unlike most of those which relate to the emotions, which generally have the heart-radical, is written without the heart. The virtue for which it stands, is too often, also, practiced without heart, with the general results, some of which we have noticed. That state of mind, in which practical philanthropy becomes an instinct, demanding opportunity to exhibit its workings, whenever the need of it is clearly perceived, may be said to be almost wholly wanting among the Chinese. It is not, indeed, a human development. If it is to be created among the Chinese it must be by the same process which has made it an integral constituent of life in the lands of West. Now Japan is fast getting that spirit.

(3) When we touch the question of religious influence in which we are most vitally interested, some interesting phenomena appear. It is said by competent Japanese observers that the influence of Buddhist priests from Japan is practically nil in China proper and Manchuria. The Shinshu and Jodo sects are pouring out money like water, but are accomplishing nothing. They are meeting with little better success in Korea, that is as far as Koreans are concerned, and it is doubtful if they will secure any permanent hold upon Koreans themselves. It is possible that if those sects such as the Zen or Tendai or Shingon which most closely resemble continental Buddhism, should go into the foreign missionary business they might have more success, but they have not the money to do it spectacularly, nor the Moravian spirit to do it without much money. Buddhist priests are in too ill repute at home and their methods are too obsolete to command a respectful following. This part of the problem seems to depend on the outcome of Buddhist evolution or revolution here in Japan. A comprehensive attempt to forecast the result of that struggle now on would lead us too far afield. Suffice it to remark that pending that solution Christianity has her mission and day of opportunity. Mr. Ebina's able editorial in the January Shin-Jin (New Man) was on To Yo Dendo, (The Evangelization of the East). It gave high recognition to the philosophical excellence of Buddhism but said this must and could be conquered by the practical efficiency of Christianity.

Japanese Christians, or those non-Christians who are in general sympathy with Christian aims and endeavors, are already exerting an influence in Formosa, in Korea, in southern Manchuria, all out of proportion to their numbers. Mr. Morioka, whom I quoted above, says that notwithstanding the large number of churches in Korea established by missionaries from America and Europe, the Koreans have yet to be taught the importance of independence and self-support, and the Japanese are the ones who can most easily instruct and stimulate them along these lines.

One reason for this is the great difference between the styles of living practised by Europeans and Koreans. The Japanese can come nearer the latter in this and in other particulars. He admits the irritation and distrust caused by unprincipled Japanese adventurers and says the need is imperative of offsetting such degrading influences with those of a Christian and yet oriental order.

2.—This brings me to my second contention that Japan's future influence will be that of an altruistic pioneer. I do not mean merely or mainly in a Mark Twain sense of the term of "being willing to sacrifice one's wife's relations on this high altar." Japanese, I am aware, are prone to think they can best spend other people's money and run other people's affairs. But beyond that they certainly have a remarkable readiness for Orientals to practice kindness. They have a long start in the science and art of altruistic service.

Japan in her pre-Christian development had touched the high water mark among Eastern nations of what may be called communal altruism. She is now in the process of changing to what may be called personal altruism, and Christianity is the most powerful factor in this change. She still retains much of the form and the spirit of the old and that tends to establish kinship with her sister lands of the East. The pivotal points of her old time ethics were loyalty and filial piety. These go a long way in the East toward the summing up of virtue and those are altruistic in principle. Let them be supplemented ("fulfilled" to use Christ's word) by our Protestant ideas of individual initiative, confession of Christ and social service and a great and lasting leadership is assured to Japan.

Mr. Yukichi Yamaji (a Methodist Christian) editor of the Dokuritu Hyoron (Independent Review), has a long editorial in the last number of his magazine, in which he advises Marquis Ito as to the course he should pursue in Korea. He recalls the historic fact that Yoritomo saved the nation in his day by ignoring details over which the court nobles at Kyoto were squabbling and idling their time, and marked out at Kamakura a large plan for the nation to pursue. He urges the Marquis to play the part of Yoritomo and thus rescue Korea from servitude to the minutiae of Chinese civilization. I heard an up-to-date intelligent Christian pastor say recently in private conversation: "If our Emperor could go to Korea and show his benevolent heart to the Koreans I am sure they would be convinced and would trust us." Such was really the intent of the mission. It succeeded largely because the iron hand was gloved in the silk of winsome gentleness.

Rev. S. Ishida, a Presbyterian pastor well known in this city, has just returned from Manchuria, enthusiastic to organize an interdenominational missionary movement for the molding of Manchuria. Tairiku Dendo (The Continental Mission) is the ambitious name card for this new child of his brain. Now whatever comes of this particular movement an aggressive benevolent spirit is in the air. Japan for the Japanese has passed into the cry of Japan for Asia. It means blunders but it means business as well, and of a beneficent sort.

3.—It is unnecessary to dwell at length upon my third contention, which is that Japan is and is to remain a Mediating Pioneer between the Occident and Orient. America is fast becoming the great arena where East and West meet and mingle. She holds a pre-eminent place as the great cosmopolitan among the world's leading nations. But a part of the problem can best be solved on this side of the Pacific, and by a small, homogeneous independent nation that gathers in to itself the best influence, aspirations and accomplishments of the two civilizations.

The sympathetic treatment in press and pulpit by Christian pastors of the higher forms of Buddhism and by leading Buddhist writers of Christian aims and accomplishments so much in vogue at present is an illustration of my thought. It is difficult to say whether Dr. Anezaki's addresses and writings count more in favor of Buddhism or Christianity. Nominally a Buddhist he has so absorbed and merged the best elements of both faiths that he is essentially Christian.

Dr. Motoda's and Mr. Harada's present visit to India is another case in hand. Requested by the Y.M.C.A. of India, engineered and largely paid for by the Y.M.C.A. of America, and put into execution by the Y.M.C.A. of Japan, it shows the influential position of Japan as an intermediary between rival races and rival faiths. Thoughtful Japanese are saying that now Japan, a non-Christian nation, has attained to the rank of a first class power, it is her mission to teach the world the science of true imperialism, that is, the relation between the absolute and the individual, a benevolent socialism in government and a Christianized Confucianism in ethics. It is the province of a pioneer to try experiments and Japan is likely to play that role in the future as in the past.

Conclusion.—But it must in candor be admitted that while Japan faces splendid possibilities of service at home and abroad and while in the main her soldiers, her court and her commons, are showing marvellous self-restraint and a sobering appreciation of the situation, she also stands on the verge of a moral volcano and she imperatively needs wise and inspiring guidance. The misleading influences of militarism, the benumbing power of materialism, and the corroding force of unspeakable immorality, especially among the student classes, is abroad in the land and no thoughtful observer, however ardent a lover of this part of the Orient, can ignore them.

We physicians of souls in our daily work see and hear so much of the distressing and depressing facts of life that I have purposely refrained from dwelling upon them. But they are there. They form a constant menace to true advance. The struggle to master them is and will remain a terrific one. The sacrifices in this spiritual warfare will far outnumber those of Mukden or Zoo-Metre Hill. The final victory can be secured only in the name and by the help of Him who remains through the ages "the holiest among the mighty and the mightiest among the holy."

Livy, the Roman historian, called Greece the salt of the nations. We may say Japan is the salt of the Orient. She has the pungent flavor. She has the power to kill. She has the preserving strength. There is simply one great "If" between her and the realization of her high destiny. It is suggested in the familiar words of the Master Mind of all the ages, "Ye are the salt of the earth; but if the salt have lost its savor, wherewith shall it be salted? It is thenceforth good for nothing but to be cast out and trodden under foot of men."

Epilogue.—An essay of this sort, like a sermon, should have its application. Where do we foreign missionaries in Japan come in? What have we to do with Japan's future influence? Much every way. Let me detain you a moment longer while I name three special lessons of the subject, the A.B.C. of our present duty toward this interesting people.

A.—We should be men of high ideals. Not merely as individual Christians. That is taken for granted but we should have high ideals for Japan. We should believe in her great and lasting mission. "According to your faith be it unto you."

B.—We should unite for efficient service. We should believe in team work. We should encourage every form of union effort that is led by high-souled trustworthy leaders. It is an age of trusts, combines, mass meetings, great enterprises. The Orient especially is moved by large ideas and great numbers. Hand-picked fruit may be the choicest but it can easily be done simultaneously by a crowd, just as three months hence millions of rice shoots will be transplanted by individual workers joyously toiling side by side, working according to one great plan and heartened by one common song.

C.—So far as possible we should secure an inside position, see things from the standpoint of the Japanese and thus be able to work sympathetically and influentially. This is the most delicate and difficult suggestion of the three, but I believe it to be fully as important as the other two. It is not inconsistent with the holding of strong convictions and minority views. There are plenty of such instances among Japanese themselves. It is rather a matter of large-hearted spirit and the ability to generalize broadly even while insistent, possibly unduly insistent, upon certain details.

It recognizes obligations to foreign organizations which many Japanese cannot fully appreciate, but it also remembers that a large part of the foreign missionary idea is foreign to the true spirit of Christian service. Foreign substances irritate all delicate organisms. A part of our mission is to transform foreign work into home work, or rather to blend the two in the harmony of Christ's great brotherhood. Sacrifice of feeling and of well nigh everything else except conscience is demanded in this as in all the higher forms of service. He who shares the cross will secure jewels with the crown.

So long as we must be foreign missionaries we may well hear and heed the counsel of that noblest and most successful elder member of our illustrious fraternity, the Apostle Paul as his words ring down the centuries:

"Walk in wisdom toward them that are without, redeeming the time. Let your speech be always with grace, seasoned with salt, that ye may know how ye ought to answer each one." Col. IV. 5,6.

TELEGRAMS.

(REUTER'S SPECIAL SERVICE.)

SOME DETAILS OF THE GREAT EARTHQUAKE.

London, April 20.

An earthquake shook San Francisco at 5 o'clock on the morning of April 18th and lasted for three minutes. People rushed out in their night clothes. The northeastern quarter of the manufacturing and wholesale districts suffered terribly. Lesser damage was done throughout the rest of the city.

It is roughly estimated that one hundred people were killed and a thousand injured.

When the buildings collapsed fires were ignited in all directions and the flames threatened the whole city.

The combatting of the flames was most difficult owing to the high wind which prevailed and the rupture of the gas and water-mains. The firemen are blowing up the buildings in the path of the conflagration.

The deadliest collapse occurred when a five-story hotel on Valencia street fell, burying seventy persons, and some tenement houses, which involved eighty persons in their flaming ruins.

The earthquake was felt throughout the Western States, the seismic instruments in Washington being violently agitated.

London, April 21.

General Funston, commanding the troops at San Francisco, reported on Wednesday evening (18th) that about one thousand people were killed and a hundred thousand rendered homeless; he urgently needed rations and tents.

According to latest accounts, dense clouds of smoke from the conflagration spreading over the city are visible miles out at sea. It looks as if the whole city is doomed.

Many of the city's most famous buildings, hotels, theatres, etc., have collapsed and have been burned.

China-town and the Japanese quarter are destroyed.

Other towns in the State of California—Santa Cruz, Monterey, Gilroy, and Hollister—are wrecked, many people being killed;

there were 200 killed at Santa Rosa. About one thousand are left homeless.

The shipping in San Francisco remained undamaged.

The Leland-Stanford University is severely damaged.

A moderate estimate puts the pecuniary loss at a hundred million dollars.

London, April 21.

General Funston reports that San Francisco is practically destroyed. The conflagrations are now practically uncontrollable. There are 200,000 homeless people and food is very scarce, owing to the fact that the provision stores are all destroyed.

The Government is sending immense supplies and the cities of the Union are vying with each other in affording relief.

The Senate has voted half a million dollars.

The mortality was practically confined to the tenement dwellings. All the Englishmen and other foreigners staying in the big hotels are doubtless all safe.

London, April 22.

Yesterday was a day of horror in San Francisco, four distinct zones of fire threatening to drive into the sea twenty thousand refugees who were huddled in Golden Gate Park. The ferries were overcrowded by half-crazed fugitives who assert that hundreds perished in the flames, including many prisoners. It is reported that Terminal Island and other seaside resorts were destroyed by a sea wave. All the millionaires' residences on Nob Hill and Van Ness Avenue have been destroyed. There is profound confusion and distress, amid which hunger is raging. The sufferings from thirst are indescribable. Mr. Rockefeller and other millionaires are contributing huge sums.

Later.

It is now hoped to save a quarter of the City of San Francisco. Three hundred thousand people are homeless, hungry and thirsty. The police have seized the whole of the food and are distributing it sparingly. General Funston telegraphs that only the most energetic outside efforts can prevent frightful suffering. The Government has directed the purchase of stores of food in the nearest centres of supply, and the Secretary of State for the Interior proceeds to California to investigate the best measures of further relief.

London, April 23.

The Dominion Legislature has, on the suggestion of the Governor-General, Earl Grey, voted one hundred thousand dollars in aid of the people in San Francisco.

In New York three million dollars have been raised.

The homeless people are encamped in the parks and other open spaces, the wealthy alongside the poor. All efforts are now concentrated on sheltering and feeding the people, whose conduct has been most orderly.

Strong hopes are entertained of saving the suburb known as the Western Addition, and also northward to the Presidio, but the fire on the water front was quite uncontrolled, being fanned by a strong north-west wind, and threatening the ferries, the only means of egress from the city.

The broken water mains are being restored.

Later.

The fire on the San Francisco water-front is now controlled. The Oakland ferry is safe and trains are beginning to run again to San Francisco, which presents a spectacle of 25 square miles of ashes. The banks reopen on Wednesday. All the mails in the San Francisco Post Office were saved.

The process of restoration has already begun at San Francisco. Up to the present about 500 bodies have been recovered. The extent of the mortality remains quite uncertain. Competent valuers estimate the total losses approximately at sixty million sterling, of which thirty five millions are insured. It is noteworthy that the steel-built premises, including the Call building were not damaged externally although gutted.

(RECEIVED BY THE FOREIGN OFFICE.)

[21st instant 5.20 p.m. (corresponding to 2 a.m. on the 22nd in Japan), Oakland. From Mr. Consul Uyeno to the Minister of State for Foreign Affairs in Tokyo.]

On the morning of the 18th there was a violent earthquake in San Francisco. It was followed by a great fire, which destroyed the greater part of the town, especially within the limits of the commercial quarter. Our consular offices were wiped out on the same day. The Japanese residents, about 10,000 in number, are almost in a starving condition and I am taking measures to relieve them. The fire has not yet subsided. The losses of human life and animals are not yet ascertained but will be telegraphed later.

(San Francisco 22nd April, received in Tokyo at 2.30 p.m. 23rd April.)

After three days and nights the fire has been at length extinguished. Happily the picture of the Emperor in the Consulate was not burned. The Consulate is much injured but it escaped the flames. The officials are all safe. As reported in my previous telegram, some 10,000 Japanese subjects are in a cruel state for want of food.

Mr. Uyeno, Consul at San Francisco, telegraphs:—The number of ascertained deaths is 277, including 3 Japanese. Those still missing are about a thousand, in the opinion of the authorities. Measures of relief are being steadily organized.

(BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT WITH THE "ASAHI SHIMBUN.")

London, April 23.

A telegram from Chicago says that the losses at San Francisco are estimated at eighty million pounds sterling. The city will be rebuilt immediately.

Mr. Huntington Wilson, Chargé d'Affaires of the United States, has received from the Secretary of State the following telegrams in further reference to the earthquake:—

"Press dispatches indicate appalling national calamity. City doomed. Unable check conflagration owing destruction water mains. Official information from General Funston to War Department that impossible state full extent disaster, that city practically destroyed and still burning. President has issued general appeal for relief and assistance through National Red Cross. Will advise you further."

American Embassy,

April, 20, 7 p.m.

"To-day's despatches from neighbourhood San Francisco seem to confirm worst news of yesterday, excepting loss of life, which chief of police states will not exceed three hundred. Since midnight fire started afresh, burning fiercely. It is believed entire city must go, residential as well as business section."

American Embassy,

April 21, 5.45 p.m.

(FROM THE "JIJI SHIMPO.")

London, April 20.

Further reports with regard to the earthquake in San Francisco say that fifteen hundred persons were killed, two hundred thousand are homeless, and a great number of people in distress are being accommodated in the Golden Gate Park.

A telegram from the Mayor of San Francisco says that the fire is now under control.

Food-stuffs and water are scarce. The prices of commodities have trebly risen. Provisions are being despatched from the interior.

The money already subscribed for the purpose of relieving distress amounts to twenty million yen.

All the branch offices of the various British insurance companies were damaged.

London, April 21.

The fire in San Francisco is still raging. A quarter of the city will probably be saved. The damage is so far estimated at six hundred million yen. Of the damage, yen 480,000,000 was insured with several insurance companies. About a hundred million yen of the loss will be borne by insurance companies of Great Britain and of the Continent.

The Japanese and Chinese residents are in a very distressed state. Rice is being supplied to them by the American Government.

London, April 24.

The re-construction of buildings has commenced. An area extending over twenty five square miles is desolated. Six hundred persons were killed by the earthquake and the fire.

Pestilence is feared.

London, April 24.

It is reported by the correspondent of the Manchester Guardian that the fire in San Francisco was put out by heavy rains.

San Francisco, April 23.

The damage caused to property in connexion with the earthquake is estimated at three hundred million dollars, and the killed number twelve hundred. When communication with the outside world was interrupted, San Francisco was almost starving. The distress was fortunately alleviated by the arrival of prompt supplies from other places.

The re-construction of the city has commenced.

Owing to heavy losses on property and life, some insurance companies have closed their offices.

The American Treasury has advanced money to several bankers to avert a monetary panic.

Martial Law is still in force.

(FROM THE "OSAKA MAINICHI.")

London, April 20.

The first shock of earthquake in San Francisco, occurred at 5.13 a.m. on April 18th. Between that time and noon, severe shocks took place by which many large buildings, including the Municipal Office and various hotels, collapsed and subsequently fire broke out throughout the city. Two thousand persons were killed. The water works, gas-works, and electric light, telegraph and telephone wires, etc., were destroyed.

Communication with the city being imperfect, details are not yet reported.

Washington, April 22.

The damage caused by the earthquake is very serious. Over a hundred thousand persons are homeless, five thousand were killed, and many thousands more or less injured.

The damage to property in San Francisco alone is estimated at three hundred million dollars. Japanese residences were destroyed and some of the occupants were killed and the survivors took refuge in the open country. Chinese town underwent a similar fate.

The fire is still raging throughout San Francisco. Provisions are very scarce. The destruction of the city is expected.

Fifteen other cities of California are also in great distress. The whole damage sustained in California is believed to be about five hundred million dollars.

Congress has decided to spend a million dollars in alleviating the distress. The President has appealed to the public for funds to relieve the homeless.

Washington, April 20.

At 5 p.m. on April 19th the fire was about under control, all the city being desolated with the exception of one quarter only. The outlook is very dreary. About three hundred thousand persons are homeless. Several hundred corpses are scattered throughout the streets, and it is feared that a pestilence will follow the seismic disaster.

The President of the Chamber of Commerce and Industry petitioned the Central Government for aid in relief.

The losses sustained by several fire insurance companies is so far estimated at a hundred and ten million dollars.

Bankers throughout the country intend to organize an Association with a view to averting a monetary panic in California.

Telegraphic and telephonic communication with San Francisco has been re-opened. Communication by steamer between the city and Oakland was resumed, through under various difficulties.

President Roosevelt will send a Message to Congress asking for a further million dollars for the purposes of relief.

Donations collected throughout the country amount to twenty million dollars. Probably America will refuse to receive money from foreign countries.

Oakland, Cal., April 22.

The flames have been subdued. The San Francisco docks were saved. Over twenty square miles of the city were burned, including all business quarters. The pecuniary loss is estimated at half a billion and the dead may reach a thousand.

(FROM THE "NICHU NICHU SHIMBUN.")

London, April 21.

The fire which is raging in San Francisco has been checked. A quarter of the whole city will probably be saved.

A proposal has been set afoot to rebuild Sain Francisco the plan of Washington.

(FROM THE "ASAHI SHIMBUN.")

New York, April 25.

The damage sustained in San Francisco is six hundred thousand yen; two thousand persons were killed; and six thousand were injured. Ten thousand Japanese are starving; their shops were destroyed.

Money is being collected here to relieve the distress. Fifteen million dollars have already been collected throughout America for the purpose.

The American Government has set apart $3,500,000 for relief purposes.

(FROM THE "KOKUMIN SHIMBUN.")

Oakland, Cal., April 24.

The deaths at San Francisco are estimated to exceed 1,200. Five hundred bodies have so far been recovered, including a few Japanese victims. The survivors are camped in the Presidio Park. They had been located in a part of the city which was remote from the origin of the fire, and had ample time to escape.

(REUTER'S SPECIAL TO THE "JAPAN MAIL.")

NATAL.

London, April 21.

The Natal Government has resolved to form several powerful columns of Irregulars and to avoid taking the offensive until an adequate force is ready to take the field. The rebels are unlikely to emerge from their fastnesses, therefore there is no immediate danger; but the situation is undoubtedly serious.

THE STRIKE IN FRANCE.

London, April 23.

A pitched battle has taken place between six thousand strikers and a detachment of dragoons near Denain. The dragoons were compelled to release their prisoners. Two captains and ten troopers were wounded. The horses were slashed with knives. The strikers afterwards proceeded to Havelny and sacked the houses there.

"RAGGING" IN THE BRITISH ARMY.

Later.

The decision of the War Office in the "ragging" affair of the Guards at Aldershot has been promulgated. Colonel Cuthbert has been relieved of his command; Adjutant Stracey has been relieved of his appointment; the four lieutenants who were placed under arrest will lose a year's seniority. Lieut. Clark-Kennedy has left the regiment.

[Note—A telegram which appears in Singapore papers give the following particulars of this unpleasant incident:—The inquiry into the case of ragging has been opened. Lieut. Kennedy stated that Lieuts. D. Hamilton, C. Hamilton, Harford and Joliffe, court martialled him for being in a filthy condition and telling his Colonel a lie. They afterwards stripped him, drenched him in motor oil, and half sneared him with jam. He admitted association with a woman. Colonel Cuthbert stated that the Surgeon notified him of Kennedy's condition. He understood that Kennedy had had some skin disease before. He admitted disgustedly declaring that it was a matter for the subalterns to settle, but he only meant moral pressure. Surgeon Major Whiston testified that Lieut. Kennedy was in a dirty condition and suffering from itch. Three orderlies and two army doctors, however, testified as to his cleanliness. Colonel Cuthbert accepted all responsibility.]

London, April 24.

An official announcement has been made to the effect that Lt.-Col. F. J. Cuthbert, of the First Scots Guards Battalion at Aldershot, has been placed on the half-pay list because of the ragging to which Lieut. Kennedy was subjected. Captain R. G. Stracey, (adjutant) has been deprived of his adjutancy. Lieutenants D. & C. Hamilton will have leave stopped for a year and be twice superseded in promotion. Twelve other lieutenants have been penalised by stoppage of leave varying from six months to two years, or supercession. All except Colonel Cuthbert were severely censured. The Army Council's displeasure was conveyed to Surgeon-Major Whiston.

NORTHERN FRANCE.

London, April 23.

The situation in the North of France continues serious.

THE NATAL TROUBLE.

London, April 25.

The Transvaal has offered Natal to furnish, equip, and maintain five hundred volunteers.

THE CHINESE COMMISSION IN FRANCE.

President Fallieres has entertained the Chinese commissioners at luncheon.

TRAINING-SHIP DISASTER.

The Belgian Government training-ship Dennayer, with a crew of 54, including 30 cadets, has capsized in a gale in the Bay of Biscay. Only 26 were saved.

THE NEW RUSSIAN LOAN.

London, April 26.

The new Russian 5-per cent. loan for £89,325,000 sterling has been issued at 89, Barings issuing the English share, which amounts to £13,101,000.

THE FRENCH STRIKES.

The strikes in France are extending to other parts of the country, including Paris, where alarming rumours are current. There are apprehensions as to the state of affairs on May Day.

THE NATAL SITUATION.

The Colony of Natal has accepted the Transvaal's offer of volunteers. The St. John's Ambulance Corps at the Cape is sending a detachment. The Indian community at Durban has offered to raise a corps of stretcher bearers and hospital attendants.

THE "KASHIMA'S" OFFICERS.

The officers of the Japanese battleship Kashima were entertained at luncheon by the corporation of Newcastle at the Town-hall.

NATAL.

Later.

The Transvaal offer of assistance is keenly appreciated in Natal.

THE OLYMPIC GAMES AT ATHENS.

The English beat the Germans at fencing in Athens, the former scoring 9 to the latter's 2. Taylor (English) won the mile swimming match easily.

(BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT WITH THE "TOKYO ASAHI SHIMBUN.")

THE STRIKE IN FRANCE.

London, April 23.

In Paris there is much dissatisfaction with the Government in consequence of its ineffectual efforts to quell the colliery riots. This will probably result in the loss of many votes at the elections.

THE CONDITION OF CHINA.

London, April 25.

The Peking correspondent of The Times is unable to discover the reason for the exaggerated fears entertained in Europe with regard to the situation in China. The general conditions are not unsatisfactory. China realises that she has everything to gain by keeping the peace with foreigners. Unsatisfactory features are the unbridled license enjoyed by the native press, some of which are assisted by irresponsible Japanese, and the holding of inflammatory meetings in the central and southern provinces. It is desirable that England should join Japan and help China to introduce a press law.

MAIL STEAMERS.

NEXT MAIL IS DUE

From	Line	Steamer	Date
America.....	T. K. K.	America Maru	Tu. May 1
Hongkong.....	T. Y. K.	H'kong Maru	Th. May 3
Europe.....	N. L. D.	Prinz Heinrich	Sa. May 5
Hongkong.....	G. N.	Dakota	Su. May 6
Europe.....	M. M.	Caledonian	Th. May 10
Hongkong.....	P. M.	Korea	Th. May 10
Hongkong.....	B. T.	Shawmut	Th. May 10
Hongkong.....	C. P. R.	Monteagle	F. May 11
Vancouver.....	C. P. R.	Em. of China	M. May 14
Seattle.....	G. N.	Minnesota	Tu. May 15
Hongkong.....	C. P. R.	Em. of Japan	Th. May 17
Hongkong.....	O. & O.	Coptic	Su. May 20
Vancouver.....	C. P. R.	Athenian	Sa. June 2
Tacoma.....	B. T.	Lyra	Th. June 2

Left San Francisco on the 13th inst.

NEXT MAIL LEAVES

For	Line	Steamer	Date
Vancouver.....	C. P. R.	Em. of Japan	F. April 27
Europe.....	N. D. L.	Sachsen	Sa. April 28
America.....	P. M.	Manchuria	Sa. April 28
Portland.....	P. & A.	Numania	M. April 30
Seattle.....	N. Y. K.	Yawata Maru	Tu. May 1
Europe.....	N. Y. K.	Awa Maru	W. May 2
Hongkong.....	T. K. K.	America Maru	Th. May 3
Shanghai.....	N. Y. K.	Kasuga Maru	Th. May 3
Europe.....	M. M.	Polynesian	Sa. May 5
America.....	T. K. K.	H'kong Maru	Sa. May 5
Australia.....	N. Y. K.	Yawata Maru	Sa. May 5
Europe.....	P. & O.	Ceylon	Tu. May 8
Seattle.....	G. N.	Dakota	Tu. May 8
Tacoma.....	B. T.	Shawmut	F. May 11
Vancouver.....	C. P. R.	Monteagle	Sa. May 12
Hongkong.....	C. P. R.	Em. of China	M. May 14
Hongkong.....	P. & A.	Aragonia	Th. May 17
Hongkong.....	G. N.	Minnesota	Su. May 20
America.....	O. & O.	Coptic	Tu. May 23
Hongkong.....	C. P. R.	Athenian	Sa. June 2
Hongkong.....	B. T.	Lyra	Sa. June 3
Hongkong.....	O. & O.	Doric	Tu. June 5

LATEST SHIPPING.

ARRIVALS.

Athenian, British steamer, 2,440, S. Robinson, 20th April,—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—C. P. R. Co.

Ramsay, British steamer, 2,768, Mullen, 20th April,—Rangoon, Rice.—Samuel Samuel & Co.

Montcalm (36), French flagship, 9,500, Capt. Martel, 20th April,—Hongkong.

Yechigo Maru, Japanese steamer, 712, A. Yamashita, 20th April,—Yokkaichi, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Santhia, British steamer, 3,353, R. Phillips, 20th April,—Nagahama Quarantine Station, Rice.—Samuel Samuel & Co.

Hakuai Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,419, T. Sekine, 20th April,—Shanghai via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Higo Maru, Japanese steamer, 882, N. Nielsen, 21st April,—Bonin Islands, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Sachsen, German steamer, 3,119, F. von Letten-Petersen, 21st April,—Hamburg and Bremen via ports, Mails and General.—H. Ahrens & Co., Nachf.

Fulham, British steamer, 2,766, H. Gow, 21st April,—Rangoon via Kobe, Rice.—M. Raspe & Co.

Benvenue, British steamer, 2,505, R. Krobbe, 21st April,—London via ports, General.—Cornes & Co.

Choshu Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,900, H. Smith, 21st April,—Newchwang, Bean cake.—Yamagata-ya.

Kanju Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,041, S. Oda, 22nd April,—Newchwang, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Sado Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,856, G. S. Lapraik, 22nd April,—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Ceylon, British steamer, 2,637, C. F. Lockstone, 22nd April,—Bombay via ports, General.—P. & O. S.N. Co.

Bellerophon, British steamer, 5,727, Thos. Bartlett, 22nd April,—Liverpool via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.

Amiral Fourichon, French steamer, 3,015, Baille-mont, 22nd April,—Antwerp via ports, General.—M. M. S.S. Co.

Hiroshima Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,035, S. Wada, 22nd April,—Otaru via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Glenfarg, British steamer, 2,350, H. W. L. Holman, 23rd April,—Hongkong via ports, General.—Toyo Kisen Kaisha.

Aker, Norwegian steamer, 1,899, Gaulxssen, 22nd April,—Antwerp via ports, and Hongkong, General.—Samuel Samuel & Co.

Empress of Japan, British steamer, 3,003, H. Pybus, 23rd April,—Vancouver, B.C., 9th April, Mails and General.—C. P. R. Co.

C. Ferd. Laeiss, German steamer, 3,799, Meyer-dierchs, 24th April,—Hamburg via ports, and Kobe, General.—C. Illies & Co.

Tartar, British steamer, 2,768, W. Davison, 24th April,—Vancouver, B.C., 6th April, Mails and General.—C. P. R. Co.

Siberia, American steamer, 5,655, A. Zeeder, 24th April,—San Francisco via Honolulu, Mails and General.—P. M. S.S. Co.

Yechigo Maru, Japanese steamer, 712, A. Yamashita, 24th April,—Yokkaichi, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Mike Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,060, I. Shimizu, 24th April,—Otaru via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Matsuyama Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,959, Y. Kishi, 25th April,—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Roodt, Norwegian steamer, 782, Joh. Haumaers, 25th April,—Chinkiang, General.—Mitsui Bussan Kaisha.

Tottenham, British steamer, 2,943, L. R. Mann, 25th April,—Saigon, Rice.—Jardine Mathieson & Co.

Dortmund, German steamer, 3,228, Wagner, 25th April,—Hamburg via ports, and Hongkong, General.—C. Illies & Co.

Polynesian, French steamer, 2,916, Broc, 26th April,—Marseilles via ports, and Kobe, Mails and General.—M. M. S.S. Co.

Calchas, British steamer, 4,279, Williams, 26th April,—Liverpool via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.

Tremont, American steamer, 6,195, T. W. Garlick, 26th April,—Seattle, Wash., Mails and General.—Dodwell & Co., Ltd.

Empress of India, British steamer, 3,003, E. Beetham, 26th April,—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—C. P. R. Co.

Manchuria, American steamer, 8,750, J. W. Saunders, 26th April,—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—P. M. S.S. Co.

Panther, Austrian cruiser, 1,500, Capt. Korber, 26th April,—Shanghai.

DEPARTURES.

Coptic, British steamer, 2,744, Wm. Finch, 20th April,—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—O. & O. S.S. Co.

Arroyo, British steamer, 2,307, Clough, 20th April,—Hankow, Horses.—Mitsui Bussan Kaisha.

Prinz Sigismund, German steamer, 1,844, D. Lenz, 20th April,—Sydney via ports, Mails and General.—H. Ahrens & Co., Nachf.

Taiyuan, British steamer, 1,459, L. Dawson, 20th April,—Sydney via ports, Mails and General.—Butterfield & Swire.

Woodford, British steamer, 1,860, Jas. Seddon, 20th April,—Muran, Ballast.—Dodwell & Co., Ltd.

Kilburn, British steamer, 2,111, E. Le Templier, 20th April,—Muran, Ballast.—Samuel Samuel & Co.

Inaba Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,839, W. Bainbridge, 20th April,—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Yamaguchi Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,038, Irizawa, 20th April,—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Yechigo Maru, Japanese steamer, 712, A. Yamashita, 21st April,—Yokkaichi, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Tenshin Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,580, W. Hunter, 21st April,—Otaru via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Doric, British steamer, 2,936, Harry Smith, 21st April,—San Francisco via Honolulu, Mails and General.—O. & O. S.S. Co.

Athenian, British steamer, 2,440, S. Robinson, 21st April,—Vancouver, B.C., Mails and General.—C. P. R. Co.

Ernest Simons, French steamer, 2,162, Bourdon, 21st April,—Marseilles via ports, Mails and General.—M. M. S.S. Co.

Anchises, Dutch steamer, 1,885, B. De Boer, 22nd April,—Mojji, Ballast.—Butterfield & Swire.

Isomila, British steamer, 3,381, A. E. Stebbing, 22nd April,—Mojji, Ballast.—Samuel Samuel & Co.

Lowther Castle, British steamer, 2,961, W. Lightoller, 22nd April,—Otaru via Kobe, Moji and Fushan, General.—Cornes & Co.

Empress of Japan, British steamer, 3,003, H. Pybus, 23rd April,—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—C. P. R. Co.

Hiroshima Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,035, S. Wada, 23rd April,—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Tyr, Norwegian steamer, 1,417, D. Nielsen, 23rd April,—Mojji, Ballast.—Samuel Samuel & Co.

Amiral Fourichon, French steamer, 3,015, Baille-mont, 23rd April,—San Francisco via Taku, General.—M. M. S.S. Co.

Choko Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,216, C. Misaki, 23rd April,—Taku and Newchwang via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Manila, British steamer, 2,711, A. W. Anderson, 24th April,—London and Antwerp via ports, Mails and General.—P. & O. S.N. Co.

Bellerophon, British steamer, 5,727, Thos. Bartlett, 24th April,—Amsterdam, London and Antwerp via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.

Bantu, British steamer, 2,662, A. W. Wooster, 24th April,—Singapore via Moji, Ballast.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Uruston Grange, British cable steamer, 2,213, W. Keslake, 24th April,—Shanghai.—Mitsui Bussan Kaisha.

Tartar, British steamer, 2,768, W. Davison, 24th April,—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—C. P. R. Co.

Higo Maru, Japanese steamer, 882, N. Nielsen, 24th April,—Yokkaichi, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Kanju Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,041, S. Oda, 24th April,—Osaka, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Sado Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,856, G. S. Lapraik, 25th April,—Otaru via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Mike Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,060, I. Shimizu, 25th April,—Kobe, via Yokkaichi, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Glenfarg, British steamer, 2,350, H. W. L. Holman, 25th April,—Callao and Iqueque, Mails and General.—Toyo Kisen Kaisha.

Siberia, American steamer, 5,655, A. Zeeder, 26th April,—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—P. M. S.S. Co.

Hakuai Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,419, T. Sekine, 26th April,—Shanghai via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Yechigo Maru, Japanese steamer, 712, A. Yamashita, 26th April,—Yokkaichi, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Santhia, British steamer, 3,353, C. Phillip, 26th April,—Singapore via Moji, Ballast.—Samuel Samuel & Co.

Choshu Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,900, H. Smith, 26th April,—Newchwang via ports, Mails and General.—Yamagata-ya.

PASSENGERS.

ARRIVED.

Per British steamer Athenian, from Hongkong via ports:—Mrs. Slocombe, Mr. P. H. Bethel Jones, Mr. F. Griffiths, Mr. C. Hull, Miss Lloyd Thomas, Mr. E. Whilly, and Mr. S. Usher, in cabin; 3 Japanese, in steerage. In Transit:—Mr. F. Urguhast, Dr. and Mrs. Nugen, Miss Goodfellow, Mr. Taylor, Mrs. Taylor and 3 children, Miss G. H. Vosper, Mr. C. Van Kinshat, Mr. G. S. Kerswell, Miss C. E. Watkins, Mr. H. A. Seaver, Mr. J. R. Mitchell, Mr. R. N. McDonald, Mr. Hawkes, Mrs. Hawkes and infant, Mrs. F. Hopkins and 2 children, Mrs. Shornberry and 2 children, Lieut. H. Warberg, Mrs. C. W. Holloway, Mr. T. H. Percival, Mr. R. S. Berryman, Mr. Jno. Grey, Mr. J. T. Bayley, Mr. J. French, Mrs. J. French, Mr. F. L. Rich, Mr. J. Andrew, Mrs. Andrew and child, Mr. B. Andrew, Mr. W. F. Mouet, Mr. E. Withy, Mrs. Withy, Miss Withy, Miss Shaw Hellier, Mrs. A. H. Pennyfather, Mr. Wm. Taylor, Mr. Richard Well, Father T. Leenen, Father C. Seelen, Miss Patterson, Miss Cardwell, Mr. J. C. Kaye, Mr. Paul Verine, Mr. A. F. Laws, Rev. and Mrs. Hind, and Mr. H. G. Potter, in cabin; 50 Japanese, 29 Indians, and 4 Chinese, in steerage.

Per German steamer Sachsen from Europe via ports:—Miss Tripp, Mrs. Grosse, Mr. and Mrs. N. H. Chorsleys, Dr. Brett, Consul N. Transchold, Major-General J. R. Jones, Misses Jones, Dr. and Mrs. R. Moss, Mrs. Suter, Mr. and Mrs. H. I. Shroot, Mr. Baumann, Mr. and Mrs. Kochen, Governor Arakawa, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Parsons, Mrs. A. Helm, Mr. and Mrs. H. Pollak, Mr. and Mrs. Saenger, Mr. R. Dollar, Rev. Wuerfel, Mr. F. Baeck, Mr. H. Price, Mr. J. H. Duguid, Mr. M. Pask, Mr. C. F. Wong, Mr. Zia and Jen, Mr. Cheong Ching, Mr. Johansen, Mr. Wong, Mr. Chu, Mr. Jaw, Mr. Lee, Mr. Hu, Mr. Tat, Mr. Lee, Mr. Way, Mr. Ching, Mr. Chang Kong Za Zal, Mr. Lee Dong, 5 Chinese and Mr. R. Fabricius in cabin.

Per British steamer Empress of Japan from Vancouver, B.C.:—Mr. Baggalley, Miss M. S. Baker, Mr. H. Blason, Mr. Bourke, Mr. Cabledu, Rev. Dr. Barman, Mr. A. H. Cobb, Mr. T. Craven, Mr. Drummond, Mrs. Drummond, Rev. Ewing, Mr. A. Francke, Mr. P. Fraser, Mr. F. L. Gower, Mr. A. Heinze, Capt. C. S. W. Jackson, Mr. A. C. Jeffries, Mr. W. S. King, Mr. Koehn, Mr. H. Komada, Mr. W. P. Lambe, Mrs. Lambe, Mr. R. E. Large, Mrs. Large, Miss G. M. Lay, Mr. Marshall, Mrs. Marshall, Mr. Jno. McDougall, Mrs. McDougall, Mr. H. D. Morrison, Mr. Paul Niedick, Mr. W. L. Pattenden, Earl of Ronaldshay, Mr. W. W. Rossiter, Mr. Katsu Saito, Mr. T. Sanzo, Mr. A. P. Simpson, Mr. G. H. Storck, Mr. A. M. Tomlinson, Mrs. Vernon, Dr. Vanton and Mr. R. E. Wilson in cabin.

Per American steamer Siberia, from San Francisco via Honolulu:—Mrs. O. W. Bump, Miss E. L. Bump, Mr. W. H. Brown, Mrs. W. H. Brown, Mr.

S. Chinomiya, Mr. F. E. Fernald, Mr. Louis Eppinger and servant, Mr. Wilhelm Gunders, Mrs. E. M. Heathcote, Mrs. S. Ikeda and servant, Mr. L. L. Kountze, Mrs. L. L. Kountze, Mr. J. H. Loomis, Mr. W. G. Morse, Mr. M. Okudaira, Miss Eleanor O'Leary, Mr. L. F. Pye, Mr. W. E. Strater, Mrs. W. E. Strater, Master E. L. Strater, Mr. C. E. Schneely, Mr. W. I. Smith, Mr. T. Ushiodo, Mr. S. Weiss, Mr. S. Yojima, Mr. Fred A. Grow, Mrs. Fred A. Grow, Mr. H. J. Hunt, Mrs. H. J. Hunt, Mrs. A. C. Cochran, Miss J. C. Cochran, Mr. M. Hughes, Mrs. J. G. Lay, Mr. Hollis Stevenson, Mrs. J. B. Stevenson, Miss Maud Stevenson, Miss O. M. Blount, Mr. R. C. Rountree, Mrs. M. W. Rountree, Mr. E. L. Hospes, Miss M. E. Robbins, Miss Jennie Howe, Mr. O. E. C. Guidot, Mr. C. F. Alexander, Mrs. McM. Belvin, Mrs. L. T. Hay, Miss E. Hay, and Miss Cascade, in cabin. For Kobe.—Mr. J. D. Atkinson, Mrs. J. D. Atkinson and infant, Mrs. J. H. Stewart, Mr. D. B. Taylor, Mrs. D. B. Taylor, Mr. Lloyd A. Wilson, Mr. K. Yoshimi, Mrs. K. Yoshimi, in cabin. For Nagasaki.—Miss C. M. Hill, and Mrs. J. H. Lavenworth, in cabin. For Shanghai.—Miss A. Black, Mr. G. S. V. Bidwell, Mr. H. C. Chao, Mr. W. Forster, Miss N. Foster, Mr. Fung Sen, Mr. S. B. Hatfield, Mr. W. Kirtin, Mrs. W. Kirtin, Mr. H. J. Muhlensteth, Mr. Li Kock Yu, Dr. D. B. Nye, Mr. E. Quackenbush, and Mrs. H. Vernon, in cabin. For Hongkong.—Miss May Ashley, Mr. W. L. Bernardi, Mr. John A. Britton, Mrs. John A. Britton, Miss Alice L. Britton, Mr. E. Bringolf, Miss K. Callahan, Mrs. C. W. Conlisk, Mr. Henry Curtis, Mr. J. S. Day, Mr. A. S. Emery, Mrs. J. P. Fitzbutler, Mr. E. R. Frisby, Mrs. E. R. Frisby and infant, Mr. Rea Hanna, Mr. Henry Hazmeyer, Mr. F. C. Herrick, Mrs. F. C. Herrick, Miss Ethel Herrick, Miss F. King, Miss Blanche Laymance, Capt. Geo. D. Long, Dr. Eugene May, Miss Florence Mullin, Mr. Harry L. Paddock, Mr. F. B. Parsons, Mr. Adolfo Ramos, Mr. Francisco Ramos, Mr. E. B. Rees, Mr. R. Rolla, Mr. N. B. Stewart, Miss Alice Sullivan, Miss Ada Sullivan, Mr. Alden Swift, Mr. H. S. Townsend, Mrs. H. S. Townsend, Master Dole Townsend, Mr. Amos Parker Wilder, and Mrs. Amos Parker Wilder and 4 children, in cabin.

Per French steamer Polynesian from Marseilles via ports:—Mr. Metcalf, Mr. Maurer, Mr. Sarkis, Mr. Mullin, Mr. S. D. Karanjia, Mrs. Hanjino, Mr. Rama Rao, Mr. Venkata Narayana, Dr. S. Takano, Mr. C. Kuhn Boun, Mr. Nanung and infant, Mr. MacLaine Pout, Mr. and Mrs. Titault, Mr. J. Ciocon, 1 Chinese, Mr. Verri, Mr. A. Voskressentky, Mr. T. Dentici, Mr. Ho Seng Loy, Mr. A. Cully, 1 Chinese, Mrs. and Miss de Montfort, Mr. Murakoshi, Mr. Hache, Mr. Legant, Mr. Wagenkendi, and Mrs. Wagenkendi, baby and servant in cabin.

Per British steamer Empress of India, from Hongkong via ports:—Gen. Pennegrine, Mr. H. W. Jeffries, Mr. J. T. Lay, Mrs. E. H. Lawers, Mr. G. Fleet, Mrs. C. D. Shultz, Mr. C. D. Wilkinson, Miss Wilkinson, Miss Layall, Mr. and Miss Keegan, Mr. and Miss Waylie, Mr. Finlay, Mr. McColli, Mr. Oakden, Miss Stewart, Mr. Hamilton, Mr. Crowder, Mr. J. B. Sutton, Mr. H. E. Renault, Capt. J. B. McMillan, and Mr. H. Keegwin and party, in cabin. For Vancouver.—Mr. J. W. Cranch, Miss Patteson, Mrs. Senon and child, Mr. C. E. Autons, Mr. Murray Scalt, Mr. Coulter, Mrs. Beeknap, Judge and Mrs. S. Turner, Mr. J. Orange, Mr. L. B. Bewecy, Miss Winslow, Mr. S. C. Sanderson, Rev. Dorchugh, Dr. O'Reefe, R.N., Mr. and Mrs. Bothwick and child, Miss Tibbits, Judge Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Brown and child, Miss Geddes, Mr. R. Shewan, Mr. A. D. Gibbs, Lieut. Crawford, Rev. and Mrs. Sparham and child, Rev. T. John, Capt. Pattison, Capt. Z. S. Weber, Mr. J. Mencerine, Mr. J. P. D. Griffin, Mr. F. Salinger, Rev. and Mrs. J. Waite and 3 children, Mr. H. J. Craig, Mr. G. Fry, Mrs. O'Brien, Mr. H. H. Garton, Miss Appell, Mr. T. W. Willink, Mr. W. E. Watkin, Mr. L. Hochet, Mr. J. G. Moner, and Mr. Lagries, in cabin; 18, intermediate; 356, in steerage.

Per American steamer Manchuria from Hongkong via ports:—Mr. E. N. Adams, Mr. W. F. Adams, Mrs. Adams and 2 children, Mrs. T. J. Sen, 2 children and servant, Mr. P. E. Herman, Mrs. Herman, 2 children and amah, H.R.H. Prince Nakon Chaisee and servant, Maj. Gen. Phya Ram, Col. Mom Narenti, Maj. Luang Damrong, Mr. K. Iwahara and wife, Mr. Isaka, Mrs. D. McCoy, Miss McCoy, Mr. J. R. Patterson, Capt. A. E. Gove, Mrs. E. D. Tomsett and infant, Mr. C. Thomas, Mrs. R. Platt, Capt. W. C. Rivers, U.S.A., Mrs. W. C. Rivers and 2 children, Mr. F. M. Daister, Mrs. C. B. Brigham, Miss K. Brigham, Mr. W. A. Morling and wife, Mr. G. B. Smith and wife, Mr. S. L. Moore and wife, Mrs. L. Hading, Mr. E. Schutte, Mr. C. Jenkins and wife, Mr. E. A. Stinespring, Mr. C. J. Glidden and wife, Mrs. J. J. Drake, Mr. P. Narista, Mr. Nai Kab, Mr. E. Smythe and wife, Mr. R. Danno, Mrs. Kempff, Mr. J. E. Jones, Mrs. H. K. Williamson, Capt. S. B. Watson, Capt. S. M. Rice, Mr. F. W. Briggemeyer and Mr. L. A. Stigand. For San Francisco.—Mrs. C. Cronwell, Mr. J. A. Corless, Mr. M. J. Catline, Mr. F. Devaux, Mrs. F.

Devaux, Mr. H. Dehnam, Mrs. J. S. Fearon, Mr. Frank Fearon, Mr. Harry S. Gray, Mr. V. A. Kershaw, Rev. E. C. Lobenstein, Mrs. E. C. Lobenstein and infant, Mr. W. S. Macleod, Mr. W. M. Milne, Mrs. W. M. Milne, Mr. J. R. Michael, Mrs. J. R. Michael, Mrs. M. McCullen, Miss E. McCullen, Mr. L. H. McAdow, Mr. E. P. Miller, Mr. M. D. Neill, Mr. H. O'Malley, Mrs. B. Potter, Mr. J. Patterson, Mr. F. W. Pfaff, Mr. F. T. Robson, Miss L. H. Bahmeyer, Mrs. A. von Rosthern, Mrs. A. Von Rosthern, Rev. G. W. Sheppard, Mrs. G. W. Sheppard, Master Sheppard, Miss D. Soothill, Mr. Geo. R. Summers, Mr. C. Steinhilber, Mr. W. Urquhart, Mrs. C. W. Vance, Miss J. S. Wright, Mrs. D. Wall, Mrs. G. Whellock and maid, Master Whellock, and Mr. C. A. Williams, in cabin.

DEPARTED.

Per British steamer Coptic for Hongkong via ports:—Mr. E. Behrendt, Mr. Guy A. Bisset, Mrs. G. A. Bisset, Mr. A. C. Breyer, Mr. R. W. Butcher, Mr. C. W. Clifton, Mr. David A. Collins, Mr. F. A. Crowhurst, Mr. T. Chas. Queller, Mr. H. Hancock, Mr. Ames Howlett, Mr. John W. Inglesby, Mr. E. J. Jansen, Mr. John Latta, Miss Alice Maxon, Mr. W. F. McLaughlin, Mr. D. Percebois, Miss M. B. Robertson, Mr. H. M. R. Rodman, Mrs. H. M. R. Rodman and infant, Mrs. M. E. Rouzes, Lt.-Com. John H. Rowen, U.S.N., Mr. O. L. Simpson, Mr. Wm. Skyrma, Lt. James E. Walker, U.S.N., Mr. A. J. White, Mrs. C. Wilson, Mrs. G. E. Wolf, Mr. G. E. Wolf, Mr. M. Woodlay, Mr. P. H. Wootton, Miss S. T. Wootton, Mr. E. L. Esternaux, Mrs. J. I. Bryan, infant and amah, Mrs. Olive Byrne, Miss Lena Byrne, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Cockins, Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Fraser, Mr. E. Fraser, Mr. G. O. Gilfillan, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Hanchett, Mrs. L. J. Hanchett, Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Jones, Mr. T. P. Randall, Mr. H. Ropes, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Sweet and Mr. and Mrs. J. Lee Thompson in cabin.

Per British steamer Doric for San Francisco via Honolulu.—Mr. C. B. Baker, Mr. P. S. Barr, Mrs. P. S. Barr, Miss Barr, Miss May Barr, Miss May Barr, Miss Beebe, Mr. A. Berg, Mr. M. J. Blair, Mr. W. B. Clark, Mr. J. F. Connolly, Mrs. J. P. Connolly, Mr. Chas. Cranston, Mr. F. Davies, Mrs. F. Davies, Mr. S. S. M. Ede, Mr. B. Faymonville, Mrs. B. Faymonville, Mr. P. J. Hallows, Mrs. P. J. Hallows, Mrs. L. D. Hargis, Mrs. C. Hayward, Mr. L. C. Higley, Mrs. L. C. Higley, Mrs. L. C. Higley and child, Sir Hubert Jerningham, Mr. Geo. Lean, Mr. J. B. Lyon, Mrs. J. B. Lyon and daughter, Capt. L. Martinotti, Mr. W. B. Merwin, Comdr. G. W. McElroy, U.S.N., Mr. W. Mirio, Mr. J. W. Osborn, Mr. L. Premyslow, Mrs. K. Ranney and infant, Mr. Alleyne Reynolds, Mr. L. Reorder, Mr. H. Ritter, Mr. A. Rosenberg, Mrs. A. Rosenberg, Mr. J. A. Scott, Mr. B. H. Seward, Mr. A. Schernikau, Mrs. Gilbert C. Smith, Miss Smith, Mrs. C. G. Smith, Mrs. M. Smith, Miss Starr, Mr. W. M. Tilden, Mr. de Valroger, Mr. Geo. Vickers, Mrs. J. F. Wilbur, Miss Maud E. Witherby, Mr. W. J. D. Young and Mrs. W. J. D. Young in cabin.

Per British steamer Athenian for Vancouver B.C.:—Mr. T. Adair, Mrs. T. Adair, Mr. B. Andrew, Mr. J. Andrew, Mrs. J. Andrew and child, Mr. J. S. Bayley, Mr. R. T. Berryman, Mr. T. Brown, Mrs. W. D. Burden, Master H. Burden, Master A. Burden, Miss Cardwell, Mrs. S. H. Digby, Mr. J. French, Mrs. J. French, Mrs. A. Gray, Miss A. Gray, Mr. John Grey, Miss Goodfellow, Miss M. F. Grundy, Mrs. C. W. Holloway, Mr. Hawkes, Mrs. Hawkes, Miss Shaw Hellier, Rev. Hind, Mrs. Hind, Mrs. F. Hopkins and 2 children, Mr. J. C. Kaye, Mr. G. T. Kerswell, Mr. C. von Kinschot, Mr. A. F. Father Th. Leenan, Mr. D. C. J. van Leeuwen, Mrs. D. C. J. van Leeuwen, Mr. W. H. Lilly, Dr. R. N. McDonald, Mr. C. Moran, Mr. J. R. Mercer, Mr. J. R. Mitchell, Mr. W. F. Mouet, Dr. Alex. Nugent, Mrs. Alex. Nugent, Miss Patterson, Mrs. S. H. Pennyfather, Mr. H. G. Pette, Mrs. F. L. Rich, Mr. H. A. Seaver, Father C. Seelen, Mr. W. Taylor, Mr. J. S. Taylor, Mrs. J. S. Taylor and 3 children, Mr. Geo. Tault, Mrs. Thornberry and 2 children, Mr. F. Urquhart, Miss G. H. Vosper, Dr. S. R. Wagoner, Lt. H. Warburg, Miss E. S. Watkins, Mr. R. Weil, Mr. J. T. M. Wheeley, Mrs. J. T. M. Wheeley, Master J. Wheeley, Master E. Wheeley, Master A. Wheeley, Mr. Ed. Withy, Mrs. Ed. Withy, Miss F. Withy and Mr. F. G. Woodruff in cabin.

Per French steamer Ernest Simons for Marseilles via ports:—Mr. G. de Lalande, Mr. R. Thiel, Mr. H. Seifart and boy, Mr. George Johnston, Mr. Clunies Ross, Mr. Burzagli, Mde. la Ciesse Colloredo, Miss L. Nedbal, Mr. M. Cuvelier, Mr. Loo Hee, Mr. Fam Hoi, Mr. Lai Kan Lau, Mr. Loo Aut Wa, Mr. Cheong Yee Wing, Mr. Lai Yu Kan, Mr. Cheong Ying Yan, Mr. Li Man Ching, Mr. Tung Show Kwong, Mr. Wong Sen Tong, Mr. Lee Chun Tong, Mr. Ho Cheun Sing, Mr. Ng Ching Lai, Mr. Chan Tack Kum, Mr. Ngo Tsz Ling, Mr. Lam Yu Tong, Mr. Foo Sung Kong, Mr. Law Po Kwan, Mr. Fu Kok You, Mr. Chan Mon, Mr. Lai Hee Ming, Mr. Lou Sun Yine, Mr. Leung Sick Koon, Mr. Fan Man

Tung, Mr. Fan Sick Man, Mr. Hon Kai Ku, Mr. Kong Kok Sum, Mr. and Mr. Pohakoff, Mr. Pohakoff, Mr. Pobergansky, Mr. Mayeda, Mr. Loong Sick Yoi, Mr. Cheong Yung, Mrs. and Miss Feraille, Mr. Chan He Hing, Mr. Ko Tze Ching, Mr. Ko Tze Sun, Mr. Ko Tze Ki, Mr. Cheong Min Chung, Mr. Nagai, Mr. Ballin, Mr. Jac. Tean, Mr. Golf and Mr. Rouget in cabin; 5 in steerage.

Per British steamer Empress of Japan, for Hongkong via ports:—Capt. Jno. C. Grover, Mr. Francis Champness, Miss Hall, Mr. E. St. Lawson, Mr. A. C. Carter, Mr. C. F. Hare, Miss Hughes, Mrs. C. F. Crowe, Mr. F. E. Shaw, Miss Stone, Mrs. D. Crowe, Mrs. A. H. Dare and child, Mr. C. I. Loeb, and Mr. J. T. Hamilton, in cabin; Miss Tama Hattori, in intermediate.

Per British steamer Manila, for London via ports:—Mr. R. C. Edwards, Mrs. Edwards, Mrs. Coulthard, Mr. E. H. Wilson, Miss B. de Pledge, Mr. J. B. Thompson, Mr. Rhodes Macknight, Mrs. R. S. Macknight, Miss S. Macknight, Dr. Eaton Faring, Mrs. Eaton Faring, Rev. Bishop Welldon, Mr. C. Groman, and Mr. M. C. Luchenbach, in cabin.

Per American steamer Siberia for Hongkong via ports:—Mr. C. F. Alexander, Miss May Ashley, Mr. J. D. Atkinson, Mrs. J. D. Atkinson and infant, Mr. W. L. Bernard, Mr. G. S. V. Bidwell, Miss A. Black, Mr. John A. Britton, Miss Alice L. Britton, Mr. E. Bringolf, Miss K. Callahan, Miss Cassaden, Mr. H. C. Chao, Mrs. C. W. Conlisk, Mr. Henry Curtis, Mr. J. S. Day, Mr. A. S. Emery, Mrs. J. H. Fitzbutler, Mr. W. Forster, Miss N. Foster, Mr. E. R. Frisby, Mrs. E. R. Frisby and infant, Mr. Fung Sen, Mr. O. E. C. Guidt, Mr. Rea Hanna, Mr. S. B. Hatfield, Mrs. L. T. Hay, Miss E. Hay, Mr. Henry Hazmeyer, Mr. F. C. Herrick, Mrs. F. C. Herrick, Mr. E. L. Hooper, Mrs. E. L. Hooper, Miss C. M. Hill, Miss Jennie Howe, Miss G. King, Mr. W. Kirtin, Miss W. Kirtin, Miss Blanche Laymance, Mrs. J. H. Leavenworth, Capt. Geo. D. Long, Mr. Li Kock Yu, Dr. Eugene May, Mrs. M. McBelvin, Mr. H. J. Muhlensteth, Miss Florence Mullin, Dr. D. B. Nye, Mr. Harry L. Paddock, Mr. F. W. Parson, Mr. E. Quackenbush, Mr. Adolfo Ramos, Mr. Francisco Ramos, Mr. E. B. Rees, Mr. Thos. B. Reynolds, Mrs. Thos. B. Reynolds, Miss Robbins, Mr. R. Rolla, Mr. R. C. Rountree, Mrs. M. W. Rountree, Mrs. J. H. Stewart, Mr. N. B. Stewart, Miss Ada Sullivan, Miss Alice Sullivan, Mr. Alden Swift, Mr. D. B. Taylor, Mrs. D. B. Taylor, Mr. J. H. Taylor, Mrs. J. H. Taylor, Mr. Henry S. Townsend, Mrs. Henry S. Townsend, Mrs. H. Vernon, Mr. Amos Parker Wilder, Mrs. A. P. Wilder and 4 children, Mr. Lloyd A. Wilson, Mr. K. Yoshimi, Mrs. K. Yoshimi, Mrs. J. Anderson, infant and 2 maids, Mrs. O. W. Bump, Miss E. L. Bump, Mr. A. Baumann, Mrs. W. M. Dudley, Mrs. J. F. Eddy, Miss C. Eddy, Mr. G. D. Edward, Mrs. S. Eldridge, Miss C. E. Hamblen, Mr. John Inglis, Mr. J. H. L. Johnston, Miss C. D. E. Johnston, Miss E. Koffman, Miss S. Koffman, Miss Hazel Lynn, Mr. D. M. Lyon, Miss Leary, Miss E. D. McCormick, Miss P. L. McCormick, Mr. W. O. Morse, Mrs. O. A. Poole, Miss M. B. Robertson, Miss A. A. Sullivan, Mr. C. E. Schneely, Miss S. T. Wootton and Mr. S. Yasuda in cabin.

EXPECTED.

Per German steamer Prinz Heinrich from Europe via ports:—Mr. R. Nagashima, Mr. M. Hayashi, Mr. K. Ishikawa, Mr. H. G. White, H. E. Viscount Hayashi and servant, Mr. E. J. Jones, Miss H. A. Jones, Mr. A. Farrant, Mr. and Mrs. W. Gowing, Mr. Rolf Sauer, Mr. Georges de Plancon, Mr. Shozo Kanaya, Mr. G. R. W. Tripmacher, Miss Ohly and Master Ohly in cabin.

SILK SHIPPERS.

Raw and Waste Silk shipped per steamer Ernest Simons:

	RAW.			WASTE.
	Marseilles Option.	Lyon.	Milan.	Marseilles Italy.	Milan.	Russia.
Cl. Eymard .....	20	—	—	126	—	—
Bavet & Co. ....	—	—	—	80	—	—
Jewett, Bent & Co. ....	—	—	—	29	—	—
Varenne & Co. ....	—	—	—	23	—	—
Total .....	20	—	—	258	—	—

Per British steamer Manila, for London via ports:—Raw Silk for Europe, 28 bales; Waste Silk for Europe, 148 bales.

Silk shippers per steamship Shinano Maru, for Seattle, Wash., 19th April:—

	Bales.
R. Schmidt-Scharff & Co. ....	50
Vivanti Bros. ....	10
Jewett & Bent .....	10
China & Japan Trading Co., Ltd. ....	5
Kiito Gomei Kaisha. ....	96
Doshin Kaisha .....	16

Total .....

Silk shippers per steamship Athenian, for Vancouver, B.C., 21st April:—

	Bales.
Kiito Gomei Kaisha .....	43
Doshin Kaisha .....	11
Total .....	54

Silk shippers per steamship Doric, for San Francisco, 21st April:—

	Bales.
Siber, Wolff & Co. ....	31
F. Strahler & Co. ....	10
Mitsui Bussan Kaisha .....	21
Total .....	62

CARGO.

Per British steamer Athenian, for Vancouver:—

From.	Canada & West.	Chicago New York Pacific & East.	Other Const. Cities.	Total.
Hongkong..	416	—	300	716
Yokohama.	100	4	—	114
Total...	526	4	300	830

SILK.

From.	New York.	Eastern Pa.	Phila.	South Man'ter.	Mon. treal.	Total.
H'kong & Canton	406	—	—	—	—	406
Shanghai .....	139	—	—	—	—	139
Yokohama .....	54	—	—	—	—	54
Total .....	599	—	—	—	—	559

VESSELS ON THE BERTH.

For KEELUNG, via Moji (from Kobe), 3rd, and 18th every month, at Noon, the "SAIKIO MARU."—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

For KEELUNG, via Moji (from Kobe), 10th and 25th every month, at Noon, the "KOSHUN MAUR."—Osaka Shosen Kaisha.

For TRIESTE, via Kobe, Hongkong, Singapore, Penang, Colombo, Bombay, Karachi, Aden, Suez, Port Said, and Fiume, about May —, the "TRIESTE."—Heller Bros.

For BOMBAY, via Kobe, Moji, Hongkong, Singapore, and Colombo, April 28th, at 2 p.m., the "WAKASA MARU."—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

For BREMEN and Hamburg, via ports, April 28th, at 9 a.m., the "SACHSEN."—H. Ahrens & Co., Nachf.

For SAN FRANCISCO, via Honolulu, April 28th, at 3 p.m., the "MANCHURIA."—P. M. S.S. Co.

For HAVRE, Hamburg and Bremen via ports, May 1st, at Daylight, the "C. FERD. LAEISZ."—C. Illies & Co.

For SEATTLE, Wash., via Victoria, B.C., May 1st, at 2 p.m., the "TANGO MARU."—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

For MARSEILLES, London, and Antwerp, via Kobe, Moji, Hongkong, Singapore, Penang, Colombo, and Port Said, May 2nd, at Daylight, the "AWA MARU."—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

For SHANGHAI, via Kobe, Moji, and Nagasaki, May 3rd, at 10 a.m., the "KASUGA MARU."—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

For HONGKONG, via Kobe, (Inland Sea), Nagasaki, and Shanghai, about May 3rd, the "AMERICA MARU."—Toyo Kisen Kaisha.

For SYDNEY, and Melbourne, via Kobe, Moji, Nagasaki, Hongkong, Thursday Island, Townsville, and Brisbane, May 5th, at Noon, the "YAWATA MARU."—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

For SAN FRANCISCO, via Honolulu, May 5th, the "HONGKONG MARU."—Toyo Kisen Kaisha.

For MARSEILLES, via ports, and Shanghai, May 5th, at 7 a.m., the "POLYNESIAN."—M.M. S.S. Co.

For BONIN ISLANDS via ports, May 5th, the "HIOGO MARU."—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

For GENOA, Marseilles and Liverpool, May 6th, the "CALCHAS."—Butterfield & Swire.

For LONDON, Amsterdam and Antwerp, May 8th, at Daylight, the "HECTOR."—Butterfield & Swire.

For MARSEILLES, London, and Antwerp, via Kobe, Shanghai, Hongkong, Straits, Colombo, and Port Said, May 8th, at Daylight, the "CEYLON."—P. & O. S.N. Co.

For SEATTLE, Wash., May 8th, the "DAKOTA."—Great Northern S.S. Co.

For HONGKONG, via Kobe, Moji and Shanghai, May 9th, at 2 p.m., the "KAGA MARU."—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

For VICTORIA, Seattle, Tacoma, Wash., May 10th, the "TRUCKER."—Butterfield & Swire.

For VICTORIA, B.C., and Tacoma, Wash., May 11th, the "SHAWMUT."—Dodwell & Co., Ltd.

For CANADA, United States, and Europe, via Vancouver, B.C., May 12th, the "MONTEAGLE."—Canadian Pacific Railway Co.

For HONGKONG, via Kobe, Inland Sea, Nagasaki, and Shanghai, about May 14th, the "EMPRESS OF CHINA."—Canadian Pacific Railway Co.

For HONGKONG, via Kobe, (Inland Sea), Nagasaki, and Shanghai, about May 14th, the "MONGOLIA."—P. M. S.S. Co.

For PORTLAND, Ore., May 15th, the "ARABIA."—P. & A. S.S. Co.

For SYDNEY, via Hongkong and New Guinea, May 16th, the "WILLEHAD."—H. Ahrens & Co., Nachf.

For AUSTRALIA and New Zealand May 17th, the "TSIAAN."—Butterfield & Swire.

For HONGKONG via Kobe, Moji, Nagasaki and Shanghai, May 17th, the "ARAGONIA."—P. & A. S.S. & Co.

For CANADA, United States, and Europe, via Vancouver, B.C., May 18th, at Noon, the "EMPRESS OF JAPAN."—C. P. R. S.S. Co.

For AUSTRALIA, via ports, May 19th, the "EASTERN."—Cornes & Co.

For HONGKONG, via Kobe, Nagasaki, and Shanghai, May 20th, the "MINNESOTA."—Great Northern S.S. Co.

For SAN FRANCISCO, via Honolulu, May 22nd, the "COPTIC."—O. & O. S.S. Co.

For HONGKONG, via Kobe, (Inland Sea), Nagasaki, and Manila, about June 5th, the "DORIC."—O. & O. S.S. Co.

For HONGKONG, via Kobe, Inland Sea, Nagasaki, and Shanghai, about June 2nd, the "ATHENIAN."—Canadian Pacific Railway Co.

For HONGKONG, via Kobe, Moji and Manila, about June 3rd, the "LYRA."—Dodwell & Co., Ltd.

LATEST COMMERCIAL.

[SPECIALLY COMPILED FOR THE "JAPAN MAIL."]
IMPORTS.

Yokohama, April 27.
A fair amount of business took place in White Shiftings, but Greys were quiet. In other branches nothing notable.

COTTON PIECE GOODS.

White Shirting—40 yds. 36 in. ... 0.10 to 0.16
50 yds. 36 in. ... 0.10 to 0.16

Grey Shirting—8 1/2 lb. 38 1/2 yds. 36 inches V. 4.00 to 4.50
Grey Shirting—9 lb. 38 1/2 yds. 45 inches 4.50 to 5.25
Prints—Assorted, 24 yards, 30 inches... 2.85 to 4.65

Cotton Italians and Satteens... 0.20 to 0.40
WOOLLENS.

Flannels ... V. 0.50 to 0.65
Italian Cloth, 32 inches ... 0.35 to 0.50
Mousseline de Laine,—Crape, 24 yards, 30 inches... 0.16 to 0.32

Cloths—Pilots, 54 to 56 inches ... 0.50 to 1.00
Cloths—Presidents, 51 to 65 inches ... 0.90 to 1.00
Cloths—Union, 54 to 56 inches... 0.50 to 1.00
Blankets—Assorted 3 to 5 lb per lb ... 0.60 to 0.80

Velvets—Black, 35 yards, 22 inches ... 9.20 to 12.50
Victoria Lawns, 12 yards, 42-3 inches... 0.90 to 1.80
Turkey Reds—2.8 to 3.0 lb 24-25 yards, 30 inches... 1.90 to 2.25

Turkey Reds—3.8 to 5 lb, 24-25 yards, 32 inches ... 2.50 to 3.65

COTTON YARN.

Nos. 2/60, Gassed ... V. 290.00 to 300.00
Nos. 2/80, Gassed ... 305.00 to 375.00
Nos. 2/100, Gassed ... 455.00 to 495.00

RAW COTTONS.

American Middling ... 33.50 to 34.00
Indian Broach... 28.50 to 29.00
Chinese ... 25.00 to 27.50

METALS.

No change in the metal market.
Iron or Mild Steel, Bar, flat, round and square ... V. 4.20 to 4.40
Iron or Mild Steel, Plate ... 4.35 to 4.65

do Sheet... 4.70 to 6.95
do Hoop (3/4" to 1 1/4") 5.00 to 5.50
Galvanised Iron Sheets No. 30 G... 11.75

Wire Nails, Ordinary assortments... 6.60 to 7.20
Tin Plates, 90 lbs. I.C.W... 7.40 to 7.65
Pig Iron, No. 3 "Redcar" ... 2.30

KEROSENE.

The Kerosene market is brisk with an upward tendency.

American ... 3.46
Russian ... 3.12
Langkat ... 0.55

SUGAR.

This market remains as last reported.

Brown Takao ... V. 7.70 to 8.10
Brown Manila ... 8.70 to 9.70
Brown China ... 7.40 to 12.00
White Java and Penang... 12.60 to 13.60
White Refined... 14.70 to 17.00

INDIGO.

No change.
Java, Medium to best... Nom. 250.00 to 300.00
Calcutta, Medium to best ... Nom. 180.00 to 200.00
Madras (Kurpah), Medium to best Nom. 130.00 to 160.00
Madras (Dry Leaf), Medium to best .. —

EXPORTS.
RAW SILK.

Business has been very restricted during the week, and holders have lowered their asking prices without effect, buyers holding aloof. The weather is all that can be desired for the growth of the mulberry.

QUOTATIONS.

Filatures—Extra Best, Coarse ...	1,080 to 1,100
Filatures—Extra, Fine ...	—
Filatures—Extra, Coarse ...	1,060 to 1,070
Filatures—No. 1, Fine ...	—
Filatures—No. 1, Coarse ...	1,010 to 1,020
Filatures—No. 1 1/2, Fine ...	1,080 to 1,100
Filatures—No. 1 1/2, Coarse ...	—
Filatures—No. 2, Fine ...	1,050 to 1,060
Filatures—No. 2, Coarse ...	990 to 1,000
Common—Coarse ...	—
Re-reels—Extra ...	—
Re-reels—No. 1 ...	—
Re-reels—No. 1 1/2 ...	—
Re-reels—No. 2 ...	—
Kakedas—Gold Cup Chop Extra ...	—
Kakedas—Veiled Woman Chop No. 1 ...	—
Kakedas—One Horsehead Chop No. 1 1/2 ...	—
Kakedas—No. 2 ...	—
Kakedas—No. 2 1/2 ...	—

WASTE SILK.

Prices unchanged, only a small business done, the market being bare of desirable qualities.

QUOTATIONS.

Noshi—Filatures, Best ...	—
Noshi—Filatures, Good ...	—
Noshi—Oshiu, Best ...	—
Noshi—Oshiu, Good ...	—
Noshi—Oshiu, Medium ...	—
Noshi—Shinshiu, Best ...	—
Noshi—Shinshiu, Good ...	—
Noshi—Bushiu, Best ...	—
Noshi—Bushiu, Good ...	—
Noshi—Bushiu, Medium ...	—
Noshi—Joshiu, Best ...	—
Noshi—Joshiu, Good ...	80 to 90
Kibiso—Filatures, Extra ...	—
Kibiso—Filatures, Best ...	110 to 120
Kibiso—Filatures, Second ...	100 to 105
Kibiso—Joshiu, Good ...	40 to 60
Kibiso—Bushu, Fair ...	—

HABUTAE.

Owing to the earthquake catastrophe in San Francisco, and to the low offers of foreign firms no special business has been done during the week. It is believed, however, that prices have seen their lowest.

KANAZAWA.

Inches.	3 1/2 me.	4 me.	4 1/2 me.
19 1/2	10.00	9.70	9.65
22 1/2	9.75	9.35	9.35
27	9.65	9.30	9.25
36	9.40	9.05	9.05

"FINE-LEAVES" MARK.

Inches.	6 me.	6 1/2 me.	7 me.	7 1/2 me.	8 me.
22 1/2	9.30	9.00	9.30	9.35	9.30
27	9.05	8.95	8.95	8.80	8.90
36	8.75	8.75	8.65	8.60	8.75

"GOLD" MARK.

Inches.	4 1/2 me.	5 me.	5 1/2 me.	6 me.
19 1/2	10.30	10.70	10.00	9.50
22 1/2	9.80	9.50	9.50	9.40
27	9.60	9.50	9.40	9.30
36	9.40	9.30	9.30	9.30

RICE.

Tokyo.—The market is still embarrassed in connexion with speculative purchases, and is not yet opened for transactions.

Osaka.—A fair business was done throughout the week as there were fluctuations in prices.

Domestic rice in Fukagawa	1,296,923
Foreign rice in Fukagawa	206,116

Delivery.	Closing Price.
April	Yen.
May	—
June	—

RICE AT WHOLESALE: STANDARD PRICE.	(Tokyo.)	per koku.
Superior	Yen	14.71
Medium	—	14.09
Common	—	13.51
Average	—	14.10

(Osaka.)	(Kobe.)
April	14.00
May	14.4475
June	14.45

STOCK EXCHANGE.	The Tokyo and Osaka markets are alike station-ary.
-----------------	--

COTTON YARN (Osaka).

During this week a heavy fall took place in Osaka and a few traders closed their offices. Yen.

April delivery .....	126.05
May delivery .....	126.10
June delivery .....	126.25

TEA.

The tea season may now be said to have opened. Generally speaking, the market promises well this year. Quotations are still nominal, however.

EXCHANGE.

Yokohama, April 26.

London silver  $\frac{1}{8}$  higher and Shanghai sterling quotations  $\frac{1}{8}$  higher have caused local rates on China to rule easier whilst other rates are unaltered and close for the mail per steamer Empress of India as under.

London—Bank T T .....	100 $\frac{1}{2}$ @ $\frac{1}{2}$
— — Bills on demand .....	100 $\frac{1}{2}$ @ $\frac{1}{2}$
— — 4 months' sight .....	100 $\frac{1}{2}$
— — Private 4 months' sight .....	101 $\frac{1}{2}$
— — 6 months' sight .....	101 $\frac{1}{2}$
Paris & Lyons—Bank sight .....	256
— — Private 4 months' sight .....	260
— — 6 months' sight .....	261 $\frac{1}{2}$
Hongkong—Bank sight .....	per \$100 103 $\frac{1}{2}$
— — Private 10 days' sight .....	101 $\frac{1}{2}$
Shanghai—Bank sight .....	69 $\frac{1}{2}$ *
— — Private 10 days' sight .....	71 $\frac{1}{2}$ *
India—Bank sight .....	152
— — Private 30 days' sight .....	154
America—Bank sight .....	49 $\frac{1}{2}$ @ $\frac{1}{2}$
— — Private 30 days' sight .....	50
— — Private 4 months' sight .....	50 $\frac{1}{2}$
Germany—Bank sight .....	208 $\frac{1}{2}$
— — Private 4 months' sight .....	212 $\frac{1}{2}$
Bar Silver (London) .....	30 $\frac{1}{2}$

* Nominal.

JAPANESE SHARE.

Yokohama, April 27, a.m.

Mean prices for Cash Delivery of Bonds and Shares, which may be held by Foreigners in their own names. Div'd.

	Paid up.	1 year.	Q'tion.	Yen.	per cent.	Yen.
Exchequer Bonds 1st Issue ...	100	5		97.00
Exchequer Bonds 2nd Issue ...	100	5		93.55
Exchequer Bonds 3rd Issue ...	100	5		93.55
Exchequer Bonds 4th Issue ...	100	6		101.50
Exchequer Bonds 5th Issue ...	100	6		100.10
Consolidated Bonds (Seiri) ...	100	5		92.70
War Bonds (Gunji) .....	100	5		92.70
5% Imperial Bonds (Goburi) ...	100	5		91.50
Navy Bonds (Kaigun) .....	100	5		90.00
Tokyo City Public Loan Bonds	100	6		99.50
Y'hama Water-works Bonds ...	100	6		97.50
Y'hama City Public Loan Bonds	100	6		95.50
Osaka Harbour Bonds .....	100	6		97.50
Sanyo Railway Debentures 2nd	100	6		95.50
Sanyo Railway .....	50	10		85.00
Kansei Railway .....	50	5.2		86.80
Kyushu Railway .....	50	8.5		73.60
Hokkaido Colliery Railway ...	50	12.5		100.00
Sobu Railway .....	50	10		80.20
Tokyo Electric Car (Densha) ...	50	10		87.50
Tokyo Street Railway (Shigai) ...	50	8		75.00
Tokyo Street Railway new ...	25	8		43.50
Tokyo Electric Railway (Denki) ...	50	2.5		53.60
Tokyo Electric Railway, new ...	40	2.5		42.40
Yokohama Electric Railway ...	50	3.5		66.00
Odawara Electric Car .....	50	3		31.00
Keihin Electric Railway .....	50	8		96.50
Keihin Electric Railway, new ...	25	8		68.00
Tokyo Marine Insurance .....	12.50	15		73.50
Yokohama Fire Insurance ...	12.50	10		22.60
Tokyo Fire Insurance .....	12.50	12		28.00
Kanagafuchi Spinning .....	50	16		110.00
Fuji Cotton Spinning .....	50	20		97.50
Tokyo G'sian Cotton Spinning ...	50	20		124.00
Yokohama Dock .....	33	12		58.00
Yokohama Electric Light .....	50	15		97.00
Yokohama Electric Light, new ...	12.50	15		38.00
Tokyo Electric Light .....	50	12		90.00
Tokyo Electric Light, new ...	20	12		52.50
Osaka Electric Light .....	50	20		116.00
Kobe Electric Light .....	50	10		88.50
Tokyo Gas .....	50	15		101.60
Tokyo Gas, new .....	17.50	15		56.00
Osaka Gas new .....	25	—		43.00
Tokyo Rope Manufacture ...	50	20		103.00
Nippon (Tokyo) Sugar Refinery ...	50	20		100.50
Nippon Sugar Refined new ...	12.50	20		71.20
Nippon (Osaka) Sugar Refinery ...	50	20		102.00
Dai-Nippon Beer Brewery .....	50	—		122.50
Dai-Nippon Beer Brewery, new ...	30	—		82.00
Dai-Nippon Beer Brewery, new ...	12.50	—		36.00

* Ex div. † Ex new.

SAVE YOUR HAIR

With Shampoos of Cuticura Soap and Light Dressings of Cuticura.

This treatment at once stops falling hair, removes crusts, scales, and dandruff, soothes irritated, itching surfaces, stimulates hair follicles, supplies the roots with energy and nourishment, and makes the hair grow upon a sweet, wholesome, healthy scalp when all else fails.

MILLIONS USE CUTICURA SOAP

Assisted by CUTICURA OINTMENT, for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, for cleansing the scalp of crusts, scales, and dandruff, and the stopping of falling hair, for softening, whitening, and soothing red, rough, and sore hands, for baby rashes, itchings, and chafings, in the form of baths for annoying irritations and inflammations, or too free or offensive perspiration, and for all the purposes of the toilet, as well as by millions of women in the form of washes for ulcerative weaknesses, and many sanative, antiseptic purposes which readily suggest themselves to women and mothers.

COMPLETE TREATMENT FOR EVERY HUMOUR,

Consisting of CUTICURA SOAP, to cleanse the skin of crusts and scales, and soften the thickened cuticle; CUTICURA OINTMENT, to instantly allay itching, inflammation, and irritation, and soothe and heal; and CUTICURA RESOLVENT PILLS, to cool and cleanse the blood. A SINGLE SET is often sufficient to cure the most torturing, disfiguring, itching, burning, and scaly skin, scalp, and blood humours, with loss of hair, when all else fails. Sold throughout the world. Australian Depot: R. TOWNS & Co., Sydney. British Depot: 27-28, Charterhouse Sq., London. French Depot: 5 Rue de la Paix, Paris. POTTER DRUG AND CHEM. CORP., Sole Props., Boston, U. S. A.

CUTICURA RESOLVENT PILLS (Chocolate Coated) are a new, tasteless, odourless, economical substitute for the celebrated liquid CUTICURA RESOLVENT, as well as for all other blood purifiers and humour cures. Put up in screw-cap pocket vials, containing 60 doses. CUTICURA PILLS are alternative, antiseptic, tonic, digestive, and the purest, sweetest, most successful and economical of blood and skin purifiers, humour cures, and tonic-digestives.

SHARE REPORT.

Yokohama, April 25, 1906

LOCAL STOCKS.—During the past week, rates have been very well maintained and in several instances a further improvement may be noted. Kirin Breweries have been the medium of a fair line of business at yen 130. Engine and Iron Works are obtainable at yen 120. Langfeldt's are obtainable at yen 45. Grand Hotels sales at yen 225. Club Hotels are enquired for. Oriental Hotels, Kobe, debentures changed hands at yen 100, a few of the ordinary shares on offer at yen 75. Helms, sellers at yen 85. For quotations see below.

CHINA STOCKS.—According to latest telegraphic advices—Hongkong and Shanghai Banks, \$865 buyers. Indo-Chinas at Tls. 67 buyers. China Traders, \$96 buyers. Hongkong and Kowloon Wharfs \$104 sales. Hongkong Lands, \$116 buyers. Humphrey's Estates, \$11 buyers. Green Island Cements, \$29  $\frac{1}{2}$  sales. Farnhams, Tls. 120 buyers. Shanghai Lands, Tls. 118 sellers.

STOCKS.	Capital.	No. of Shares.	Issue Value.	Amount Paid Up.	Reserve Fund.	At Working Amt or Carried Forward.	Date.	Last Dividend.	For Term.	Closing Quotations.
Brett & Co. Ltd.	28,000	2800	Y. 10	10			30.6.03	6%	for 1	6.50 N.
Club Hotel, Ltd.	185,000	1850	100	100			31.3.04	7%	" 1	60 N.
Grand Hotel, Ltd.	250,000	2500	100	100			30.6.05	10%	" 1	225 Sa.
Helm Bros., Ltd.	186,000	3720	50	50			Y. 8.349.06	17 $\frac{1}{2}$ %	" 1	85 S.
Langfeldt & Co. Ltd.	150,000	1500	100	100			Dr. 28.875.52	31.12.05	" 1	45 S.
C. Nickel & Co. Ltd.	500,000	20000	25	25			5.106.41	31.10.05	" 1	34 Sa.
Japan Brewery Co. Ltd.	450,000	9000	50	50	200,000		8.702.28	31.12.05	" 1	130 Sa.
Y. E. & Iron Works.	130,000	2600	50	50	20,000		20.149.17	30.11.05	" 1	120 S.
Hirano M. W. Co. Ltd.	125,000	5000	25	25				1st yr.	" 1	25 S.
Oriental H'1, L. old ord.		1490	50	50			31.8.05	12%	" 1	75 S.
" " new	251,000	1510	50	25
" " old pref.		750	50	50	60,542.50			8%		63 S4.
" " new		1250	50	25
" " Founders		80	12 $\frac{1}{2}$ %	12 $\frac{1}{2}$ %				Y.37		500 Sa.
Oriental Consolidated	G.	G.	G.	G.
Mining Co., Ltd.	$5,000,000	500,000	$10	$10	None		G. $672.093	31.12.04	$1	1905 G. $18 S.
Raub Australian Gold	£	150,000	£1	18 $\frac{1}{10}$			Dv. £8,745	31.3.05	40 cents	1901 \$3
Mining Co., Ltd.	200,000	30,000	£1	£1
Debenture Loans.	Amount of Loan.	Face Value of Debentures.	Rate of Interest.	Interest Payable.	Closing Quotation.
Japan Brewery Company, Ltd.	200,000.00	100.00	7 per cent.	1 April and 1 Oct.	108 Sa.
Brett and Company, Ltd.	11,500.00	100.00	7 per cent.	1 June and 1 Dec.	85 S.
Yokohama United Club	250,000.00	100.00	7 per cent.	30 June and 31 Dec.	108 Sa.
C. Nickel and Company, Ltd.	50,000.00	100.00	8 per cent.	1 May and 1 Nov.	110 S.

A. C. HUTTON POTTS,
Share and General Broker.

THE ORIGINAL AND GENUINE WORCESTERSHIRE.

Telegraphic Address, "Mail," Yokohama.

Price - - - Yen 1.50.

NAME.	FROM.	REPORTED.
Aberlour	London	Passed Canal	April 14
Acillia	Hamburg	Left Rotterdam	April 5
Ameer	London	Leaves Kobe	April 26
America Maru	San F'isco	Left	April 14
Amiral Exelmars	Antwerp	Passed Canal	Mar. 20
Arradia	Hamburg	Left H'kong	April 23
Atbenga	Phila.	Passed Canal	Feb. 23
Andalusia	Hamburg	Passed Canal	April 10
Bennald	London	Left H'kong	April 18
Bepmohr	London	Passed Canal	April 3
Caledonien	Marseilles	Left S'pore	April 23
Dakota	Hongkong	Leaves	April 23
Dordanus	Liverpool	Passed Canal	Mar. 23
Deucalion	Liverpool	Left	Mar. 22
Flintshire	London	Left S'hai	April 24
Hector	Liverpool	Left S'pore	April 15
Hyson	Liverpool	Left	Mar. 29
Indian Monarch	London	At Kobe	April 22
Indrasambha	New York	Passed Canal	Mar. 27
Iyo Maru	London	Left	April 19
Jason	Liverpool	Passed Canal	Mar. 30
Jeseric	New York	Leaves	Mar. 25
Kaisow	Liverpool	Left	Feb. 24
Laos	Marseilles	Passed Canal	April 3
Manica	London	Left S'pore	April 17
Montangle	Hongkong	Leaves	May 2
Moyune	Liverpool	At S'hai	April 17
Nippon	Trieste	Passed Canal	April 13
Numantia	Hongkong	Left	April 16
Olra	Rangoon	Left H'kong	April 23
Roon	Hamburg	Leaves	Mar. 29
Palawan	London	Passed Canal	April 3
Palerno	London	Left H'kong	April 21
Pindari	Antwerp	Left	Feb. 5
Prinz Heinrich	Hamburg	Passed Canal	April 15
Poona	London	Leaves Kobe	April 15
Satsuma	New York	Left S'pore	Mar. 25
Sikh	Liverpool	Left H'kong	April 14
Sithonia	Hamburg	At H'kong	April 23
St. Egbert	New York	Left	Mar. 15
Teucer	Liverpool	Due H'kong	April 14
Trieste	Trieste	Left Fiume	Feb. 23
Tsinan	Sydney.	Leaves	April 7
Tydeus	Liverpool	Leaves	Mar. 31
Williehad	Sydney	Leaves	April 14
Wray Castle	New York	Left S'pore	April 8
Yangtze	Seattle	Left	April 18
Yawata Maru	Melbourne	Leaves T'nsville	April 2
UNDER SAIL
Marechal de Castries	New York	Feb. 19	H'date
Nal	New York	Mar. 11	Y'hama
Neck	New York	Loading	Japan
Nereide	New York	Loading	Japan
Niobe	New York	Loading	Japan
Sully	New York	Loading	Japan

(毎土曜日一發行)
編輯人 エフ プリンタリー
發行兼印刷人 エー・ビー・ブラオン
發行所 { 横濱市山下町五十五番
          シヤツパンメー ル新聞社

The Japan Weekly Mail.

毎土曜日 A REVIEW OF JAPANESE COMMERCE, POLITICS, LITERATURE, AND ART. 一回刊行

No. 18.

REGISTERED AT THE G.P.O.
AS A NEWSPAPER.

YOKOHAMA, MAY 5TH, 1906.

明治廿五年三月廿日
第三種郵便物認可

VOL. XLV.

CONTENTS.

Summary of News .....	442
The Review .....	450
The Manchurian Railway .....	451
The Treasury .....	451
The San Francisco Earthquake .....	451
The Foreign Trade of Japan .....	452
China .....	452
The Minister of Education .....	454
Korea .....	454
The Tibetan Treaty .....	455
The Park of Captured Guns in Tokyo .....	455
Viscount Hayashi .....	456
The Fort Arthur Monument .....	456
Misere .....	456
The Oriental Society .....	457
Golf .....	457
The San Francisco Disaster .....	457
Notes on Current Events .....	457
May-Day .....	457
Indian Sympathy for the Famine .....	457
News from Vladivostok .....	457
The "Tango" Maru .....	457
Leading Articles .....	457
The Railways .....	450
The Portsmouth Conference .....	460
The Railway Question .....	46
The Casualties on the Japanese Side in the War .....	461
The Brookside .....	461
Yachting .....	461
Baseball .....	461
Monthly Summary of the Japanese Religious Press .....	461
Yokohama Literary Society .....	461
Cuttings from .....	461
The late Mr. E. Karcher .....	468
News of the Week .....	468
"Our Flat" at the Public Hall .....	468
The Law Courts .....	470
The Vesuvius Eruption .....	471
The Bluff Gardens .....	471
Correspondence .....	471
"Yielding" .....	471
Yokohama and Tokyo Foreign Residents Association's Executive Committee for the Relief of Sufferers by the War .....	471
The Liability of Foreign Shipping Companies .....	471
Telegrams .....	471
Yokohama Literary Society's Musical Competition .....	471
The Able Operators and the Earthquake .....	471
Telegrams .....	471
Latest Shipping .....	471
Latest Commercial .....	471

"FAIS CE QUE DOIS: ADVIENNE QUE POURRA!"

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

No notice will be taken of anonymous correspondence. What is intended for insertion in the "JAPAN WEEKLY MAIL," must be authenticated by the name and address of the writer, not for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

It is particularly requested that all letters on business be addressed to the MANAGER, and Cheques be made payable to same; and that literary contributions be addressed to the EDITOR.

YOKOHAMA: SATURDAY, MAY 5TH, 1906.

MARRIAGE.

COX-BEATTIE.—At the British Consulate General, Yokohama, on April 25th, before J. Carey Hall Esq., I. S. O. (British Consul General), and afterwards at Christ Church, Yokohama, the Rev. W. P. G. Field officiating, DOUGLAS COX, son of George Cox Esq., of Luton, England, to BEATRICE BELL, daughter of William Beattie, Esq., of Sydney, N.S.W.

DEATHS.

On the 26th April, at "Woodside" Copthorne, Surrey, England, ELLIOT SMITH NUTTER, aged 74.

At the General Hospital, on May 2nd, EMIL KARCHER, in his 42nd year.

SUMMARY OF NEWS.

SNOW fell at Sapporo on the night of April 28th.

PRINCE Nakonchaisi of Siam left Tokyo on May 1st for Nikko.

A DEAD rat infected with plague was found on April 27th in Kuroe-cho, Fukagawa, Tokyo.

A case of bubonic plague was reported on April 30th at Otake in Hiroshima prefecture.

A fire occurred in Bakuro-cho, Aomori, on the afternoon of April 30th, destroying 122 buildings.

H. NI-HIYAMA, a soldier, belonging to the Imperial Body Guards, committed suicide at 4.30 p.m. on April 30th by laying himself on the Kobe Railway at Okubo near Tokyo.

THE training squadron under Admiral Shimamura left Townsville on April 28th for Melbourne.

A CASE of small-pox was reported on April 28th in Toke-machi, Yokohama, the patient being an infant.

DURING April, 238,841 tons of coal were exported from Moji. At the end of the month the stocks were 241,769 tons.

PRINCE Torhato of Mongolia is attending the private military school, Shinbu-gakko, Tokyo. On May 1st he removed to his quarters.

A telegram from Tsu, Ise province, reports that frost was experienced there on the morning of April 30th, and a slight shock of earthquake was felt.

MR. JACOB Schiff, the American financier, left Moji on May 1st for Korea to investigate the industrial and commercial conditions of that country.

THE Asahi has a telegram from Kobe that two cases of plague appeared on April 29th, the patients being females, one 7 years and another 26 years old.

A German steamer which arrived at Moji on April 30th from Vladivostok, reports having observed ten mines in the neighbourhood of Askold Island.

A CASE of bubonic plague was reported in Kobe on April 26th, the patient being a female servant employed by Y. Ohara, a merchant, residing at Nishide-machi. She died the same night.

A sad accident took place on April 29th on the Tsukumi Iron bridge, Takashima-cho, Yokohama. T. Kijima, a fire-man on a train, missed his footing while oiling the locomotive, and fell into the creek. When taken out he was found to be dead.

As already reported, Antung and Tatung-kow, Manchuria, were opened on May 1st to foreign trade. Mr. O. Okabe, Japanese Consul in Nanking, has been transferred to Antung. For the present there will be no Japanese consulate in Tatung-kow.

A TELEGRAM has been received in Tokyo from St. Petersburg to the effect that negotiations as to the fishing industry in Saghalien have been opened between Mr. I. Motono, Japanese Minister, and Count Lamsdorff, Russian Minister for Foreign Affairs.

THE representatives of the Tokyo Gassed Yarn Spinning Co., and the Fuji Cotton Spinning Co., are negotiating with the intention of amalgamating. The Tokyo Stock Exchange has consequently stopped business in the shares of both companies for delivery in July.

A TELEGRAM from Kotohira, Sanuki province, reports that Mr. Adachi, an official of the Kotohira Tax Bureau, was arrested on April 28th on a charge of having embezzled twenty-five thousand yen from the public funds. It is said that he lost the money in rice speculations.

On April 25th, a British gentleman (whose name in Japanese papers is given as Mr. R. Young) who recently arrived in Japan, tried to reach the summit of Fuji. Owing to ice and the extreme cold, he had to return from Hachigo-me, which was the highest point that he reached.

Two hundred and fifty-nine of the five hundred sailors examined by the Sevastopol Court Martial on a charge of having taken part in the mutiny in the Black Sea last year were recently committed for trial and the remainder were acquitted. In connexion with the election for the members of the Tambov Municipal Assembly, which recently took place, protests were repeatedly filed in Court against the conduct of the elections.

THE Nippon Fire Insurance Co., seems to be enjoying good business. The Shogyo says that the company held a general meeting on May 1st and submitted the accounts for the last half of 1905. An interim dividend of 25 per cent. per annum was declared.

ON the evening of April 27th, a passenger train on the Kyushu Railway collided with a freight train at Yamamoto Station near Karatsu. The result was that the locomotive of the passenger train was severely damaged and the goods train was derailed. Fortunately no person was injured.

ABOUT 11.40 a.m. on April 29th, fire broke out on board the British steamer Ameer, which arrived at Yokohama the previous day from London. A number of police were sent at once from the Harbour Station with pumps. The fire, which originated in a hold containing phosphate, was put out after some hours. It is reported by the Harbour police that extensive damage was caused to the cargo but the hull was not much injured.

THE Sanyo Railway Co. held a general meeting in Kobe on April 28th. The net profit for the last half year of 1905 was yen 1,528,408.16 to which a balance of yen 961,241.48, brought forward from the previous account, was added, making a total of yen 2,489,649.64. Of this sum, yen 76,500 was put to reserve, yen 13,500 was paid to employees as a bonus; yen 1,642,500 as a dividend at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum; and the remainder was carried forward to next account.

SINCE the fire at the Yaami Hotel at Kyoto, says the Kobe Herald, the police, with the aid of a number of coolies, have been diligently engaged in searching among the debris for articles of value belonging to the foreign visitors at the hotel. In this manner a number of gold rings and other articles have been recovered, and we are glad to learn that on Tuesday several articles of jewellery belonging to Mrs. Waterfall, including a gold bracelet set with diamonds and a brooch of Satsuma porcelain, were discovered and restored to their owner. They were only slightly damaged.

AMONG the passengers that left Yokohama by the German Mail steamer Sachsen on Saturday for home were Mr. J. Carey Hall, hitherto British Consul-General at this port; Mrs. Hall and three of their daughters. Miss Hall will join them at Kobe where she has been visiting friends. They will be absent about a year. They were seen off by the American Consul-General, by a number of British and American residents, by representatives of the Governor and Mayor, and by other high officials. We wish Mr. Hall the pleasantest of holidays, for he richly deserves his vacation.

Kobe papers report the marriage of Mr. George Malcolm Spence, of E. H. Hunter & Co., and Miss Georgiana Maud Lay. The bride is the daughter of the late Mr. Horatio Nelson Lay, C.B., who was well known in the Chinese Customs service in former days. Mr. Lay had the distinction of being one of the Signatories of the noted Tientsin Treaty of 1858. Mrs. G. M. Spence is the grand-daughter of the late Professor James Legge, D.D., the distinguished Sinologue; and her brother, after making a name in the British Consular service in Japan, became Consul at Chemulpho, a post he is filling with much ability.

THE REVIEW.

The great triumphal Review took place yesterday in the Awoyama Park under brilliant sunshine. All the Divisions, 17 in number, that participated in the war, together with the Kobi (second reserves) the Cavalry, the Artillery, and the Military Train, were represented by skeleton corps, totalling some 45,000 of all ranks, and showing 120 regimental colours. It goes without saying, since the Army Department was concerned, that the arrangements were well thought out and thoroughly applied. Around the outside of the enclosure stands were erected for the accommodation of visitors, and admission was by ticket only, no confusion or crushing took place. During several consecutive days before the Review maps of the enclosure and of the positions of the stands were published. Thus every ticket-holder knew the avenue by which he should approach, and the main route to Awoyama being cleared of all traffic except that bound for the Park, those privileged to witness the great display experienced no inconvenience whatever. It had been notified that in the event of rain the review would be postponed, and that the public would be informed on this point by a discharge of rockets, which would signify that no impediment offered. It had also been notified that all ticket-holders must reach their places before 8 a.m., after which hour there would be no admittance, and the great majority were duly installed on the stands by about 7 o'clock. As for the citizens unfurnished with tickets, they thronged the space outside the enclosure to the south and west, forming an almost endless sea of heads. The Emperor left the Palace at 8.30 a.m. It had been rumoured that His Majesty would be accompanied by the Empress, but if that intention existed it was frustrated by a severe cold which Her Majesty contracted on the preceding day. Rumour had also declared that His Majesty's carriage would be drawn for the first time by eight horses. Two only were attached, however; a limit which was imposed in effect by the inspection programme, for it had been decided that the Emperor should make the tour of the ranks in his carriage, and a team of more than two horses would have been evidently inconvenient for such a purpose. After His Majesty's carriage followed another with the Crown Prince, then a third with Prince and Princess Arisugawa, then a fourth with Prince Nashimoto, and then other carriages with Marchioness Narushima and a few of the Ladies in Waiting. Leaving the Palace by the principal exit, the Emperor drove along the newly made Baba-saki bridge where a triumphal arch of imposing proportions had been erected, and then turning to the right kept along the moat to Sakurada Gate, thereafter proceeding past the German Legation and along the main route to Awoyama. It need scarcely be said that every available space throughout the whole of this long distance as well as every house opening on it, was crowded with spectators, many of whom had spent the night waiting. The Imperial cortège reached the Awoyama Park at 9.30 a.m., and amid the blare of a hundred trumpets, proceeded at once to the business of inspection. The infantry, formed in skeleton battalions of about 200 men each, occupied the front, stretching for a distance of fully two miles. In the right rear the artillery was ranged (17 batteries), in the left rear the cavalry, and in the front of the centre a massed band of about 120 instruments. The Emperor, followed by all the other carriages, drove down the front of the line from east to west, then passed back between the battalions, and then drove along in front of the artillery and cavalry, reaching the saluting point at about 10.30. Almost before the Imperial equipage had taken up its final position, the battalions had formed into regiments, and the march-past commenced, the cavalry following the infantry and the artillery bringing up the rear. Notice had been given that the march-past would be over in time for the men to take their dinners at noon, and so exactly timed were the arrangements that the last battery trotted past at 11.45 and the Emperor drove away from the Park at five minutes past twelve. The whole of the great pageant was absolutely without incident or accident. Wearing their new khaki uniforms—which costume was adopted by the Emperor also, by the Prince Imperial and by the Princes of the Blood—the troops presented a remarkably neat and workmanlike appearance, and their marching showed swing and verve. It was noticeable that never at any previous review in Tokyo had such a fine display of horse-flesh been witnessed, all the officers being well mounted and the cavalry and artillery having a considerable proportion of handsome cattle in their ranks. The Imperial carriage, as it made the rounds, was followed by a brilliant group of senior staff officers, and among them rode Colonel Hume, R.A., the only foreign military attaché who had a place in the procession. After the review some six thousand of the officers had the honour to lunch with the Emperor in pavilions specially erected within the Shinjuku Park.

At the conclusion of the Review an Imperial Rescript was handed to Marshal Oyama which ran:—

"We have assembled Our triumphal troops here and personally reviewed them. We are greatly pleased at their martial spirit, which has been so strongly demonstrated, and at the good order maintained. You will further exert your energies so as to promote improvements and expedite the progress of the Imperial Army."

Marshal Oyama replied:

"Your Majesty has personally reviewed the triumphal troops assembled here and specially granted them a gracious Imperial Rescript, for which we, Your Majesty's servants, are gratefully thankful. We swear that our energies shall be further exercised in making increased efforts in response to the Imperial wishes. I, Oyama Iwao, Your Majesty's servant, hereby humbly reply to the Imperial rescript on behalf of the triumphal troops."

Two thoughts probably suggested themselves to many of those that witnessed the great review of troops in the Awoyama Park on the 30th of April. One was a reflection as to the stupendous labour and expense involved in supplying provisions and ammunition to a force sixteen times as numerous as the huge body of men assembled that day. The Japanese armies in the field must have aggregated fully half of a million of all arms—probably more—in the last phases of the war, and for these food and ammunition had to be sent in a steady stream across the sea and carried far inland into Manchuria for month after month without the slightest irregularity. One begins to form a conception of the nature of such a task when one sees even a fraction—less than one-sixteenth—of the immense army that had to be supplied.

The second thought that this vast assemblage of men inspired was that they represented only a little more than one-third of the number who lost their lives in battle or by wounds or sickness during the war. Three times as many as that huge Awoyama host, all young and strong men, went down to their graves in the course of the twenty-two months of fighting in Manchuria. We speak of Japanese losses only. If the Russian losses were added the result would be far more appalling. It is as though the whole population of a tolerably large city were swept away at one coup. We are shocked at the mortality caused by earthquakes, tidal waves or pestilences, but what is it compared with the death-roll of such a war as that just fought?

The Hochi Shimbun says that the total cost of the great review was six hundred thousand yen, and that the operation of watering the parade-ground on the morning of the 30th ultimo, involved an outlay of 5,000 yen.

It appears that the statements hitherto published as to the number of the troops which paraded in the Awoyama Park were exaggerated. The total of the forces assembled was only 31,203. Some Divisions were represented by only three or four officers.

At the luncheon given by the Emperor to over six thousand officers in the Shinjuku Park on the 1st of May, His Majesty handed to Field Marshal Marquis Oyama, and all officers of and above the rank of Major-General, a wine-cup commemorative of the occasion. The other officers also received wine-cups but not direct from the Sovereign's hand. According to strict Japanese custom the person who hands a cup to another should himself drink from it first, when there is a great difference in rank between the two. When no such difference exists the giver of the cup drinks from it subsequently. Neither method can be followed in such a case as the one under consideration, and consequently the ceremony was merely typified by the Emperor giving the cup with his own hand.

Japanese journals make considerable allusion to the fact that Colonel Hume, R.A., Military Attaché of the British Embassy, accompanied His Majesty at the inspection of the assembled troops and subsequently took a place on horseback near the Imperial carriage during the march-past. This being the first instance of a foreigner occupying such a position at a Japanese review, much attention was attracted, especially as Colonel Hume's red coat made him a very conspicuous object among his khaki-clothed comrades. The distinction made in the Colonel's favour was of course due to the Anglo-Japanese alliance, and it appears to have been universally welcomed for the sake of Colonel Hume himself, as to his well-proved ability as a soldier he adds the gift of making himself popular everywhere.

It appears that among those present at the great luncheon given in the Shinjuku Park on the 1st instant there were a number of members of the two Houses of the Diet as well as the local Governors now in Tokyo. The total of those attending was 6,300. The Emperor arrived at 11.30 a.m., but did not repair to the luncheon pavilion until 12.30 p.m., where he remained until 1.50 p.m. His Majesty summoned to his presence in the first place the two Field-M Marshals, the Generals, the Ministers of State, the holders of First-Class Orders and all Shinnin officials, and handed them each a sakazuki. These numbered 50. Then all the Lieut.-Generals and Major-Generals to the number of 150 were similarly honoured, and finally, by His Majesty's special desire, all officers who had received kanjo were summoned to the Imperial presence and wine-cups were given to them. There were 96 of these officers. The smallness of the number shows how difficult it must have been to win this coveted distinction. Field-Marshal Marquis Yamagata, following the precedent first set by Marquis Ito in the Homei-den on the 21st of last December, proposed the Sovereign's health.

On the 2nd instant the Crown Prince entertained at luncheon in the same place some 2,500 distinguished officers, the members of the Corps Diplomatique, the members of the Diet now in the capital, and others.

On the evening of the 1st inst. Admirals Togo and Saito entertained at dinner several of the Imperial Princes, the two Field Marshals, Marquis Ito, Count Matsukata, General Terauchi, the Ministers of State, Admiral Ito, Viscount Kodama and all the Generals of the Army, to the number of 230. Admiral Togo proposed the health of the Army and Marquis Yamagata responded with that of the Navy.

The demand for the pictorial cards issued in connexion with the Review has been something unprecedented. Purchasers formed long queues at the central post-office, where alone the cards were sold on the 1st. Originally the 5-sen cards were sold at all offices down to the third class and the 10-sen at first and second-class offices, but the cards at sub-offices having been immediately sold out, none remained except those at the central office. There people began to assemble from 5 a.m. and the crush became so intense that a child fainted. This induced the post-office officials to put up a notice that the supply of cards was exhausted but the people did not believe it, and the notice was quickly defaced. Another notice written on wood was then shown inside the window, and the result was the smashing of the window. At 11 a.m. the sale re-commenced and all were sold out at 1 p.m., when a genuine notice was posted, only to meet with similar discredit. It is impossible not to condemn the management of the post-office officials in this matter. They must have known well that to limit the sale to one office would lead to trouble, especially as the purchasers are not bona-fide collectors but, for the most part, needy students and speculators who buy the cards merely for the sake of re-selling them at once to the picture-shops. Some of the 5-sen cards are now selling for 40 sen, and the 10-sen cards for 70 sen. Naturally forged cards are beginning to make their appearance, small differences of superscription being made so as to elude the police.

THE MANCHURIAN RAILWAY.

Mr. Liu, President of the Board of Records, is stated (Asahi's Peking correspondence) to have memorialized the Throne urging that a steamship company be established for the navigation of the river Liao; that the Fushun coal mines be repurchased from Japan and worked by the Chinese Government; that an overseer of the East China Railway be appointed and that the duty of superintendence shall be undertaken by China and Japan in conjunction; that the railway between Mukden and Hsinmintun shall be re-purchased from Japan; that local administrative independence be established in the Liaotung Peninsula; that the Hungtusz be invited to make act of submission and be enrolled as Chinese troops; that a Chinese custom house be established in the neighbourhood of the territory leased by Japan (i.e. Liaotung presumably in the vicinity of Pulantien); and that the islands at the junction of the Yalu and the Tumen be surveyed with the view of distinctly settling the Chinese and Korean frontiers.

On the 25th instant (according to the Asahi's correspondent) Major-General Nakamura and the other members of the commission appointed to take delivery of the East Chinese Railway, met the Russian commissioners at Supingchieh. The latter came to the place of meeting in a dining-saloon car, and the conference was held in this vehicle. On the 26th, the train proceeded to Kungchuling carrying both parties, and during the journey, which occupied three hours, a conference was held. It was finally decided, on the 27th, that the section of the line from Changtu to Supingchieh should be handed over on the 10th of May, and the section from Supingchieh to Kungchuling on the 30th of May. In the meanwhile the Japanese have the right to proceed with the repair or reconstruction of the line southward of their detachment's station at Supingchieh, and to distribute troops as they please through the region where such work is in progress. An entertainment was organized in the dining-car to celebrate the conclusion of the conference, which seems to have been conducted in the most friendly spirit. The Russian Chief Commissioner, Major General de Witte, spoke of his intimate acquaintance with Major-General Nakamura. The troops under their respective commands had faced each other at Liaoyang and in the lines on the south of Mukden, and now the two commanders had met to negotiate. Major-General Nakamura said that wars were due to nations being misinformed as to each other's conditions. He trusted that the junction of railways which would now be completed between Japan and Russia would prelude and typify an equally close union between the two peoples.

It is evident from the fact of the Russian commissioners having travelled by train from Harbin to Supingchieh, that the railway northward of the latter place must be in working order.

The above arrangement contains nothing as to the transfer of the last section of the line, namely, from Kungchuling to Changchun.

In our last issue we noted that the fact of the Russian commissioners having come from Changchun to Supingchieh by rail showed that the line throughout that section at all events had not suffered much. Later accounts indicate that the main part of the damage is south of Supingchieh. Thus between Changtu and Shahotsu two large bridges are broken; between Shahotsu and Shwanmiaotsz 4,500 sleepers and 300 lengths of rail have been removed, and 3 large bridges with 6 small ones are smashed; between the last-named place and Supingchieh the damage is most severe, one big bridge having been absolutely annihilated and two having been stripped of their upper timbers. At a point 800 metres southward of Supingchieh there is not a rail or a sleeper to be seen; the railway has been converted into an ordinary road and is used even by carts. The stations also on this section of the line are all in a semi-ruinous condition. At Kungchuling the station buildings are almost on the scale of those at Liaoyang. There are 127 principal brick edifices, 117 minor structures and 27 stables.

The Fiji Shimpo's correspondent says that, at the first meeting of the commissioners, Major-General Nakamura spoke very strongly about the condition of the line and said that the terms of the Portsmouth convention provided for the delivery of a railway not of a mere road. To this the Russians replied that the railway had been dismantled as a military necessity on the occasion of the rapid Japanese pursuit after the battle of Mukden. Some sleepers had been subsequently stolen by the Chinese, and so far as this indicated want of efficient supervision on the side of the Russians they expressed full regrets, but they assured the Japanese that since the conclusion of the Portsmouth Treaty the railway had not suffered any injury whatever. Major General Nakamura desired that the missing rails and sleepers should be returned, but the Russian commissioner replied that it would be impossible to recover them from the Chinese. The Fiji's correspondent adds that there was no disposition on the Japanese side to make much of a trifling matter of this nature, but that Major-General Nakamura deemed it wise to speak strongly having regard to the undelivered section of the line, namely, that between Supingchieh and Changchun.

Some time ago it was reported that the Chinese local authorities had asked the Japanese to remove the military bridge over the Liao, southward of Hsinmintun, on the ground that it impeded junk traffic. The Japanese, however, replied that the junks could easily unship their masts and the convenience of land traffic had to be considered as well as that of water transport. Apparently the Chinese have succeeded in enlisting the co-operation of the foreign consuls in Yingkow for they are said to have addressed to the Japanese a similar request. We were under the impression that this bridge was built by the Russians, but that is another matter.

It may be mentioned here that no credence attaches to the statement of the Nagasaki Russian journal in the sense that the Russians have been working at the Mukden-Hsinmintun line and have nearly completed it. The Mukden-Hsinmintun line is believed to be now in Japanese possession. At all events it is not in Russia hands.

The Japanese have lost no time in giving effect to the latest agreement with Russia as to the transfer of the East Chinese Railway. They are said to have pushed forward their detachment to a point 4 miles north of Shwangmiaotsz, and to be already engaged repairing the line and re-building the bridges. It may be roughly said that the Railway is in working order on the Japanese side only as far as Kaiyuan, but there will be no loss of time, we may be assured, in effecting the restoration of the sections north of that place.

THE TREASURY.

The Treasury redeemed 29 million yen worth of its notes on April 30th and will simultaneously issue 40 million new ones, thus increasing its liabilities by 11 million yen. This issue is to be redeemed by the end of July. The object may be regarded as conversion, for money being very plentiful at present and the rate of interest low, the Treasury saves by the transaction.

Statistics just published show that the Empire's national debts at the close of March were as follow:—

	Yen.
Domestic Debts .....	930,056,054
Foreign Debts .....	920,410,309

Total ..... 1,850,466,363

In this total Treasury notes are not included, these being affairs of a temporary nature, nor are such portions of the domestic and foreign loans as have not yet been paid up.

THE SAN FRANCISCO EARTHQUAKE.

At the meeting of Provincial Governors in the Home Department on the 26th April, the Minister of State for Home Affairs announced that, at the instance of the Red Cross Society, it had been determined to raise a subscription for the purpose of succouring the victims of the San Francisco earthquake. He dwelt on the exceedingly friendly relations existing between the United States and Japan, the latest evidences of which had been America's attitude during the Russo-Japanese War and her practical sympathy with the sufferers by famine in the north-east. It was Japan's plain duty as it was also her pleasure to take advantage of the present occasion for some display of gratitude. He therefore urged the Governors to exert themselves in the cause of this charity, and pending their return to their jurisdictions he suggested that they should telegraph to their locum-tenentes in order to make a commencement. The Governors are understood to have taken that step at once.

The Cabinet has decided to send experts to San Francisco in order to study the seismic and architectural conditions there. The seismologist will be Professor Omori and the architect Professor Nakamura. Professor Sagari is named as assistant.

The Japanese Government has sent a sum of 50,000 yen for the relief of the Japanese subjects in San Francisco. The money was forwarded by telegraphic draft.

It appears that the San Francisco relief committees, while treating the Japanese section of the population in much the same manner as American citizens, discriminated against the Chinese, and withheld from them succour which was much needed. The Chinese complained very bitterly, and their complaints having reached President Roosevelt, he directed that the work of succour should be handed over to the control of the Red Cross Society, and that no distinctions of nationality should be made. This statement is on the authority of a telegram to the Asahi Shinbun from New York. It seems not at all unlikely that some discrimination was displayed originally in this matter, for the Chinese of San Francisco are not favourites.

Mr. B. C. Howard, Agent of the P. M. and O. & O. Companies and the Toyo Kisen Kaisha, courteously informs us that he is in receipt of a cable from the San Francisco office to the effect that business is going on in the city as usual before the earthquake.

Many, we imagine, will be surprised by this most welcome news, and all must heartily admire the pluck with which the citizens have faced the effects of the terrible disaster that overtook them.

Wednesday, May 2.

The Japanese are evidently determined that their desire to be of service to the sufferers from the earthquake at San Francisco shall be most unequivocally expressed. A second meeting was held at the official residence of the Minister of State for Foreign Affairs on the 29th ultimo for the purpose of obtaining the coöperation of the journalists of the capital. The Minister of State for War, the acting Minister of State for Foreign Affairs, Baron Ozawa, Vice President of the Red Cross Society, and Baron Shibusawa, all addressed the meeting, explaining that whether the dimensions of Japan's contribution were large or small, what was desirable was that she should show her goodwill by contributing quickly. Much stress was laid upon the exceptionally friendly and helpful spirit always showed by America towards Japan, from the days of Mr. Townsend Harris to the return of the Shimonoseki Indemnity, the consent to treaty revision, the despatch of a body of trained nurses on the occasion of the recent war, and the ready and munificent aid given quite lately to the famine-stricken population of the north-eastern provinces. The representatives of the press, of whom some forty attended, were invited to bring the matter strongly to the attention of their readers, and if possible to open subscription lists. A question having been raised as to whether the President's refusal to accept the Japanese Red Cross Society's offer of a hospital ship might not deter the public, unless they had assurances that monetary subscriptions would not be similarly refused, the Minister of War expressed the opinion that Japan's object was to exhibit her desire to be useful irrespective of the reception given to her efforts. His Excellency pointed out that whatever expedition were employed the hospital ship could not well reach San Francisco before the end of May, by which time very little need for her services would remain, and he let it be seen that he did not entertain any apprehension of a similar fate attending any monetary subscription. After the meeting a stand-up luncheon was served, and the pressmen, before leaving, promised to render any assistance in their power.

It appears that at the meeting of businessmen and bankers held prior to the above in the same place, a sum of twenty thousand yen each was subscribed by the Bank of Japan, the Mitsui Bank and the Mitsubishi Bank; sums of ten thousand yen each by the Nippon Yusen Kaisha, the Japan Railway Company and the Yokohama Specie Bank; sums of five thousand each by the First, the Fifteenth, the Industrial, the Kangyo and the Yasuda Banks, as well as by Messrs. Okura & Company and Messrs. Morimura & Company; three thousand by Messrs. Takata & Company and one thousand by Baron Shibusawa. Tokyo papers express the belief that, adding what Tokyo has subscribed and the contributions of Yokohama, Osaka and Nagoya, the total has probably reached five hundred thousand by this time.

(TO THE EDITOR OF THE "JAPAN MAIL.")

SIR,—I have pleasure in passing on to you information to the effect that our Companies have resumed service.

The steamer Mongolia was to leave San Francisco on the 1st instant direct for Yokohama, and the steamer China will sail on the 5th via Honolulu, and other ships according to schedule, as also departures from Yokohama.

The silk ex the steamer China, which arrived at San Francisco on the 19th of April, the day following the earthquake, arrived at New York on the 30th.

Yours faithfully,
B. C. HOWARD, Agent,
Joint Agency, Pacific Mail Steamship Co.,
Occidental and Oriental Steamship Co.,
Toyo Kisen Kaisha.

THE FOREIGN TRADE OF JAPAN.

The "Monthly Return of the Foreign Trade of Japan" for March shows that during the first three months of this year exports totalled 87 million yen, in round numbers, against 72 million for the corresponding period of 1905 and 70½ millions for 1904. On the contrary, imports aggregated only 109 millions against 130½ for 1905 and 93 for 1904. The excess of imports this year is thus seen to be 22 million yen, whereas it was 58½ in 1905.

The movements of specie resemble those in 1905 but are markedly different from those in 1904. Nine and a half million yen worth of gold and silver left the country in the first three months of the year and seventeen millions came in, the excess of imports being 7½ millions. The excess of imports during the corresponding period of 1905 was 9¾ millions, whereas in the first 3 months of 1904 there was an excess of exports (nearly all gold) aggregating 41 millions. Of course while Japan is receiving loans from foreign countries it is unavoidable that there should be a want of due relation between the balance of trade and the movements of specie.

The Customs' revenue shows a marked increase this year. It amounted to 10,085,515 yen against 7,695,994 yen for the corresponding three months of 1905, and 5,021,492 yen for 1904. It has in fact doubled in two years, and if the present rate continues throughout the year, the Treasury will receive a revenue of 40 millions in round numbers.

The staples of exports which showed the biggest increase were silk and its manufactures. Here the figure for this year is 35½ million yen against 28 millions in 1905, an increase of 7½ millions. Cotton fabrics, on the other hand, declined from 11½ millions during the first three months of last year to 10 millions this year.

The staples of imports which show the chief decline are:—

	1906. Millions.	1905. Millions.
Rice .....	7½	17½
Horns, ivory, skins, etc.....	1½	5
Metals and their manufactures.	17½	24½
Tissues, yarns, wool, woollens, etc. ....	47½	53

THE LIABILITY OF FOREIGN SHIPPING COMPANIES.

Dr. F. Yamada, of the Yokohama Bar, writes to us:—In this country there are a great number of foreign steamship agencies acting as the representatives of their head firms. If when they claim against shippers or consignees, they do so in the name of their head firms, and when the latter bring claims against them, they deny all obligation on the ground that they are only agents; it must be very difficult to carry on business with them.

The case of Andrews and George Gomei Kwaisha v. Dodwell and Company, Ltd., is an example of this. The former sued the latter for damage done to goods by rough treatment of the seamen on board the Mogul S.S. Company's steamer Den of Crombie. The defendants argued that being only the agents of the company in question they were not liable for damage done to goods on board the ship. The Yokohama Court appointed Dr. Hijikata, a professor of English law in the Imperial Tokyo University, to give an opinion on that point of law. His opinion is that "in English law the agent of a shipping company is under no liability to pay damage for breakage occasioned by the fault of the captain or seamen, but that the captain or the head company may be sued."

In consequence of this opinion the Court decided for the defendant. We must now take notice that in this country no one can sue the agency of a shipping company in such a case, so that if one wishes to take legal steps he must either sue the head company in the law courts of the country to which it belongs or await the return of the vessel and sue the captain. It is therefore impossible to do business with such agencies unless we are ready to take the case abroad in case of mishap.

CHINA.

Saturday, April 28.

General Oshima, Governor-General of Kwantung, passed through Mukden on the 12th instant en route for Japan via Antung and Korea. The General's object was to attend the great review in Tokyo on the 30th. Taking advantage of his brief sojourn in Mukden, Governor Chao signified his desire to meet him, and arrangements were accordingly made. Chao did not himself go to meet the Japanese General. He sent a number of officials, and by these General Oshima was conducted to the Governor's yamen when he received a most hearty welcome. During a repast which followed the Chinese Governor declared that the relations between China and Japan must henceforth be of the familiar shinshi hasha description (or close as the teeth are to the lips and as mutually useful as are the two wheels of a chariot). All works for the development of Manchuria must be undertaken by the two nations in combination, and as he, on his side, would spare no pains to promote that end, he trusted the Japanese Governor-General would be animated by the same sentiment. General Oshima in replying expressed entire sympathy with Governor Chao's views and regretted that the necessity of reaching Tokyo by a certain date made it impossible for him to hold long conference with Governor Chao. He took occasion to explain that as Japan was still in partial military occupation of southern Manchuria, there were probably many features presenting greater or less inconvenience from the point of view of civil administration, but he assured the Governor that Japan's sincere intentions were to promote the lasting peace of the whole of Eastern Asia, and he begged his Excellency to accept this assurance in all good faith.

The Peking Court, while instructing its Representative in Washington to report on the state of the Chinese subjects in San Francisco and to convey the condolences of the Emperor and Empress-Dowager and the Emperor to President Roosevelt, has also directed him to hand a sum of 100,000 taels to the United States Government for the relief of the sufferers by the calamity, and a further sum of 50,000 taels for the Chinese residents of the unfortunate city. This is the second instance of such benevolence on the part of the Chinese Court. The first was when the Empress Dowager recently sent a sum of 100,000 taels for the succour of the famine-stricken population of north eastern Japan. It is a most welcome departure. These acts of international sympathy draw people very close together, and in China's case they will go far to improve the sentiment entertained towards her in Europe and America.

Monday, April 30.

It is stated that a disturbance of a somewhat serious nature has occurred at Yochow in Hunan and also that the Szchuan insurgents are growing in strength. The spring is generally a time for signs of disaffection to show themselves in China.

Tuesday, May 1.

It is reported that the Chinese Government has raised objections to the immediate opening of Mukden, Antung and Tatung-kou. The Peking authorities profess their willingness to accede to Japan's proposal in the matter, but they quote Viceroy Yuan and the Governor of Mukden as insisting that preparations for the opening are by no means complete. Peking therefore declares that a further interval must be allowed, and that China will make due communication to Japan when the proper time comes. The Fiji Shimpō calls this a mere "face-saving pretext." In other words, the Government think that their sovereignty in Manchuria has been more or less ignored by Japan's procedure, and they are determined to assert themselves. Japan, on the other hand, recognises freely that the best way to ensure the tranquillity and security of Manchuria is to interest Western Powers substantially in their maintenance by opening the whole region to foreign trade. China must appreciate this also, but apparently she is somewhat huffed at not having been more closely consulted. It is a pity that her susceptibilities, not unreasonable after all, should have been ruffled by any want of formality, but it may turn out in the end that this story is an error or an exaggeration.

The Hochi Shimbun has a telegram from Moji saying that General Oshima, Governor-General of Kwantung, has decided to adopt a strong policy for attracting trade to Talien. One drastic measure contemplated is to give free railway transport to beans and bean-cake coming from Tiehling and adjacent districts, as well as to Chinese produce from the interior. The wharf at Dalny will also be improved so as to afford greater facilities for loading and unloading cargo. We are inclined to think that this story must be taken with great reserve. A system of cheap freights may indeed be contemplated, but to carry produce gratis would be economically unsound and could not have a permanent effect.

Thursday, May 3.

Most contradictory accounts are published about the Nanchang affair. One telegram says that it has been settled on the basis of the suicide of the Chihsien being recognised, an indemnity paid and the leading gentry punished. Another message (Fiji Shimpō) declares that a settlement is as far off as ever. China is willing to pay an indemnity of half a million taels, but she declines to order the degradation and punishment of the Taotai and other principal officials, her contention being that such action would invite disturbance and might lead to incalculable commotion. The French, however, are standing fast for punishment and no via media is in sight.

This kind of dispute is very old. It has occurred again and again. Such complications were supposed to have been successfully obviated by the Peking Convention of 1901, but this Nanchang incident shows that things are moving in their old groove.

Friday, May 4.

There are various reports as to the negotiations with China about the opening of Mukden, Antung and Tatung-kou. The gist of them is that the United States Government has coöperated strongly with Japan to bring about the opening, and that success has attended their combined efforts so far at least as Antung is concerned. That place is said to have been declared open from the 1st instant, though as yet there has been no official announcement in Japan. Reference may here be made to the deliberate attempt recently engineered to attribute to Japan conservative and aggressive ambitions in Manchuria. The press of the Far East includes a low element which devotes itself to the task of creating international mischief, and which has unfortunately been joined by a newly established London journal for the purpose of discrediting Japan. These writers took for their shibboleth a short time ago the cry that Japan intends to absorb the whole of southern Manchuria and that her talk of the open door and equal opportunities was wholly Pecksniffian. To combat assertions based as these were upon pure imagination would have been a futile task. Those that knew the truth were content to wait for the evidence of events, and their reticence is now justified. No claim of special altruism need be set up on Japan's behalf. She has to take care of herself in the first place and to utilize in her own interests every available occasion. Very likely her special advantages with regard to Manchuria will enable her to reap the largest share of profit accruing from its opening. That, however, can not be laid to her charge in these days of universal competition. The point is that her political interests are plainly consulted by opening Manchuria as quickly as possible and thus enlisting the assistance of Western Powers in the preservation of the region against aggression by any state which would close it to general trade. If the same line could be pursued in the other Central-Asian districts lying on the north and north-west of China's borders, the permanent peace of the East would be assured.

There was a time not many years ago, when Peking did not boast a single foreign store except one attached to the hotel. Since the opening of the city, however, this state of affairs has been radically altered, and of late years enterprising foreigners have even gone beyond the limits of the settlement, and some have actually established themselves outside the wall. This is said to be very distasteful to the Chinese in their new mood. Last fall they re-organized their police system, and the reports compiled by the new constables showed that foreigners were not by any means confining themselves to treaty limits. Accordingly the Peking Government, which is said to have adopted the "strict enforcement policy" popular in Japan for a brief period after the opening of the Diet, has approached the foreign Powers with a request that these stores outside the legitimate limits shall be closed. The Chinese, however, who, as the late Mr. Alexander Michie truly said, never forget to be sweetly reasonable in the face of accomplished facts, are understood not to demand the closure of stores established in the days prior to the regimen of the newly organized police force. They admit, in short, that they themselves are indirectly responsible for an abuse which they did not adopt any measures to check. Thus stores opened prior to the close of last year will remain unmolested. We take these facts from telegrams to the Fiji Shimpō and the Hochi Shimbun.

It will be remembered that the Chinese Government is said to have asked Russia to restore the mines in the Amur region. We do not know what the history of these mines may be. Probably it is as vague, and probably care has been taken to keep it as vague, as was the story of Yong Am-pho and the Yalu timber concessions. At all events the basic fact seems to be that Russian subjects are working mines within Chinese territory without having received any concession from the lord of the territory. Reports differ as to Russia's attitude towards the demand for restoration. There is agreement as to her willingness to make restitution, but while one rumour attributes to her a condition that all the expenses hitherto disbursed by her people should be compensated, another alleges that she asks for only one half of those expenses,

China might not unjustly demand one half or the whole of all the ore hitherto extracted by illegal working, but she is not likely to take any such line.

It is further alleged that Russia has preferred certain demands and made certain concessions to China and has obtained certain concessions from the latter. First, she has agreed to ultimately withdraw all her troops from Manchuria except the railway guards; but we fail to see how that can be called a concession since she is already pledged by the Portsmouth Treaty to do so. Secondly, she promises to hand over to China the telegraphs in the Kirin and Amur districts so soon as the latter have been evacuated. Thirdly, she engages that the timber-felling operations in these regions shall be undertaken conjointly by her own subjects and the Chinese, in the same manner as the timber-felling in southern Manchuria is to be conducted by Japanese and Chinese. Fourthly, she obtains timber-felling privileges on the right bank of the Yalu, where also the coöperative system is to be pursued. (It may be observed, en passant, that Japan's Treaty with China contains a clause providing for the formation of a joint-stock company to exploit these forests, conditionally, however, on the area of the concession being subsequently determined. If Russia is now obtaining a similar promise from the Chinese, there is a strong probability that one of the concessions will prove futile in the face of the other.) Fifthly, Russia asks for special mining and railway privileges in northern Manchuria, Mongolia and Turkestan. (If this be granted the fat will be again in the fire with a vengeance. And if it be granted we must assume that the other Powers will have much to say). Sixthly, Russia asks that her secret treaty with the former Governor of Mukden shall be endorsed by Peking. (Nothing is known as to the contents of this treaty).

Hongkong papers report that owing to the Chief Justice sending eight Chinese merchants to prison for perjury the lawyers find it very hard to get witnesses to attend the Supreme Court.

At a recent meeting of the Hongkong Sanitary Board the statement was made that 50,000 Chinese had left the Colony in consequence of the operation of the Public Health and Buildings' Ordinance. A census will probably be taken to see if there has been such an exodus from the Colony.

Work on the Canton-Kowloon (British) railway is proceeding rapidly and 15,000 coolies, it is estimated, will shortly be employed on the work.

It appears that the Chinese Government recently proposed to appoint a Chinese as co-director of postal affairs with Sir Robert Hart and the latter notified the Government that if this was done he would hand over the postal affairs altogether.

The writer of Notes on Native Affairs in the North China Daily News gives an account of a serious military reverse sustained in Fengtien. He says:—

Dispatches received from Mukden by the local mandarins report that, news having been received by the Tartar-General Cho Eih-sen, of the existence of a strong body of mounted bandits at a hamlet some thirty miles west of Mukden, His Excellency at once sent a squadron of mounted military police to disperse the Hunghuize. This was a week or so ago. Arrived at the hamlet indicated, it was discovered that the bandits had made preparations for a semi-permanent stay there, going so far as to construct a battery of three quickfiring on an elevated spot east of the hamlet and guarding the defile which led to the approaches of the place, thereby strengthening exceedingly already strong natural fastnesses. Not only did the band do this, but it was also found that the Hunghuize chief had been collecting the government-taxes from the inhabitants round about. It spite of the strength of the place, the Major commanding the mounted police rashly attempted to attack the bandits, with the result that he was utterly defeated, losing many men, horses, and ammunition. On hearing of the defeat, the Tartar-General ordered two regiments of foreign-modelled Chihli troops to reinforce the Manchurian battalion on its way to the hamlet, but before the Chihli troops arrived at the place, the advance guard of the Manchurian battalion was driven back on the main body with some loss. In consequence of this the bandits are being almost hourly reinforced by other bands, and encouraged by their victories over the Government troops, they have been raiding villages far and near west of Mukden, in consequence of which a great stream of refugees from the raided villages is finding its way into Mukden to the East and Chinchou to the South. In the meanwhile the commanders of the two Chihli regiments, in view of the superior numbers of the mounted bandits and the strength of their position, have decided to hold a hamlet some seven miles to the East of the bandits and there await reinforcements in the shape of three brigades of foreign-modelled Chihli troops who have been ordered by the Tartar General from garrison quarters in Chinchou to crush the Hunghuize who made no pretence of their intention to start a rebellion should they succeed in defeating the foreign-modelled troops in the coming battle for which they are making strenuous preparations.

The Nanfengpao of Shanghai states that the Board of Revenue, acting on the recommendation of the five Travelling Commissioners, had decided to engage Prof. J. W. Jenks as financial expert at a salary of one thousand taels a month, with a five years' agreement, but the State Council, fearing lest after Prof. Jenks' engagement, all the foreign Ministers would want to have a financial adviser of their own nationality engaged and make things difficult for China, decided to postpone taking the step for the present.

Their Excellencies Shên Chia-pên and Wu Ting-fang, Senior and Junior Vice-Presidents respectively of the Board of Punishments, who are engaged on the stupendous task of revising the criminal laws of China to suit modern conditions, have conjointly memorialised the Throne on the importance of sending certain of the junior members of their Board to Japan to study on the spot the application of the laws in that country. The memorial, it is understood, has received the Imperial sanction and the following first and second class secretaries of the Board of Punishments have been chosen for the purpose namely, Jao Lin-ch'ang, Tung-K'ang, and Mai Chih-yen. These gentlemen were expected to leave Peking for Japan on or about the 28th April.

According to a telegram received by the Waiwupu, the amount of Chinese property destroyed in California is estimated at from four to five million dollars gold.

It is proposed to establish an arsenal in the Imperial Hunting Park at Peking, and an expert from Messrs Krupp is to be appointed to the management.

The Central Government in Peking has sent instructions to all the provincial authorities to collect reliable statistics of the value of all churches and buildings belonging to all Roman Catholic and Protestant missions in the Empire. Also the approximate values of all furniture and private possessions owned by missionaries of the various religious sects. These data will be printed and published for the information of all officials, so that whenever a riot should occur accompanied by the destruction of buildings and furniture, a value of those destroyed can easily be estimated and made the basis of indemnity.

THE MINISTER OF EDUCATION.

In a recent speech delivered to the Local Governors now assembled in the capital, Mr. Makino, Minister of State for Education, after dwelling on the hopeful future that lay before Japan if the people had sufficient resolution to bear their increased burdens, and if the spread of education were proportionate to the occasion, went on to say:—

"What is specially desirable in connexion with post-bellum education is that greater importance than ever should be attached to moral training. Nothing is needed so much as to invigorate the spirit of the rising generation, and to create a people eminently sincere and mentally strong. If England, America and Germany have attained extraordinary development and have secured the leading place in the world, I believe it is due to their active exercise of sincerity and moral energy. It is recognised by all nations that in proportion to the growth of material civilization, luxurious habits are developed and men lapse into a state of indolence. Therefore no efforts are spared to correct those failings and the example should not be lost on us. The student class have of late shown a disposition for extravagance. They spend much more than is needed for their education. Moreover, they are carried away by empty theories, and devoting their attention to philosophical disquisitions, learn to take a desponding view of human existence. The people at large, too, instead of behaving seriously, pay attention to externals and, living from hand to mouth, regard the responsibility of the moment only. It must be the aim of educationists to mend this state of affairs. There is a saying that war raises a country and peace prostrates it, meaning that all firm conceptions and enterprises are begotten of war and that in time of peace evil habits are generated. It is a wise dictum. Germany's strength came of war, and subsequently she attained her present greatness by inculcating in every branch of society a competitive growth of military spirit and moral energy. She furnishes a notable example. In our recent war the people's spirit manifested itself in various fine acts. It is essential that this should not be a merely temporary phenomenon, but that it should be encouraged more and more with a view to improving social customs and improving the people's quality. If you, gentlemen, see anything that would serve as sound educational material, calculated to serve as a model, I trust that you will communicate it to the Department. * * * There are some enterprises connected with education that will serve as mementoes of the war. Notable among them is afforestation, which has resulted in the planting of 37 millions of trees in 45,000 acres of land. This industry is to be encouraged for obvious economical reasons. * * * There is much need, too, of procuring good teachers. With that object the normal schools must be improved on the one hand, while on the other, salaries should be increased so far as financial considerations will allow, and houses or other aid should be granted. * * * In female education the object must be to make good wives and wise mothers. There are those who imagine that the highest purpose is to make women as learned as men and to procure for them an independent place in society. The result may be to involve them in unlooked-for misfortune. Even though educationists do not err to such an extent, there is a habit on the part of the public and the press to extol any women of learning or enterprise to such an extent that girls are betrayed into forgetting their proper sphere and devoting themselves to erudition only. Educationists have to struggle with all their energy against this abuse."

On May 1st, the conductors and other employees of the Osaka-Kobe Railway struck for a bonus and reasonable treatment at the hands of their employers. Traffic on the electric railway is still impeded.

KOREA.

The former Prime Minister of Korea—whose opposition to the conclusion of the last convention furnished so much material to Japan's enemies and prompts them still to declare that the convention was a product of force—has been in confinement since February. He placed himself within the purview of the law by attempting, or encouraging an attempt, to kill Li Keun-thaik, the Minister of War, who advocated the convention. Li received several wounds and for a time his life was in danger, but he ultimately recovered and is now discharging his official duties. Meanwhile the ex-premier, Chin Sang-heum, was held in custody. The latest news is that he has been released on bail in consequence of ill health.

If the foreign partisans of the anti-Japanese party are really so bitterly opposed to every exhibition of force in political affairs, they might have been expected to denounce the attempted murder of Li Keun-thaik. But they seem to regard that incident with entire complacency.

It is stated that new buildings are to be erected for the residency-general in Seoul. The present buildings are exceedingly inconvenient and the Resident-General's house is at a long distance from the offices. The projected edifice can not be a very solid affair, since it is to be completed by the close of this year, and it will not be very sumptuous since the total expense is estimated at from 30,000 to 40,000 yen. The site chosen is Hwa-sang-tai, where exist the remains of a castle erected in the days of the Hideyoshi invasion. We shall no doubt hear a great deal about the ominous significance of selecting such a site.

Prince Wi Hwa, with a suite of 8 persons, arrived in Tokyo on the 26th instant to attend the Review. He was received at Shimabashi by a number of Japanese officials, and he and his suite drove at once in carriages provided by the Imperial Household Department to the official residence of the President of the House of Peers which has been prepared for their accommodation.

In the Official Gazette of the 27th instant Imperial Ordinance No. 91 authorizes the organization of model industrial stations (Kangyo Bohan-jo) in Korea. The Ordinance does not state the exact number of these stations but from the number of experts employed we judge that there will be several stations. The personnel is one chief, 6 engineers, 8 assistant-engineers and 10 secretaries. We gather that the object is to promote industries of all kinds. Analyses will be made, experiments conducted and seed distributed. This is part of Marquis Ito's fundamental purpose, namely, the improvement of the condition of the Korean people. Good police, trustworthy local tribunals for the administration of justice, and now machinery for improving and promoting industry—such institutions can not fail to be productive of good.

The problem of how to deal with the Korean refugees seems to be causing some excitement in political circles in Seoul at present. Are these men to be kept in perpetual banishment or has the time come to rescind the ban and allow them to return to their country? The majority of them are in Japan, and the asylum they receive here has probably never been clearly appreciated by the Korean Court and Government. There is said to be an influential party in Seoul now who favour the announcement of amnesty for all the refugees en bloc, and they recently induced the Cabinet to decide in that sense. But when the decision was submitted for the Emperor's approval, his Majesty is said to have shown much indignation; and to have declared that while he might consent to pardon fourteen or fifteen of the exiles, it was a monstrous thing to talk of pardoning them all. However, the advocates of a liberal course are reported to be undismayed. They will continue to urge their view. Presumably they have Japanese endorsement, in a measure at all events, though there is just as much indignation in this country against any one connected with the murder of the Queen as there is in Korea, and such of the refugees as are charged on that account can not have many Japanese advocates. But that is an objection of narrow application. The great majority of the exiles are simply political suspects.

The number of Japanese subjects resident in Korea is steadily increasing. According to statistics compiled at the close of last year and published by the Tokyo press, the following are the figures:—

Seoul .....	11,491
Chemulpho.....	14,013
Taiku .....	1,771
Pyeongyang .....	5,662
Kusan .....	2,683
Mokpo .....	1,780
Fusan .....	17,785
Wonsan .....	3,257
Sin-Wiju .....	1,137
Masampo .....	1,626
Chinanpho .....	2,992

61,122

The question of self-government has naturally arisen in connexion with these eleven communities, and has received much attention in Japan. Finally it has been decided that local autonomy, in accordance with the system pursued in Japan, shall be granted to any community of Japanese subjects in Korea consisting of a thousand units or over. Old residents of Yokohama will remember how stoutly the foreign community fought at one time to obtain local autonomy in the shape of municipal control.

The Kan-to of the Yalu and the Tumen, an island which, according to some Japanese authorities is as large as Kyushu, is attracting more and more attention. We mentioned in a previous issue that Chinese and Korean commissioners were to be nominated for the purpose of fixing the boundaries of the two empires. But it appears not improbable that Russia may seek to exercise a voice in the matter. For there are said to be as many as 50,000 Russian and Chinese settlers against 30,000 Koreans. Included among the Koreans there are 6,000 of the Il Ching-hoi, who appears to have gone there during the past year. These men are likely to be heard from in any settlement of the island's affairs. If the place be so large as above stated, and if, as rumour says, it has a fine climate and rich soil, a population of only 80,000 is almost farcically small. But it is not impossible that the divided jurisdiction hitherto existing may have caused a feeling of doubt as to the security of life and property, and people have thus been deterred from settling there.

It is officially announced that the State purchase of the Seoul-Fusan Railway will be effected on the 1st of July. This transaction will represent, it is believed, the only action which the Government will take during the present year under the provisions of the State-Purchase Law.

Tokyo papers say that Mr. Tsuruhara, Director-General of the Residency General in Korea, has tendered his resignation. The Jiji, however, publishes a Seoul telegram contradicting the foregoing report.

THE TIBETAN TREATY.

Telegrams received in Tokyo say that the Tibetan Treaty between England and China was duly signed in Peking by Sir Ernest Satow and Mr. Tang Shiao-i. But accounts differ as to the date of signature, some putting it on the 26th, others on the 25th. The telegrams add that China's suzerainty in Tibet having now been internationally recognised, she will at once take steps to bring that country under the same administrative system as the rest of her Empire. If that be so, we shall probably see Tibet transformed into the "Western Province" and placed under the control of a Viceroy.

Later.

The latest account (Jiji Shimpō) corrects the previously reported date of the signature of this Treaty and gives it as the 27th. It appears, too, that the document bears evidence of China's present spirit. The provision relating to railways, mines and telegraphs reads that these shall be undertaken by the Chinese themselves, but that they may also be carried out jointly by the British and the Chinese. Evidently the practical value of such a provision, so far as British subjects are concerned, depends entirely on the spirit in which the Treaty is operated. Concerning any questions that may hereafter arise between Great Britain and Tibet, they are to be discussed, not with the Dalai Lama, but with the Chinese Representative in Lhasa. There are other provisions relating to British imports and so forth, but we find nothing in support of the allegation that the Treaty explicitly recognises China's sovereignty in Tibet. The Jiji's correspondent says that the minutes of the proceedings contain a reference to this matter but that it is not to be published openly. The Nichi Nichi Shimbun's correspondent, however, does not endorse this account. He says that instead of the original project, namely, that England should recognise Chinese sovereignty in Tibet, she has agreed to regard the place as a part of Chinese territory. On the other hand, China guarantees to England preferential privileges in Tibet. These versions are radically contradictory, and we must await further particulars.

In this context a curious telegram comes to the Jiji Shimpō from Peking. It is to the effect that according to information transmitted from the Chinese Consul at Calcutta, the Viceroy of India has received definite proof that the Dalai Lama is intriguing with Russia, and it has been decided that if he be allowed to return to Lhasa Great Britain will adopt such a policy as she deems suitable to the circumstances. The Consul therefore recommends that the Dalai Lama be placed under restraint by the Chinese Government. Tibet's case becomes a more and more rigid illustration of the old proverb omne ignotum pro magnifico. So long as the country was hermetically sealed to foreigners, all kinds of wonderful rumours were circulated and credited, and the Dalai Lama was invested with a holy mystery. But now this sacred region has been trampled under the foot of the invader, has become the object of vulgar treaties and indemnities, and is menaced by the arrest of its great religious potentate.

The indemnity promised by China on account of Tibet is said to be 2,400,000 taels. It is to be paid in three installments and after the receipt of the last the British troops will be withdrawn.

THE PARK OF CAPTURED GUNS IN TOKYO.

The wonderful park of guns and small arms now arranged in the park outside the main entrance to the Palace in Tokyo, is unquestionably a spectacle altogether without precedent in the history of the world, nor is anything of equal magnitude and interest likely to be ever seen again. Of course a larger number of guns are brought into the field by modern armies in great campaigns, but they are not parked together, and even though they were they would not possess the interest attaching to weapons which have been captured in battle and are exhibited as trophies of victory. Roughly speaking, it may be said that as many weapons are massed in this space between the inner and the outer moats as the wide area can accommodate without such crowding as would impede vision. The guns and waggons are ranged along the margins of every section of the enclosure, and in many instances the spaces within these formidable borders are filled with thousands of piled small arms, stacks of ammunition and phalanxes of swords and lances. The best way to convey an impression of the scene is to give a list of the guns and other war-material:—

FIELD ARTILLERY.

8.7-cent. heavy field-pieces .....	57	} 281 in all.
7.5-cent. field-pieces .....	75
3-inch quick-firing field-pieces .....	149

These weapons were captured in the fighting from the Yalu to Mukden, and 72 of the 3-inch quick-firers were formed by the Japanese into a "captured field-guns corps" (senri yaho-tai) which proved very useful.

Swords .....	1,150
Lances .....	85
Rifles .....	70,000

GARRISON ARTILLERY.

24-cent. cannon .....	1	} 8
23-cent. ..	7

This 24-cent. gun was originally on the right face of the Laolichui fort at Port Arthur. The 23-cent. piece was mounted on the sea-front of the same fortress.

GARRISON ARTILLERY (CONTINUED).

15-cent. cannon .....	11	} 30
15-cent. howitzers .....	19

These cannon are from the forts on the land front of Port Arthur. The howitzers were taken partly at Nanshan and partly at Port Arthur. The Nanshan weapons (4) were used by the Japanese and in subsequent fights and did excellent service:

GARRISON ARTILLERY (CONTINUED).

12-cent. pieces .....	3	} 140
10.7-cent. pieces .....	8
10.5-cent. pieces .....	4
7.5-cent. pieces .....	24
6 cent. pieces .....	4
57-mill. pieces .....	17
48-mill. pieces .....	77
37-mill. pieces .....	2
25-mill. pieces .....	1
Machine-guns 37-mill. ....	11

Most of the guns in this list are from the land-front of Port Arthur. The four 10.5 cent. pieces were captured at Nanshan, and were used by the Japanese at Liaoyang and in subsequent fights, where they rendered excellent service.

Maxim machine-guns .....	41	} 1,538
WAGGONS.
Various gun-ammunition waggons..	884
" small-arm-ammunition ..	654	} 624
Various kinds of waggons & carts...

AMMUNITION.

15-cent. gun shells .....	10,112	} 11,612
12-cent. ..	1,500

This ammunition was brought from Port Arthur.

One balloon, captured en route for Port

Arthur. Summing up these lists, the totals are:—

Pieces of artillery .....	511
Rifles .....	70,000
Swords and spears .....	1,235
Waggons .....	2,162
Cartridges (gun) .....	11,612

In connexion with the various battles during the Russo-Japanese war lists were published showing approximately what quantity of spoils fell into the hands of the Japanese troops. Accurate statistics have now appeared and the figures are as follow:

Swords .....	6,292	} 110,548
Lances .....	163
Rifles .....	110,548	} 24,713,766
Rifle ammunition, rounds .....	24,713,766
Field pieces .....	369	} 452
Garrison Artillery
23-cent. ....	50	} 94
15-cent. ....	94
12-cent., etc. ....	308
Machine-guns .....	79	} 4,800
Waggons and Carts .....	4,800
Heavy-gun ammunition, rounds .....	17,987	} 242,618
Light-gun .....	242,618
Balloons .....	2	} 4
Type-writers .....	4
Bugles .....	432	} 71
Drums .....	71
Pistols .....	398	} 7,119,666
Fuses of sorts .....	7,119,666
Telephones .....	51	} 3
Portable Telephones .....	3

In addition to the above there are great quantities of entrenching tools, pouches, signal rockets, boilers, wire (copper and iron)—in short, some 800 varieties of articles of which we have not space to give a detailed list.

VISCOUNT HAYASHI.

Interviewed at Nagasaki, where he arrived on the evening of the 1st instant, Viscount Hayashi is reported to have said that when news of the famine in the north-east of Japan reached England, the British Government at once asked him to inquire whether the Japanese would receive foreign subscriptions. The answer was in the negative, and consequently nothing could be done at the moment. Subsequently, when Mr. Kato became Minister of State for Foreign Affairs, the above decision was modified. The result was that at a farewell entertainment given to Viscountess Hayashi, fifty thousand yen was put up by the guests. (There must be some error in this report for Viscountess Hayashi returned to Japan many months before the famine. Probably the reporters have confounded the present famine with the Awomori famine of some years ago).

Asked whether the present Liberal Government in England does not devote itself almost exclusively to domestic affairs and whether its want of the imperial instinct might not betray it into hostility to the Anglo-Japanese alliance, the Viscount is represented as having said that in England public opinion is paramount, and that the great mass of public opinion had undoubtedly declared in favour of the alliance. There might be a section of the people who disliked the alliance owing to an erroneous supposition that its main object was to secure the defence of India. But these were in a hopeless minority. The present Minister of Foreign Affairs in England had himself declared emphatically in favour of the alliance before he came into power. The fact was that British policy had undergone a change. It was no longer considered that "splendid isolation" should be the motto of a great State. England had entered the epoch of alliances, and her first step in the new direction had been to join hands with Japan and subsequently to extend the scope of the union. He could not convey in words any idea of the warmth of good-will shown towards him by the English people. The days were not long enough or numerous enough for him to accept all the hospitalities offered to him. It was the same when the Japanese officers and men arrived to take delivery of the new battle-ships. No one could mistake the temper of the English people towards the Japanese, nor was there any reason to doubt the continuance of the alliance. On the other hand, Japan herself, in point of industrial and educational development as well as in a hundred other matter, was far inferior to the nations whose respect she had won in the recent war, and it would be for her people to labour earnestly that this interval might be bridged.

THE PORT ARTHUR MONUMENT.

We have already spoken of the monument to be erected on the hill Pehyushan at Port Arthur, in memory of the brave men, Japanese and Russian, who died in the great siege for the sake of their country. Originally General Nogi and Admiral Togo had the intention of building the monument at their own charges, in which case it would have been correspondingly small, for neither of these distinguished officers is rich in the most modest sense of the word. But on their intention becoming known, the necessity of making the monument really representative and worthy of its motive received recognition, and the projectors determined to invite subscriptions from the public at large. Circulars in that sense have reached us. It is more than probable that some of our Occidental readers would like to associate themselves with such an undertaking. If so, and if they will hand their subscriptions into the office of this journal, we shall be glad to acknowledge and transmit them. They can also send them direct to Colonel Hoshino, of the Imperial Artillery, or Chief Paymaster Ono, at the Department of War or of the Navy. The prospectus contains nine names of military and naval officers who have agreed to receive subscriptions, but we presume that the above two will serve the purpose of our readers.

MISERERE.

"For nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom:
And there shall be famines, and pestilences, and earthquakes in divers places.

"And because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold."

If Thou should'st come, Lord Christ, and we should see

Thy stars take angel form and come to earth:

Intent on seeming joys of present worth,
Should we rejoice so soon to welcome Thee?
Should we not upward gaze fearfully,
To meet the open splendour of the skies,
Seeing God's holy wrath shine through Thine eyes,
Seek to conceal ourselves and sin from Thee?

We are not ready, Lord: and though we say

"Thy kingdom come," we know not what we pray.

Ah! shame to think if Thou should'st come again,

That we, in lowly guise beholding Thee,
Would lift no helping hand to ease Thy pain
And silent view Thy second Calvary.

M. K.

THE ORIENTAL SOCIETY.

The Oriental Society held its seventeenth annual general meeting in the Nobles Club on the 27th April at 5 p.m. Marquis Kuroda was in the chair, and the guests of the evening were their Excellencies the British Ambassador, the Chinese Minister and Count Okuma.

MARQUIS KURODA said that they deemed it a great honour to have at their meeting Sir Claude MacDonald and Mr. Yang. The object of the society was to promote and preserve the peace of the East, and the British Ambassador represented a Sovereign who spared no effort to promote and preserve the peace of the world. Sir Claude had been many years in Japan, and it was largely to his exertions that they owed the conclusion of the Anglo-Japanese alliance in the first place and its extension subsequently. The Chinese Minister also had been long in Japan and had thoroughly familiarized himself with her conditions. His Excellency had done much to cement the friendship of the two neighbouring empires, and thus to secure peace for the East, and he (the Marquis) hoped that Mr. Yang would continue his useful work.

Replying to the toast of the Diplomatic Representatives present (the British Ambassador and Chinese Minister) Sir Claude, after requesting permission from the Chinese Minister, said,

"Marquis KURODA,—Your Excellencies and Gentlemen, I rise to thank you for the very warm and cordial manner in which you have received the kind words addressed to my friend the Chinese Minister and myself. After this brief but sincere expression of thanks I would in the ordinary course have resumed my seat, but your President has expressed a strong desire that I should make a speech. Now gentlemen, the business of a diplomatic representative is to listen, to note, but to speak as little as possible, especially in public. I am consequently unaccustomed to public speaking and must therefore crave your indulgence for my shortcomings. It has been said that "speech has been given to man to conceal his thoughts." This may be so but at any rate on this occasion I will depart from the rule and say what I think.

It is with considerable diffidence that I address so distinguished an assemblage of scholars and orientalists, but I am encouraged to do so by the thought that I stand here as Representative of the King of England who has 300 million subjects in Asia alone, of whom 200 millions are Hindus, 12 millions Buddhists and 94 millions belong to a fine fighting religion, that of Mohammed. It will, I think, interest my friend the Chinese Minister to know that at least a million and a quarter of Chinamen are British subjects, and that they are amongst the most exemplary and law-abiding of those in the Empire.

An English author and poet has said—"East is East and West is West and never the twain shall meet." Well, Gentlemen, I am one of those who venture to differ with this undoubtedly high authority (applause), I venture to think that East and West will meet in amity and peaceful communion, but it will require on both sides patience, sympathy and knowledge, justice one to another, and mutual appreciation of the good qualities which each possesses. And now, Gentlemen, in conclusion I have one word to say and I intend to carry out the promise I made at the commencement of this short speech to the letter and say what is in my mind.

It is known doubtless to few of you, that in the early part of my career I had the supreme advantage of serving in Egypt directly under my revered chief Sir Evelyn Baring, now Lord Cromer, whose administration of that country has been one of the most brilliant achievements of this or any other century. In a speech made by him, I think at the Mansion House, he said that the foundation stone of his administration had been justice, justice, justice. Now gentlemen Japan has taken under the guidance and protection a small and neighbouring nation. This charge in the eyes of the world is a sacred one, so that I hope with all my heart, and I believe that it will be so, that in her dealings with the people of this nation, Japan's guiding star and principle will be justice, justice and again justice."

The Chinese Minister expressed much satisfaction at the presence of so distinguished a personage as the British Ambassador at the meeting of a Society which had for its prime objects the spread of civilization and the maintenance of peace. He believed that Sir Claude MacDonald's efforts would be productive of much good in the future. Sir Claude was a leading advocate of honourable peace, and when he represented his country in Peking he had always followed that policy and had strictly obeyed the dictates of justice. He begged to propose Sir Claude's health coupled with a hope that His Excellency might long continue his valuable labours in the cause of peace and progress.

Count OKUMA said that he deemed it a great honour to be invited to meet the Ambassador representing a Sovereign who revered justice as the King of England does, and also to meet the Chinese Minister and the other gentlemen present. He himself, not being in a diplomatic position might speak without diplomatic reserve, yet he would ask them to let him say a word in the attitude of a diplomat. The expression "the peace of friendly countries" had a political sound. He did not intend, however, to go into political questions. He would merely observe that the necessity for uttering the word "peace" had ceased to exist, for there was not the least doubt that the Anglo-Japanese alliance would be able to preserve peace. On the other hand, when they came to the problem of the full development of civilization, there was much that called for consideration. In this respect great opportunity offered for the Oriental Association. During the half century that had elapsed since the opening of Japan, her attitude towards foreign countries might be divided into four periods. The first had been the era of astonishment at Western civilization; the second, the era of investigation; the third the era of use; and the fourth, or present, was the era studying how to harmonize the two civilizations. It followed that the prime business of the Oriental Society was to labour scientifically. They had to study the history of the Orient, for it was from the Orient that the world's civilization originated. The study had to be geographical, racial, linguistic and ethnical. Such study was easier for the Japanese than for foreigners, yet that Japanese alone should carry it on would not suffice: it must be taken up by foreigners also. To make the world's civilization perfect, the civilizations of the Occident and of the Orient must be harmonized, and the time had now come for that task. The equality of all races under the sun was the desideratum. Those who affirmed that the two civilizations could not be harmonized erred in their facts. This error it was that had given rise to the yellow-peril spectre, and the error itself was the outcome of ignorance of history. For since the most ancient times the Chinese nation had never been aggressive. If there was any instance of their assuming an aggressive attitude the explanation was that they were driven to it by foreign oppression. History taught us this, and therefore history must be studied. The British Ambassador had spoken of "justice." It was a word that ought to be revered. When a nation which loved peace allied itself with a nation, which, like, the Japanese, loved peace and justice the preservation of peace became a certainty.

GOLF.

A meeting was held at No. 78 on Wednesday of members of the Nippon Race Club interested in golf, to decide upon the question of laying out a golf course on the ground belonging to the Club in the centre of the race track. Mr. E. Eddison presided. It was decided to proceed with the project and the following gentlemen were elected to make the necessary arrangements and to lay out a course of 9 holes: Messrs. F. R. Daniel, W. H. Ferrier, W. Y. Showler, J. Williamson Jones and E. Eddison. Some time—at least a year—must elapse before the course will be fit to be played on.

THE SAN FRANCISCO DISASTER.

(RECEIVED AT THE FOREIGN OFFICE.)

In reply to an inquiry addressed by the Japanese Government to the Authorities in Washington, the latter have replied that no occasion exists for sending a Japanese hospital ship to San Francisco. The project has therefore been abandoned.

[From the Japanese Consul in San Francisco; received 28th April, 4.58 p.m.]

At the time of the occurrence of the calamity the greater part of the Japanese who escaped had to camp out, and were without supplies of provisions. Their sufferings were terribly aggravated by a severe gale.

On the 19th instant a succour society was organized and a number of leading men under the direction of the Consul proceeded to select secure places of refuge, and to provide shelters for the women and children as well as a hospital. Committees were also despatched to the most important districts and the utmost possible measure of assistance was given to the refugees. Great difficulty was experienced in collecting provisions, but by the exertions of one and all the worst distress was successfully relieved.

We received from the American authorities charitable assistance to meet the emergency, and were thus enabled gradually to provide means of succour.

Hereafter the railways granted free transport to the refugees and we were thus enabled to adopt the policy of getting the young men to find means of self-support as far as possible, so that by degrees the number of those remaining was reduced and owing to the exertions of the committee-men and the kindness of the American Authorities, efficient measures of relief could ultimately be taken. About 3,000 Japanese subjects are left here. In Oakland and on the other side there are 2,000, more or less. Investigation shows the number of sick to be about 250, and that of the wounded, 50. The majority of them have been taken into our hospital. Some 100 persons also have been taken into the branch-refuge on the other side. I consider that it is necessary to devise means of assisting the sick and the distressed in the future. Investigations in other quarters show that Honda Masahiko, a native of Kagoshima, was killed at Alameda, and 2 men are missing at Santa Roza.

April 29.

[From Mr. Consul Uyeno, San Francisco.]

Since my last report order has been gradually in process of restoration. Martial law has been abolished and people are allowed to move about freely. Part of the city railway has been opened. The banks have all ceased business, but facilities will soon be provided for making small payments. The Japanese Specie Bank intends to resume payments by a special system from the 30th instant. The various insurance offices are expected to pay the amount of the policies. It is said that the loss of property aggregates some 400 million dollars. The banks, companies and stores of the Japanese residents have virtually all been burned, and the amount of the losses are under investigation. Final statistics show that the total number of killed was 295 and the number of wounded 593. There has been no further news of any casualties among the Japanese since my last report. The Japanese who were in our relief society's temporary hospital were transferred on the 27th to the local Red Cross Hospital and the Charity Hospital. I have received the announcement that His Majesty is sending succour to the extent of 50,000 yen and my countrymen are profoundly grateful. We are reflecting how to employ the money to the best advantage so as to meet our sovereign's benevolent intentions.

April, 30.

In addition to the losses stated in my previous telegram a man and his wife, natives of Kagoshima, were killed in San Jose; other losses will be wired immediately on discovery, but probably no other Japanese subjects have been killed.

(Received at the Foreign Office on the 1st instant.)
[San Francisco, from Mr. Consul Uyeno.]

Since the calamity the public offices in California, the San Francisco Authorities and the people are all earnestly devising measures to rebuild the city. The banks have decided to re-open business soon in the city, and the principal stores and companies have established temporary places of business. Further, various capitalists are coming with the intention of putting money into the work of re-construction, so that the restoration of trade and industry will probably be effected with unlooked-for rapidity. Eight or nine-tenths of the Japanese goods exported to this place are for re-exportation, and thus, with the exception of the small quantity consumed here, I am persuaded that our export trade will not be greatly affected. The staples likely to suffer are the tea, figured mats and miscellaneous articles consumed here but there is not likely to be any diminution of the food-stuffs required by the Japanese residents.

[New York, from Mr. Consul Uchida.]

It is not expected that the San Francisco catastrophe will have any special influence on American trade. The supplies of Japanese woven silk-goods and tea which were burned in San Francisco will have to be replaced, and the demand for these staples will thus be virtually increased. There are no symptoms of any marked change in the commercial conditions as regards raw silk, figured matting and miscellaneous goods. There will be a greatly increased demand for Japanese cement in connexion with building operations at San Francisco.

The following account of the San Francisco earthquake and fire has been sent to the Japan Advertiser by Mr. Ritchie, formerly on the staff of that journal in Yokohama:—

San Francisco, April 29, 1906.

On the morning of April 18, shortly after 5.15, the population of San Francisco were startled by a severe shock of earthquake, one of the worst in the history of California. The first shock, severe in itself, was followed by two other shocks more severe than the first.

Buildings which were left in a tottering condition by the first shock, collapsed when the two succeeding shocks followed.

The scene in the city beggars description as the thousands of San Francisco's populace, aroused from their slumbers, rushed into the squares, vacant lots, and streets, huddling together in their terror.

Many seemed dazed and powerless as they listened to the heartrending cries of the unfortunates who were pinioned in the falling debris.

The full extent of the shocks extended from Fort Bragg in the North, to Salinas in the South, covering a distance of three hundred miles, but San Francisco, San Jose and Santa Rosa seem to have felt the brunt of this great upheaval.

In San Francisco the new City Hall, which was only completed about five years ago, and also the magnificent Hall of Justice, were both utterly destroyed by the first shock.

Many of the cheap lodging houses, which are scattered all over the city, were shattered and became complete wrecks, beneath the smouldering ruins of which hundreds of poor unfortunate wretches were helplessly pinioned, their cries for assistance only serving to intensify the already almost overwhelming horror of this unprecedented disaster.

The whole of the intervening space between

Mission and Market Streets were sunk by the earthquake to the extent of no less than five feet below the original surface of the ground.

This can readily be understood, when it is remembered that practically the whole city of San Francisco is built on land reclaimed from the sea, and is composed principally of sandy ground. Immediately after the first shock, fire broke out simultaneously in seventeen different locations, and owing to the fact that all the water mains were broken by the upheaval it was absolutely impossible for the members of the Fire Department to fight the flames with any hope of ultimate success.

The principal scene of the fires took place in the midst of the wholesale district of the town, particularly Fourth and Battery Streets and by ten o'clock in the morning the conflagration was sweeping up the entire length of Market street, devouring all in its fiery progress.

All the extensive store houses and offices of the large commercial houses went down before the destructive blaze, and by noon that day, two hours from the time of the fire's first attack upon Market street, the Palace Hotel, the huge building in which the offices of the San Francisco Call are located (commonly known as the Call Building) and all the South side of Market Street extending as far as Tenth Street was a seething mass of flames.

Seeing the danger of leaving the city in such a chaotic state, without adequate and firm control, the authorities justly declared that a state of martial law should be observed throughout the whole city of San Francisco.

General Funston, commanding the Department of the Pacific, immediately took control of the city, and ordered bodies of regular troops to patrol the town at all points, so that an efficient guard should be at hand to suppress all disturbances, and render assistance wherever necessary.

The government corps of engineers were quickly on the spot, and with dynamite blew up many buildings in the path of the flames, but even this extreme measure did not avail to check the progress of the insatiable fire.

The Merchants Exchange, Mills, Crocker, Emporium, Flood and Phelan buildings were all laid low before the night of this fatal Wednesday, and during the night, the fire spread from the business section of the town to Nob Hill, where the palaces of the merchant princes are located, and these were also swept down in the holocaust, which laid in ashes Hopkins Art gallery, the Russian Hill and North Beach districts.

Handicapped by lack of water, the military engineers aided by the Fire department endeavored to save the now apparently doomed city by blowing up whole blocks of buildings with dynamite, and so freely was the explosive used, that by Thursday noon the city's supply ran short, and a further stock was secured from Mare Island and Los Angeles on the following day.

Van Ness Avenue, Eighteenth street, South market street, and Octavia street including the Western addition were soon in ashes, until the total area of destruction extended over four square miles.

The entire business section of the city, all the wholesale and manufacturing districts, and all lumber yards were demolished.

The scenes during the progress of the fire were indescribable, thousands of panic-stricken people rushing through the streets in a frenzied manner, some bewailing the loss of relatives and friends and others their property.

The panic was simply awful, the criminally inclined taking advantage of the disorder to loot, and many were shot down without mercy by the military patrols.

The scene in Chinatown was horrible as the frantic Celestials fought and struggled with each other to escape from the falling and burning houses in the narrow streets, and many of the unfortunate Chinamen were killed in the fighting.

All the homeless, numbering two hundred thousand, made for the Golden Gate Park, where temporary shelters were erected.

During the first days of the disaster bread and meat were scarcely obtainable; in this connection all the food stores were promptly seized by the military authorities who distributed supplies of food from different strongly guarded centres of the city.

There was at first great danger apprehended from the numerous dead bodies of human beings and animals that encumbered the streets, or were buried under the ruins of the fallen buildings, but the fear of disease was fortunately averted by the burial of these corpses in the public squares by order of the military authorities, who for this purpose impressed all able bodied men into their service, and four foot trenches were dug to receive the bodies.

Communications having been restored, provisions poured into the city from all points east of California, thus bringing speedy relief to the starving and homeless in the unfortunate city.

The California Militia, and Cadets from the California University who were called out by the Governor aroused considerable indignation among the citizens by firing promiscuously and killing and wounding several worthy and innocent people; but the petition which was sent to the Governor asking him to recall the Militia and Cadets, and give the guarding of the city in charge of the Federal troops was denied.

To-day (Sunday April 29) the cars are running on the up town lines, and the lights will be turned on shortly.

Refugees are leaving the city by thousands and the railroads are granting free transportation to adjacent towns.

The new city of San Francisco promises to rise from the ashes of the old in renewed strength, and many plans of reconstruction have already been mooted and discussed among the more prominent citizens. A city on still grander lines than the old one is advocated, and as many steel buildings remain undamaged externally, it is thought that many new edifices will be constructed of that material.

Realizing that the Oriental trade of San Francisco has departed for practically many years to come, it is believed here that the sale of the Pacific Mail steamship line to the Toyo Kisen Kaisha is concluded.

NOTES ON CURRENT EVENTS.

The new German Ambassador seems to have had a great send-off when he left Peking on the evening of the 23rd instant. He took the train for Hankow—a journey of 36 hours—and it stated that this intention is to spend some time at Shanghai and Kiaochow, so that his arrival in Tokyo can not be expected before the close of May.

The first number of the new Russian newspaper has been published in Nagasaki. It is stated to be a small journal of four pages, illustrated. The policy of the publication is most distinctly announced; namely, to overthrow the present Government of Russia, to build up a different administrative system and to effect reforms of society. In short, the paper is frankly revolutionary. There is nothing in the Press Laws of Japan that would enable the authorities to interfere with this publication on the plea of its injurious character to the peace or good order of a foreign State, but there may be some doubt whether the peace and good order of Japan herself are not menaced by such journals. Public sympathy, however, will probably be on the side of the Nagasaki sheet, for undoubtedly the Russian bureaucracy is not very popular in the world.

The latest investigations show, according to Japanese journals, that the casualties caused by the recent earthquake in Formosa were as follow:—

Killed .....	1,249 persons*
Wounded .....	2,382 persons*
Houses wrecked .....	6,680
Houses partially wrecked.....	3,574
Houses injured .....	10,786
Cattle killed .....	664 head
Cattle injured.....	71 head

* The sexes are not distinguished.

It is evident that the loss of life in connexion with this earthquake was scarcely, if at all, less than that in Francisco, an interesting fact when we consider the immense difference as to density of population.

The Tokyo press is showing considerable interest in the new Russian journal published in Nagasaki and spoken of recently in these columns. It seems that the journal appears every second day. The first issue contained a very frank declaration of revolutionary principles, and the second is said to have an article—accompanied by a shocking illustration—representing the Tsar as a slayer of innocent people, and denouncing him in strong terms. That sounds bad, but how many newspapers outside Russia have published revolting cartoons having for motive the Tsar and his slaughter-ered subjects? It has been a favorite subject with a certain class of writers, and we should not be at all surprised to find that the Nagasaki journal's picture is merely a reproduction of something that appeared in Germany, America or England.

The Fiji Shimpō has made some interesting calculations with regard to taxes in Japan. The results are these:—

TAXES PAID TO THE CENTRAL GOVERNMENT.
	Total amounts.	Per caput.
	yen.	yen.
Direct Taxes .....	126,021,139	2.647
Indirect Taxes .....	179,944,783	3.780
Totals .....	305,965,442	6.427
LOCAL TAXES.
	Total amounts.	Per caput.
	yen.	yen.
Direct Prefectural Taxes .....	33,988,102	0.714
" City Taxes .....	9,362,558	0.197
" Urban and Rural Taxes .....	36,515,911	0.767
Totals .....	79,866,571	1.678
Indirect Prefectural Taxes .....	—	—
" City Taxes .....	52,838	0.001
" Urban and Rural Taxes .....	36,616	0.001
Total (indirect taxes) .....	89,454	0.001
Totals (local taxes direct and indirect) .....	79,956,025	1.680
Grand Totals .....	385,921,447	8.107

His Excellency Viscount Hayashi arrived at Shanghai on the evening of the 28th ultimo, and was present at a banquet given in his honour by the Japanese Consul-General, Mr. Nagasaki, on the 29th.

The unseasonable cold of the past few days is reported to have done much damage in Fukushima prefecture, especially to the spring silk-worms and the mulberries. The loss is estimated at five millions of yen. Scarcely a year passes without something of this kind in Japan. Every spring we hear reports of damage to the silk crop, but it must be confessed that on the present occasion the details are exceptionally explicit. One half of the silk-worms are said to have perished in Fukushima, and from 30 to 40 per cent. in Tochigi and Gumma. Ibaraki and Miyagi also suffered.

On the 29th April at 3.30 p.m. the Red Cross Society held a meeting at the Nobles club to read an Imperial Message of commendation as well as a message from the Empress. Subsequently, during the period of refreshment, Count Matsukata, President of the Society, made a statement showing that the number of members at the close of March was 1,142,668, being an increase of 38,674 since last November, and that the sum collected up to the close of 1905 had been 2,728,030 yen, or 282,000 yen more than the collections in 1904. Nevertheless the future of the Society's finances was not without cause for uneasiness. They ought to get 165,000 new members during the current year, and 148,000 next year. He therefore exhorted his hearers to make every effort for the purpose of enlisting new supporters.

On the 1st instant the ceremonial at Shokun-sha was limited to a religious service for the purpose of inviting the presence of the spirits of the dead. On the second the rites of worship commenced. The principal officers of the Army and Navy were the first to worship. They were followed by the families of the dead. Each worshipper had to present himself at the entrance office and to exhibit his invitation. So great was the crush to effect this that the railings were broken and it became necessary to temporarily suspend the ceremony. Yesterday (3rd instant) the Emperor repaired to the shrine and worshipped. After worshipping, the relatives of the dead were invited to repair to refreshment booths established by the Ladies Patriotic Society, where they were served by detachments of the ladies.

At the third and last entertainment to be given by the city of Tokyo to military officers on the 5th instant in the Hibiya Park, the number of officers invited is said to be 5,500, and if to these be added the civilian guests and the hosts, the total will exceed 7,000. It is notified that the Park will be completely closed except to bearers of invitations. The ceremony of welcome will take place in the Music Pavilion. Tokyo papers give various details of the triumphal arches and the refreshment buildings now nearly completed, but this is merely a question of dimensions. There are to be wrestlers and various other kinds of entertainments and the waitresses will number a thousand.

Japanese newspapers give the gross earnings of the electric trams of Tokyo on the 29th and 30th of May:—

	29th.	30th.
	yen.	yen.
Shigai Railway .....	1,100	9,200
Densha " .....	5,992	6,271
Denki " .....	2,609	2,997

MAY-DAY.

(WRITTEN FOR THE "JAPAN MAIL.")

"Pray, what's to-day?"

"Tis May-day."

"Ay! blossoms bright on turf and tree:
Song of bird and hum of bee!"

"But a fairer May to me!"

For I won her smile
As I came by the stile.
Tis May-day!"

"Pray, what's to-day?"

"Tis May-day."

"The sun shines red in a blazing sky,
The cattle under the maples lie."

"A May-day fresh and cool have I!"

For I won her smile
As I came by the stile.
Tis May-day!"

"Pray, what's to-day?"

"Tis May-day."

"Sodden lieth the earth and dead,
The roses of summer are fallen and fled."

"The chill of the winter how can I dread?"

For I won her smile
As I came by the stile.
Tis May-day!"

"Pray, what's to-day?"

"Tis May-day."

"The winds of March are whirling wild;
The drifts on the violet-banks are piled."

"Nay! green are the fields and the winds are mild!"

For I won her smile
As I came by the stile.
Tis May-day!"

Yokohama.

OONA MAGEE.

INDIAN SYMPATHY FOR THE FAMINE.

Further contributions by Indian sympathizers for the Famine of the North Eastern Districts have been received by the Relief Association through the Mitsui Bussan Kaisha as follows:—

	Rupees.
Mr. Shapurji B. Bharucha .....	2 000
Mr. R. S. N. Talai .....	101
Mr. Hiralal Rangopal .....	101
Messrs. Jivraj Ruttonsey & Co. ....	51

Total .....

NEWS FROM VLADIVOSTOCK.

Mr. Oba, Vladivostock correspondent of the Osaka Mainichi, reports that M. Maslenikoff, President of the Vladivostock branch of the Russo-Chinese Bank, has been punished with a fine of 300 roubles on a charge of having telegraphed to a news agency in Europe on April 24th that Lieut.-General Andreff, Commander of the fortress had ordered females and infants to leave the city owing to the dangerous situation. He was also ordered to leave the town at once.

The Habarovsk Municipal Assembly has presented a petition to Lieut. General Untelberger, Governor of the Maritime provinces, asking (1) to elect representatives for the provinces; (2) to abandon the Government's intention to amalgamate the Usuri Railway with the northern portion of the East China Railway; and (3) to establish railways on the left bank of the Amur. The Governor consented to the requests and is endeavoring to put the petition into practice.

The Russian authorities of the Department of Agriculture and Commerce intend to open a regular service between Vladivostock and Korea Japan, and China and also to the straits of Tartary. Probably the service will be started at the end of May.

Captain Itami, a staff officer of the Japanese Kwantung Government and an interpreter recently arrived in Harbin. The Japanese officer paid a visit to General Grodekoff, the commander of the Russian army. The commander however, did not receive him personally owing to a slight illness. Major-General Olanovsky, Chief of the staff, Lieut.-General Iwanov, the commander of the Amur Army, and other high Russian officers welcomed and entertained him.

According to information given by the Headquarters of the Russian Army, the Russians who were repatriated from Oct. 20th last to April 12th are: 6,859 officers and 617,456 rank and file sent by railway; and 1,391 officers, 141,996 rank and file despatched to Odessa by sea. It is said that some of the officers and men are still stationed in Usuri.

THE "TANGO MARU."

It was the intention of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha to invite their patrons to inspect the Company's new American liner Tango Maru on the 29th or 30th instant, but owing to the former day falling on Sunday, and the latter being the date set for the Grand Military Review, the Company considered it advisable to postpone this function. Invitations to inspect the vessel will probably be issued some time prior to her next departure for America. The Tango Maru is a new twin screw steamer built for the Nippon Yusen Kaisha's American service at the Mitsubishi yard, Nagasaki, and was launched in 1904. She was handed over to the Government prior to making her maiden trip, and served as an army transport up to the time of her recent release from that service. Particulars regarding the steamer are as follows:—

Gross Tonnage .....	7,463 tons.
Length .....	446.4 Feet.
Breadth .....	50.2 "
Depth .....	30.4 "
Class .....	Lloyd 100 A.I.
Passenger accommodation .....	1st. 60. Intermediate 24. 3rd. 324.
No. of Decks .....	2.
Cargo capacity .....	7,920 tons D'wt. w.t.
Coal .....	1,556 tons.
Speed .....	15.63 Knots.
I.H.P. .....	6,694.
Boilers .....	5 Single ended.
Engines .....	Triple expansion.
Electric Lights .....	All through.

The interior decorations of this steamer are features worthy of note.

S. Yamamoto, formerly an employee of Messrs. A. Oestmann and Co., who was arrested in March on a charge of having embezzled some thirty thousand yen belonging to the firm while in their employment, was committed for trial on May 2nd in the Yokohama District Court.

THE RAILWAYS.

SOME interesting questions have been raised with reference to the nationalization of the railways. Shareholders seem to have accepted the fact that the law has passed and must be put into operation, but they have something to say nevertheless. In the first place note is taken of the fluctuations that the shares underwent in connexion with this legislation. The following table gives the figures:—

FLUCTUATIONS OF SHARES.

	10/1/06	7/2/06	7/3/06	4/4/06
(Paid up.) Yen Yen Yen Yen
Nippon Tetsudo (50 yen)	96.30	103.20	105.00	105.00
Sanyo (50 " )	83.00	85.80	85.20	86.00
Kwansei (50 " )	46.80	49.00	49.00	46.00
Kyushu (50 " )	71.30	74.70	77.20	73.70
Tanko (50 " )	95.20	98.50	103.00	100.40
Sobu (50 " )	80.00	84.30	83.00	80.90
Kobu (45½ " )	85.00	100.00	105.30	104.00
Tobu (45 " )	26.10	27.20	31.10	26.00
Boso (50 " )	16.50	18.50	22.50	21.60
Narita (50 " )	38.50	39.50	38.50	33.80
Hokuyetsu (50 " )	31.00	33.80	35.20	35.80
Hokkaido (50 " )	29.70	34.30	36.00	31.60

It is observable that the quotations for shares reached their highest in March and that, with two exceptions, they fell appreciably in April. This depreciation is attributed to the action of the House of Peers in radically altering the purchase bill sent up from the Representatives, alterations which introduced an element of uncertainty as to time and reduced by 15 the number of lines to be bought. It may well be supposed that the stock of the railways thus unexpectedly cut out of the bill underwent marked vicissitudes. In the case of the Kōya, Ōmi, Bisei and Kanan roads, for example, large speculative purchases were made by outsiders when the bill first went into the hands of the Lower House and the shares ran up rapidly, only to fall suddenly and sharply when the Peers elided these lines from the list. The closing days of March witnessed a veritable debacle in the shares of these lines and for a time the market was demoralized. Apart from such incidents as these, however, the great question whether the Government's scheme will benefit or injure the shareholders of the best lines remains undecided. Roads like the Nippon, the Sanyo and the Kyushu, which are well built, fully equipped, soundly organized and in command of a large traffic, must be regarded as in a stage of development which will bring constantly increasing gains. From that point of view the principal shareholders would have preferred to retain an investment which was already paying well and could be trusted to pay better hereafter. Whether the views of these large owners of stock are shared by the majority of their fellow-shareholders appears problematical. But there was recently compiled in the office of the Japan Railway a document which deals with actual figures in an interesting manner. It sets out by stating that the company's stock consists of 800,000 fifty yen shares and 520,000 twenty-five yen, so that the paid-up capital is 53 million yen. In exchange for this the Treasury is to pay five-per cent. bonds representing 130,532,-

540. Thus for every yen of the company's stock the shareholders will receive nominally 2.46 yen, omitting fractions. In other words the results are these:—

	Yen.
Each 50-yen share becomes worth	123.14
Each 25-yen	61.57
Each 50-yen produces interest amounting to	6.157
Each 25-yen	3.078

If from these figures the income tax on State bonds (2 per cent.) be deducted, the 50 yen share is seen to produce 6.03 yen, and the 25 yen share 3.02 yen, which means 12.068 per cent. That seems a fine return. But here the document makes a point which would not have occurred to ordinary observers. The Treasury does not pay the individual shareholders: it hands over a lump sum, as already known to our readers, but the manner of converting it into State bonds has to be noted. The manner is this: the Treasury divides the whole sum by the market value of a bond, and if the quotient contains a fraction, that fraction is regarded as equal to a bond. Hence the Company receives bonds only. With these bonds—now representing 100 yen—the Company has to pay its shareholders, and as each share is worth 123 yen (omitting sen) in the account, it is plain that the payment to every member must include a fraction which has to be paid in cash. To obtain this cash some of the bonds must be sold, and whatever discount they are at will be a loss to the Company, reducing by so much the total sum to be divided among the shareholders and consequently reducing the 12 per cent. spoken of above. Moreover it is claimed that these forced sales—which will not be confined to one company—must produce depreciation of State bonds, so that the shareholders may find a marked decrease in the monetary value of the securities received by them.

Another point made is that the dividends hitherto declared were independent of the legal reserve, the special reserve and the reserve for paying off debentures. These reserves, though they did not go into the shareholders' pockets, were undoubtedly their property and ought to have been taken into account when assessing the value of the line. It is hard to recognise the justice of that complaint. The legal reserve and the special reserve are virtually maintenance funds. They call for annual appropriations just as do the running expenses. At any rate these reserves are not absorbed by the Government simultaneously with the purchase of the roads: they will be distributed among the shareholders. The reserve for amortization of debentures would not, it is true, call for any appropriations after the debentures were paid off and when that time came the dividends might increase correspondingly. But, after all, there is no practical course except to buy the lines at their present value. If future contingencies are to be calculated, the transaction is reduced to a mere speculation.

The Keizai Zasshi notes that there are two theories about the effect likely to be produced on the stock exchange by this transaction. Pessimists say that the almost total withdrawal of railway shares, which have always hitherto constituted a chief element of exchange operations, will desolate the market, while, on the other hand, there will be a superfluity of State bonds and these will necessarily depreciate. Optimists allege, on the contrary, that the Government will borrow cheap foreign capital on the security of the railways, and that the disappearance of railway shares from the market will be quickly compensated by the appearance of the stock of various new and profitable enterprises. The Keizai Zasshi endorses the latter forecast.

THE PORTSMOUTH CONFERENCE.

IT is impossible to endorse our correspondent "W.A.'s" estimate of the situation in the field at the time when the Portsmouth Conference met. So far from endorsing it, we are astonished that such an estimate should be gravely advanced. It is certainly true that Russia's navy had been "completely effaced" and that Saghalien had been "entirely captured," but with those two exceptions our correspondent's assertions seem to us very wide of the mark. Russia's armies were not "overwhelmingly beaten," nor were they "cooped up like cornered rats at Harbin." On the contrary, at no time since the beginning of the war were her forces so formidable in every way. They had suffered defeat after defeat. There is no denying that. But they had shown that they could "come up" again after defeats with a degree of dogged courage which aroused the astonishment of the world and its admiration. Their losses in killed, wounded and sick had been enormous, but they had nevertheless managed to mass a host of nearly three-quarters of a million men in positions of immense strength, to drive them from which would have been one of the most stupendous military tasks ever undertaken by any General. The fighting on the banks of the Shaho, the Hun and the Fan was nothing to what the fighting would have been on the Sungari, and altogether the advance against Harbin must have taxed Japan's strength to the utmost. She could have accomplished the feat. Of that there need not be any doubt. But the cost is shocking to contemplate. As for the Russians being "cooped up like cornered rats," the simile sounds strange when we remember that they were fighting over front of 150 miles and that their line of retreat was always open. We fail to detect that there was the slightest "cornering or "cooping up" in their situation. Their commander-in-chief repeatedly promised victory for Russia's arms in the next engagement, and however little faith his prediction may have inspired in the breasts of outsiders, we have no right to doubt that he and his soldiers felt assured about the issue. We do not know what our correspondent means by saying that "Vladivostok's early surrender was imminent." Vladivostok had not even been invested. To get within investing distance would have entailed a fiercer struggle than Nanshan, and the best military experts were agreed that to reduce the fortress might well have demanded efforts greater than those made at Port Arthur. Neither can we recall any evidence which supports "W. A.'s" statement that Russia's troops were mutinous. There were no visible signs of mutiny until after peace had been concluded, nor does it appear that even then the disaffection was very serious. So far as the public know, it had its origin in the Government's failure to provide for the speedy repatriation of the men. While the war continued there were no displays of mutiny. The troops appear to have been willing to fight to the death. Finally, our correspondent speaks of Russia's "practical bankruptcy" and of "a dreadful and almost universal revolution of her subjects at home." Surely these are exaggerations? We do not care to discuss which of the two belligerents had the greater residuum of financial strength, but it is possible to be certain that monetary exhaustion would not have crippled either of them. And with reference to "a dreadful and almost universal revolution" in Russia, there was indeed a moment when sensational writers almost persuaded the world to credit the reality of that picture, but it is not time, by the light of subsequent information, to agree that there never was anything like a real or universal revolution and that the Government in St. Petersburg remained always master of the situation.

We have treated this matter at some length because we recognise in "W. A." the representative of a considerable class of onlookers who commit the very injustice originally condemned in these columns. Incidentally we deny the admission attributed to us by "W. A.," namely, that we "do not find one publicist of note to take our view of the case;" but we do now affirm that among those who are accustomed to inveigh against the peace terms as inadequate and humiliating, we have not found one who ventures to allege that Russia could have been argued into accepting more drastic conditions. We concede the matter of Saghalien. It is our belief that possibly M. WITTE would have advised the TSAR to surrender the whole island rather than renew the conflict. But the indemnity? Will "W. A." say plainly whether he thinks that the Russian Government could have been induced to pay an indemnity? Will he also tell us how? When we get an explicit statement on these points, we shall probably be nearer agreement.

THE RAILWAY QUESTION.

WE have been asked by more than one correspondent whether it is not possible to state the exact arithmetical value of the complaint urged by the directors of the Nippon Railway, that, in paying off the shareholders with the bonds received from the Treasury, it will be necessary to sell a large number of these securities in order to discharge the fractions of 100 yen due to many of the shareholders. Certainly it is possible. Lists of all the shareholders, showing the number of shares held by each, are obtainable and by going through them carefully the necessary information could be collected. But we frankly admit that the task alarms us, for there are no less than 4,596 shareholders and the number of shares aggregates 800,000 fifty yen shares and 520,000 twenty-five yen. Evidently shares representing 123 yen and 61 yen respectively can not be paid exactly in 100 yen bonds unless the shares are in groups of 100 or some multiple of 100. Grouped in any other way the price of a group will contain a fraction of 100. Looking at the list of the Japan Railway Company's shareholders, we find only fifteen whose holdings satisfy the former condition and the aggregate number of shares standing against their names is 149,500. There remain, therefore, 4,581 shareholders every one of whom will have to receive a fractional payment in ready money. But although a tedious calculation would be necessary in order to acquire exact knowledge, it is very easy to form an approximate estimate. For since the fraction must always be less than 100 yen, the ready money payments to 4,581 shareholders can not possibly exceed 458,100 yen, and thus if we assume that the market price of the bonds is 90 yen, the loss incurred by the Company in purchasing these shares will be only 50,900 yen, and the number of bonds to be purchased will be 5,090. It really does appear extravagant that such a petty loss should be seriously spoken of in the context of a payment of 131½ millions, or that any sensible depreciation should be looked for as the consequence of putting 5,090 bonds on a market where there are already over a thousand millions. Hence we conclude that no importance whatever attaches to this complaint made by the Japan Railway Company's directors. As to the question whether large sales of bonds may not be made by the shareholders themselves and whether the market may not be correspondingly demoralized, it is impossible to predict anything. One point has to be noted, however, namely, that the issue of over three hundred million yen worth of bonds in connexion with the railway transaction will be accompanied by the withdrawal of nearly a corresponding amount of railway shares from the market, so that the volume of securities offering themselves for transactions on 'Change will not be seriously increased. Neither does it appear probable, to us at any rate, that the ex-holders of railway shares will unload any large block of bonds after the railways have passed into the State's hands. The main object of such unloading would be to obtain capital for other enterprises, and the banks are always willing to advance money on the security of bonds, which is a more economical transaction than forced sales of these securities at reduced prices.

THE CASUALTIES ON THE JAPANESE SIDE IN THE WAR.

GREAT confusion seems to exist still in the mind of the public as to the Japanese casualties during the war. A book published recently by an American surgeon whose figures ought to be accurate, inasmuch as he claims to have had access to official statistics, puts the number of those that died of wounds on the Japanese side at 57,000, and other errors not less cardinal have been perpetrated by other writers. One source of confusion, by which we too were misled, was the return of those whose spirits were worshipped at the Shokon shrine. It was supposed that these represented solely men killed in battle, but in truth they represented those also that died of wounds, deaths from sickness being alone excluded. An obvious miscalculation was thus caused, the fatal casualties being made to appear much larger than they really were.

Before proceeding to state the exact figures—or, at any rate, the proximately exact—it will be well to note a point about the Shokon celebrations. The first took place in May, 1905, and the spirits worshipped were those that fell in battle or died from wounds up to the end of January of that year. The figures were:—

Officers and men of the Navy .....	1,887
" " Army .....	28,999
Total .....	30,886
The second rites will be celebrated on the 4th and 5th of this month, on account of:—
Officers and men of the Navy .....	122
" " Army .....	29,616
Total .....	60,624

We learn incidentally from these tables that the Japanese fatal casualties in the great naval battle of the Sea of Japan were only 122. We learn also a strange fact, namely, that the battles of Heikautai and Mukden (those that perished in the former were not included in the Shokon ceremonies last May) together with the skirmishes after January, 1905, and the fighting in northern Korea and Saghalien, cost the Japanese Army more lives than did the whole previous campaign from the Yalu to Mukden, with its six big fights and with the siege of Port Arthur. Very likely the second total (29,616) includes some men who, though wounded in battles previous to January, 1905, did not appear on the death-roll until a later date. But any correction on that account must be comparatively small. The fair inference seems to be that the Russians fought desperately at Heikautai and Mukden, and from the losses suffered by the victors in these battles, some idea may be gathered of what it would have cost to continue the campaign against Harbin and Vladivostok—to continue it for the sake of a pecuniary payment. Perhaps it should be observed that although the Shokon rites have not yet extended to deaths from sickness, a special ceremonial on that account will be held subsequently.

We now pass to the total figures so far as they have been ascertained, noting, however, that out of 5,000 originally reported as "missing," 2,000 are still unaccounted for and do not yet appear in the final returns. The numbers are as follow:—

Killed in battle .....	47,387
Died of wounds .....	11,500
Wounded and recovered .....	161,925

Total of killed and wounded .....	220,812
Died of sickness .....	27,158
Sick and recovered .....	209,065

Total of sick .....

Total of killed, wounded and sick .....	457,035
Total of total casualties .....	86,045

Of course these figures are not absolutely final, nor do they include cases of sickness among the troops that remained in Japan. But they may be taken as a very close approximation.

Some interesting per-centages were given in a recent lecture by Surgeon-General KOIKE. They establish a comparison between the China-Japan conflict of 1894-5 and the recent war:—

SICK AND WOUNDED TREATED IN HOSPITAL.

	Recovered completely.	Recovered but incapacitated for active service.	Died.
per cent.	per cent.	per cent.	per cent.
China-Japan war .....	50.94	34.82	14.24
Russo-Japanese War .....	54.81	37.54	7.65

WOUNDED TREATED IN HOSPITAL.

	Recovered completely.	Recovered but incapacitated for active service.	Died.
per cent.	per cent.	per cent.	per cent.
China-Japan War .....	62.23	30.28	7.49
Russo-Japanese War .....	71.58	21.59	6.83

The results are emphatically better in the case of the recent war than in that of the China-Japan struggle. Yet it is observable that the percentage of deaths from wounds shows an improvement of only 0.60. This is not held to imply a correspondingly small improvement in surgical methods. What it testifies is the well-known fact that the Russians fought with much greater obstinacy than the Chinese. The latter abandoned the field after brief resistance so that the wounded could be speedily succoured, but the former held their ground so doggedly that many hours and even days elapsed before the wounded could be carried in. At Port Arthur some Japanese wounded actually lay untended for nine days.

The medical staff in the field consisted of 4,517 military surgeons, 630 pharmacists, and 4,517 assistants (non-commissioned officers and men). Among the surgeons 18 were killed and 104 wounded, and the casualties among the assistants aggregated 340.

The ratio of sick and wounded and of those that died of wounds to those that died of sickness will be seen from the following tables:—

	Wounded	Sick	Died of wounds	Died of disease
China-Japan War, (1894-5) ...	1	6.93	1	12.09
North China Campaign, (1900) ...	1	4.37	1	1.97
Russo-Japanese War, (1904-5) ...	1	1.15	1	0.37

There is here a very interesting record of gradual progress, though the figures for the last war are scarcely comparable with those for previous wars, so great is the improvement. Surgeon-General KOIKE justly remarks, however, that to obtain a true estimate of sanitary progress the comparison must be extended to the total number of troops in the field. He has done this as follows:—

	Percentage of troops engaged.	Percentage of deaths from sickness.
China-Japan War .....	59.20	9.29
North-China Campaign .....	34.88	4.33
Russo-Japanese War ...	36.04	2.99

It is a fact, though scarcely credible, that the per-centage of sickness during the last war was less than the per-centage during an exceptionally favourable year of peace, namely 1902:—

Average monthly per-centage of sickness during the 21 months of the Russo-Japanese War .....	8.69
Average monthly per-centage of sickness during 1902 .....	10.21

Naturally the question on every one's lips is how these results were obtained. The principal measures seem to have been that the men were instructed by literature and by lectures as to the wisest precautions for preserving health; that they were periodically supplied with pills—one to be taken before every meal—which served to avert cholera, dysentery and typhoid; that wells were all tested before the troops were permitted to use them; that drinking water was boiled whenever possible—a number of portable boilers being provided for the purpose—and that, when boiling could not be managed, a bacillus-destroying filter (the invention of Dr. ISHIZU) was employed; that every building occupied by soldiers and every ship or boat used for their transport was disinfected; that special garments were provided against frost and special head-gear against sun; that means were used to prevent the freezing of rice-rations in winter or their fermentation in summer; and that only official pharmacists were allowed to compound medicines.

There is no denying that the highest credit belongs to the Japanese medical staff. They achieved great results. The only trouble that eludes their control is kakke (beri-beri). The per-centage of military sufferers from this disease in time of peace has been reduced to 0.44, but in the China-Japan War it rose to 18 and in the last war it was 16. Effective methods of prevention remain to be elaborated.

THE BOOKSHELF.

"Leaves from Japanese Literature," by UME TSUDA.

In this little book Miss Tsuda has essayed the exceedingly difficult task of accurately rendering a number of passages from Japanese literature into the English language. There can be no doubt that she has made a success, as indeed might have been confidently anticipated from her record. The work is without preface, and we are thus left in doubt as to whether the object of the gifted authoress is to convey to English readers some conception of the contents of Japanese classics, or to furnish for the use of her own nationals an aid to translation. We infer, however, that the latter is the purpose, inasmuch as the Japanese text is added in every case, a step which would scarcely have been taken had the interests of foreign readers alone been consulted. Possibly, therefore, it would have been wiser to give renderings in modern every-day language rather than to select the old-time constructions to which Scott imparted orthodoxy by his immortal representations of mediæval characters. Apart from this comment Miss Tsuda's translations seem to us to merit great praise. They are pure, simple, artistic and sympathetic. Thirteen extracts constitute the contents of the book, and they include such celebrated narrations as "Nasu-no-Yoichi," "The death of Atsumori," "The battle of Awazu-no-Hara," "Kogo no Tsubone" and "Fushimi no Sato." The style of the whole may be gathered from the "Maxims of General Saigo," which we reproduce here on account of its modern interest:—

The Way is the way of Nature. It is man's place to follow it. Therefore make it thy aim to reverence Heaven. Heaven loves other men even as thyself. Love others, therefore, as thou lovest thyself.

Make not man thy partner, but Heaven, and with Heaven as thy partner, strive to the uttermost. Blame not others, but seek out where thou art lacking in virtue.

He who walks not in the Way at ordinary times is put to confusion in time of need. He is troubled how to act. Thus, in the case of a fire, he who is prepared at all times is composed, and able to manage his affairs, but the unprepared only become confused in mind, and know not what to do. So only he who constantly walks in the Way can devise expediences (sic) at critical times.

Grieve thou not at thy lack of thought in the time of need. What thou hast considered at ordinary times in silence and meditation may for the greater part be then put into action. What thou thinkest of at the moment the occasion arises is like the curious devices and fine plans of our dreams in sleep. On arising the next morning, for the most part, they prove useless fancies.

In affairs, there are two kinds of chance, fortuitous chance, and chance which we bring about. What people usually call chance is the former, but the real chance is that which comes through action founded on reason, and through an understanding of the real conditions. At critical times we must make the chance arise.

The book is hard to lay down and we predict that it will have many readers. Only one serious slip is apparent. In page 35 kin-zukuri no-taito is rendered "a sword of gold," whereas it should be "a sword with gold mountings." This difference, though cardinal, could scarcely have been expected to be familiar to a lady.

"Adversaria Sinica," by HERBERT A. GILES, M.A., LL.D., Professor of Chinese in the University of Cambridge; Messrs. Kelly and Walsli.

A FREQUENTLY occurring motive in Chinese decorative and fine art is the figure of a beautiful woman, dressed in rich flowing robes, bearing a peach in her hands and attended by two or three maidens, as well as by a phoenix, the last adjunct, however, being only occasional. This group is equally frequent in Japanese art. Every lover of Oriental objects of virtue is familiar with it, and knows that the peach-bearer is called Si Wang Mu in China and Sei-o-bo in Japan, these being varied sounds of the same ideographs and of course having the same meaning, "Western queen mother." Around this lady a mass of conjectures have been woven by sinologists. She has been unsexed, has been transformed into a region, has been identified as a barbarian tribe, has been regarded as an imaginary abode, has been called the mother of the western king, has been declared to be the Queen of Sheba, has been set down as a historical personage, and has been made the central figure in many strange legends. To add to the perplexity the mountain where she was supposed to reside was traditionally said to be surrounded by "weak water" over which a bridge of turtles was thrown; and the birds feng and luan supposed to accompany her have been spoken of as creations of myth or fable. Professor Giles recounts in the volume before us all these traditions and modern interpretations, and then arrives at a conclusion which almost forces itself upon our belief, namely, that this "Si Wang Mu" is no other than the Grecian Juno, who had become known to the Chinese through their intercourse with the Kingdom, and that the "weak water" surrounding her abode was the sluggish stream of the Styx which flowed nine times round Hades, and which, by a confusion of legends in transmission, came to be regarded as surrounding Olympus. We refrain from following the learned Professor into the minutiae of his demonstration, but we predict that it will prove highly interesting and convincing to all intelligent readers.

A second dissertation is contained in the same volume. It relates to the Confucian definition of filial piety. Being asked by one of his disciples what filial piety was, the Sage replied by two words, se nan. For twenty centuries the question of what he meant to say has been a subject of controversy. Literally translated, the two ideographs have been read as signifying "facial expression" and "difficult." Did Confucius mean that to apprehend and act in harmony with the facial expression of one's parents is difficult? Or did he mean to say that the difficulty was to assume a proper facial expression in presence of one's parents? Not only Chinese commentators themselves, but Western Sinologists, as Marsham, Legge, Wade, Zattoli and so forth, have all essayed the task of interpretation. Even Mr. Ku Hung-ming, with whose learned essays and daring views our readers are familiar, makes Confucius answer to his questioning disciple:—"The difficulty is the expression of your look." But now comes Professor Giles who disposes of all these conjectural and unsatisfactory renderings and makes the whole problem profoundly simple thus:—"When Tzu-hsiu asked Confucius 'what is filial piety?' the latter replied simply, 'to define it is difficult.'" For, says the Cambridge Professor, the ideograph hitherto translated "facial expression" comes to signify "define" by the simple steps of "sort" or "kind," and then as every Chinese ideograph can be verb, or noun, or other part of speech, we arrive at "to sort," "to arrange," "to place in the proper category," "to define." He appropriately concludes his thesis with the words solvuntur tabulae.

The Nihon Chutz (朱子) Gakuha no Tetsugaku. By Dr. INOUE TETSUJIRŌ. Published by the Fuzambō Publishing Co., Tōkyō. Price, 1 yen 60 sen.

WITH the issue of this bulky volume, covering 700 pages, Dr. Inoue Tetsujirō brings to a successful close the gigantic literary task which nearly six years ago he set himself to perform, the compilation of a thoroughly reliable and exhaustive history of Japan's three great Schools of Confucian Philosophy. The first volume, reviewed at great length in these columns at the time of its appearance, consisting of a history of the teaching of the Japanese followers of Wang Yangmin and covering 632 large-sized pages, was published in 1900. The second volume, dealing with the ancient school of philosophers (Kogaku) and covering over 700 pages was issued in 1902, when it was fully noticed by us. The volume we are now about to deal with, in many respects the most important of the three, appeared last December. The gratitude of the nation is due to Dr. Inoue for the indefatigable industry and perseverance he has shown in collecting, arranging and commenting on material that has hitherto been published only in a fragmentary, disjointed and almost unreadable shape. It is necessary to bear in mind that the three schools with which Dr. Inoue has dealt so thoroughly were all variations of Confucianism. Buddhist philosophy in this country is quite a separate subject, which has been treated by several well-known Buddhist writers. In old Japan thinkers of any note usually belonged to one of the three schools of Confucian philosophy. They either adopted the teaching of Chutz, known as Shushi in Japan, or the doctrines of Wang Yangmin, known here as Yōmeigaku, or they followed the teaching of the great leaders of the ancient school of thought, Yamaga Sokō, Itō Jinsui and Butsu Sorai.

As Dr. Inoue points out in the preface to his work, the chief interest attached to the Chutz philosophy as taught here was the fact that it served as an ethical standard in the schools of Japan for three centuries. Apparently influenced by the fact that in China and Korea the Chutz doctrines alone were considered orthodox in the educational world, it was decided by the early Tokugawa Shōguns that no moral teaching but that of the Chutz school should be allowed in Government schools. To the question which has so often been asked during the past two years, whence comes the Japanese fine ethical standard, Dr. Inoue replies, it undoubtedly originated with the teaching of Chutz as explained, modified and carried into practice in this country. The moral philosophy of the Chutz school in Japan compared with that of the other two schools was moderate in tone, free from eccentricities, and practical to a rare degree. In the enormous importance it attached to self-culture and what is known in modern terminology as self-realization (Jigajitsugen) the teaching of the Chutz school of moralists in this country differed in no material respects from the doctrines of the new Kantists in England, Muirhead, Green and others.

Chutz was born in the province of Fuhkien in 1130 A.D. and died in 1200. Into his general teaching and his influence in China and Korea it is not necessary for us to go, as these subjects have been treated by European sinologists. Certain Buddhist priests were the first to imbibe his teaching in Japan and to make it known to a very small circle of scholars. During the Heian period (A.D. 724-1186) there were in Japan numerous exponents of Confucianism, but not one of them was endowed with sufficient talent and character to found a school of thought. The Jusha of those days confined himself to interpretation of the Confucian classics. The fine moral ideas taught by China's greatest sage and his Chinese interpreters were not fully appreciated by the Japanese people till the sixteenth century of our era. From the beginning of the Kamakura age (A.D. 1186) down to the time of Tokugawa Ieyasu Confucianism in Japan showed little activity of any kind. With the teaching of the pioneer of the Chutz philosophy here, Fujiwara Seigwa, began a period of renaissance producing results which have benefited Japan in a hundred different ways down to the present time. Before proceeding to give an account of the lives and teaching of the great Japanese leaders of the Chutz school of philosophy we will state the reasons given by Dr. Inoue for the popularity of Chutz in this country. While intellectually inclined, the Japanese may be said to be a practical-minded people. The Chutz moral philosophy differed from that of Wang Yangmin and from that taught by Butsu Sorai in the way it explained the relation of learning to conduct. The Wang Yangmin school treated intellectual inquiry with too much contempt, attaching importance to the practice of virtue only. Sorai and his school erred in the opposite direction, making too much of mere speculation and verbal discussions. But the Chutz philosophers hit the golden mean when they maintained that learning is only really valuable when it affects the lives of men. Ethical study is important because without it men would possess no fine moral ideals to guide their footsteps in the path of daily life. It was the subordination of learning to conduct, while attaching no little importance to it, which characterized the Chutz teaching, that to the discerning eyes of the early Tokugawa Shōguns seemed to render it a thoroughly safe and suitable system for use in schools and as a basis for law. We will now proceed to give a short history of the lives and teaching of the founders of the Japanese Chutz School of Philosophy.

I.—Fujiwara Seigwa (1561-1619 A. D.)

In point of time Seigwa had the honour of being the first to make known the teaching of Chutz in this country. But in ability he was much inferior to Hayashi Razan. Seigwa began to study Confucianism as a priest and was so enamoured with it that he left the Buddhist communion and gave all his time to an investigation of the teaching of the various Confucian schools of thought. He had heard of Chutz, but had read nothing of his. With a view to making a thorough study of the Chutz system, he started for China in 1593. Owing to adverse winds the junk in which he sailed drifted on to an island called Kikai-ga-shima. From thence the vessel managed to get to Kagoshima Bay, anchoring in the harbour of Yamakawa, where Seigwa went on shore. He made his way to a temple called the Shōryūji, where he found a priest who had in his possession a Chinese work embodying the teaching of Chutz called Shisho Shinchi, "A New Commentary on the Four Classics." "Here is the very thing which I was going to China to procure," he exclaimed. He made a careful copy of the whole work and returned to Kyōto. There he shut himself off from all intercourse with his friends and for many weeks gave himself up to the study of the new ethical faith. Up to the time of his death he lectured in Kyōto on the Four Classics and his lectures were highly appreciated. He seems to have been a very liberal-minded man and he doubtless did much to remove anti-foreign prejudices in the minds of his contemporaries. One of his disciples called Yoshida Teijun being engaged in trade with Annam, Seigwa wrote to him as follows:—"The object of trade is to enable each of the two parties concerned to obtain a share of the profits. No one must aim at benefiting himself alone. Profit that is shared with another may seem small, but because so shared it becomes great. And vice versa, gains that are exclusively appropriated may seem big, but they are actually small. What is profitable and what is just are in close relation to each other. Though foreigners have different customs from ours and speak different languages, the reason with which Heaven has endowed human beings is theirs as well as ours. Remember how many are the resemblances and how few the differences between us and them. Do not be tempted to think because in some respects their ways are strange to you, you can lie to them or abuse them with impunity. Heaven allows of no lying. Beware of bringing our national customs into contempt. If in foreign countries you come across highly virtuous and benevolent men, honour them as your own father or your own teacher. Observe the laws and the customs of the country in which you live. Remember that the human race all belong to one family. Remember that virtue is alike everywhere. It there is trouble, or calamity, or illness where you are, do what you can to relieve it." Though Seigwa was the progenitor of the Chutz school of thought, we must not overlook the fact that he began life as a Buddhist priest and hence he unconsciously mixed certain Buddhist teaching with his doctrines. His personality undoubtedly counted for much. He was highly respected and patronized both by Hideyoshi and Ieyasu.

II.—Hayashi Razan (1583-1657 A.D.) Had it not been for the labours of Razan it is very doubtful whether the Chutz system of ethics would have won the favour and patronage of the Tokugawa Government in the way that it did. Razan showed so much intelligence as a child that his parents wished to make him a priest.* But when he became old enough to judge for himself he swore that on no account would he consent to become a priest. Here are the words he used on that occasion:—Ware nanzo Butsu ni ki shite fubo no on two suten ya? Katsu nochi naki mono wa fukō no inaru mono nari. Ware kanazasu kore wo sezu. "Why should I forego the privilege granted to me by my parents? (The privilege of freedom to live as he pleased). Moreover, there is no such misfortune as to have no children. Nothing will induce me to become a priest." After spending some years in the study of Chinese works published in the Sung era he began to lecture on the Chutzs Philosophy in Kyōto. His popularity was so great that there were no vacant seats in his lecture hall. This of course excited the envy of rival schools of thought and Kiyowara Hidetaka attempted to appeal to the throne for the suppression of the new teaching. He maintained that no one should be allowed to publicly lecture in defence of views that had not been submitted to the approval of the authorities. But Tokugawa Ieyasu scorned the notion of allowing Hidetaka to appeal to the Emperor. "People may hold what doctrines they please," said he, "and your notion of appealing to the throne is silly." At the age of 22 Razan began to study under Seigwa and showed so much talent that a few years later he was created an adviser to the Tokugawa Government, when he took the name of Hayashi Dōshun, but as Razan is better known we shall retain that name in this review. Razan, it is related, was the first scholar to allow his hair to grow long. Up to that time men who devoted themselves exclusively to learning or to medicine used to shave their heads. Learning and religion here as in Europe for some centuries were so welded to each other as to be inseparable in the minds of ordinary people. Prior to the days of Razan Confucianism had no status in the country. He was the means of making it a State cult during the Tokugawa era. It will be remembered that the Edo Daigaku, first called Shoheikō, was founded in 1690 in the days of the Fifth Tokugawa Shōgun, Tsunayoshi. The office of President of the Shoheikō was always filled by a member of the Hayashi family, which family was founded by Hayashi Razan. So great was the confidence placed in Razan and his descendants by the early Tokugawa Shōguns that the control of the whole of the higher education of the country was confided to them. To Hayashi Nobunatsu, the first President of the Shoheikō, belongs the honour of having obtained a status for Confucian scholars independent of Buddhism. The teachers in the college were denominated Jusha, a word which, though originally applied to Confucianists exclusively, grew as a result of the pre-eminence of Confucian teachers, to be a synonym of shikishi, gakusha and other equivalents of our word scholar. Razan was a most voracious reader. It is said that there was not a book in circulation in this country at that time which he had not read. He had a marvellous memory, as is displayed in the 147 books which he wrote. Though he was a far better read man than Seigwa, he felt, and contemporary scholars felt also, that Seigwa had elements of greatness in his character to which Razan never attained. It was Seigwa's powerful personality that made Razan sit at his feet as a humble disciple. But in the advocacy of the Chutzs philosophy Razan showed far more resolution and definiteness than his master. His determination to give no quarter to other schools of thought was doubtless encouraged by the Tokugawa Government. The Shōguns were sharp enough to see that Chinese books were calculated to develop the reasoning faculties of students. Such works as 韓非, Kampei, 荀子, Junshi and 莊子, Sōji could not be safely used as text-books unless under severe restrictions. Ieyasu and his successors were thoroughly convinced of the fact that a despotic Government is only secure when it guards jealously the minds of the rising generation against the adoption of notions calculated to promote the subversion of authority. The Shōgunate could never have maintained its pre-eminence for two and a half centuries had the youth of the country been allowed freedom of thought. Here was Razan's chance for obtaining unrivalled status for his new teaching. The Chutzs philosophy became the orthodox creed of the country. When the Shoheikō was first opened the expositions of the various teachers differed in diverse details, and the students, as is their wont, enjoyed some lively debates in their rooms over the discrepancies between the views expressed. This was reported to the College authorities, who at once issued orders that in expounding text-books all teachers were to adhere closely and exclusively to the interpretation given to passages by the Commentator Chutzs and on no account to express their private opinions on the meaning of the passages expounded. Thus was the thralldom rendered complete.

In order to make a creed thoroughly successful, it has always seemed to its founder to be necessary that rival creeds should be denounced as erroneous or inferior in some way. Razan adopted this policy in reference to Buddhism, Christianity and Taoism. He pointed out that the "Buddhist way," in that it leads to a renunciation of the world in which we have to live and flight from that world, is no true "way" for mankind in general. Confucianism is true because it recognizes the true state of society and lays down laws whereby it may reach a high state of perfection without disturbing or ignoring those fundamental relationships which hold communities together and regulate the conduct of individuals to each other. Razan was no doubt aware that some of the teaching of Buddhists was good, but to the conception of life and the world which forms the basis of the creed he had the greatest antipathy. He denounced Christianity on the ground that its cosmological teaching and its explanation of the relation of the supposed Creator of the world to the world in which we live are irrational and contradictory. Dr. Inoue reproduces the history of the controversy between a Portuguese priest called Frois and Razan, giving the dialogue that took place between them. The priest argued in favour of the existence of a personal God, while Razan was only prepared to admit the existence of an absolute principle, which he called ri. If the record which has come down to us be reliable, M. Frois grew very angry towards the close of the controversy. Dr. Inoue says that Razan quite failed to perceive his opponent's point of view, which is surprising, as Confucianism has its Ten and its Jōtei which correspond in a measure to the Tenshu of the Roman Catholics. Razan denounced monogamy in unmeasured terms, which Dr. Inoue naturally deprecates. Razan thought that the Christian way of making so much of women renders them conceited and ungovernable and does not in any way lessen the tremendous jealousy with which they regard each other. On the whole women behave better under our system, said Razan. Razan's rejection of Taoism was, in Dr. Inoue's opinion, based on entirely insufficient grounds; since, rightly understood, the teaching of Laotz in reference to the chaos which preceded the order of the universe and what is implied in that chaos, is capable of reconciliation with Chutzs's explanation of the governing principle 理, ri with which the world began. Both teachers recognized what we now name jitsuzai, real being and existence, says Dr. Inoue. Razan's attitude to Shintoism was friendly. He thought that in substance Shintō ethical doctrines agree with the teaching of Chutzs.

III Kinoshita Junan (1621—1698 A.D.) Junan studied under one of Seigwa's disciples, a man called Matsunaga Sekigo. Junan is only remembered as a famous educationist. He seems to have understood how to impress his personality on his pupils and how to awaken their minds. Among his numerous brilliant pupils were Arai Hakuseki, Muro Kyūsō and Amamori Hōshū. The life of Arai Hakuseki, scholar, poet, historian, economist, moralist and statesman, has been so fully written by Dr. Knox* that it is unnecessary for us to touch on it here; but it is important to give a short account of the influence of Amamori Hōshū and Muro Kyūsō.

IV Amamori Hōshū (1611—1708 A.D.) Though Hōshū advocated the Chutzs philosophy, he did not confine himself to this only. He was of opinion that Buddhism, Confucianism and Taoism all had one origin and were in principle one and the same, though they pursued different methods. Hōshū was the first Confucianist to champion this view, though it was held and taught by Kōbō Daishi (A.D. 774—834). Hōshū is represented by Dr. Inoue as very much opposed to utilitarianism. Judging by what Dr. Inoue tells us of Hōshū's views his conception of utilitarianism was very inadequate. To him it seems to have meant nothing more than self-aggrandizement. Of the grander and deeper meanings attached to the term utility as expounded by the modern school of Utilitarians Hōshū seems to have had no idea. He does not appear to have thoroughly understood the utilitarian views of his contemporary Yamaga Sokō (1662-1685) who, like our great English philosopher Hobbes, gave to the term utility a very broad meaning, making it include the happiness and welfare not of any particular individual but of all persons concerned. Rightly understood, the utilitarian belief is one of the most unselfish of creeds. It applauds self-renunciation when this contributes to the happiness of others. Dr. Inoue quotes Hōshū as representing the right and the beneficial (gi and ri) (利) to be antagonistic to each other. But rightly explained, there is no reason why they should be so. What Hōshū says about not making personal happiness the end of life and thereby losing the chance of attaining this happiness, as Dr. Inoue points out, resembles what Green has written on the same subject.

Muro Kyūsō (1658-1734). If it had not been for the labours of Kyūsō it is questionable whether the Chutzs philosophy would have obtained such a strong hold over the minds of officials as it did during his life-time and in subsequent years. When Kyūsō began to lecture the popularity of the ancient school of philosophy was at its height. In Itō Jinsai and Butsu Sorai Kyūsō had very formidable rivals. But he was equal to the occasion. He was no mere transmitter of the views of his predecessors. He gave to the doctrines of Chutzs fresh life and interest by applying them in entirely new ways. Dr. Inoue is of opinion that no Japanese philosopher has in his general teaching approached so near to Christianity as Kyūsō. His denunciations of hypocrisy and self-deception remind one, says Dr. Inoue, of the language of Christ. He condemned the practice of men trying to appear to the world as better than they actually were. On pp. 201-2, Dr. Inoue quotes some fine remarks of Kyūsō on this subject. "Even the greatest men," says Kyūsō "have their faults, but they correct them

* Uide Vol. XXX. Pt. II. of the Transactions of the Asiatic Society of Japan.

† This is not the place to discuss this subject at length, but for many years past it has seemed to us that Dr. Inoue has displayed uncalled for animosity to this school of ethical thought and has in none of his writings shown any minute or accurate acquaintance with the views of Mill, Sir Leslie Stephen and other great English and American Utilitarians. Had Dr. Inoue ever digested thoroughly Mill's definition of utilitarianism even he could never write against the system as bitterly as he does. After defining the meaning of the term, Mill says:—"If the impugners of the utilitarian morality represented it to their own minds in this its true character, I know not what recommendation possessed by any other morality they could possibly affirm to be wanting to it: what more beautiful or more exalted development of human nature any other ethical system can be supposed to foster, or what springs of action, not accessible to the utilitarian, such systems rely on for giving effect to their mandates." What we have said about Dr. Inoue's imperfect knowledge of modern Utilitarianism applies with greater force to Mr. Ku Hung-ming, of Wuchang, who last August sent to this journal one of the least profound letters on the subject of Utilitarianism we have even read anywhere. The writer he attacked then was absent from Japan or he would have replied to his strange misrepresentations of this noble ethical creed.—(REVIEWER.)

* Half a century ago among certain classes of gentlemen in England it was customary to put dull-witted sons into the Church. "He is only fit for the Church," meant then that a young man was intellectually deficient from the parent's point of view. This sentiment exists no longer. We quote it as a striking contrast to what is stated in the text.—(REVIEWER.)

and, what is more, they let the world see that they are doing so. There is no concealment of any kind and no pretending things are different from what they are." Much that Kyūso says on charity, understanding that term in its broadest sense, reminds Dr. Inoue of St. Paul's beautiful definition of Christian love. But Kyūso's teaching was not only strong in its advocacy of all the altruistic virtues that are akin to pity, he also preached a doctrine of stern duty and scrupulous regard for the rights of others, loyalty to superiors, in fine, all those obligations which were embodied in what is known as the Bushido. He wrote much on the Deity and on the possibility of man's holding intercourse with this Deity. To Buddhism he was opposed on the same grounds as those stated above relating to Razan.

An important school of Chutzs philosophers sprang up some 50 years after Fujiwara Seigwa's death, which did not acknowledge the leadership of the teachers whose lives we have sketched above. Their influence was very great, chiefly owing to the ability of two men, Kaibara Ekiken and Yamazaki Anzai. We can only find space for a very short account of these two philosophers.

VI. Kaibara Ekiken (1630—1714 A.D.) Among the moralists of old Japan none is better known and no one has exercised more influence in the educational world than Kaibara Ekiken. One reason of this is the fact that his books, some hundred volumes, were all written in simple Japanese. He was a man of great sweetness of disposition and strikingly modest. It is related that on one occasion he visited the tomb of Kusunoki Masashige at Minatogawa, and was astonished to find that it was surrounded by fields, only marked by two trees, and without an epitaph. He composed what he considered a suitable epitaph. It has been preserved as a specimen of fine writing and is given by Dr. Inoue. But subsequently Ekiken reproached himself bitterly for having considered himself worthy of the distinction of composing an epitaph in honour of so great a hero. It is said that his alarm at his rashness was so great on this occasion that he perspired freely. He at once applied to the Mito Daimyō, Tokugawa Mitsukuni, who ordered a suitable epitaph to be written. Ekiken was not an orthodox teacher of the Chutzs philosophy. In explaining man's nature he disregarded the a priori governing principle, ri, to which Chutzs and other Chinese philosophers of the Sung era attached so much importance, and laid stress only on the a posteriori 元氣, genki (original, vital energy). His view of nature and the relation of mankind thereto was that of an optimist. He speaks of the universe as a parent of mankind and enjoins on us gratitude to the author of our being. This is a filial duty we owe to the giver of life, he says. His teaching on this subject is somewhat vague and perplexing, as he does not in so many words endow the primary cause of all things with personality. The chief interest of his teaching had to do with education and with his attitude to Chinese ways and institutions. He was opposed to the wholesale introduction of Chinese government regulations and methods in this country. On education he took the view of Herbert that its chief object is moral culture. In his ethical system virtue and happiness were inseparable. In this particular his teaching was at one with that of Socrates, Spinoza, Hobbes, Hume and many other Western philosophers. He believed that the whole of nature reveals the love of its author, though he never attempts to show how the earthquakes, the floods, the tidal waves and a hundred other scourges of mankind are reconcilable with the notion that the world was made for man's pleasure.

VII Yamazaki Anzai (1618—1682 A.D.) Anzai belonged to what is known as the Nankai (Southern Sea) school of Chutzs philosophers, which was founded by Tani Jichū. Though very carefully educated by his mother, Anzai's youth was passed in a very wild manner. He was mischievous and unruly. He made fun of the priests among whom he lived on Hieiizan and so numerous were the practical jokes he played on them that they refused to keep him any longer.

At the age of 25 he settled down to study under Tani Jichū, made rapid progress and very soon attracted the attention of the famous Aizu Daimyō, Hoshima Masayuki, in whose mansion he acted as tutor and lecturer. It is related that Anzai was asked by this nobleman what were his chief gratifications in life. He replied I have three. (1) I am thankful that I belong to a race of beings who are rightly called the "lords of creation." (2) I am thankful that I was born in a time of peace when I can carry on my studies without distraction,—keeping company with the wise men of all ages and hearing what they have to say. (3) I rejoice that I was born the son of a poor man and not the son of a rich baron, because the sons of barons are too apt to grow up ignorant and helpless. As a teacher he was very severe and often lost his temper, but nevertheless he was extremely popular. He was not a man with any original ideas, but merely a conscientious transmitter of the Chutzs moral philosophy. His teaching is all comprehended in the oft-repeated phrase Kei-nai gi-gwai, "devotion within and integrity without," heart devotion and uprightness in the world. In his old age he studied Shintō and founded a Shintō sect, being of opinion that there was much affinity between the doctrines of Chutzs and Shintoism. What is known as the Anzai school of philosophy split up into four sections after his death. Three of these kept to the Chutzs philosophy, the other was a Shintō faction. They all represented themselves as the guardians of certain philosophic secrets, resembling the acroamatic teaching of Aristotle, to the publication of which, according to Plutarch, Alexander the Great objected so strongly. What is known as the Mito School of Philosophers, though the chief characteristics of their teaching were distinctly Shintoistic, derived much strength from their employment of three Nankai Gakuha Chutzs philosophers.

It is important to note that the influence of the Anzai section of the Chutzs School of Philosophy on the men who brought about the overthrow of the Bakufu and the establishment of the present form of government was very considerable. The men who first exposed the wrongs which successive Emperors had suffered at the hands of the Tokugawa Shoguns—what is known as the Kinnō (Royalist) party—received their inspiration from the Anzai school. Among these Iwakura and Higashikaze are worthy of special mention. The Mito Gakuha was not a branch of the Chutzs school of philosophy, strictly speaking, though it utilized the doctrines of Chutzs in support of the theory of Imperial rights which it so staunchly advocated.

In Dr. Inoue's concluding remarks (p.p. 595-603) he tells us that the history of the Chutzs philosophy in Japan may be divided into three periods. (1) The period of preparation, lasting for some 270 years, ending with the appearance of Fujiwara Seigwa. (2) The period of great prosperity, beginning with the teaching of Seigwa and ending about the year 1800, a period of some 190 years. (3) A short period of renaissance after a certain amount of neglect, during the latter part of the eighteenth and the beginning of the nineteenth centuries. During the first period the Chutz tree sprouted, during the second it blossomed, during the third it bore fruit. But the storm which ushered in the Meiji era shook the tree violently, as it shook almost everything else, and the fruit was so scattered hither and thither that it is not easy to find it to-day. But as a system of ethical thought there are elements in the Chutzs philosophy as taught in this country that have figured largely in the moral culture of the nation and that bear the character of eternal verities. Much that we find in Western ethical treatises on the subject of self-culture, self-realization, and self-completion occupied a prominent place in the Chutzs system of ethics. This system aims at the high development of character by means of ethical teaching founded on common sense and those ineradicable moral ideas which are found in the heart and conscience of every normal human being. It does not claim to have discovered anything new in the moral world. It has absolutely no surprises and no make-believes of any kind. It glories in simplicity, in reality, in straightforwardness, in the quiet self-assurance which only those can have who are quite sure of the basis on which their moral structure rests. These qualities rendered it an eminently suitable system for adoption in schools and as a guide to politicians. Though less importance is attached to the cosmological part of the system than to its ethical elements, yet in connection with the former it is interesting to note that in rejecting the dual origin of the world as explained by Chutzs as unsatisfactory, his Japanese followers showed no little discernment. Chutzs asserted that the ri, or governing principle, did not beget the ki, or vital energy. They were both primary and in rank coequal. His advocacy of dualism was most pronounced. But the Japanese Chutzs philosophers were all monists. They argued that it is reasonable to give priority to one of the supposed originators of the universe. Either the governing principle was first and it produced the vital energy, or the energy came first and what is called the fundamental principle of the universe (ri) is nothing but the law that controls the working of the vital energy. Dr. Inoue regrets that beyond the discovery now alluded to the cosmological speculations of the Japanese followers of Chutzs throw no special light on the riddle of the universe. But these philosophers have the higher honour of furnishing the nation with an ethical standard that is noble in type and at the same time eminently practical. Even to-day there is much to be learnt from the lives and the teaching of the Chutzs luminaries in this country, says Dr. Inoue. As a school of thinkers the Chutzs philosophers were doubtless less original than the Wang Yangmin philosophers and the Kogaku-ha adherents, but that their influence in Japan was greater than that of either of the rival schools is unquestionable. As we observed at the outset, we owe a debt of gratitude to Dr. Inoue for the great service he has rendered to his country and to Oriental scholarship in general by the publication of what will certainly be considered standard works on the teaching of all Japan's great Confucian moralists.*

YACHTING.

The first yacht race of the season was held by the Mosquito Yacht Club on Saturday after-noon the figure of eight course (five knots) for the Nelson cup on club time allowance. Five boats started, Elsa being first across the line, and Pele a second later, and eighteen seconds sufficed to see them all over. Pele led at the Harbour Entrance, Elsa, Winsome, Sunbeam and Chocho being next in that order. With the moderate easterly breeze it was a beat to the Lightship against the tide. Pele passed first with a lead of 2 mins. 5 secs. from her nearest opponent and maintained her advantage all over the rest of the course and home. Following were the times:—

	Start.	Finish.	Corrected time.
Pele .....	2.15.06	3.25.55	3.25.48
Sunbeam .....	2.15.21	3.29.26	3.29.19
Elsa .....	2.15.05	3.31.09	3.31.09
Winsome .....	2.15.11	3.31.31	3.31.24
Chocho .....	2.15.24	3.42.41	3.42.17

BASEBALL.

A capital game of baseball took place on the grounds of the Yokohama Commercial School on the afternoon of April 29th between teams of the Y.C.S. and U.S.S. Kentucky. In the first six innings neither side scored but in the 7th innings the Kentuckians got 5 runs, in the 8th 1 run, and in the 9th 7 runs, partly by good play on their part and partly by errors on the part of the Y.C.S. and in one instance by a want of knowledge of the rules. The following is the score by innings.

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	Total.
K.....	0	0	0	0	0	0	5	1	7	13
Y.C.S.	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0
3 Base hits, Finnigan,
2 " Fulton and Kurimi.

* Dr. Inoue concludes his work with a list of noted Chutzs philosophers—one hundred in number—with dates.—(REVIEWER.)

MONTHLY SUMMARY OF THE JAPANESE RELIGIOUS PRESS.

Two months ago we epitomized from the Taiyō Dr. Anezaki's first article entitled "A New Era of Civilisation." We now make a few extracts from his concluding article on this subject. Dr. Anezaki's essay is of the nature of a forecast of the twentieth century religion and ethics. Some of his comparisons of Western and Eastern thought are decidedly interesting. He says that the central idea of our Western civilisation is energy and that the central idea of Eastern civilisation, in India, China and Japan, is submission to authority. The Christian religion has in the West ever been associated with energy, says Dr. Anezaki. Prometheus stealing fire from heaven wherewith to animate man well represents the ardour which Europeans have derived from the creed they profess. Activity, aggressiveness, optimism, these have always characterized Western civilisation. If in the West man's life is said to have begun with the fire of energy derived from heaven, in the East we trace our origin back to the decrees of wise rulers. To them we have always submitted. In India the first man is believed to have been a King and a Legislator. According to Chinese history the life of human society began with the rule of "the three Kings and the five Emperors." These traditions may be said to represent Eastern thought generally. With us submission to authority is the finest of all human virtues (Fukujū wa ningen no saidai bioku de aru). Reverence for the gods, submission to their will, respect for all human authority, be it that of the head of a family or the head of a Government—these sentiments have ever been deeply rooted in the Oriental mind. All the creeds that have been propagated among us have preached submission to authority. After discussing the abuses to which slavish submission to authority may lead, Dr. Anezaki proceeds to consider what is likely to be the effect of the close intercourse between East and West in the world of thought which has now begun. He says that there are American and European writers who hold the view that Japan has a better system of ethics than that followed in Christian countries to-day. Dr. Anezaki points out that with the majority of Europeans and Americans Christianity is no more than a mask to hide certain ugly moral features that are to be seen in their everyday life. What is professed in the West is of slight importance compared with what is practised. Judging from practice only, it is maintained that Japan to-day has a better record than any Western so-called Christian nation. This opinion is, Dr. Anezaki tells us, gradually gaining ground. It is stated, he informs us, in a very plain manner in an editorial article which appeared in the Hibbert Journal a short time ago. It is there pointed out that though international Christian morality as practised to-day is entirely contrary to the teaching of Christ, yet Christian nations go on boasting that Christian morality is superior to all other existing systems of morality and that Christianity is the only true religion. Judged by its fruits in Christian countries, Christianity to-day is making a very poor show. The article goes on to affirm that the Buddhist religion, which has hitherto been so despised by Europeans and Americans generally has in Japan raised a whole nation to a higher level of moral attainment than that reached by Christian nations. Where in all the world can there be found greater self-sacrifice for the sake of a given cause than has been displayed in Japan during the past two years? This is the result of Japan's ethical teaching. Can we, asks the editor of the Hibbert Journal, go on boasting of the superiority of our creed in the face of these facts? These remarks, says Dr. Anezaki, have startled some and incensed others in the Western world; but in the case of the open-minded and the seekers after truth they have had the effect of an enlightening revelation. The notion that in religion and morality the West has nothing to learn from the East has now been exploded. The ignorant Phariseism of Christian countries is gradually giving place to a humble and an inquiring state of mind. This is hopeful, since neither Christianity nor Buddhism is perfect. If each begins to make up for its defects by borrowing from the other, the benefit will be great. As there is much that we need to learn from Christians, so there is much they need to learn from us. Certain of their views have run to undesirable extremes, as they themselves admit; by the application of Oriental remedies for their ailments they can restore the body politic to a normal state of health.

* * *
The Waseda Bungaku has set itself the task of collecting and publishing the views of eminent religious teachers on the religious phenomena about which so much has been published. Secularists are puzzled as to the significance to be attached to the alleged visions of and revelations to Mr. Tsunajima and others. While collecting information on this point the Waseda Bungaku has by means of interviews held by members of its staff with various preachers and scholars obtained a good deal of general information. This appears in the March and April numbers of the magazine. We can only find room for extracts from the statements made by a few of the various persons interviewed. We omit the questions and produce the answers in a curtailed form.

(1) Rev. D. Ebina.—The movement you refer to is, I think, to be regarded as a hopeful sign, though it seems to be connected with no special consciousness of sin. The religious experience of Mr. Tsunajima differs little from that of Christians, but when we come to other alleged intercourse with the Deity, there is a wide difference between the views of those who profess to be the subject of revelations and ourselves. The alleged revelations are essentially Pantheistic and they are lacking in ethical elements. In the West a movement so limited as this would attract little notice. There all big religious movements affect large sections of the community. But here a religious wave of the kind you refer to is hardly noticed by the nation at large. In reference to the religious future of Japan I believe that Christianity will become more and more prosperous here, but it will be Pantheistic Christianity. Oriental thought is permeated with Pantheism, and Christianity in Japan to-day even is feeling the effects of its environment, and it will be subject to the Pantheistic influence still more in the future. I am a Japanese Christian and I confess that Pantheism has its spell on me. You ask whether to me religion seems to be absolute or relative, I reply relative. I being a minister, to me it is all important, but there is no objection to considering science, art and literature as equally important (Watakushi wa shūkyōka da kara mureo shūkyō wa omonjiru ga, shikashi gakujutsu demo, bungaku demo, dōto no kachoku no aru mono to mite sashitsukae nai deshō). The ethical part of religion is its most important part. To me Confucianism appears to be a religion.

(2) Rev. S. Uemura.—The movement to which you refer has some good points about it, but it is by no means wholly reliable. It lacks so many of the essential elements of true and lasting religion. It is too individualistic. Sin and righteousness are alike left out of account and the whole movement is Pantheistic. True Christianity has not come to this country yet. We are just where Rome was when she accepted Christianity. But the true faith will come later. (Makoto no Kiristokō wa kore kara deshō).

The next person interviewed was a very well known and earnest Shinshū Buddhist priest called Chikazumi Jōkwan. He is the head of a high class Buddhist boarding school called the Kyōdō Gakusha, situated in Morikawa-chō, Hongō, Tōkyō. According to the account given by the Waseda Bungaku a very large number of earnest-minded, intellectual young men find their way to this establishment. Here then is a Buddhist view of the new religious phenomena.

(3) Mr. Chikazumi Jōkwan.—Mr. Tsunajima's religious experiences have greatly interested me and I feel that what he says is reliable. I myself once had rather similar experiences. People criticize adversely Mr. Itō Chōshin's Muga-ai (Unselfishness and Love), but I do not think the majority of people understand Mr. Itō's point of view. Of course when a man enters a state of religious ecstasy he is no longer an ordinary man and his feelings cannot be expressed in the cold language of everyday life. Read what is recorded of Nichiren. During his banishment to Sado he had religious experiences which transformed him into another man.

(4) Mr. Itō Chōshin.—Many people seem at a loss to comprehend exactly what is meant by the religion of unselfishness and love which I preach. Now the central idea of Buddhism is unselfishness and the central idea of Christianity is love for others. Though they use different terms, the two greatest religions of the world both try to lead men to live for others instead of for themselves. As for throwing light on the origin of the world neither religion can do that. They both treat the world of things and mankind as they find it and they teach us that all that is best in the great universe as far as it is known to us comes from self-sacrifice, devotion to others. I have been asked whether in setting up a new form of faith—a kind of semi-Christian and semi-Buddhist religion—I intend to make use of ceremonies. To this I reply that I fail to see the need of this. There are not a few people in the world to-day who while liking religion dislike ceremonies of all kinds. Because religious teachers lay stress on ceremonies these persons object to join religious bodies. My teaching suits the like of these. . . . Some people think that as I belong to the Shin sect I have derived my inspiration from the former President of the Shinshū University, the late Mr. Kiyozawa Manshi, but this is not so. My inspiration came rather from reading Tolstoi's work entitled "My Religion" ("My Confession"?) I read and re-read this book, and it produced a profound impression on my mind.

The society formed by Mr. Itō is called the Mugayen no dōhō (無我苑の同朋) the "Unselfish Brotherhood." Mr. Itō is a pretty well-known Buddhist priest. About his earnestness and sincerity there seems to be no doubt. He is highly respected in Buddhist circles, and some Christians even regard the new movement he has started with considerable interest and sympathy. He has about 30 young men studying under him at his school, which bears the name of the Mugayen.

(5) Dr. Inoue Tetsujirō.—As to the future of religion in Japan, it is undoubtedly a question of great importance. The situation at present is just this. Buddhism and Confucianism are no longer authorities in religion and the Christianity that has come to this country has not so far been sufficiently Japonized to take the place of the old faiths in the minds of people generally. Japanese Christianity will doubtless yet undergo many transformations. Unless Christianity is altered greatly it can suit Japanese taste. It is certainly a great evil to have in this country various religions confronting each other without having a point of union. It is confusing to our young men to hear Buddhists saying one thing, Christians another and Shintoists and Confucianists something different again. You may ask whether I consider Confucianism a religion. In onesense I do and in another I do not. No reliance can be placed on its references to Heaven and to God, and it does not profess to teach men what are their duties to unseen Powers. It teaches morality only. But in the feudal ages combining with our ancestor worship (the centre of Shintoism) and what is known as Bushidō, Confucianism may be said to have been the only creed in which our educated men really believed. I think it most desirable that there should only be one religion throughout the world, but as none of the historical creeds suits the modern world, there is nothing for it but to construct a new creed by amalgamating all the best elements of Western and Eastern religions. The present is a very suitable time for attempting to do this. The minds of men both in the East and the West have been prepared for this by recent events. Russia went to war with us as a Christian nation. Her success was prayed for over a large portion of Christendom. But she suffered defeat at the hands of a non-Christian nation. While professing the Christian religion, the behaviour of her troops during the war was in every way worse than that of our soldiers. This fact has opened the eyes of many people in Europe and America, and they feel that the religion of the future must be of an essentially comprehensive and moral type, of a type that shall embrace all the finest moral ideas of East and West. It is no longer possible for this modern, progressive world of ours to bind itself down to follow the teaching of traditional Christianity or traditional Buddhism. Religion can no longer be based on the authority of men who lived some 2,000 years ago. It must rest on the convictions of our deepest thinkers and of our best informed scholars. The tendency of modern religious thought in both the East and the West is all in one direction. It is in favour of abolishing the element of race, the element of nationality, the element of exclusiveness, narrowness and prejudice, and of founding a religion that the devout and the reverential in all countries can accept and endeavour to live up to. And the Russo-Japanese war has prepared the way for the consummation of this long-cherished desire of religious-minded free-thinkers the world over. Japan among all the countries of the East has succeeded in drawing the attention of the whole Western world to the merits of Eastern civilisation and Eastern ethics. Acquainted with all that is best in the moral and religious world here and with all that is best in the moral and religious world there, she is in a position to play an important part in the construction of a new creed, with integrity, fairness and humanity as a basis, that shall be universally received among earnest-minded, educated people. The day seems to have come for the development of a religion that shall do no violence to scientific thought and that shall be abreast of the age in ethics and philosophy. The theory that there can be no high religious development without dependence on supernatural help of some kind is not generally held nowadays. All progress depends on man's intellect and will. It is a curious fact that Japan without any special religious consciousness of any kind should have worked herself up to the position of an ally with a powerful Christian country. There is one characteristic that we have which is not found to the same degree in any Western country, and that is, a thorough absence of religious bigotry. In religious matters we are open-minded, free to take what seems to us worthy of adoption. Western countries are all so tied to one form of faith that none of them will ever originate a new religion. We Japanese alone can do that. We regard all religions impartially and are wedded to none exclusively. It comes to this, then, that it is Japan's mission to construct a cosmopolitan religion (Tsumari wa sekai-teki shukyo no kensetsu wa Nihonjin no shimei de aru to iu koto ni naru no desu). If asked what is the prevailing tendency in the religious world to-day, I say it is the blending of ideas and doctrines derived from different sources. Buddhists are learning from Christians and Christians from Buddhists. The spirit of the age is in favour of religious union and men are searching for a suitable basis for that union. Even Mr. Itô Chôshin seems to be attempting an amalgamation of the teaching of Buddhism and Christianity. He figures before the world as a new prophet. His voice is heard in the wilderness proclaiming himself a witness to the truth. But the religion he is seeking to found is based on his own visions and alleged personal communications with the Deity. This implies that he has been favoured by the Deity above his fellow-men; that he occupies a rank above them. Few will bow to authority that is based on alleged revelations during a period of sickness. I cannot regard this movement as helpful to the cause which I have at heart, the founding of a creed on a lasting basis. It seems to me more likely to contribute to the increase of superstition. The views of Dr. Murakami Sensei and Mr. Ukita Kazutami are also given, but we reserve these for reproduction in our next Summary.

* Tōyō dewa ippan ni kemmei (賢明) no ō ga go to shihai shit; ningen ga kore ni fukujū shita bo to ga ningen no rekishi no hajime ni natte oru. In dō no "man" wa saishi no ningen de atte, mata dōji ni shi (王者) ripishō de oru. Shina demo Sato, co-ite (三王帝) ga shakai no hajime wa nashite oru.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

YOKOHAMA LITERARY SOCIETY.

The twenty-first session of the Yokohama Literary Society was brought to a triumphant close in Van Schaick Hall on Friday evening. The proceedings opened with a short paper by Mr. A. W. Quinton, entitled "William Vincent Wallace: an appreciation." Mr. Quinton spoke as follows:—

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN.—As members of the Yokohama Literary Society you have been accustomed to be entertained, from fortnight to fortnight, with most interesting, and sometimes erudite, papers or lectures, oftentimes illustrated by pictures, as the principal item of the evening's bill of fare; while the musical numbers which follow constitute a pleasant dessert. On the present occasion the menu will be somewhat different. The brief notes which I have the honour of reading to you can only take the place of the "hors d'oeuvres", or appetising trifle which precedes the feast itself, which will be one of melody and sweet sounds, instead of literary pabulum. The musical selections which will be given this evening are all taken from that most charming and melodious of English operas, "Maritana."

And first, a few words as to the personality and life of its talented composer, William Vincent Wallace.

Wallace was born in 1812 or 1814 at Waterford in Ireland, and came of a musical stock, as his father, who shortly after William's birth removed to Dublin, was a bandmaster and a skilful bassoon player, and his brother Wellington a clever flutist. At a very early age young Wallace displayed considerable talent as an organist and violinist. When still in a boy's jacket he led the band of the Theatre Royal, Dublin, on occasions when the regular leader was absent. In June 1829 Wallace took the violin part in a famous public concert, and also in a festival held in 1831, in which Paganini was engaged.

The extraordinary and novel effects produced by the gifted Italian inspired young Wallace, who sat up nights trying to approach the then unapproachable virtuoso. In May, 1834, he played a violin concerto of his own at a Dublin concert. A year or two afterwards he married the daughter of Mr. Kilby of Blackrock, near Dublin, and finding that Dublin did not offer a sufficient field for an aspiring artist, he left Ireland, accompanied by his wife and her sister, to try his fortunes in London. On the voyage, however, a quarrel arose between the wife and her husband, owing to the latter being more attentive to his sister-in-law than his wife approved, and they parted never to meet again. It would appear that the great Metropolis, that grave of so many high hopes and aspiring ambitions, was not kind to the young musician, for he shortly after emigrated to Australia, and took up his abode far away in the Bush, west of Sydney.

But Wallace was not to be allowed to hide his light for long in the wilds of the Bush. During one of his occasional visits to Sydney, some friends accidentally hearing him play, were amazed to discover in a simple emigrant, a violinist of the first rank, and by the solicitations of Sir John Burke, the Governor of the Colony, he was induced to give a concert, which had immense success.

But his love for wandering and adventure was even stronger than his love for his art at this period of his life. He wandered to Tasmania and New Zealand, where he narrowly escaped being killed by the Maoris, his life being romantically saved by the daughter of a chief. Then he went on a whaling voyage during which the native crew mutinied and only Wallace and three other white men escaped with their lives. Next he voyaged to India and played before the Queen of Oude, who rewarded him with magnificent and costly presents. After visiting Nepal and the romantic vale of Cashmere, he sailed for Valparaiso, crossed the Andes on a mule, and visited Buenos Ayres, Santiago and Lima, giving concerts at each place. At one of these the natives offered him their favourite game-cocks for admission, and at another he is said to have cleared £1,000. Then he pursued his rambles to Havannah, Vera Cruz and Mexico, where a Mass was written by him and produced with great success. At New Orleans, the very musicians laid down their instruments to applaud him. In 1845 he was back in London where he renewed his intimacy with Mr. St. Leger, a friend who had known him when he led the Dublin Orchestra. Wallace enquired of this friend if he thought him capable of composing an opera. "Certainly," said his friend, "twenty." "Then what about a libretto," asked Wallace. "Come over now to Fitzball with me, and I will introduce you." Accordingly they called on the poet, who opened the door to them himself, with the pen in his hand still moist from finishing the libretto of "Maritana." "Here, Fitz," said Mr. St. Leger, "is another Irishman, a compatriot of Balfe's; he wants a libretto." Wallace played to him, and the old poet at once gave him the book of "Maritana," the music for which was shortly after composed by Wallace, and the opera produced at Drury Lane, November 15th, 1845 with great success.

In 1847 he produced another opera, "Matilda of Hungary," and the same year went to reside in Germany, where he remained 14 years. During this period Wallace produced a considerable quantity of piano and other music, and received the high compliment of a commission from the Grand Opera of Paris, but before this work was completed his eyesight beginning to fail him, he abandoned his pen and again took to his wanderings. He visited both North and South America, giving most successful concerts in many cities, and having several adventures and hairbreadth escapes. In 1850 he was nearly blown up in a steam-boat explosion on the Mississippi, and shortly afterwards lost all his savings by the failure of a piano factory in New York, in which he had invested his money. His concerts, however, proved very lucrative, so that he was never actually short of funds, as is too frequently the case with artistic geniuses.

In 1853 Wallace returned to London, and his eyesight having improved, again devoted himself to musical composition. His piano music was very popular and in great demand by the publishers, but no new opera appeared from his hands until 1860, when his "Lurline" was produced at Covent Garden, February 23rd, and met with even greater success than "Maritana," had done, being a fine piece of art work, equally over-flowing with melody. Part of this opera had been written when the composer was in Germany, in the romantic forest district in which the scene of the opera is placed. During the next three years, three more operas were produced, "The Amber Witch" in 1861, "Love's Triumph" in 1862, and the "Desert Flower" in 1863. This was Wallace's last completed work. His health had been failing for some time, when in 1865 he went to the Pyrenees by his doctor's advice, and on October 12th in that year he died at the Chateau de Bayen, in that district. His remains were brought to England and interred in Kensal Green Cemetery, London, in the presence of many of his brother composers, including Benedict, Smart, Sullivan, Macfarren and others.

It is reported that as the service closed, a robin red-breast from a branch of a tree near the grave of the departed master of melody poured forth a strain of sweet music—it was Wallace's requiem.

The plot of "Maritana," written, as I have said, by Fitzball, is founded on the well-known play, "Don Cesar de Bazan," and runs through three acts. The story is a most romantic one and affords some highly dramatic and sensational incidents and situations. The first act opens in a public square of Madrid, the capital of the proud Hidalgo and the dark-eyed senorita, where a band of gypsies are singing to the populace, among them Maritana, a young girl of more than ordinary beauty and vocal accomplishments. The young King Carlos, accompanied by his chief Minister, Don José, happens to pass that way and stops and listens to her song. He is struck with her grace and beauty. Don José, for ambitious purposes of his own, encourages the King in his infatuation, and introducing himself to Maritana, extols her beauty and arouses hopes in her breast of prosperous days and grandeur to come. While the Minister is conversing with Maritana, after the King's departure, Don Cesar de Bazan, a reckless, rollicking cavalier, appears upon the scene, reeling out of a gambling saloon where he had just lost the last of his money. He had been steadily "going to the dogs" for some time, but had formerly been a friend of Don José's. While he is relating the story of his downward career to Don José, Lazarillo, a forlorn young lad who has just attempted to make away with himself, comes up and entreats Don Cesar's aid and protection. Don Cesar takes a fancy to the lad and espouses his cause with more warmth and generosity than discretion, with the result that he becomes involved in a duel. This leads to his arrest, for it is Holy Week, during which duelling had been forbidden on pain of death. The Cavalier is marched off to prison and Don José promises to Maritana, wealth, a splendid marriage and an introduction to the Court on the morrow.

The second act opens in the prison, where Don Cesar lies asleep, with his faithful little friend Lazarillo watching by him. It is five o'clock when he awakes and at seven he is to die by the hangman's hands. Only two hours to live! But the prospect does not disturb him: he is as gay and reckless as ever, and rallies Lazarillo with playful mirth. Then Don José enters the cell and expresses strong sympathy and friendship for him, asking if there is any last wish of his that he can carry out. Don Cesar asks only two favours—one, that Don José will look after his little protégé, Lazarillo, and the other that he may die a soldier's death, and be shot, instead of being ignominiously hung. Don José agrees to both requests on condition that Don Cesar agrees at once to marry a lady unknown to him. He consents, is provided with suitable wedding apparel and partakes of a banquet in honour of the occasion. Maritana, her face covered in a veil, is introduced, and the nuptial rites are performed. While the feast is in progress, Lazarillo brings an order of pardon for Don Caesar from the King, but Don José receives it and conceals it, and at the appointed hour Don Caesar is led out to meet his fate. But his young friend Lazarillo has again done him good service, having extracted the balls from the guns, and when the soldiers fire their volley Don Caesar falls and feigns death to escape as soon as the soldiers are gone. He learns from Lazarillo that his bride, Maritana, has been taken to the Palace of the Marquis of Montefiore, where a grand ball is being given at which Maritana is introduced as the niece of the Marquis. Don Caesar enters and demands his bride. Don José, astounded to see Don Caesar still alive, induces the Marquis to get his wife, the Marchioness, to play the part of the bride. The scheme is soon arranged and the Marchioness, closely veiled, is presented to Don Caesar as the Countess de Bazan. Disgusted at "the precious piece of antiquity" as he terms her, and believing that he has been duped, he is about to sign a paper relinquishing his bride, when he suddenly hears Maritana's voice, and recognizing it as that of his bride, rushes forward to claim her, but is prevented and Maritana is carried away.

The last act opens in the King's Palace, where Maritana is surrounded with luxury, though unaware that she is in the Royal Residence. Don José carries out his plot by introducing the King to her as her husband. She rejects him, but the King is still pressing his suit when Don Caesar bursts into the apartment. The King in rage demands to know his errand, and Don Caesar, equally angry, replies that he is in quest of the Countess de Bazan and inquires who he (the King) is. The King, in confusion, says he is Don Caesar, whereupon the latter promptly responds, "Then I am the King of Spain." Before further explanation can be made, a messenger arrives with the announcement that the Queen awaits His Majesty. Left to themselves Don Caesar and Maritana mutually recognise each other and upon her advice he decides to appeal to the Queen to save her. He waits for her in the Palace garden and, while concealed, overhears Don José making love to the Queen and telling her that the King will meet his mistress that night. He springs out, and challenging Don José as a traitor to his King, slays him, and then returning to Maritana's apartment again finds the King there. He tells the King what he has done to save his honour, and the latter, overcome by Don Caesar's gallantry and loyalty, bestows Maritana's willing hand on him, and appoints him Governor of Valencia, a hundred leagues away from his troublesome creditors.

The bright melodious music of the opera is well adapted to the romance of the drama. It is one of the sprightliest and brightest of the English operas and contains several ballads which for beauty and expressiveness will challenge comparison with the work of any English composer. The opera in full is perhaps unfamiliar to many, but several of the gems of song and melody which sparkle throughout the score are well-known in almost every English drawing-room, and, I think I may say, wherever known are favourites. It is some of these which you will now hear, and although the selection is not so full as had been originally hoped, owing to vacancies in the ranks of the singers, I trust that the programme provided will give some idea of the many beauties of the opera.

Following the lecture came the musical selections from the Opera of "Maritana," which proved a rare musical treat, the ten items being all capitally given. The programme ran:—

Overture ..... Piano and Organ.
Mrs. G. W. Brockhurst and Mr. W. Karl Vincent.
Solo ..... "In Happy Moments."
Dr. D. N. Bonford Emerson.
Duet ..... "Of Fairy Wand had I the Power."
Miss Lloyd Thomas and Mr. S. H. Somerton.
Solo ..... "Alas! Those Chimes."
Mrs. J. Thom.
Solo ..... "Let me Like a Soldier Fall."
Mr. A. W. Quinton.
Duet ..... "Sainted Mother, Guide His Footsteps."
Mrs. E. C. Irwine and Miss Burdett Leach.
Solo ..... "There is a Flower that Bloometh."
Mr. A. E. Cooper.
Solo ..... "Scenes that are Brightest."
Miss Lloyd Thomas.
Solo ..... "This Heart by Woe O'eraken."
Solo ..... "No, My Courage now Regaining."
Mr. S. H. Somerton.

The President, Mr. A. Bellamy Brown, in closing the proceedings, thanked Mr. Quinton for his paper, Mr. Vincent and Mr. Somerton for the hard work they had undertaken in connection with the evening, and the ladies and gentlemen who had taken part in the programme.

He also returned his sincere thanks to various members of the Committee for the loyal manner in which they had worked to make the session a success. He hoped that now the Society had come of age and completed its twenty-first year of work that it would go on gathering strength, find warm supporters and workers to its needs and long hold a place in the affections of the community of which all connected with it would be proud. The President concluded by quoting the couplet upon the programme,

And now bid we each to each 'Farewell,'
'Till Autumn falls again upon the land."

THE LATE MR. E. KARCHER.

We record with regret the death of Mr. Emil Karcher, of Messrs. Otto Reimers & Co., which took place at the General Hospital on Wednesday morning. Mr. Karcher, who had attained the age of 41, was a native of Marten, near Dortmund, Germany, and, coming to Japan in 1889, joined first the firm of Raspe & Co., and later that of P. Schramm & Co. entering finally some six years ago the employment of Otto Reimers & Co. He had made a trip to Europe and shortly after his return last year he became ill, being compelled to stay in the Hospital for some months suffering much pain from inflammation of the intestines. Mr. Karcher was much esteemed among Germans and had many friends among other nationalities who will join with his own countrymen in deeply regretting his removal in the prime of life. He was a genial and kindly gentleman who will not soon be forgotten. He leaves four sisters in Germany to whom the respectful sympathy of all who knew him will be extended. By the wish of the deceased, the remains are to be cremated and sent home.

The funeral service held in Union Church, Yokohama, on Thursday afternoon over the remains of Mr. E. Karcher was very largely attended, nearly every member of the German community being present to pay the last respects to the memory of a good man. The pall-bearers were Mr. Consul-General von Syburg, and Messrs. J. A. Harmsen, A. Wilckens, B. Runge, C. Heitmann, A. Seekamp, and C. Crevatin and R. Reiff from Kobe. The chief mourner was Mr. Max Blumer, local head of the firm of Messrs. Otto Reimers & Co., with which deceased was connected at the time of his death. The casket was covered with lovely wreaths. The service was conducted by the Rev. H. Haas, of Tokyo, while at the organ sat Mr. Saenger, who played most impressively. During the service Madame von Syburg sang Bach-Gounod's "Ave Maria," the violin obbligato being played by Mr. R. Schmid.

CUSTOMS PROTESTS.

Mr. K. Hashimoto, Director of the Yokohama Customs, delivered decision on April 25th on a protest instituted by Messrs. L. J. Healing & Co. On March 13th, the firm imported "iron box bell" and "lightning arrestor." For the former, 20 per cent ad valorem duty in accordance with No. 271 of the tariff and 10 per cent war tax were imposed and on the latter, 10 per cent ad val. duty under No. 10 of the tariff and 5 per cent war tax. The importers contended that both should be dealt with under No. 17 of the tariff as the articles are parts of machinery to be used like "telegraph alarms" or "indicators." The protest regarding the "iron box well" was dismissed and that with regard to the "lightning arrestor," was decided under No. 14 of the Tariff on the ground that the latter is a kind of scientific apparatus.

Another decision was given the same day on a protest brought by Messrs. Sale, Frazar & Co. The firm imported steel bars and steel wire. The appraisers imposed 7½ per cent. ad val. duty on the steel bars under No. 241 of the tariff, and 10 per cent. ad val. duty on the wire in accordance with No. 496. The importers held that the steel and wire should be dealt with under Nos. 217 and 228 respectively and insisted that the materials are mild steel bar and mild steel wire. The protest was rejected.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

A rather severe shock of earthquake was felt on May 2nd in the eastern districts of Formosa. No serious damage was sustained.

The Emperor has decorated Prince Wi-hwa of Korea with the Grand Gordon of the Rising Sun, and several members of his party with Orders.

Three stow-a-ways who attempted to leave for Seattle were arrested on May 2nd on board the Tungo Maru. They had come from Kobe by the same steamer.

Vice-Admiral Richard and five other officers of the French squadron in the Far East proceeded on April 28th to the Palace with the French Minister and were received by the Emperor.

Mr. M. Miyajima, a judge of the Yokohama Local Court, has been transferred to the Yokohama District Court. M. Nakoya, a judge of the Yokohama District Court, has been transferred to the Tokyo Local Court.

Miss Weston, who recently arrived in Tokyo from London in order to investigate the condition of the Japanese poor, paid a visit on May 2nd to Mannen-cho, Shitaya, Tokyo, with another British lady. She will shortly leave for the interior.

Prince Ferdinand of Udine arrived at Kure from Hiroshima at noon on April 30th. His Highness was entertained at the Naval Station with the officers of the Calabria. The same evening, he left by the destroyer Wakaba for Miyajima.

Marquis Ito, Resident-General in Korea, was received by the Emperor on April 28th and explained to His Majesty the conditions of political affairs in Korea. His Excellency was entertained at luncheon in the Chigusa Hall of the Palace.

Prince Ferdinand of Udine arrived at Hiroshima on April 28th from Kobe by the Calabria. He was received by Colonel Murakami, Marquis Asano and officials of the local government office. He subsequently paid a visit to the Itsukushima Shrine.

The Yokohama City will present a golden kite on a silver anchor to Admiral Togo and Vice-Admirals Kaminura, Kataoka and Dewa. The presents will be sent to the officers on May 10th with letters thanking them for the services rendered during the war.

Owing to sparks from the locomotive of a train on the Nagano Railway, fire broke out on May 2nd in the district of Okatani, near Nagano, destroying four houses. The same day another fire occurred in Nakajima near Kanazawa, burning down nineteen buildings. Two persons were injured.

A telegram to the Asahi says that owing to heavy rains, floods have occurred in Canton, all the buildings being flooded to the first floor. Business is entirely suspended. Two local government officials have made an altar and are praying to heaven for the stoppage of the rain. The rice-fields are believed to have been much damaged.

The Fuji Paper Mill Company held a general meeting on April 25th at the office of the Geological Society, Tokyo, and passed the following decisions:—(1) To establish a factory in Hokkaido, and to re-construct the present factories; to raise debentures of two million yen through the Nippon Industrial Bank; to add yen 2,300,000 to the present capital, making a total of yen 4,600,000 is all,

Dr. Paul Ritter, formerly Swiss Consul-General in Yokohama, who was recently appointed Minister in Tokyo, proceeded to the Palace on May 2nd in company with Mr. Matsui, a Master of the Board of Ceremonies. Subsequently he was received by the Emperor in the Phoenix Hall when he presented his credentials. Later the Minister and Madame Ritter were received by the Empress in audience.

"OUR FLAT" AT THE PUBLIC HALL.

By the production of Mrs. Musgrave's comedy "Our Flat" at the Public Hall the Yokohama Amateur Dramatic Club have undoubtedly placed the community under a real obligation. That surely must be the verdict of every member of the large audience that crowded the building to its doors on Monday evening to witness the performance. It might be possible to enter upon a discussion of the character of the play as put upon the boards here—to speculate whether the term comedy or even farcical comedy, correctly describes it—but that question may be safely put entirely on one side in view of the absolute enjoyment which it afforded to those who were present on this the first occasion of its presentation in Yokohama. It begins guilefully. Up to the end of the first act there is nothing very specially out of the way about it. There are two young people who have made a runaway marriage and who are now enduring not merely the estrangement of a father who has repudiated his daughter and her husband, but also the worries, not to say the privations, of poverty and debt; a "slavey" of sorts, and a number of other characters mostly entertaining and amusing in the usual comedy fashion. A visit by the irate parent to gloat upon the straits of the couple seems in the circumstances quite the natural thing for some varieties of irascible fathers to do—in real life as well as in comedy—and the action proceeds, as has been said, smoothly enough with nothing startlingly unconventional about it. But when the author and the actors get warmed to their work in the second act, the audience, which had hitherto only roared at frequent intervals, begins to open its eyes and suffocate. On Monday evening part of the performance was probably dumb-play, for again and again it was not possible for the actors to make themselves heard because of the laughter of the house. It is difficult to think of a scene more droll than that in which Bella, the maid-servant, (Miss Thomas) from the "bath-chair" into which she has been inopportunistically precipitated conducts a tactful negotiation with the proprietor of the Royal Star Theatre (Mr. Brady) for the purchase by the latter of a comedy which her mistress has written. And there were other episodes which it is quite impossible to make separate allusion to, all of the most jolly, mirth-provoking kind; and all—but of course that is taken for granted—so far as the audience could discern while wiping its eyes and passing from one fit into another, absolutely devoid of even the slightest tinge of vulgarity. After the spasms of the second act many people probably felt as if they wanted to go home; that they could not well do justice to themselves or to the actors in any further business of that kind; that as a matter of sheer fairness to the public the last act should have been placed where the second was—despite the sequences—so that one need only rise and get home at once with aching sides. But a brief respite in the interval, and perhaps natural avariciousness—for when one has paid for three acts one wants the worth of one's money—put everybody in a condition to meet the third act, which, though hardly quite as rollicking as its predecessor, was still most entertaining and provocative of cachinnation, so that everybody retained his or her seat till the last words were spoken. The universal sentiment was and is that not in recent years has there been given by amateurs so exceedingly diverting a performance.

Of course much of the success that has been written of here was due to causes other than the actual stage business. The arrangements were under the control of a Committee consisting of Messrs. E. C. Davis, President; E. Beart, F. W. R. Ward, E. Eddison, K. Vincent, G. G. Brady, Hon. Treasurer; and W. S. Moss, Hon. Secretary. But the chief credit to be accorded in connexion with the production is beyond doubt due to Mr. Brady, who appeared on the programme as stage manager, but who was in fact the moving spirit of the whole performance. On the scenery and properties Mr. E. Curjel is to be highly complimented. In the intervals the City Band played acceptable selections.

The plot of "Our Flat" is evolved from the trials and tribulations of an impecunious but devoted couple who start their married life in a top flat in Montmorency Mansions. Reginald Sylvester is a penniless author of plays of the tragic order, with whom his wife Margery has made a run-away match, much to the disgust of the father, Mr. McCullum, a wealthy widower with one other, younger, daughter, Lucy. When the first act opens on the Sylvester's drawing room, the apartment is elegantly and cosily furnished, but, unfortunately, only on the hire system, and as the funds run lower and lower, the installments of payment fall more and more in arrear. One after another Sylvester's plays are returned with thanks by the theatre managers, while his creditors grow more importunate, and to evade their unwelcome interviews he has to arrange with Slout, the hall porter, to telephone when a dun ascends the stairs to see him so that he may make his escape by the lift, and vice versa. When the difficulties of the loving couple have almost reached their climax, their maid-servant, Bella, gives them notice, but is eventually won over by the gift from her mistress of a tea-gown upon which she had set her heart. Mrs. Sylvester suddenly strikes the bright idea of writing a comedy descriptive of their own domestic troubles. It is written and sent to the proprietor of the Royal Star Theatre, Nathaniel Glover, in her husband's name, and is accepted and a day fixed for his visit to Montmorency Mansions to arrange terms. In the meanwhile the last blow falls—the furniture men come and carry away the unpaid-for furniture, just before the anticipated visit of the purchaser of the comedy. Mrs. Sylvester, however, rises to the occasion. She tucks up her skirts, dons a house-maid's apron, and with Bella's assistance quickly improvises sofa, fauteuil and lounge chairs out of some old boxes and a bath, covered over with draperies torn down from the windows and the superfluity of cushions and antimacassars which, with the piano, are all that is left of the plenishings of the apartment. The new arrangements are scarcely completed when Mr. Nathaniel Glover is announced. Mrs. Sylvester, on his entry, rushes away to take off her apron and let down her skirts, and Bella, who is now in the room attired in the "swell" gown presented to her by her mistress, is the only person visible when he arrives. Mr. Glover naturally takes her for Mrs. Sylvester, and Bella cleverly catches on to the situation and concludes a bargain to sell him something—she doesn't know what—for the sum of £200. The play is billed for production at the Royal Star Theatre on a certain date, and Margery Sylvester's father, Mr. McCullum, who is one of the audience on its first night, sees himself portrayed in the comedy as the stony-hearted father. The authorship of the play is ascribed to Mr. Sylvester and Mr. McCullum pays a visit to his daughter and son-in-law to vent his wrath on the author of the play, only to find that it is his own daughter. He of course has discovered the terrible financial straits the couple are in and offers to take his daughter back to her home, but she declines, and his attempt to bring her husband to his knees also fails. In his wrath he seeks for some farther means of increasing the difficulties of the couple and succeeds in buying up a bill backed by his son-in-law, and once more pays a visit to Montmorency Mansions and threatens his daughter to sell up the furniture, only to be shown that there is practically nothing to sell. At the time of his first visit a crisis had arrived in the affairs of the Sylvesters. Madame Volant, Mrs. Sylvester's dressmaker, and Pinchard, the milkman, two importunate creditors, force their way into the apartment and insist on payment. At this juncture Mr. Glover appears on the scene and after complimenting the authoress, whom he now discovers to be Mrs. Sylvester, on the success of her play, is about to depart, when he suddenly remembers the fact that he has not yet paid for the play. He hands over the £200 and the modiste and milkman are quickly paid and dismissed and the stony-hearted father, admiring Sylvester's pluck, relents, and a reconciliation follows. This also includes the forgiveness of Mrs. Sylvester's sister Lucy, who has been in the habit of meeting her sweetheart Vane, a penniless artist, in the Sylvesters' rooms, and has just got married to him. Incidentally, an adventuress named Elise, who has been angling for Mr. McCullum as a husband, is discovered to be a bad lot and exposed by Vane, and the two impecunious couples are invited to take up their abode with the young ladies' father in Prince's Square. So all ends well.

Of the manner in which "Our Flat" was put upon the Yokohama stage it is impossible to write too highly. There was interest in the performance from the rise of the curtain to its fall. To mention the ladies first. Mrs. E. C. Davis as Margery Sylvester gave a charming rendering, characterized by careful and painstaking study of the part. She had to be on the stage nearly all the time, and especially in the furniture business of the second act (where in conjunction with Bella she has to replace with packing boxes and other articles the hired suite which has just been removed) her acting was most effective. In the character of Bella Miss Thomas really excelled herself. When she appeared, as she had to frequently, she quite dominated the stage; her dialogue with Nathaniel Glover (Mr. Brady) was admirable, and her encounters with the various persons who came under her observation most laughable. Miss Thomas may be congratulated on having made a distinct hit. Lucy (Miss Strome) had a pleasant part, that of being "spooned" by the delightfully ridiculous penniless artist Vane (Mr. M. Spencer-Smith), and she acted very carefully and prettily and looked very nice. Miss Moss took the part of Clara, the young girl-busybody of the piece, who runs about the place prying into other people's business, and did full justice to it; though her appearances were few the audience watched her with interest. Madame Volant, the French modiste, who, beginning in broken French declared herself to Sylvester in good strong English as Jane Brown and was thereupon called by that gentleman his Pretty Jane, much to her disgust, was represented with much vivacity and spirit by Miss Zaidee Rogers; and Elise, the adventuress who wanted to marry Mr. McCullum, but was unmasked by Vane, found a pretty representative in Miss M. Thomas, who in the character was seen for but a moment. Among the gentleman Mr. Ward, by reason of his presence, his fine command of voice and his facial control, stood out prominently. Such evenly careful and finished acting was greatly appreciated by the audience and vociferously applauded. Vane, the rattle-trap, was very happily rendered by Mr. Spencer-Smith, and as McCullum, the obdurate father, Mr. C. Aslet gave a very successful rendering of a by no means easy part. Pinchard, the milkman, (Mr. A. H. Windett) and Slout, the hall porter, did their respective turns with zeal and ability, and the workmen from Harrod's who removed the furniture with enthusiasm largely modified by the presence of Bella, were Messrs. Bowden, Strome, Anderson and Tebb. Mr. Brady, whose name came last on the bill among the gentlemen, should of course have been mentioned before, but we are referring to the actors according to their precedence on the programme. His Nathaniel Glover was, as might have been expected, a delicious portrayal of the brilliant gentleman who never made any mistakes or accepted any suggestions. He was capitally made up and while he was on the stage the business was irresistibly funny.

The second performance of "Our Flat" drew a moderate-sized audience to the Public Hall on Wednesday evening—a house not at all commensurate with the merits of the players. But what it lacked in numbers it made up for in appreciation and the folks upon the stage feeling more at home in their parts and influenced by the friendly atmosphere radiating from all parts of the house threw themselves heart and soul into their work. As a natural consequence the comedy went even better than on the opening night. At the fall of the curtain the company were recalled and baskets upon baskets of flowers were handed across the footlights to the ladies. The A. D. C. of Yokohama are to be heartily congratulated upon their sterling success.

THE LAW COURTS.

SHIPPING CASE.

A case instituted by Messrs. Langfeldt and Co., Ltd., No. 73, Yokohama, against Captain H. C. Killman, master of the sailing vessel Agenor, belonging to the West Coast Commercial Co., North Minneapolis, Minnesota, America, claiming yen 6,353.92, came up on April 27th in the Yokohama District Court before Judge Nakanishi. Messrs. Charles H. Lily and Co., Seattle, Washington, were joined in the case, supporting the defendant.

Plaintiffs were represented by Mr. H. Nakamura, and the defendant was absent. The intervenors were represented by Mr. H. Sato.

Plaintiff's Counsel stated that from Jan. 8th to Feb. 12th this year, Messrs. Langfeldt & Co., advanced to the ship's master yen 5,507.58, which was necessary to continue the ship's voyage, the amount included interest and the ship chandlers' commission, yen 275.32; further plaintiffs supplied provisions, etc., amounting to yen 570.96, making a total of yen 6,353.92 in all. On Feb. 16th, plaintiffs asked the master for payment but the latter asked for delay until he could receive a remittance from home. On the other hand, the ship's master made preparations to leave Yokohama for home. Should the ship leave port plaintiffs would be placed in a difficult position and be put to trouble to recover their rights; consequently plaintiffs seized the vessel. Further, plaintiffs claimed interest at the rate of 6 per cent per annum from Feb. 16th till the execution of judgment.

Intervenor's Counsel stated that Messrs Charles H. Lily and Co. had a claim against the ship's owners, the West Coast Commercial Co., and an action to recover this was instituted in the Yokohama Court. The intervenors temporarily seized the sailing ship Agenor while plaintiffs had distrained on the vessel. The value of the ship was too small to settle all the debts. On the other hand, expenses were daily incurred to support the crew. After consultation between plaintiffs and the intervenors, the ship was sold at auction. Out of the amount obtained, the wages of the crew and other expenses were deducted as a preferential right, and the remainder was deposited with the American Consulate-General, the idea being that the money should be paid to any of the creditors in whose favour judgment might be given in Court. Counsel urged that the claim of plaintiffs was not correct and that Messrs. Charles H. Lily and Co. therefore participated in the case supporting the defendant, asking the Court to dismiss the petition.

Discussion took place between the parties as to the ship's master's powers and whether he should meet the present claim. Intervenor's Counsel insisted that the ship's master was liable for any such claim as that filed by plaintiffs.

The parties eventually agreed to appoint an expert to give a definite opinion on the question. The Court decided to summon an American lawyer or other expert familiar with shipping laws and practices.

The hearing was adjourned till May 16th.

KAMIJO v. ALLEN.

In the Yokohama District Court, the hearing of a case filed by T. Kamijo against Mr. George R. Allen, No. 77, Yokohama, claiming yen 58.20 began on April 27th.

Kamijo, the plaintiff, stated that at the end of October last, Mr. Allen ordered seven first class screens costing yen 74 in all, with cords and tassels costing yen 4.20. In November, these were all delivered. Mr. Allen paid up twenty yen on March 12th this year and the remainder was left unpaid, though he had been asked very often for payment.

Defendant contended that the size of the screens was wrong and the colours of the cords and tassels were not suitable. Defendant went into further particulars after which the Court advised him to employ a lawyer to give a clear statement to the Court in accordance with the provisions of law. Mr. Allen said he would do so at the next hearing. The case was adjourned till May 7th.

CLAIM FOR DAMAGE.

On April 28th, in the Yokohama District Court, before Judge Nagata, the hearing was resumed of the action, adjourned from Nov. 16th last, brought by Messrs. Andrews and George against Messrs. Dodwell and Co., claiming yen 315 for damage done to cargo in course of transit by the Den of Crombie, of which the defendants are the local agents.

It may be noted that at the last hearing a question was raised on the technical point whether the agent in a foreign country of a steamship is, under British Law, held responsible for damage caused to cargo during transit through negligence on board a vessel. By mutual consent of the parties the question, on Dec. 8th, was referred to Dr. Hijikata, Professor of Jurisprudence in the Imperial University, for his expert evidence. Dr. Hijikata subsequently laid a report before the Court, stating his opinion that the agent was not bound to make good the damage, and that action could only lie against the head office of the shipping firm.

Plaintiff's Counsel repeated his contention that the defendants should make good the damage for the principals of whom they were the local agents.

Defendant's counsel contended that the defendants were not the owners of the vessel. They were only the local agents, who were not legally responsible for the damage, as testified by the expert.

Judgment was reserved until May 1st.

CLAIM FOR SHIP DAMAGE.

A case instituted by Messrs. Andrews & George against Messrs. Dodwell & Co., claiming yen 315, came up again on May 1st in the Yokohama District Court. Judge Nagata gave judgment dismissing the plaintiffs' claim.

PETITION FOR DECISION IN BANKRUPTCY.

In the Yokohama District Court, an action filed by Messrs Samuel, Samuel & Co., asking for a decision in bankruptcy against R. Okawa, a drug trader, was again brought up. The court delivered judgment in favour of plaintiffs.

As a result of this decision, Judge Tanuma was appointed chief commissioner to administer the bankrupt estate, and R. Koide, a lawyer, administrator. All the property of the bankrupt was distrained.

RHINE DIVORCE CASE.

The hearing of the divorce case between Mr. Charles F. Rhine, No. 220, Bluff, Yokohama, and his wife, Mrs. Gretchen Marie Dorothea Rhine, now in Hamburg, was resumed on May 1st in the Yokohama District Court before Judge Nagata.

At the outset of the hearing, Mr. Y. Akagi, (a Court interpreter for the German language), was appointed as expert witness to examine the signature of Mrs. Rhine on the Power-of-Authority given to her Counsel, and that on a letter which was alleged by Mr. Rhine's Counsel to have been left by her on Dec. 25th, 1892, when she left her husband without notice. The expert, after investigation, stated that the writing of the signatures was similar and admitted of no doubt.

Mrs. Rhine's Counsel asked Mr. Rhine's Counsel whether the latter admitted that the husband had not supported his wife for over two years.

Mr. Rhine's Counsel replied that the husband was not able to support his wife as she had deserted him. The reason why he did not support her was that she lived with a gentleman secretly and consequently he could not find out her whereabouts. Counsel added that she had succeeded to a portion of the property of one of her wealthy relatives and that she could support herself and her child from the income received from the property. On the other hand, there was the question why did she not ask her husband for support when she had necessity for it? Counsel further said that after her desertion, Mr. Rhine left Hamburg for Japan. Previous to his departure, he registered his port of destination at the Hamburg Police Office in accordance with the provisions of German Law. Consequently, his wife was able to ascertain at once the whereabouts of her husband.

Mrs. Rhine's Counsel.—Do you mean that Mr. Rhine has not supported his wife for over two years?

Mr. Rhine's Counsel.—Yes.

At this stage the Court declared that the examination was concluded and that judgment would be given on May 7th.

CLAIM FOR RENT.

In the Yokohama District Court, a case filed by Tarkei-ha, a Chinese merchant, No. 126, against Mrs. A. Grant, No. 122, Yokohama, claiming yen 54 as rent came up on May 2nd.

Plaintiff was represented by Mr. Z. Watanabe.

Plaintiff's Counsel stated that Mrs. Grant leased from the plaintiff on January 16th this year the dwelling which she was still occupying at a monthly rent of eighteen yen. She had not paid rent up to April 15th, when the Chinaman asked her to leave. Counsel asked the Court that the rent incurred after April 15th, be also paid by defendant.

Mrs. Grant said that the dwelling had been occupied by a Greek gentleman which house she leased in succession. She, however, did not know to whom the building belonged. Later having heard that the house belonged to a Chinaman living on lot No. 126, she searched about for the house owner in order to pay the rent. She could not identify the owner. Defendant contended that the payment of rent was delayed owing to wilful negligence on the part of the plaintiff. Defendant added that she was very glad to have found out who the house owner was and to pay him the rent due.

Defendant, producing fifty-four yen, asked the Court to hand the money over to plaintiff. The Court said that the Court could not participate in such a transaction.

The Court advised the plaintiff to settle the dispute out of Court, and adjourned the hearing till May 9th.

BROWN v. COCK-EYE.

A case filed by Mr. J. Brown, No. 123, against Tam Jat, a Chinese tailor carrying on business under the name of Cock-Eye, at No. 81, claiming yen 254 and interest came up on May 3rd in the Yokohama District Court before Judge Nagata.

Plaintiff was represented by Mr. S. Yano. The defendant was absent.

Plaintiff's Counsel stated that in October last, Mr. Brown disposed of for sale at the office of Messrs. Eyton and Pratt, No. 77, 367 yards of navy cloth, the cost being yen 1.60 per yard, and Defendant in October last purchased 367 yards of navy cloth by auction, at yen 1.60 a yard, in all yen 580.80 from the plaintiff on the condition that payment be made on November 4th. Later at the request of the defendant plaintiff took 79 1/3 yards of the woollen cloth for yen 126.80. Of the balance yen 455, the defendant paid two hundred only and since then has failed to pay. Plaintiff's Counsel asked the Court for an order to temporarily distrain the property of the defendant as a means of enforcing payment.

As the defendant was in default, the Court gave judgment in favour of the plaintiff and also decided that the distraint would be granted on a deposit of a hundred yen.

OBJECTION TO DISTRRAINT.

In the Yokohama District Court, an action instituted by Mr. H. V. Gielen against Mr. Paul Helm, presenting an objection to the seizure of buildings on lot No. 156, Yamashita-cho, was brought up again on May 3rd, before Judge Nagata.

At the outset of the hearing plaintiff's Counsel said that the buildings in dispute belonged to the plaintiff. Mr. P. Helm illegally seized the houses merely because he had a pecuniary claim against the Chinamen who dwelt there. As to the fact that the plaintiff had a possessive right over the buildings, Counsel said that he had purchased the perpetual lease of the ground on which the buildings are situated. As the result of the transfer of the possessive right over the ground, the buildings would naturally become the property of the plaintiff. The title-deeds for the perpetual lease were granted to the plaintiff through the Kencho. According to the conditions provided in the title-deed, there should be no official recognition as to the possession of the document (1) unless registration was made at the Japanese office or consulate concerned; (2) unless the rent and taxes were paid to the Japanese government, and (3) the lease-holder would not comply with the other requirements of Japanese law. Otherwise, the title deeds must be confiscated by the Japanese government. For the foregoing reason the buildings on the ground should be regarded as a portion of the ground in the nature of a perpetual lease. Consequently the ground and the buildings could not be considered separately. The buildings in dispute were not registered at the Japanese office together with the ground at the time when the latter was purchased by the plaintiff. The reason was that the laws of Japan and Great Britain alike take the ground and building as one object in the sense of possessive right. After the abolition of extra-territoriality there came up the house-tax question and the dispute was submitted to arbitration. The Hague Court gave a decision on May 22nd last in favour of the foreign house owners. The judgment interprets an explicit explanation. According to the text of the decision given by the Hague Court, buildings on ground owned by foreigners in perpetual lease are to be considered as accessory and can not constitute distinct objects. Therefore the buildings thereon must be exempted from taxation. Counsel further went on to describe the details of the decision delivered by the tribunal after which he said that Mr. Gielen purchased the perpetual lease right over No. 156, Yamashita-cho, on Oct. 31st, 1903, with the buildings and registered the conveyance of the title-deeds on Nov. 19th in the same year in the Yokohama Local Court.

Defendant's Counsel said that the argument of the plaintiff's Counsel was unreasonable. Counsel added that he, would however, reply after the conclusion of the evidence, so as to save time.

The Court asked plaintiff's Counsel whether he was discussing the case or explaining facts. Counsel stated that he had tried to explain facts, the important point being that the ground and the buildings thereon did not constitute two distinct objects, and that consequently Mr. Paul Helm had no right to seize the buildings though he has a pecuniary claim against the Chinamen who lived there. Counsel produced evidence consisting of the copy of registry of the ground, the title-deeds issued in 1865 by the feudal lord, Asano Iga-no-kami, who was then Governor, etc. Defendant's Counsel declined to admit them as direct evidence concerning the present case.

Plaintiff's Counsel asked the Court to adjourn the case for further preparation of evidence. The hearing was thereupon adjourned till May 22nd.

THE VESUVIUS ERUPTION.

HARROWING DETAILS.

San Francisco papers by the T. K. K. steamer America Maru bring dreadful accounts of the outbreak (already briefly reported) of Vesuvius which sent death and ruin over a large extent of the surrounding country. We reproduced on Thursday last telegrams describing the early stages of the eruption up to April 7th and the latest news brings us up to April 13th, when it was thought all danger from the volcano had passed. Making allowance for exaggeration the disaster must have been quite overwhelming in the vicinity of the mountain. One realises that when one reads that the Rome correspondent of The Times, doubtless on trustworthy information, declared that the lava overflow surpassed that of any eruption in two centuries. For of Boscotrecase, which is only a mile or two nearer the mountain than Pompeii on the southern acclivity, a commune where up to the morning of the 7th 10,000 lived, no trace remained on April 8th, and Torre Anunziata, on the sea shore over a mile away, was surrounded by lava and had been evacuated by its 30,000 inhabitants. These and the people of Torre de Greco which, five miles nearer Naples and also nearer the volcano, has been previously overwhelmed, notably in 1631, and is close to Herculaneum, were all removed to Naples. On the date mentioned that city was a scene of perfect desolation, everything being covered by ashes from the volcano. At Torre Anunziata the cemetery and a few houses had been overwhelmed but the flow there and at Torre de Greco had ceased.

The temporary lull on the south and south-east side was accompanied, however, by an outburst of cinders and ashes from the mountain to the east and north-east. This caused the practical destruction of San Giuseppe, a place of 6,000 inhabitants. All but 200 of the people fled from San Giuseppe, and these 200 assembled in a church to attend mass. While the priest was performing his sacred offices the roof fell in and about sixty persons were crushed. The unfortunates were for hours without surgical or medical assistance. The only thing left standing in the church was a statue of St. Anne, the preservation of which the poor, homeless people accepted as a miracle and promise of deliverance from their peril. At Ottajano five churches and ten houses fell under the weight of ashes and cinders, which lie four feet deep on the ground. In the fall of the buildings about twelve persons were killed and many were injured. The village is completely deserted by its people. After the evacuation of the place the barracks and prisons fell in. Somma Vesuviana, due north from the volcano, was reported overwhelmed on the 9th. Steamships, war vessels and special trains were meanwhile conveying thousands of homeless people to Rome, Naples, and Castellamare. On the 9th the King and Queen reached Naples from Rome, arriving while the eruption was at its worst. The situation on the 9th was thus summarized:—

The conditions at Torre Anunziata and Pompeii improved owing to the change in direction taken by the flowing lava. On the other hand, the conditions at Ottajano are worse. Ashes and cinders had fallen there four feet deep, and frequent earthquake shocks were felt. Ten houses and five churches had fallen, five persons had been killed and an unknown number of persons wounded. Serious apprehension is felt for the inhabitants of the country in the vicinity of the town of Caserta, called the Versailles of Naples, a place of about 25,000 inhabitants, in which direction the lava is flowing. The town of Nola, an old place of 15,000 inhabitants, twenty-two miles from Naples, is being burned under the shower of ashes coming from the crater, which were carried by the wind as far as the Adriatic sea. San Giorgio and Torre del Greco are half-buried in ashes and sand, and the roofs of many houses had fallen in or were collapsing. About 150,000 refugees from Vesuvius have sought shelter here (Naples) and elsewhere. Four thousand were lodged in the granite barracks of this city.

All the trains are delayed owing to the tracks being covered with cinders, and telegraphic communication with all points is badly congested. The stream of lava which has been threatening Torre Anunziata, a town of 28,000 inhabitants, twelve miles from Naples, has remained stationary since Sunday evening, so that the danger that the place would be overwhelmed appears to have passed. The action of Mount Vesuvius perceptibly diminished and the shower of ashes ceased to fall over Naples for a time this morning. But ashes and sand began falling later in the day. When the last train was leaving Boscotrecase yesterday a fresh crater opened near the observatory station. An excursion steamer attempting to reach Naples from the island of Capri to-day had to return, as the passengers were being suffocated by the ashes. The quantity of ashes and cinders thrown up by Mount Vesuvius within the last twenty-four hours is unprecedented. An analysis showed this discharge to be chiefly composed of iron, sulphur and magnesia. When dry the whole region seemed to be under a gray sheet, but now, after a fall of rain, it appeared to have been transformed into an immense lake of chocolate. The evacuation of threatened villages and towns continued through the day, but adequate means to transport the inhabitants were lacking, although thousands of soldiers, with artillery carts, had been sent to the places where the sufferers were most in need of assistance. At many places the people were suffering from panic and a state of great confusion existed, which was added to by superstition. Some of the parish priests refused to open their churches to people who tried to obtain admittance, fearing that an earthquake would destroy the buildings when full of people and thus increase the list of disasters. Crowds of women thereupon attacked the churches, pulled down the doors and took possession of the pictures and statues of the saints, which they carried about as a protection against death. Many people camped along the roads and in the fields outside of Torre Anunziata and Ottajano, where they thought they would be safer than in the towns, defying the elements, though nearly blinded by ashes, wet to the skin by the rain and terrorized by the gigantic flaming mass above, resembling a scimitar ready to fall upon them. Only about 2000 out of 32,000 inhabitants of Torre Anunziata dared to remain in the town, which was patrolled by soldiers. Both the King and Queen, although greatly fatigued, insisted upon leaving immediately for Torre Anunziata, his majesty remarking: "If Torre Anunziata is in danger it is my duty to be there."

At one point the King and his suite, who occupied several automobiles, were struck by a small cyclone of ashes and cinders which partly blinded, choked and stopped them. As the King's motor car was first and was some distance ahead of the car in which the members of his suite were riding, it was lost sight of for some time in the clouds of whirling ashes, and considerable anxiety was felt for his majesty's safety. But it was discovered that the King had ordered his automobile to be driven at full speed ahead, and had crossed the path of the cyclone with great rapidity. A short distance further on, however, the ashes were four feet deep, making it impossible for the royal party to continue their route in the motor cars. Consequently, the King and his suite descended and continued their way on foot.

These conditions continued to exist during the following day, only that details were coming in with regard to the ruined villages. A Naples correspondent telegraphing on May 11th said:—

So widespread is the catastrophe caused by the eruption of Vesuvius that it is estimated that it will require an organized body of 100,000 men and the expenditure of many millions of dollars to raze houses made unsafe for habitation by the accumulation of ashes and cinders on the roofs, erect temporary huts of refuge for the thousands who have been obliged to flee from their homes, clear the roofs of buildings that may yet be saved and extricate from the ruins of fallen structures and bury the dead. The papers unite to-day in urging the Government to send here General Baldissera, who saved the situation after the crushing defeat of the Italians at the hands of the Abyssinians at Adowa, Abyssinia, in the spring of 1896, and instruct him to organize and control the work of relief. The distress among the tens of thousands of fugitives is appalling. The Government has forwarded supplies of food and money, several of the Italian cities have done the same, and private citizens are contributing money for the assistance of the sufferers. More help is needed. Although the report that Sarno has been destroyed is denied, it is now officially admitted that Ottajano has been buried. The number of killed there and in the surrounding villages is not known, but 300, it is believed, would be a low estimate. Even Capri, a small island off the coast of Campania nineteen miles south of Naples, a favorite resort for tourists and artists, has been covered with ashes and has been abandoned by its foreign population, which included several Americans. The magnitude of the disaster is almost indescribable. Mount Vesuvius has spread desolation and terror over an immense tract of country.

By the 12th the state of the mountain had reassured people somewhat, for it was now apparent that the lava was cooling on all sides, and telegrams from Naples were mainly taken up with account of relief measures being undertaken and descriptions of the doings of the King, who again visited the devastated regions. We quote:—

Every day that passes gives new evidence of the magnitude of the catastrophe. To-day's visit of King Victor Emmanuel to Ottajano revealed new tragedies. At one point his majesty was obliged to abandon his motor car and he went forward on horseback amid constant danger, his horse floundering through four feet of ashes, stumbling into holes, blinded by the fall of large cinders and a target for falling basaltic masses. In the presence of the King 129 more bodies were extricated from the ruins, white ashes and red sand falling as though determined not to relinquish their victims. The dead at Ottajano are said to number 550.

The King was deathly pale. To a priest who came to him he said:

"How did you escape?"

"I placed myself in safety" replied the priest.

"What do you mean?" asked the King.

"Realizing the danger," was the priest's reply, "I had left for Nola."

The King flushed with anger.

"What?" he cried, "You, a minister of God, were not here to share the danger of your people and administer the last sacraments! You did very wrong."

The King inspected all the "camp hospitals," in which the soldiers are caring for suffering fugitives, speaking to the injured, comforting them in their misfortunes, and asking them what he could do to relieve their distress. On receiving a reply indicating a sufferer's desire that something be immediately done in his or her behalf, the King gave orders to have the desire fulfilled. This gave rise to many heart-rending scenes.

As the King bent over a poor man, with toiling hands, whose right leg had been amputated, the sufferer, replying to his majesty's question regarding his immediate necessities, said with tears in his eyes "Send me my son, who is serving as a soldier." The King, who was visibly affected, clasped the man's hand and exclaimed: "My poor fellow, I can do much, but to grant your request would mean breaking the laws, which I must be the first to respect. I would give anything I have were it possible by so doing to send your son to you, but I cannot do so."

Queen Helene was with the King when he started for Ottajano, but she was obliged to turn back, as the task was one not suitable for a woman.

She spent most of the day in visiting the injured in Naples hospitals and inspecting the houses provided for refugees.

Director Matteucci, who heroically remained at his post in the observatory on the mountain, said on the 13th that the danger period had passed. A correspondent travelled on the above date in the belt over which ashes continued to fall. He said:

This lies to the north of Naples, as the wind now carries the discharge away from the city. At Rome there was sunshine, but twenty miles south a thin veil of smoke made near-by mountains dimly visible, their snow peaks soiled and sooty. The zone of semi-obscurity began twenty-five miles above Naples. Here and there was an uncanny phenomenon. The sun though shining, was invisible. Its light seemed to come through smoked glass shedding a sickly glare upon whitened vegetation. Everything was covered with powder. The locomotives were coated as though they had plowed through tar. Pretty white villas were daubed and dripping with mud, and the people were busy on the roofs shovelling off ashes. The crowds at the stations resembled millers, their clothing covered with graphite powder. The Campanian presents the appearance of a Dakota prairie after a blizzard, except that everything is gray instead of white. The ashes lie in drifts knee deep. Villages, trees and churches have been beaten with gray mud on the sides exposed to the volcanic storm.

Ten miles north of Naples the train enters an area of semi-night. Billows of thick smoke roll from the dim mountain. Railway telegraph poles become invisible twenty feet away. The train moves with extreme precaution to avoid collisions. Breathing is difficult and the smoke makes the eyes water. This obscurity lasts until a short distance north of Naples, where the sky clears and normal conditions are resumed.

No better evidence of the improved condition of affairs in the section affected by the eruption of Mount Vesuvius can be presented than the following telegram from Director Matteucci, sent this evening from the observatory on the side of the volcano:

"Last night and to-day the activity of Vesuvius and the agitation at the surface of the volcano sensibly diminished. Electric discharges ceased to-day, and the discharge was less abundant. From the presumed formation of the crater, and other indications, and if the news coming to me is true of the cessation of lava at Boscorecaze, I predict with reserve that in two or three days volcanic calm will reign."

Conditions at Naples were so much better to-day that the people were almost incredulous of the tales of horror told by those who had escaped from the towns, villages and the country farther within the zone of devastation. The weather was fine and the wind had shifted so that the clouds of ashes from the volcano instead of enveloping Naples, were carried in the direction of Caserta. The apprehensions of the populace gave place to a smiling confidence in which there was no reflection of the terror which had prevailed for the past week.

But in other quarters there is no escaping from the awful evidences of the volcano's fury. At Boscorecaze the exhumation of the dead is being carried on by soldiers, who, owing to the advanced stage of decomposition of the corpses, are unable to work more than an hour at a time. The work is one of great financial cost as well as danger and arduousness to those engaged in it. Many of the bodies are merely shapeless, unrecognizable masses of flesh and bones, while others are but little disfigured. As quickly as possible they are buried in quicklime to lessen as far as may be the danger of epidemic.

None but those engaged in the work of recovering the corpses are permitted in the vicinity.

Professor Matteucci climbed up Vesuvius to a point a long way above the observatory, at the imminent risk of his life, and ascertained that, unless the conditions change radically, there will be no further discharge of lava at present.

THE BLUFF GARDENS.

By kind permission of the Admiral commanding the American squadron in these waters, the band of the U.S. flagship Ohio played in the Bluff Gardens on Tuesday afternoon (May Day) and the event attracted a fairly large attendance of ladies. The Bluff Gardens are now in their loveliest spring dress, the show of azaleas and maples being at its finest. Indeed residents hardly appreciate the beauty of these gardens. All the tennis courts were open and fully occupied until the shades of evening fell. We would suggest to the Committee of the Ladies Lawn Tennis and Croquet Club that on the next occasion on which they obtain the services of a band, they inform the courteous Superintendent of the Bluff Police so that the services of a constable or two be requested to maintain order and keep within bounds the behaviour of lads who are naturally attracted by such an unusual event. It seems a pity that the privilege of playing amid such lovely surroundings should be abused as it was on Tuesday evening; grass can not stand the rough usage of gels.

Many years ago the ladies interested in the gardens arranged one of the most picturesque spectacles imaginable—a living Chess Tournament. Many who took part are still amongst us, and the gentleman who took the part of a Franciscan Monk, Mr. W. B. Mason, we feel sure, if approached would only be too happy to again organize some kind of a fete champêtre. Of course this suggestion is offered with all diffidence but it certainly seems a pity that the beauties of the Bluff Gardens should lie concealed from the greater portion of the community.

CORRESPONDENCE.

"YIELDING."

(TO THE EDITOR OF THE "JAPAN MAIL.")

SIR,—In to-day's long editorial of your paper entitled "Yielding" I notice you say that "the issue of the Portsmouth Conference was the most signal triumph won by Japan throughout the whole war"; also that "Russia suffered her greatest defeat at Portsmouth"; also that "it is astounding to think of the terms that Baron Komura succeeded in obtaining and that Russia was induced to concede"; also that "to obtain such terms under such circumstances was a feat of diplomacy without parallel."

When you stop to consider that Russia's navy was completely effaced, her armies everywhere overwhelmingly beaten and cooped up like cornered rats at Harbin confronted by Oyama's victorious army eager for attack; Saghalien entirely captured and Vladivostock's early surrender imminent, her troops mutinous, her finances practically bankrupt and a dreadful and almost universal revolution of her subjects at home,—when you stop to consider these facts, I say, aren't you "coming it rather strong" in the face of the world's verdict that it was Russia who won the diplomatic victory at Portsmouth? You admit that you do not find one publicist of note to take your view of the case.

W. A.
April 27th.

YOKOHAMA AND TOKYO FOREIGN RESIDENTS ASSOCIATION'S EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE FOR THE RELIEF OF SUFFERERS BY THE WAR.

(TO THE EDITOR OF THE "JAPAN MAIL.")

SIR,—This Committee, which was organized on February 29th, 1904, has concluded its labours. At a meeting held at the Chartered Bank on Tuesday, April 24th, the whole of the balance of the funds specially received on behalf of the famine-stricken people in Northern Japan, yen 3,019.88, was voted to be sent to the Rev. C. S. Davidson, Secretary and Treasurer of the Sendai Foreign Committee of Famine Relief, thus closing that account. This vote was made in accordance with the request of the Sendai Committee, which at a recent meeting resolved to "request foreigners in Japan to send in any further contributions intended for the Committee, as far as possible, by the end of April." Should any further sums be subscribed by the foreign public through this Committee towards the famine, the same will be paid into the H. and S. Bank to be transmitted to the Sendai Famine Fund.

The Committee further made a final vote of yen 7,000 to the Yokohama Shohai Gikwai and yen 2,776.37 to the Kanagawa Ken Gunjin Kwazoku Kyugo-Kwai, through Governor Sufu, thus disposing of the last of the money received on behalf of the Fund for the Relief of Sufferers by the War, which in the aggregate reached yen 33,275.37 and which has been expended from time to time throughout the period of the War, the first grant being made on June 3rd, 1904. The Fund is now closed, and the accounts are open for the inspection of subscribers upon application to the Treasurers at the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank.

The Committee on retiring from office desire to express their thanks to the community for the ready response made to their appeal for funds: to H. E. Governor Sufu, to Mr. Otani Kahei, and Madame Watanabe for advice, suggestions and help always so readily accorded, and to the Committees of the various Charitable Societies through whose channels the money has been mainly applied.

For the Committee.

JAMES WALTER, Chairman.

THE LIABILITY OF FOREIGN SHIPPING COMPANIES.

(TO THE EDITOR OF THE "JAPAN MAIL.")

SIR,—The communication to you from Dr. F. Yamada, in your issue of to-day, states a position of affairs which applies to only exceptional cases; and it is chiefly because of the difficulty in Japanese Law Courts of strictly confining arguments to the original points in dispute, that some Agents of Steam Ship Lines take advantage of a Law which exempts them from liability.

As Agents for the Ocean Steam Ship Company, Limited, and for the China Mutual Steam Navigation Company, Limited, we never decline to accept service in any proceedings, nor decline to give clients of these Steam Ship Companies every facility in Japan to which they would be entitled in Great Britain.

Shipping Companies will continue to avoid legal proceedings in Japan, as far as possible, so long as there remains a strong probability of a decision being given under "Japanese laws and customs," when the contract is distinctly made subject to the law of another nation.

Contracts for carriage by our Lines bear the clause "Contracts wherever made, to be construed by English law" and it has been established that:—

"The whole of the contract is contained in the Bill of Lading, and no terms of the contract outside the Bill of Lading can be looked at;" whilst the Bill of Lading Act, 1855, enacts:—

"Every consignee of goods named in a bill of lading, and every indorsee of a bill of lading to whom the property in the goods therein mentioned shall pass, upon or by reason of such consignment or indorsement, shall have transferred to and vested in him all rights of suit, and be subject to the same liabilities in respect of such goods as if the contract contained in the bill of lading had been made with himself."

If the Japanese Courts would therefore see to it that a question of liability shall be limited to the terms of the contract, it is highly probable that Dr. Yamada would have no further cause to complain of the unsatisfactory position of shippers and consignees in Japan in their relations with Foreign Steam Ship Agencies.

We are, Sir,
Your obedient servants,
P. PRO BUTTERFIELD AND SWIRE, M. BEART.

Agents, Ocean Steam Ship Company, Ltd.
China Mutual Steam Navigation Co.

TELEGRAMS.

(TO THE EDITOR OF THE "JAPAN MAIL.")

SIR,—I have the honour to inform you that I am in receipt of instructions from our head office in Tokyo to the effect that telegrams for California, Oregon, Washington, and British Columbia will be accepted for transmission via Manila. The authorities, however, are not responsible for delay, mutilation, and non-arrival. Telegrams for other places in America via the same route will be accepted at the sender's risk for delay.

Yours faithfully,
E. ODANI,
Superintendent, Telegraph Department.

A quantity of new tea was put on the Nagasaki market on May 1st, the price being seventy yen per 100 kin.

YOKOHAMA LITERARY SOCIETY'S MUSICAL COMPETITION.

The third annual musical competition held under the auspices of the Yokohama Literary Society took place in Van Schaick Hall on Saturday afternoon. The Judges were Mrs. E. P. W. Skrimshire, Mrs. R. J. Ward, Miss Griffin and Miss Lloyd Thomas, and with them were associated as referees, the President (Mr. A. Bellamy Brown) and the Vice-President (Mr. W. Karl E. Vincent). There were fourteen entries—just double the number which entered for the first competition—and all the candidates presented themselves at the examination room. The musical standard shown in these competitions is slowly but surely rising, but again the Judges had to deplore the comparative indifference shown in scales and arpeggios—the very foundation work of musical distinction. The awards follow:

DIVISION I.

Miss Blundell, Prize winner.
Miss Cain, Certificate.
Miss Inouye Hatsumi, Highly commended.

DIVISION II.

Miss Olive Beart, 1st Prize.
Miss Georgie Kenderdine, 2nd Prize.
Miss Connie Brockhurst, Certificate.

DIVISION III.

Miss Joy Beart, 1st Prize.
Miss Minnie Hahn, 2nd Prize.

DIVISION IV.

Miss Norah Tipple, 1st Prize.
Miss Ray Tipple, 2nd Prize.

THE CABLE OPERATORS AND THE EARTHQUAKE.

Honolulu papers by the America Maru show how the cable operators at San Francisco fared during the earthquake and fire. Before being driven from his post the man on duty contrived to send half way across the Pacific the following series of messages:—

Terrific earthquake 5.15 this morning (18th). Enormous amount damage. Land line system demoralized.

Call building is now on fire. The fire is only one block away from us in each direction.

Expect to be ordered out any minute. City on fire all around us. Nearest approach a block away.

The Call building is wrapped up in flames. Everything burning. Palace hotel burning.

You may lose us any minute. Constant quakes. Martial law declared. Water coming up Market Street.

Preparing to move. Street looks doomed. Have all small stuff loose, ready to move but unable to get a team.

Forlorn hope. We are forced to close down now. Electric light and gas have failed. Plaster falling in office. Water main destroyed at first, but supply obtained.

Later—Abandon office now. Good bye.

Silence then ensued till 11 a.m. on the 20th when connection was resumed, the operator describing the progress of the fire. In the course of his messages he said:

The Mission is now burning, but the fire has not reached Sixteenth street. Presidio as near as we can tell, is unaffected. Hayes Valley is afire west to Octavia street and all property west of Van Ness avenue and Market street. Nothing remains but the charred ruins of a once beautiful city. The cable office was dynamited and we are now sending from the hut. Owing to the rising water but one operator at a time is allowed in the building. We are preparing shelter tents. We have food sufficient to last several days.

The Palace, St. Francis, Flood Building and Emporium are destroyed. Fairmount Hotel is destroyed. Relief is pouring in from all sections to those suffering.

Oakland and Piedmont suffered light shocks, but the damage is not great, as there is no fire. People are at liberty to leave San Francisco, but no one is allowed to enter and the place is under strictest martial law. We cannot get to town except by going through the hot ruins and to send a message means an expense of $75.00. The journey is made at a great risk of life.

I am informed that the shipping is damaged, but to what extent I am unable to determine. My family and near relatives are in the country, but whether alive or dead I have no way of telling.

Lord! this has been a fierce three days.

About this time another operator arrived to assist and at 3.40 p.m. on they reported:—"Just had another small shock. Floor (cable hut) has perceptible list and pedestal which is built into the basement has come up about thirty inches. These are cracks in front hall, but guess will risk it. Only working with candles, so will have to close at finish of this." They added at 6 p.m.:—"Waterfront man travelled through burned district. Could hardly make his way. All ruins so you can't hardly tell one street from another. Great many patients from different hospitals and Sisters from different convents were taken aboard transport Logan out in harbour. Dynamiting seems to have ceased, so feel sure that it is under control. Thick fog came in about an hour ago which will help dampen things. That's all we know. There are reports that Congress, Hearst and other wealthy people are giving millions. Starting bakeries, etc. Soldiers supplying free rations. Worst seems to be over. That's all we know." Finally at 7.30 p.m. on the 20th:—"The cable operator at the hut, San Francisco, reports all his candles out and there will be no more messages sent until daybreak to-morrow."

TELEGRAMS.

(REUTER'S SPECIAL SERVICE.)

INSURANCE LOSSES.

London, April 27.

The Royal Insurance Company states that its possible liabilities in San Francisco will be £1,350,000 sterling; the London and Lancashire has been obliged to deplete its reserves by a million and has decided to raise half a million of new capital; the Liverpool and London and Globe estimates its loss at under a million.

CALIFORNIAN EARTHQUAKES.

London, April 27.

A minute shock of earthquake was felt in San Francisco on Wednesday afternoon. It shook the walls of the ruined buildings, and was felt also at Oakland and Berkeley.

The Governor of California is calling a special session of the State Legislature to authorise the issue of bonds for purposes of reconstruction.

THE FRENCH STRIKES.

In view of the movement for a general strike, and the approach of May Day enormous military preparations are being made in Paris.

DISGRACEFUL SCENE IN PARLIAMENT.

An unprecedented scene took place in the House of Commons. Mr. Keir Hardie moved a resolution in favour of women being granted the electoral franchise. Women in the Ladies' Gallery constantly interrupted the speakers who opposed the resolution, until the Ladies' Gallery had to be cleared. The women's behaviour evoked general disgust. One of them poked through the grille a flag inscribed "Vote for women."

THE RUSSIAN LOAN.

London, April 28.

The English portion of the Russian loan has been fully covered, and the French portion is covered many times over.

SAN FRANCISCO INSURANCE.

No further statements have been given out regarding the losses of insurance companies in San Francisco, but the shares of leading companies concerned have fallen sharply.

THE BATTLESHIP "KASHIMA."

The Kashima leaves for Japan on the 8th June. Preparations are being made for farewell festivities. Before leaving she is to carry out trials in speed and gunnery off Portsmouth.

EGYPT AND TURKEY.

The British reinforcements for Egypt consist of one battery of artillery, the Inniskilling Dragoons, an infantry battalion, probably from Malta, making the total garrison 5,000.

PRAISE FOR SIR ERNEST SATOW.

Later.

The Times heartily congratulates Sir Ernest Satow on the successful conclusion of the long and arduous Tibetan negotiations, which worthily completes his distinguished term of service.

THE ENTENTE CORDIALE.

Le Temps has an article saying that France heartily supports England in the Turco-Egyptian embroglio as England supported France at Algieras.

THE UNREST IN NATAL.

London, April 29.

Natal has ordered 3½ million rounds of ammunition from Woolwich. The District of Vryheid has been requested to furnish a Boer commando.

THE FRENCH TROUBLES.

The French Cabinet has prohibited processions and assemblages upon the streets on May Day.

THE CHINESE DONATION TO AMERICA.

The State Department at Washington has declined the Empress-Dowager of China's offer of 100,000 taels towards the relief of distress in San Francisco. The money will probably be distributed among the homeless Chinese.

FRENCH DOMICILIARY VISITS.

Later.

The police have searched the residences of Labour, Royalist and Clerical leaders and the offices of Clerical journals in Paris who are suspected of fomenting the strike troubles in the north of France.

BRITISH-TURKISH-EGYPTIAN DISPUTE.

The British Cabinet has considered the Sinai question and decided to dispatch the cruiser Minerva to Ealarish to investigate the removal of the boundary pillars. Meanwhile negotiations are proceeding between London and Constantinople. The British Government are fully determined upon insisting that the Turks shall withdraw from Egyptian territory. The situation is regarded as being grave.

NATAL.

The situation in Natal is growing more serious owing to the revolt of the Siganand tribe. The Europeans in Swaziland are alarmed and request protection.

THE SPANISH MARRIAGE.

London, April 30.

The marriage of King Alfonso of Spain has been changed to the 31st May.

THE "KATORI."

The Japanese warship Katori is the fastest battleship for her gunpower in the world. At her speed trials on the Clyde she developed 20.22 knots and her speed at three-quarter engine power was 17.8 knots. These results are far in excess of Japanese requirements.

GERMANY AND SINAI.

The Kölnische Zeitung declares that Germany is not interested in the petty Akabah affair.

THE TURCO-EGYPTIAN SITUATION.

London, May 1.

King Edward leaves Naples for England by train to-day owing, it is understood, to the Turco-Egyptian situation. Queen Alexandra returns home in the Royal yacht.

The cruiser Minerva has arrived at Elarish. A battery sails for Egypt in the second week of May.

The Norddeutsche Zeitung repudiates the suggestions that Germany is responsible for Turkey's obstinacy and that she is seeking to undermine Britain's position in Egypt.

The Berlin Post says it is impossible for Britain to allow the status quo to be disturbed, and the sooner Constantinople realises this the better.

BRITISH TEA DUTY REDUCED.

The duty on tea is to be reduced by one penny from the 17th of May.

MAY DAY IN FRANCE.

In spite of M. Clemenceau's assurances order was preserved on May Day. An immense exodus from Paris began on Sunday. The railways were compelled to increase the train service.

THE BRITISH BUDGET.

London, May 2.

According to the Budget the realized surplus for 1905-6 is £3,466,000. The estimated expenditure for 1906-7 is £141,786,000, and the revenue £144,860,000. This, after deduction of about £400,000 for contingencies, leaves disposable a surplus of £2,700,000. It is proposed to devote half a million of this surplus and half a million of the Chinese indemnity to the reduction of the National Debt, making, with the ordinary provision and the surplus of 1905-6, a total reduction of £13,500,000, and £200,000 will be devoted to certain postal charges.

The differential duty on stripped tobacco has been reduced by 2½d. There is a loss on revenue by remissions of two million. The coal duty is repealed. The income tax and the beer and spirit duties remain unchanged.

THE TEA DUTY.

Owing to representations Mr. H. H. Asquith, Chancellor of the Exchequer, has decided to enforce the reduction of the duty on tea from May 14th.

GREAT BRITAIN AND TIBET.

London, May 3.

Earl Fitzmaurice, speaking in the House of Lords, said the Anglo-Chinese Treaty signed at Peking on April 27 secures the adhesion of China to the Lhasa Convention, and nowise alters any arrangements made under it. Great Britain undertakes not to encroach on the territory of Tibet, nor to interfere in its internal government. China undertakes not to allow any foreign State to interfere with the Government of Tibet. The Treaty also says that Great Britain does not seek for herself any concessions under Article IX. of the Lhasa Treaty which are denied to foreigners.

The amount of the Tibetan indemnity remains unchanged.

TEA DUTY.

The House of Commons unanimously passed the resolution in favour of lowering the duty on tea.

The Tea Buyers' Association telegraphed to Mr. Asquith that a reduction of merely one penny was absolutely unsatisfactory; they would prefer that the duty should remain unaltered.

NEW ZEALAND AND THE JAPAN FAMINE.

New Zealand is remitting to Japan £1,000 in aid of the Famine Relief Fund.

(BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT WITH THE "TOKYO ASAHI SHIMBUN.")

THE ANGLO-TURKISH DISPUTE.

London, April 30.

A Constantinople telegram says that the decision to reinforce the British garrison in Egypt has not yet caused the Turkish Government to abandon its pretensions regarding the Turkish-Egyptian frontier.

A Cairo telegram says that the Turkish frontier force is being reinforced and that artillery is secretly arriving.

COUNT WITTE RESIGNS.

London, May 1.

A telegram from St. Petersburg states that Count Witte resigned on Friday and the Tsar accepted his resignation on Saturday.

COUNT WITTE'S RESIGNATION.

London, May 3.

A St. Petersburg telegram says that Count Witte resigned because he insisted upon the promulgation of an indubitable organic law giving him a free hand and depriving the Douma of all initiative in the government of the country. The Czar refused. His Majesty declared that the project violated his promises and was unwise and dangerous.

THE ITALIAN NAVY.

Telegrams from Rome say that the leading newspapers declare that the armament of the Navy is extravagant in quantity and that the commissariat is careless and dishonest.

(FROM THE "KOKUMIN SHIMBUN")

San Francisco, April 25.

Owing to the vigorous action of the authorities, all danger of a pestilence has now passed. Many bodies are still among the ruins. The authorities are burying the dead in public squares nearest to the location where discovered. All the banking houses will re-open within thirty days, and not a single bank has failed. Thousands of inhabitants are fleeing from the city, but all able-bodied men are restrained. Food supplies are pouring in from all over the country.

(FROM THE "HOCHI SHIMBUN.")

Washington, April 26.

The damage sustained in San Francisco as the result of the earthquake and fire is so far estimated at a thousand million dollars. The number of killed probably exceeds five thousand. Slight shocks are continuous. The American Government has defrayed another million dollars to relieve the distressed.

LATEST SHIPPING.

ARRIVALS.

Yasawa Maru, German steamer, 2,364, N. Mathieson, 27th April.—Melbourne via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Kasuga Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,214, K. Kohri, 27th April.—Shanghai, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Ameer, British steamer, 2,689, W. T. Hall, 27th April.—London via ports, General.—Becker & Co.

Benatder, British steamer, 1,959, Geo. McMillan, 30th April.—London via ports, General.—Carnes & Co.

Indian Monarch, British steamer, 2,818, Patie, 30th April.—London via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Obra, British steamer, 3,521, McCormick, 30th April.—Rangoon, Rice.—Samuel Samuel & Co.

Nunantia, German steamer, 2,806, Feldtmann, 30th April.—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—P. & A. S.S. Co.

Arabia, German steamer, 2,868, H. Metzenthin, 30th April.—Portland, Oregon, Mails and General.—P. & A. S.S. Co.

America Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,463, P. H. Going, 2nd May.—San Francisco via Honolulu, Mails and General.—Toyo Kisen Kaisha.

Winnebago, British steamer, 2,965, McDonald, 1st May.—San Francisco, Kerosene Oil.—Standard Oil Co.

Tjiltraung, Dutch steamer, 3,052, von Wyck Jurriane, 2nd May.—Java, General.—Ed. van Nierop & Co.

Flintshire, British steamer, 2,476, G. C. Cundy, 3rd

May.—London via ports, General.—Samuel Samuel & Co.

Amiral Exelmans, French steamer, 3,013, Gens, 3rd May.—Antwerp via ports, General.—M. M. S.S. Co.

DEPARTURES.

Benvenue, British steamer, 2,505, R. Kroble, 27th April.—London and Antwerp via ports, General.—Carnes & Co.

Fulham, British steamer, 2,766, H. Gow, 27th April.—Mojito, Ballast.—Dodwell & Co., Ltd.

Empress of India, British steamer, 3,003, E. Beetham, 37th April.—Vancouver, B.C., Mails and General.—C. P. R. Co.

Tremont, American steamer, 6,195, T. W. Garlick, 27th April.—Manila and ports, Mails and General.—Dodwell & Co., Ltd.

Aker, Norwegian steamer, 1,899, Gaulxssen, 27th April.—Kobe, General.—Samuel Samuel & Co.

Sachsen, German steamer, 3,119, F. von Letten-Petersen, 28th April.—Bremen and Hamburg via ports, Mails and General.—H. Ahrens & Co., Nachf.

Manchurid, American steamer, 8,750, J. W. Saunders, 28th April.—San Francisco via Honolulu, Mails and General.—P. M. S.S. Co.

Ramsay, British steamer, 2,758, Mullen, 28th April.—New York via ports, General.—Carnes & Co.

Wakasa Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,881, J. W. Wale, 28th April.—Bombay via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Dortmund, German steamer, 3,228, Wagner, 28th April.—Kobe, General.—C. Illies & Co.

Ivona, British steamer, 4,878, C. R. Longden, 28th April.—London via ports, General.—P. & O. S.N. Co.

C. Feid. Laeisz, German steamer, 3,799, Meyer-diercks, 1st May.—Havre and Hamburg via ports, General.—C. Illies & Co.

Amantia, German steamer, 2,806, Feldtmann, 1st May.—Portland, Oregon, Mails and General.—P. & A. S.S. Co.

Tango Maru, Japanese steamer, 7,463, A. E. Moss, 1st May.—Seattle, Wash., via Victoria, B.C., Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Winnebago, British steamer, 2,956, McDonald, 2nd May.—Shanghai via Mojito, Kerosene Oil.—Standard Oil Co.

Atua Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,911, N. Trent, 2nd May.—London and Antwerp via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Arabia, German steamer, 2,868, H. Metzenthin, 2nd May.—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—P. & A. S.S. Co.

PASSENGERS.

ARRIVED.

Per Japanese steamer America Maru, from San Francisco via Honolulu:—Mrs. E. M. Lee, Mr. O. H. P. Noyes, Mr. A. Kantor, Mr. F. A. Oldis, Mrs. F. A. Oldis, Miss Helen Hyde, Mr. George Murray, Mr. H. V. Yagi, Miss Clara Blattner, Mrs. E. J. Blattner, Mr. Edwin Bell, Mr. Geo. J. Low, Mr. J. Becker, Mrs. B. F. Murphy, Mr. A. F. Fell, Mrs. A. F. Fell, Mr. James Todd, Mrs. James Todd, Mr. A. G. Tyssowsky, Mr. C. Suyehira, Dr. E. C. Streeter, Mrs. Streeter, Mr. S. Glasgow, and Mr. Wm. K. Clark, in cabin. For Kobe:—Mr. James B. Lower, and Mrs. James B. Lower, in cabin. For Shanghai:—Mr. Chang Huey, Mr. Wong Kim Chouh, and Mr. Shin Shin Pze, in cabin. For Hongkong:—Assist. Surg. Geo. M. Olsen, U.S.N., Assist. Surg. Frank E. Sellers, U.S.N., Assist. Surg. E. O. T. Eyttinge, Miss Eva Cooper, Mr. A. W. Cornwall, Mrs. A. W. Cornwall, Mr. B. Speed, Mrs. Speed and infant, Mr. T. H. W. Price, and Mr. A. F. Judd, in cabin.

DEPARTED.

Per American steamer Manchuria, for San Francisco via Honolulu:—Miss A. A. Allen, Miss Emma Allen, Mrs. Herbert Alward, Mr. W. C. C. Anderson, Mrs. W. C. C. Anderson, Mr. T. S. Apar, Mr. S. H. Austin and valet, Mrs. S. H. Austin, Miss Atkinson, Mr. E. G. Barnard, Mrs. E. G. Barnard, Mrs. H. H. Barnard, Miss B. B. Barrows, Miss S. T. Barrows, Mr. Geo. F. Bidwell, Mrs. Geo. F. Bidwell, Mr. W. T. Bishop, Mrs. W. T. Bishop, Mr. J. Black, Mr. H. F. Bloomer, Mrs. H. F. Bloomer, Mr. Geo. Blundell, Rev. E. S. Booth, Mrs. F. S. Booth, Mr. H. L. Booth, Mr. F. C. Booth, Mrs. C. S. Brigham, Miss K. Brigham, Miss Josephine Bryant, Mr. F. S. Cairns, Mrs. F. S. Cairns, Master K. Cairns, Mr. A. C. Chase, Mr. P. Chase, Mrs. P. Chase, Mr. Geo. E. Chandler, Miss Chandler, Mr. Chas. E. Chapman, Miss E. E. Clark, Mrs. A. F. Coffin, Mr. S. G. Cornell, Mr. J. S. Conrad, Mr. J. A. Corless, Mrs. V. M. Crosby, Mrs. C. Cronwell, Mr. H. Debnam, Mr. P. Devaux, Mrs. P. Devaux, Mrs. E. S. Devlin, Mr. J. G. Dickson, Col. M. Dillon, Mrs. M. Dillon, Miss Julia C. Dougherty, Mr. E. L. Dow, Mrs. M. A. Dyer, Mrs. H. Ebinger, Capt. E. Eckbo, Mrs. Emma Eger, Mr. E. A. Engler, Mrs. E. A. Engler, Mr. W. K. Ewing, Mrs. J. S. Fearon, Mr. Frank Fearon, Mr. W. A. Finlayson, Mr. F. W. Foreman, Mrs.

F. W. Foreman, Mrs. F. B. Foreman, Mr. H. W. Fraser, Mrs. H. W. Fraser, Mr. J. Fujioka, Miss Geisenheimer, Mr. John B. Gibbs, Mrs. John B. Gibbs, Miss Ruby Gibbs, Mr. S. F. Gough-Calthorpe, Mrs. S. F. Gough-Calthorpe, Mr. Harry S. Gray, Mr. L. A. J. Hargreaves, Mr. T. S. Harris, Mr. M. C. Harris, Mr. M. C. Harrison, Miss E. Harrison, Mr. S. Haywood, Mr. Geo. M. C. Hixon, Mr. A. D. V. Honeyman, Mrs. F. H. Huntton, Miss G. Huntton, Miss H. Huntton, Mr. J. D. Hutchinson, Mrs. J. D. Hutchinson, Mr. K. Ishii, Mr. T. Iwasaki, Mrs. F. H. Jameson, Mr. H. G. Jefferson, Mr. V. A. Kershaw, Mr. W. Koike, Mr. K. Kokado, Dr. W. S. Laton, Mr. E. M. Lehoucq, Rev. E. C. Lobenstein, Mrs. E. C. Lobenstein and infant, Mr. W. J. Logan, Miss Anna A. Logan, Miss F. L. Logan, Miss C. L. Loomis, Mr. G. E. Loveland, Mr. G. E. Loveland, Mr. Leon Mandel, Mrs. Leon Mandel, Miss Blanche Mandell, Miss Florence Mandel, Mr. G. S. Mason, Mrs. G. S. Mason, Mr. W. S. MacLeod, Mr. A. McKillop, Mr. L. H. McAdow, Miss E. McCahan, Mrs. M. McCullom, Mr. J. F. McRay, Mrs. J. F. McRay, Mrs. W. B. Merwin, Mr. J. R. Michael, Mrs. J. R. Michael, Mr. W. M. Milne, Mrs. W. M. Milne, Mr. R. M. Pollock Morris, Mr. J. P. Moore, Mrs. J. P. Moore, Mr. H. Nanami, Mr. M. D. Neill, Mr. H. O'Malley, Mr. D. Parson, Mrs. W. D. Parson, Mr. J. Patterson, Mr. F. W. Pfaff, Mr. Frank Pixley, Mrs. Frank Pixley, Mrs. B. Potter, Mrs. L. H. Rahmeyer, Mr. C. U. Raymond, Mrs. C. U. Raymond, Mr. E. Revel, Mr. John Roberts, Mr. E. Roberts, Mr. E. Roberts, Mr. F. T. Robson, Mr. A. Von Rostera, Mrs. A. Von Rostera, Miss Sallee, Mrs. Geo. W. Sanborn, Mr. Jose Sanchis, Mrs. Jose Sanchis, Mr. Wm. S. Sanford, Mrs. Wm. Sanford, Miss P. M. Sanford, Rev. G. W. Sheppard, Mrs. G. W. Sheppard, Master Sheppard, Dr. E. R. Smith, Miss D. Soothill, Dr. P. Steiner, Mrs. C. Steinhilber, Mr. John Stevens, Mrs. John Stevens, Mr. P. M. Stewart, Mrs. P. M. Stewart, Mr. H. J. Stockton, Mr. H. P. Stringfellow, Mr. J. S. Sullivan, Mrs. J. S. Sullivan, Mr. Geo. R. Summers, Miss M. L. Sutherland, Miss M. R. Sutherland, Mrs. B. Sutton, Mrs. Louis Tausig, Dr. Edward Tausig, Miss Maud Thatcher, Mr. J. Thomson, Miss E. L. Underwood, Mr. Wm. Uquhart, Mrs. C. W. Vance, Mr. D. F. Vouck, Mr. Geo. Y. Wallace, Mrs. Geo. Y. Wallace, Mrs. D. Wall, Mr. E. M. Walsh, Mrs. E. M. Walsh, Miss Walsh, Mr. D. Westwater, Mrs. G. Wheelock and maid, Master Wheelock, Mr. Frank Whitney, Mr. C. A. Williams, Mr. Emil Wismer, Mrs. H. Wilson, Mr. W. H. Wilson, Miss G. Wolher, Mrs. J. T. Wright, Mr. G. S. Yuill, and Miss Yuill and maid in cabin.

MAIL STEAMERS.

NEXT MAIL IS DUE

From	Line	Steamer	Date
Europe	N. L. D.	Prinz Heinrich	Sa. May 5
Hongkong	T. Y. K.	H'kong Maru	Sa. May 6
Hongkong	G. N.	Dakota	Th. May 10
Europe	M. M.	Caledonien	Th. May 10
Hongkong	P. M.	Korea	Th. May 10
Hongkong	B. T.	Shawmut	Th. May 10
Hongkong	C. P. R.	Monteagle	F. May 11
Vancouver	C. P. R.	Em. of China	M. May 14
Seattle	G. N.	Minnesota	Tu. May 15
America	P. M.	Mongolia	Tu. May 15
Hongkong	C. P. R.	Em. of Japan	Th. May 17
Hongkong	O. & O.	Coptic	Sa. May 20
Vancouver	C. P. R.	Athenian	Sa. June 2
Tacoma	B. T.	Lyra	Th. June 2

- 1 Left Kobe on the 4th inst.
- 2 At Nagasaki on the 30th ult.
- 3 Left Hongkong on the 30th ult.
- 4 Left Seattle on the 29th ult.
- 5 Left Vancouver on the 30th ult.
- 6 Left San Francisco on the 2nd inst.

NEXT MAIL LEAVES

For	Line	Steamer	Date
Europe	M. M.	Polynesian	Sa. May 5
Hongkong	T. K. K.	America Maru	Sa. May 5
Australia	N. Y. K.	Yawata Maru	Sa. May 5
America	T. K. K.	H'kong Maru	Tu. May 8
Europe	P. & O.	Ceylon	Tu. May 8
Shanghai	N. Y. K.	Kosai Maru	Th. May 10
Tacoma	B. T.	Shawmut	F. May 11
Europe	N. L. D.	Prinz Heinrich	Sa. May 12
America	P. M.	Korea	Sa. May 12
Seattle	G. N.	Dakota	Sa. May 12
Vancouver	C. P. R.	Monteagle	Sa. May 12
Hongkong	C. P. R.	Em. of China	M. May 14
Hongkong	P. M.	Mongolia	W. May 16
Europe	N. Y. K.	Sanuki Maru	W. May 16
Seattle	N. Y. K.	Kanagawa Maru	Th. May 17
Vancouver	C. P. R.	Em. of Japan	F. May 18
Hongkong	G. N.	Minnesota	Sa. May 20
America	O. & O.	Coptic	Tu. May 22
Hongkong	P. & A.	Aragonia	Tu. May 22
Hongkong	C. P. R.	Athenian	Sa. June 2

LATEST COMMERCIAL.

[SPECIALLY COMPILED FOR THE "JAPAN MAIL."]
IMPORTS.

Yokohama, May 4.
There have been no transactions in Yarns and the market is weak. Nothing doing in Shirtings and Fancy Cottons and Woollens are stagnant.

COTTON PIECE GOODS.

White Shirting—{ 40 yds. 36 in. } ... 0.10 to 0.16
{ 50 yds. 36 in. } ... 0.10 to 0.16

Grey Shirting—8 1/4 lb. 38 1/4 yds. 36 inches ... 4.00 to 4.50
Grey Shirting—9 lb. 38 1/4 yds. 45 inches ... 4.50 to 5.25
Prints—Assorted, 24 yards, 30 inches ... 2.85 to 4.65

Cotton Italians and Satteens ... 0.20 to 0.40
WOOLLENS.

Flannels ... 0.50 to 0.65
Italian Cloth, 32 in. ... 0.35 to 0.50
Mousseline de Jaine,—Crape, 24 yards, 30 inches ... 0.16 to 0.32

Cloths—Pilots, 54 to 56 inches ... 0.50 to 1.00
Cloths—Presidents, 51 to 65 inches ... 0.90 to 1.00
Cloths—Union, 54 to 56 inches ... 0.50 to 1.00
Blankets—Assorted 3 to 5 lb per lb ... 0.60 to 0.80

Velvets—Black, 35 yards, 22 inches ... 9.20 to 12.50
Victoria Lawns, 12 yards, 42-3 inches ... 0.90 to 1.80
Turkey Reds—2.8 to 3.0 lb 24-25 yards, 30 inches ... 1.90 to 2.25

Turkey Reds—3.8 to 5 lb, 24-25 yards, 32 inches ... 2.50 to 3.65

COTTON YARN.

Nos. 2/60, Gassed ... 290.00 to 300.00
Nos. 2/80, Gassed ... 305.00 to 375.00
Nos. 2/100, Gassed ... 455.00 to 465.00

RAW COTTONS.

American Middling ... 33.50 to 34.00
Indian Broach ... 28.50 to 29.00
Chinese ... 25.50 to 27.50

METALS.

The metal market has recovered slightly.

Iron or Mild Steel, Bar, flat, round and square ... 4.20 to 4.40
Iron or Mild Steel, Plate ... 4.35 to 4.65
do Sheet ... 4.70 to 6.00
do Hoop (1 1/2" to 1 1/4") ... 5.00 to 5.50

Galvanised Iron Sheets No. 30 G ... 12.00
Wire Nails, Ordinary assortments ... 6.60 to 7.00
Tin Plates, golbs. I.C.W. ... 7.40 to 7.65
Pig Iron, No. 3 "Redcar" ... 2.30

KEROSENE.

The market is firm. The Standard Oil Company has raised prices two sen.

American ... 3.27 to 3.47
Russian ... 3.34
Bangkat ... 2.32 to 2.76

SUGAR.

Absence of demand, in spite of the approach of warm weather, has weakened the market and there has been little business. The auction at the Tokyo Sugar Refinery on April 26th resulted in the sale of 4,900 bags at a decline of 40 to 57 sen per bag.

Brown Takao ... 7.60 to 7.80
Brown Manila ... 8.70 to 9.70
Brown China ... 7.30 to 12.00
White Java and Penang ... 12.60 to 13.60
White Refined ... 14.50 to 16.75

INDIGO.

Nothing doing.

Java, Medium to best ... Nom. 250.00 to 300.00
Calcutta, Medium to best ... Nom. 180.00 to 200.00
Madras (Ampab), Medium to best ... Nom. 130.00 to 160.00
Madras (Dry Leaf), Medium to best ... —

EXPORTS.

RAW SILK.

The market has been fairly active and prices have gone up yen 5 all round.

QUOTATIONS.

Filatures—Extra Best, Coarse ... 1,070 to 1,000
Filatures—Extra, Fine ... —
Filatures—Extra, Coarse ... 1,060 to 1,070
Filatures—No. 1, Fine ... —
Filatures—No. 1, Coarse ... 1,010 to 1,020
Filatures—No. 1 1/2, Fine ... 1,080 to 1,100
Filatures—No. 1 1/2, Coarse ... —
Filatures—No. 2, Fine ... 1,050 to 1,060
Filatures—No. 2, Coarse ... 990 to 1,030
Common—Coarse ... —
Re-reels—Extra ... —
Re-reels—No. 1 ... —
Re-reels—No. 1 1/2 ... —
Re-reels—No. 2 ... —
Kakadas—Gold Cup Chop Extra ... —
Kakadas—Veiled Woman Chop No. 1 ... —
Kakadas—One Horsehead Chop No. 1 1/2 ... —
Kakadas—No. 2 ... —
Kakadas—No. 2 1/2 ... —

WASTE SILK.

There has again been a small business, standard qualities being scarce.

QUOTATIONS.

Noshi—Filatures, Best ... —
Noshi—Filatures, Good ... —

Noshi—Oshiu, Best ... —
Noshi—Oshiu, Good ... 60 to 65
Noshi—Oshiu, Medium ... —
Noshi—Shinshiu, Best ... —
Noshi—Shinshiu, Good ... —
Noshi—Bushi, Best ... —
Noshi—Bushi, Good ... —
Noshi—Bushi, Medium ... —
Noshi—Joshiu, Best ... —
Noshi—Joshiu, Good ... 80 to 90
Kibiso—Filatures, Extra ... —
Kibiso—Filatures, Best ... 110 to 120
Kibiso—Filatures, Second ... 100 to 105
Kibiso—Joshiu, Good ... 40 to 60
Kibiso—Bushi, Fair ... —

TEA.

The market is now open. The cup quality of the first offerings is generally good but the style of the leaf is somewhat disappointing. The weather is still favourable and first crop promises to be fully up to the average.

QUOTATIONS.

Choicest ... Y. 60 and upwards.
Choice ... 50 to 60
Finest ... 45 to 50
Fine ... —
Good Medium ... —
Medium ... —
Good Common ... —
Common ... —

HABUTAE.

The market remains inactive with the exception of figured habutae for which, owing to scarcity of stocks, prices have gone up during the week.

Prices of Fukui and Kanazawa staples fell slightly. There was no notable change in the Kawamata market.

The general expectation is that the dullness will continue during the forthcoming week.

KANAZAWA.

Inches. 3 1/2 me. 4 me. 4 1/2 me.
Yen. Yen. Yen.
19 1/2 ... 10.00 9.70 9.60
22 1/2 ... 9.55 9.25 9.25
27 ... 9.45 9.85 9.70
36 ... 9.15 9.70 9.65

"FINE-LEAVES" MARK.

Inches. 6 me. 6 1/2 me. 7 me. 7 1/2 me. 8 me.
Yen. Yen. Yen. Yen. Yen.
22 1/2 ... 8.90 8.85 8.90 8.90
27 ... 8.90 8.75 8.95 8.60 8.60
36 ... 8.50 8.40 8.40 8.35 8.30

"GOLD" MARK.

Inches. 4 1/2 me. 5 me. 5 1/2 me. 6 me.
Yen. Yen. Yen. Yen.
19 1/2 ... 10.00 9.80 9.80 9.50
22 1/2 ... 8.80 9.10 9.10 8.60
27 ... 9.30 9.00 8.90 8.50
36 ... 9.10 8.80 9.70 8.80

COTTON YARN (Osaka).

The Market is very dull.

May delivery ... 128.40
June delivery ... 126.90
July delivery ... 126.70

STOCK EXCHANGE.

Tokyo.—There was no noteworthy business done. On May 3rd, the rates of margin money for some railway shares etc. were lowered.

Osaka.—Slight fluctuations took place. No special business was done.

TEA.

Enquiries from America continue. The stock, however, is still small. Generally speaking, the market is growing brisk.

Up to the evening of May 3rd, 86,500 kin changed hands in the Yokohama market since the first appearance of the new tea.

EXCHANGE.

London silver 1/2 higher and Bank of England rate of discount put up to 4 per cent. China advances not yet in and local rates are unaltered.

London—Bank T.T. ... 1/10 3/4 @ 1/2

— Bills on demand ... 1/10 3/4 @ 1/2

— 4 months' sight ... 1/10 3/4 @ 1/2

— Private 4 months' sight ... 1/10 3/4 @ 1/2

— 6 months' sight ... 1/10 3/4 @ 1/2

Paris & Lyons—Bank sight ... 1/10 3/4 @ 1/2

— Private 4 months' sight ... 1/10 3/4 @ 1/2

— 6 months' sight ... 1/10 3/4 @ 1/2

Hongkong—Bank sight ... 1/10 3/4 @ 1/2

— Private 10 days' sight ... 1/10 3/4 @ 1/2

Shanghai—Bank sight ... 1/10 3/4 @ 1/2

— Private 10 days' sight ... 1/10 3/4 @ 1/2

India—Bank sight ... 1/10 3/4 @ 1/2

— Private 30 days' sight ... 1/10 3/4 @ 1/2

America—Bank sight ... 1/10 3/4 @ 1/2

— Private 30 days' sight ... 1/10 3/4 @ 1/2

— Private 4 months' sight ... 1/10 3/4 @ 1/2

Germany—Bank sight ... 1/10 3/4 @ 1/2

— Private 4 months' sight ... 1/10 3/4 @ 1/2

Bar Silver (London) ... 1/10 3/4 @ 1/2

* Nominal.

BAD COMPLEXIONS

Dry Thin and Falling Hair and Red Rough Hands Prevented by

CUTICURA SOAP

MILLIONS use CUTICURA SOAP, assisted by CUTICURA OINTMENT, for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, for cleansing the scalp of crusts, scales, and dandruff, and the stopping of falling hair, for softening, whitening, and soothing red, rough, and sore hands, for baby rashes, itchings, and chafings, in the form of baths for annoying irritations and inflammations, or too free or offensive perspiration, in the form of washes, for ulcerative weaknesses, and for many sanative, antiseptic, cleansing purposes which readily suggest themselves to women, especially mothers, and for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. CUTICURA SOAP combines delicate emollient properties derived from CUTICURA OINTMENT, the great skin cure, with the purest of cleansing ingredients and the most refreshing of flower odours. No other medicated soap is to be compared with it for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, scalp, hair, and hands. No other foreign or domestic toilet soap, however expensive, is to be compared with it for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. Thus it combines in ONE SOAP at ONE PRICE, the BEST skin and complexion soap, and the BEST toilet and baby soap in the world.

COMPLETE EXTERNAL AND INTERNAL TREATMENT FOR EVERY HUMOUR,

Consisting of CUTICURA SOAP, to cleanse the skin of crusts and scales, and soften the thickened cuticle; CUTICURA OINTMENT, to instantly allay itching, inflammation, and irritation, and soothe and heal; and CUTICURA RESOLVENT PILLS, to cool and cleanse the blood. A SINGLE SET is often sufficient to cure torturing, disfiguring humours, eczema, rashes, and irritations, with loss of hair, when all else fails. Sold throughout the world. Australian Depot: R. TOWNS & CO., Sydney. British Depot: 27-28, Charterhouse Sq., London. French Depot: 5 Rue de la Paix, Paris. POTTER DRUG AND CHEM CORP., Sole Props., Boston, U.S.A.

CUTICURA RESOLVENT PILLS (Chocolate Coated) are a new, tasteless, odourless, economical substitute for the celebrated liquid CUTICURA RESOLVENT, as well as for all other blood purifiers and humour cures. Put up in screw-cap pocket vials, containing 60 doses. CUTICURA PILLS are alterative, antiseptic, tonic, and digestive, and beyond question the purest, sweetest, most successful and economical blood and skin purifiers, humour cures, and tonic-digestives, yet compounded.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS

Cure Indigestion,
Bile, Sick Headache, Giddiness,
Palpitation,
and all Internal Disorders

THESE PILLS
ARE PURELY VEGETABLE;
they contain no deleterious
matter, and may be taken by the most delicate.

Manufactured only at 78, New Oxford St. (late 533, Oxford St.)
London. Sold by all Chemists and Medicine Vendors.

VESSELS ON THE BERTH.

For KEELUNG, via Moji (from Kobe), 3rd, and 18th every month, at Noon, the "SAIKIO MARU."
—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
For KEELUNG, via Moji (from Kobe), 10th and 25th every month, at Noon, the "KOSHUN MAUR."
—Osaka Shosen Kaisha.
For TRIESTE, via Kobe, Hongkong, Singapore, Penang, Colombo, Bombay, Karachi, Aden, Suez, Port Said, and Fiume, about May —, the "TRIESTE."
—Heller Bros.
For HONGKONG, via Kobe, (Inland Sea), Nagasaki, and Shanghai, about May 5th, the "AMERICA MARU."
—Toyo Kisen Kaisha.
For MARSEILLES, via ports, and Shanghai, May 5th, at 7 a.m., the "POLYNESIE."
—M.M. S.S. Co.
For GENOA, Marseilles and Liverpool, May 6th, the "CALCHAS."
—Butterfield & Swire.
For SAN FRANCISCO, via Honolulu, May 8th, the "HONGKONG MARU."
—Toyo Kisen-Kaisha.
For LONDON, Amsterdam and Antwerp, May 8th, at Daylight, the "HECTOR."
—Butterfield & Swire.
For MARSKILLES, London, and Antwerp, via Kobe, Shanghai, Hongkong, Straits, Colombo, and Port Said, May 8th, at Daylight, the "CEYLON."
—P. & O. S.N. Co.

Lea and Perrins' Sauce.

By Royal Warrant
to
His Majesty the King.

THE ORIGINAL AND GENUINE WORCESTERSHIRE.

(毎土曜日一發行)
編輯人 エフ アリントン
發行兼印刷人 エー ヴー アラソン
總行所 横濱市山下町五十五番
ウナツバシヤ新聞社

The Japan Weekly Mail.

毎土曜 日 A REVIEW OF JAPANESE COMMERCE, POLITICS, LITERATURE, AND ART. 一回刊行

No. 19.

REGISTERED AT THE G.P.O.
AS A NEWSPAPER.

YOKOHAMA, MAY 12TH, 1906.

明治廿五年三月廿日
第三種郵便物認可

VOL. XLV.

CONTENTS.

Summary of News .....	477
China .....	478
The Shokon Ceremony .....	479
The Hibiyu Celebration .....	479
Wireless Telegraphs and Telegraphs .....	480
M. Plancon .....	480
The Money Market .....	480
The Emperor and the Navy .....	480
Dr. Ruiterford Harris, M.P. ....	481
A New Race Club .....	481
Education in Japan .....	481
Korea .....	481
The Changchun-Kirin Railway .....	481
Moral Education in Japan .....	481
The American Ambassador .....	481
The Fishery Question in Northern Seas .....	481
Features of the Great Earthquake .....	483
Tokyo Imperial University .....	483
The Shukyo-ka Kyowa-kai .....	483
A Mare's Nest .....	484
The Sericulturists .....	484
No. 101 of the "Kokka" .....	484
Admiral Dewey and Japan .....	484
"Ganshu Meigwa-yen" .....	484
Customs Post etc .....	485
To All Whom It May Concern .....	485
Obituary .....	485
Notes on Current Events .....	486
Yachting .....	486
Leading Articles .....	488
The Money Market .....	488
Tibet .....	488
Monthly Summary of the Japanese Religious Press .....	489
The "Arabian Nights" at the Public Hall .....	490
Consular Reports .....	490
Fires .....	490
Snow .....	490
Japanese Journalists .....	491
Spring Meeting of the Nippon Race Club .....	491
The Law Courts .....	494
Yokohama General Cemetery .....	495
The Imports of Salt .....	495
The Plague .....	496
The N. D. I. Report .....	496
News of the Week .....	496
Correspondence .....	496
Mis-statements .....	496
The Shimbu Shin .....	496
Telegrams .....	497
Latest Shipping .....	498
Latest Commercial .....	499

"FAIS CE QUE VOUS DEVEZ, ADVIENNE CE QUE POURRA!"

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

No notice will be taken of anonymous correspondence. What is intended for insertion in the "JAPAN WEEKLY MAIL," must be authenticated by the name and address of the writer, not for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

It is particularly requested that all letters on business be addressed to the MANAGER, and Cheques be made payable to same; and that literary contributions be addressed to the EDITOR.

YOKOHAMA: SATURDAY, MAY 12TH, 1906.

BIRTHS.

On the 29th April, 1906, to the Rev. and Mrs. GARRET HOWELINK, Kagoshima, Japan, a Daughter.

On the 10th inst., at No. 154 Bluff, Yokohama, the wife of C. EYMARD, fils, of a Daughter.

SUMMARY OF NEWS.

THE destroyer Shinotai will be launched on May 19th at Nagasaki.

It is officially reported that rinderpest is prevalent at Fusan, Korea. On May 6th, six cows died.

THE Suwu (formerly Pobieda) left Nagasaki on May 6th for Yokosuka to undergo further repairs.

THE Russian Dama has been opened in great state. Great disappointment has arisen over the limitation of its powers.

BARON Shibumawa, president of the First Bank, will pay a visit to Korea, leaving Tokyo at the end of this month or the beginning of next.

THE Ohio II, which the Nippon Yusen Kaisha recently purchased, has been re-named Kamikawa Maru. She will be employed on the Hokkaido line.

MAY 27th and 28th, being the first anniversary of the battle of the Japan Sea, banquets will be held at the Naval Club in celebration of the victory.

AN Osaka telegram says that the destroyer Hayakase will be launched at the Osaka Iron Works on May 25th. She is a sister-ship to the Asatsuyu.

GENERAL Viscount Sakuma, who was recently appointed Governor-General of Formosa in succession to Viscount Kodama, will leave Tokyo on May 18th for his post.

MR. M. Ichihara, formerly Mayor of Yokohama, has entered the service of the First Bank as manager of the Seoul branch. He will shortly leave for his new post.

DURING April, 49,250 pieces of habutae were produced at Kanazawa and other places in Ishikawa prefecture. This is 20,568 pieces less than the total of the previous month.

THE Nippon Yusen Kaisha will hold a general meeting on May 25th or 26th. The interim dividend for the last half of 1905 is expected to be at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum.

THE Fuji Cotton Spinning Co., intends to amalgamate with the Tokyo Gassed Yarn Co., for which purpose both companies will hold general meetings at the beginning of June.

THE Kokumin has a telegram to the effect that the San Francisco Relief Committee accepts the donation of two hundred thousand yen sent by the Imperial Japanese Court, recently declined in Washington.

ACCORDING to the Kokumin, the Osaka Shosen Kaisha intends to raise a loan of ten million yen in London, for which purpose negotiations are being conducted with a syndicate in England through the Nippon Industrial Bank.

LIEUT.-GENERAL N. Miyoshi has been decorated by the Emperor of Korea with the First Class of Tai-Keuk. During the war, he was the commander of the Second Reserve Division which formed a portion of the Guards in North Korea.

A STRONG gale was experienced on May 7th and 8th at Shimomoseki with the result that a number of boats capsized and steamer departures were postponed. It is stated that owing to the storm, various small craft were disabled in the Inland Sea.

A FARMER named D. Shimuro, 77 years old, living at the village of Kaname, Nakagori, in Kanagawa prefecture, has married a widow named Hana (67) residing at the same place. Such weddings are said by the Boyeki to be rare in Japan.

PRINCE Nakonchaisi of Siam, on May 7th, was received by the Emperor and Empress in audience in the Phoenix Hall and was entertained at luncheon in the Homei Hall. Prince and Princess Arisugawa and Prince and Princess Higashi Fushimi were present.

AT 2 a.m. on May 6th, three men armed with swords attacked the small steamer, the Shunyo Maru, and then another small steamer, the Koyei Maru, which were anchored at Tanoura in the neighbourhood of Moji. They stole money and various articles.

THE German mail steamer Prinz Heinrich (which arrived in port on Saturday from Europe) encountered a heavy gale in crossing the Gulf of Lyons, in which one of the seamen lost his life and another was injured. The deceased sailor, says a contemporary, was engaged in fastening something on the fore-cle deck when the vessel shipped a heavy sea and the unfortunate man was dashed against a stanchion and killed on the spot.

A comrade near by was also thrown down, but fortunately sustained no more serious injury than a badly hurt leg. The deceased was taken on to Genoa and buried there.

THE Kaiser has decorated with the Fourth Class of the Red Eagle Captain N. Trennt, Commander of the Awa Maru, and Capt. Murai, Commander of the Aki Maru. By these steamers Prince Carl Anton proceeded to and returned from Manchuria during the late war.

It was reported some time ago that the Korean Government had decided to grant an extra allowance of yen 250 per month to all the Cabinet Ministers, as their regular salaries were considered to be inadequate. It is now stated that these officials have agreed to refund this amount to the Korean Treasury.

MR. J. C. HALL, British Consul-General at Yokohama, who recently left for home on a holiday, was in Kobe the recipient of a handsome gift from the Chinese residents of that port. The gift was a mark of appreciation of Mr. Hall's services to the Chinese residents during his term of office as British Consul at Kobe.

A NAGANO farmer named Sato, residing in the village of Shimanojiri, is alleged to have murdered a policeman with a sword and afterwards by laying the corpse on the Shinyetsu Railway tried to create the impression that the man had been killed by being run over by a train. The plan was in some way disclosed, however, and the murderer was arrested on May 6th.

THE sailing vessel Yefuku Maru (127 gross tons), which left Ishikari, Hokkaido, on April 27th, with fish, collided with the steamer Satsuma Maru early on the morning of May 3rd when nine miles off Oshima. The former sustained severe damage and sank. The crew were all saved by the steamer and brought to Kobe on May 6th. Dense fog was the cause.

ACCORDING to a telegram received in Shanghai from Paris, says a correspondent of the Fiji, on the afternoon of May 4th, a bomb in possession of a Russian named Striga exploded while he was walking in a park of the French capital. The man was killed and a companion walking with him was injured. In connexion with this accident, thirty foreigners were arrested.

THE Volnia, the organ of the Russian revolutionaries at Nagasaki, publishes sensational news. It declares that from Dec. 1st last to Feb. 1st, 639 Russian soldiers and sailors were punished with death for having participated in the Baltic mutiny; during the trouble, 321 private persons were killed by soldiers, the victims including school teachers, students of various colleges and 29 land owners.

THE United States Government is reported to have adopted a new policy to safeguard naval secrets. The Japanese and Chinese now employed as stewards and wardroom attendants are to be superseded by negroes, and the contractors invited to tender for two battleships will be required to give a pledge that the plans shall be regarded as confidential and not be inspected by any unauthorized person.

ON some waste ground outside the city walls of Ping-yang, said the Seoul Press Weekly of May 5th, five dead Korean bodies have been allowed to lie exposed for several days past, and thus become food for the hungry dogs. It is not known how these poor people met their death but it is most likely they died from sickness and that their bodies were thrown away by their relatives or friends. At any rate it seems too awful to think that the local police authorities do not try to put a stop to such a terrible atrocity.

CHINA.

Saturday, May 5.

This question, about which there have been so many conflicting rumours, is now said to be within sight of satisfactory settlement. The Fiji Shimpō's Peking correspondent wires that, at a dinner given by Mr. Uchida on the 2nd instant, Prince Ching assured the Japanese Minister that there would be no obstacle to the opening of Mukden, Antung and Tatung-kou at the dates indicated by the Japanese Government. This result is said to be largely due to the active interference of the Washington Authorities, who have China's promises on record at the United States Legation in Peking. Meanwhile a telegram comes from Mr. Okabe, Japanese Consul in Antung, to the effect that he opened his consulate in that city on the 1st instant. Antung, therefore, is now definitely open so far as Japanese subjects are concerned.

On the 2nd inst. Mr. Uchida gave a farewell banquet at the Legation in Peking and on the 3rd he was entertained by Viceroy Yuan in Tientsin. He returned to Peking on the 6th and is to leave for Japan on the 10th. There is no hint as to whether Mr. Uchida quits the Chinese capital permanently or whether he is only coming home on leave, but we are disposed to think that the former is the case. He has put in his term and has made a fine record, so that his transfer to a higher post would be in the natural routine.

Mr. Hagiwara, Japanese Consul-General at Tientsin, is stated to have left that place on the 3rd for Mukden, his new post.

Sir Ernest Satow was received by the Emperor and the Empress Dowager in farewell audience on the 3rd instant, and was to leave Peking on the 4th instant, travelling by the Lu-Han Railway to Hankow. We have not heard that Sir Ernest intends to take Japan en route, but it seems very likely. He will receive a hearty welcome here.

Monday, May 7.

It is stated that the Chinese Government have entrusted to Sir Robert Hart the task of selecting a site for a foreign settlement at Mukden and making other arrangements incidental to the opening of the city, and that Sir Robert has appointed Mr. Oliver, now Commissioner of Customs at Nankin, to proceed to Mukden for the purpose. The opening is expected to take place about the middle of next month. Meanwhile Tatung-kou appears to have been opened at the same time as Antung.

The latest news of the troublesome Nanchang affair is that the Central Government is anxious to settle it amicably, but the people of the locality have assumed a menacing attitude and the Peking authorities shrink from antagonizing them. France's demand for compensation is now stated at 140,000 taels, a figure more easily credible than was the half million previously mentioned. As things stand at present there seems to be little prospect of a speedy settlement.

Tuesday, May 8.

A telegram to the Asahi Shimbun from Peking says that the French Chargé d'Affaires has asked the Chinese Government to throw open the river communication between Chungking and Ichang. It is interesting to find the French now taking up a subject which once occupied so much British official attention. The Chefoo Convention of 1876 contained a curious provision to the effect that British merchants would not be allowed to reside at Chungking so long as no steamers had access to the port. Thus, constructively, permission was given for steamers to make the attempt, but the Chinese Government opposed that view and Great Britain did not seriously press it. The long story of private enterprise and of pressure exercised to secure more liberal conditions can not be told here, but we sincerely trust that France's efforts may lead to a new issue.

The latest news about this seemingly interminable dispute is that it was on the eve of being settled in a manner satisfactory to France when Viceroy Chang Chih-tung interfered and showed himself strongly hostile to such an arrangement. This was the cause of the transfer of the case to Peking, where the Viceroy found a resolute supporter in Prince Ching, and the outlook is now not at all hopeful. The fact is that if China had trustworthy and competent legal tribunals this would be simply a judicial question, but her lack of these essentials exposes her to many complications.

The business of transferring the headquarters of the Governor-Generalship of Kwantung from Liaoyang to Port Arthur was completed on the afternoon of the 6th instant, when Major-General Ochiai and his subordinates left the former place by train. They are said to have had a great send-off. General Oshima, the Governor-General, is still in Tokyo whither he came for the review.

Wednesday, May 9.

Disturbances are reported from four parts of China, namely, Kiukiang in Kiangsi, Tungchow in Honan, Yochow in Hunan, and Hanchow in Chekiang. The trouble at Yochow appears to be the most serious. Ten thousand is given as the number of the insurgents; they are said to be well armed, and they have inflicted one defeat on the Government's troops, which have accordingly been re-inforced. It would seem that two of these disturbances are anti-Christian in character, namely, that in Kiangsi and that in Chekiang. The United States Representative in Peking has called the attention of the Chinese Government to the importance of affording due protection for the life and property of American citizens.

Thursday, May 10.

The Hochi Shimbun claims to have learned from official sources that the Chinese Government has acceded to France's three demands, namely, public acknowledgement that the Chihhsien met his death by suicide; payment of an indemnity and punishment of the leading officials and inhabitants. Details, however, remain to be arranged and the present delay is due to that fact. A final settlement may be expected shortly. Sir Ernest Satow reached Wuchang on the 11th and visited Viceroy Chang.

Friday, May 11.

The correspondents of both the Fiji Shimpō and the Asahi Shimbun telegraph from Peking that an Imperial Rescript has been issued appointing Mr. Tieh Liang to be Minister of Customs and Mr. Tang Shao-i to be Vice-Minister. The former had previously held the post of Vice-Minister of Finance and the latter occupied a similar position in the Foreign Office. This rescript is regarded as the outcome of a determination to displace Sir Robert Hart from the position of Inspector-General of Customs which he has held for so many years and with such distinction. It is thus an evidence of the policy of China for the Chinese. There appears to be something striking in the fact that this coup was made immediately after Sir Ernest Satow's departure from Peking. Of course the Chinese Government is strictly within its rights in making such nominations, and possibly fuller information may show that Sir Robert Hart's position is not menaced. But this hope is difficult to entertain. The next news we look for, supposing the above telegrams to be correct, is that Sir Robert has resigned. Prior to the Tientsin Treaty of 1858 the inspectors of customs in China held their appointments from the Viceroy at Nanking, who was Imperial Commissioner for Foreign Trade. Apparently the Chinese Government contemplates returning to that system with such modifications as are necessitated by the great development of the service, chief among these modifications being the nomination of a special Imperial Commissioner who will reside in Peking and make the customs his sole function.

In the Chuo Shimbun we find a brief report of an address said to have been delivered by Baron Mumm to Chinese officials in Peking on the eve of his departure from that city. Our contemporary does not state its authority for this account nor explain how it obtained the report. The Baron is represented as having told his hearers that the policy of China for the Chinese had its origin in their observation of the conflict between Japan and Russia. Seeing the victories of their island neighbours, they had conceived a comparatively low estimate of Occidental prowess. But he reminded them that the lapse of much time and the employment of earnest and unflagging effort were needed to make China a really strong country. Strength was not to be developed by mere clamour not could its acquisition be thus hastened. Disaster must be the outcome to a nation embarking on a policy which it was not in a position to support, and he begged his hearers not to neglect his friendly warning themselves or to fail to impress it upon their friends.

We are disposed to doubt whether Baron Mumm allowed himself quite so much latitude of speech. Diplomatic conveniences were probably more strictly observed. But if he spoke these wholesome words in any form, he showed himself a true friend of China.

From several parts of Hunan—Yochow, Kiangchieh and other places in Anhui—news comes suggesting the possibility of another Mohammedan uprising. Some terrible pages of Chinese history are devoted to the attempts of these people to assert their rights and to the steps taken by China for their control. The British Chargé d'Affaires is reported as having applied to the Waiwupu to concert measures for securing the lives and properties of Christians in the Yochow district, and it is stated that a force of Government troops has been despatched to Kiangchieh to protect the Christian Church there.

On the 8th instant an inexplicable rumour reached Tokyo to the effect that the Tsar had despatched a number of Belgians to accompany the Dalai Lama on the latter's return to Lhasa. We did not pay any attention to the story as it was not possible to believe that Belgian subjects had been thus employed. The telegraph now repeats the intelligence, however, with the modification that the so called Belgians are Russians, that they number 50, that they are despatched for the nominal purpose of protecting the hierarchy, and the Tsar has also sent a jewel of some kind to the Lama. This tale too may prove as inaccurate as its predecessor, yet there is the evident presumption that Russia will not tamely allow herself to be effaced in Tibet, and there is the fact that the incident occurs—if it has really occurred—in the sequel of several reports all pointing to some kind of coquetting on Russia's part with the Dalai Lama. If his holiness chooses to have an escort of 50 Russians, that is his own business of course. No outsider has a right to object, unless it be China, who is not unlikely to reap a crop of troubles from her newly asserted attitude towards her buffer, Tibet.

A telegram from Peking says that the Japanese troops, during the recent campaign, destroyed in part or in toto the line of telegraph from Tiehling to Changtu, and that the Chinese Government is calling on Japan to restore the line or to pay compensation. It is a curious story, for the Japanese would have been much more likely to use the road than to wreck it.

The dispute about the construction of the Canton-Kowloon Railway is said to have been settled through the intervention of the Liangkiang Viceroy. The arrangement reported is that England shall build the Kowloon end and China the Canton end. Money for the latter purpose will be borrowed in England, the railway itself and the salt tax being hypothecated as security, and it is agreed that all materials and expert assistance shall be obtained from England.

Amid the many conflicting rumours as to the opening of Mukden or its continued closure, there now comes a definite report that Mr. Ota, Japanese Consul at Newchang, has started for the Manchurian capital to make arrangements for the opening on the 1st of June. If the site for a settlement and all collateral measures are completed during the next fortnight, we shall have an unprecedented example of expedition.

An officer from the Hongkong garrison has shot a tigress near Amoy. The tigress and her mate are held responsible for the deaths of twelve men and an old woman within a few months.

Extra sanitary precautions are being taken in the Crown Colony of Hongkong against plague. One European has died from this terrible scourge.

Chinese merchants in Hongkong have sent a first instalment of $12,000 (gold) to San Francisco in response to the appeal from the Chinese Minister at Washington for funds to assist homeless and ruined compatriots in San Francisco.

The Nanfangpao states that in consequence of complaints having been received from the various Foreign Ministers at Peking that the Huangpu Conservancy operations are not being conducted in accordance with treaty and are being unduly delayed, the Waiwupu has wired to Viceroy Chou Fu to investigate the matter. Viceroy Chou Fu is stated to have wired back to the Waiwupu that the agreement with the engineer for the conservancy works having now been settled, actual operations will commence forthwith, and there will be no delay.

The Italian Minister has notified the Waiwupu that he has received instructions to withdraw the entire Italian garrison from Peking and Tientsin except 300 or 400 men; as the barracks will be of no farther use the Italian Government will present them to China.

In reply to a telegram from the Waiwupu, sent at the instance of the French Minister, asking about the doings of the Hsiaotao Hui ("Small Knife Society") in Shantung, H.E. Yang Shih-hsiang, the Governor of that province, has sent back a statement that careful investigation fails to reveal any anti-Christian propaganda in Shantung. There are, however, some disbanded soldiers and smugglers who have been making themselves unpleasant in certain villages, and Governor Yang reports that he has sent a strong force to disperse the band.

A recent traveller writes:—Hankow bids fair to outrival Hongkong, Shanghai, and Canton one of these fine days, and at no distant time. The railway now completed from there to Peking is certain to bring up and down an enormous amount of goods from the vast interior. As it is now there are few finer Settlements in China. A fine bund, wide streets, large houses going up everywhere; a brisk trade, and more to come.

The estate of Lau Wai-chun, for fourteen years head compradore of the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank, Hongkong, is in bankruptcy. His liabilities are estimated at $503,657, $60,000 of which was borrowed money.

THE SHOKON CEREMONY.

On the 3rd instant at 10.20 a.m. the Emperor, and a little later the Empress, repaired to the Shrine at Kudan and performed the usual ceremony in memory of the dead who died for their country. On the 4th the Crown Prince performed the same rites, and a little later the four Imperial Princesses visited the shrine. Their Imperial Highnesses then repaired to the Yushukan and inspected the trophies. They also gave audience to the relatives and friends of the dead. This act of condescension seems to have been profoundly appreciated, though the possibility that some solecisms might be perpetrated by these inexperienced rustics is said to have caused uneasiness to the Imperial Chamberlains. The plan adopted was to assemble the relatives in the resting places set apart for their use, and there the Princesses visited them.

The plan adopted finally in order that the four Imperial Princesses might carry out their benevolent intentions towards the relatives of the dead in whose memory the Shokon ceremonial took place, was to range these people in two rows along either side of the approaches to the shrine. There were over fifteen thousand worshippers, and the task of thus ranging them cost no little trouble, but they lent themselves gladly to the effort, and the four Princesses were thus enabled to walk between the densely packed masses, bowing graciously to them and addressing kindly words to the little children. The effect of this action upon the country folk is said to have been very striking.

Concerning this Shokon ceremonial the Nichi Nichi Shinbun has an interesting article. It denies emphatically that there is anything of idolatry or even of religion in the rites. They are simply a reverential recognition of the services rendered by brave men who have died for their country, and their effect upon the friends and relatives of the deceased is not in any sense to encourage superstition, but only to lessen their grief and to reconcile them to sacrifices which often entail much suffering. The country folk who visited the great shrine during the five days of ceremonial went away with their tears dried, and with a feeling that they had contributed to the Empire's glory.

We do not see that these explanations are necessary except for the sake of the information they afford. They are presumably addressed to Christian critics, but Christians are firm believers in the immortality of the soul though they do not profess any settled belief in the locality of the abode to which this undying element repairs after death. The Japanese, on the other hand, believe that the souls of the dead are accessible to the voices of the living and that they can be successfully invited to be present on such an occasion as the Shokon festival. Hence it is that the first day of the festival is devoted to rites of invitation: the Shinto ministers invoke the attendance of the spirits, and thereafter the friends and relatives of the dead come to greet these invisible beings. Such a ceremonial has many beautiful features, and if any foreign observer be disposed to sneer at it because of its unfamiliarity, he will change his mind after reflection.

THE HIBIYA CELEBRATION

The City entertained an enormous party of officers on the 5th instant in Hibiya Park. This was the third affair of the kind. At the first 1,800 officers and men were entertained; at the second 1,700, and at the third more than 5,000. The weather was perfect. The spacious area of the Park was almost covered with structures for refreshment and amusement, and from noon the guests began to come in a ceaseless stream. In consequence of the mid-day banquet in the Palace the principal guests did not arrive until half-past two, and the opening ceremony, which was to have taken place at 1 o'clock, was consequently deferred, the interval being occupied by various entertainments, of which wrestling was the principal. These were suspended at a little after two, and the ceremony took place. The hosts were represented by the Governor of Tokyo, the Mayor, and Baron Shibusawa, and foremost among the guests were their Imperial Highnesses Princes Kanin, Kuni and Takeda, Field Marshals Oyama and Nozu, Generals Kuroki, Oku, Kodama, Nishi, Kawamura, Oshima and Ogawa, with a host of Lieut.-Generals and Major-Generals. Marquis Ito, the Ministers of State, and the Presidents of the two Houses of the Diet were also present. Baron Shibusawa read the address of welcome, and General Oshima replied on behalf of the guests. The address and the reply were both of the briefest and most matter-of-fact character. Mr. Ozaki, Mayor of the city, then called for cheers for the Emperor and for the Army, and the response from 8,000 throats was deafening. Thereafter the serious business of eating and drinking commenced and was conducted with much earnestness, some seven or eight hundred geisha flitting about from place to place and playing the guests with champagne and other liquors. Everything passed off in perfect order, and it was universally agreed that this final entertainment eclipsed all its predecessors.

The banquet at the Palace mentioned above was given nominally in order that the guests might convey information to His Majesty on military subjects. The principal persons present were Marquises Yamagata, Oyama and Ito, Field Marshal Count Nozu, and all the Generals who commanded armies or Divisions in the field, with the exception of General Nogi, who was prevented from attending by indisposition. These distinguished officers assembled at 10.30 a.m. and their conversation with the Sovereign continued until a little before noon, when the banquet was served. The Generals' aides-de-camp were presented to His Majesty as a special honour.

At 10 a.m. on the same day some 2,000 officers of the Army repaired to the Palace and were admitted to the Emperor's presence.

WIRELESS TELEPHONS AND TELEGRAPHS.

It was announced some time ago that a new method of telephoning without the use of wires had been invented by Professor Kimura Shunkichi, a son of the celebrated Kimura Setsu no Kami, who with Katsuwano Kami and Mr. Fukuzawa Yukichi made the first voyage to America in the Kanrin Maru. The Naval Department (Professor Kimura's elder brother is a captain in the Navy) took up the invention and announced the fact in the Official Gazette. The announcement stated briefly that Professor Kimura had perfected (kwanzen ni naseshi) a system of wireless telephoning, but no particulars were given. Professor Kimura is to proceed to Germany to attend the international congress of wireless telegraphy appointed to take place in that city during the present year. Meanwhile news has been received that a German savant, Professor Reumer, writing in the Tageblatt, denies in toto the Japanese Professor's title to be called the inventor of any system of wireless telephony. The German alleges that he taught the Japanese whatever the latter knows on the subject and that Professor Kimura actually communicated with him concerning the nature of the implements to be used. A member of the Hochi Shimbun's staff thereupon interviewed Professor Kimura and now publishes the result of the interview. The Japanese Professor denies altogether that he has had any such communication or intercourse with Professor Reumer. He admits that when in Berlin he visited the Professor's laboratory and read his essays, but he declares that the statement as to instruction and information is quite baseless. His lips are sealed as to the exact nature of his own invention—all benefits from which he appears to have made over gratis to the Naval Department—and since therefore the details can not be known to the German Professor, he is unable to understand how the latter can have made the allegations attributed to him. He suggests that there may be some confusion between wireless telegraphy and wireless telephony.

Professor Kimura subsequently addressed to the Hochi Shimbun a letter on the subject of wireless telephony and telegraphy. Referring to the statements made by Professor Reumer in the Tageblatt, Professor Kimura admits that he visited the laboratory of the German savant twice or thrice in 1902 and saw his wireless-telephonic instruments. But he did not remain to witness them in operation, and at any rate the principle of his own invention is wholly different. He does not claim that his discovery was the result of deep research or high scientific knowledge. On the contrary it was the outcome of a phenomenon which struck him unexpectedly during experiments (guzen in kanju shitaru gensho), and, while naturally withholding particulars, he describes the basis of the arrangement as so extremely simple that its failure to present itself to other experimenters is most singular. As to his wireless telegraphy, he relates that it was work done solely for the uses and at the request of the Japanese Naval Department and that, consequently, he is precluded from giving any description of it, and must be content to endure the constructions suggested by his silence. In conjunction with Captain Tonami of the Navy and Engineer Matsushima he worked assiduously to effect the desired improvements, but their efforts proved wholly unsuccessful for a long time, and they were about to abandon the task in despair when heaven inspired them with a happy idea, the result of which was that the Navy Department was enabled to equip itself with machines which cost two million yen less than they would have cost if purchased abroad and were, moreover, far more efficient.

The Hochi Shimbun publishes a statement that the Wireless Telephone Company of Berlin, the Tageblatt and Professor Reumer have united in attacking Professor Kimura in connexion with his claim to have discovered a new system of wireless telephony. Exceedingly strong language is used by the Berlin combination, the Japanese Professor being frankly dubbed a "robber" and other choice flowers of speech being employed to discredit him. Professor Kimura has met these charges with the simple rejoinder that his opponents would be better advised if they deferred their attacks until they had some knowledge of his system, but in view of the violence of the crusade and of the fact that the Japanese Naval authorities have taken up not only Professor Kimura's telephony but also his method of wireless telegraphy, the Hochi affirms that a protest is likely to be issued by the Kaigunsho soon. Our contemporary comments briefly but severely on the vulgar violence shown by the German coterie, but it is traditional that men of science are very apt to develop extreme caloric over such disputes. Their training educates in them a respect for accuracy which when confronted by any looseness of language or logic, becomes almost maniacal. It is related that the astronomers royal of England and Ireland had a dispute towards the close of the 18th century about the parallax of a fixed star. Unable to agree they finally submitted the question to the Royal Society's Council, and the latter's verdict was that, while the then state of science did not suffice for forming a definite judgment between the controversialists, it was much to be regretted that men of such eminence should have descended to such abuse as adorned this parallax squabble.

M. PLANCON.

M. Plancon, the new Russian Consul-General in Korea, is now in Tokyo at the Imperial Hotel. Interviewed by a representative of the Jiji Shimpō, he stated that his sojourn in Tokyo would probably extend to several days, as there were still to be settled several matters connected with the Portsmouth Treaty. As to Russia's attitude in Korea, he declared it to be essentially pacific. Her interests there were now of a purely commercial nature, and she had no intention whatever of interfering with Japan. The rumours recently circulated about a renewal of the war five years hence and about the retention of a large Russian army in Northern Manchuria were laughable canards. One had only to remember that the Russian national assembly meets on the 10th of this month, and that without its consent Russia cannot go to war. Referring to the Novoye Vremya's statements on the subject of the comparative merits of the Russian Representative in Tokyo and the Japanese Representative in St. Petersburg, the Jiji's delegate asked Mr. Plancon whether he had met Mr. Motono. The Consul-General replied in the affirmative. He had been at the station to welcome Mr. Motono on the latter's arrival in the Russian capital. He further stated, in reply to questions, that Mr. Motono could not speak Russian at all. The Novoye Vremya had been egregiously misled. Apparently it had confounded Mr.

Motono with Mr. Tono, the interpreter of the Japanese Legation, who speaks Russian fluently. M. Plancon added that the Novoye Vremya's article had caused much amusement.

We wonder if M. Plancon is rightly reported when he is made to say that Russia will henceforth be unable to go to war without the assent of the national assembly. If that be so, the Tsar has stripped himself of a prerogative generally retained by even the most constitutional sovereigns, the prerogative of declaring war and concluding peace. We suspect that the Jiji's representative has fallen into error.

THE MONEY MARKET.

The state of the Japanese money market continues to attract much attention. We translate some pertinent remarks of the Keizai Zasshi, in its issue of the 5th instant:—"The state of the money market remains unchanged. At the close of April things were exceedingly quiet and in spite of the fact that an unprecedented number of shares changed hands, their financing was managed quite smoothly, money being obtained at 1.9 sen to 2 sen daily. On the 30th of April the Government redeemed 29 million yen worth of Treasury bills which had been issued on the 16th of January, and at the same time, it made a new issue of 40 millions at the low rate of 1.5 sen daily. Hence while, on the one hand, the accommodation given by the Bank to the general public rose to 48 millions, its loans to the Government were decreased by 30 millions. Nevertheless its total deposits underwent a diminution at the close of the month (April). It was also obliged to exceed its legal margin of convertible note issues, and the excess amounted to 25 million yen. The weekly accounts stood thus:—

	5th May. Yen.	24th April. Yen.
Convertible notes issued	268,000,000	239,000,000
Specie Reserves	123,000,000	124,000,000
Issue of convertible notes	(5 millions less in excess of legal limit... 25,000,000	(5 millions less than limit)
Loans to Government	84,000,000	114,000,000
Loans to General Public	48,000,000	11,000,000
Deposits	53,000,000	59,000,000
	Difference.	Yen.
Convertible notes issued		+29,000,000
Specie Reserves		— 1,000,000
Issue of convertible notes in excess of legal limit		...
Loans to Government		—30,000,000
Loans to General public		+37,000,000
Deposits		— 6,000,000

The market may become easier but there are no signs at present of it becoming tight."

THE EMPEROR AND THE NAVY.

The Emperor summoned to the Palace on the forenoon of the 9th instant Admiral Togo and other commanders of Squadrons, as well as the Port-Admirals at Kure, Yokosuka, Sasebo, Maizuru, Port Arthur, Takeshiki and the Pescadores. These officers reported on the state of affairs under their jurisdictions as the Army officers did when they were summoned similarly on the 5th inst. They subsequently sat down to a banquet at which High Admiral Viscount Ito, Vice-Admiral Saito, and Admiral Baron Yamamoto were also present.

The above officers were not summoned to Tokyo merely for the purpose of reporting to His Majesty and attending a banquet. The object of assembling them in the capital was to hold a council as to the post-bellum programme of the Navy.

DR. RUTHERFOORD HARRIS, M.P.

This gentleman is made the object of very severe criticism by one of our local contemporaries in connexion with a speech which he recently delivered to his constituents. The critical journal admits that it had only "fragments" of the speech to guide it, but it does not appear to have been at all troubled on that account. On the contrary, "fragments" have the advantage of lending themselves readily to expansion at the hands of a courageous commentator, and illimitable materials for sarcasm may thus be produced at will. Our contemporary's method is well illustrated in the following example. "Dr. Harris," we read, "discovered, while he was here that Japan is a country which is not producing sufficient food to feed itself; * * * and that like England, she (sic) had (sic) to depend very largely upon the Navy." Taking this fragment for text, the Japan Herald first informs its readers what Dr. Harris did not mean, namely, that "navies are organizations for the production of food," or that they "perform the part of raiding other countries for the purpose of obtaining provisions for their own countries"—, and then explains what he "evidently" did mean—namely, "that unless the navies of the two countries were strong, other countries would refuse to supply them with food." Having thus expanded Dr. Harris' fragmentary utterance into a form which it unquestionably never took, but which lends itself readily to ridicule, our local contemporary lapses into supercilious merriment and cries:—"What a delightful picture this conjures up and what an insight it gives into the economic problems which trouble Dr. Harris's brain!" Well there is certainly a picture but we can not in charity call it "delightful." For it is a picture of the extreme shallowness which the Japan Herald attributes to its readers' comprehension, and of the pains it takes to adapt its own intelligence to this low estimate. No one with the smallest faculty for honest interpretation could imagine that Dr. Harris intended to say what our contemporary acquits him of suggesting, or that he ever asserted what it accuses him of "evidently meaning." The "fragment" thus ingenuously twisted into negative and positive nonsense, was obviously an assertion of the simple well recognised fact that if an insular country can not produce food-stuffs sufficient to feed herself, she must have a navy to guard the maritime approaches by which food-freighted merchantmen gain access to her shores from foreign ports. Without any desire to attribute mischievous intentions we are obliged to confess ourselves hitherto incapable of conceiving any order of intellect which could sincerely misinterpret Dr. Harris's fragment so grossly as our contemporary has misinterpreted it. To attribute insincerity being, however, contrary to the ethics of controversy, we must perforce enlarge our faith in the limits of crassness.

The Japan Herald, having most unjustly and gratuitously criticised certain fragmentary utterances of Dr. Rutherford Harris, and having been clearly convicted of twisting his words into a sense they could not reasonably bear, now takes refuge in persiflage and prevarication, weapons worthy of use in the sequel of such an attack. There is evidently no limit to our contemporary's confidence in the shallowness of its readers, for it actually has the hardihood to affirm that the following expressions are one and the same;—

If an insular country can not produce food stuffs sufficient to feed herself, she must have a navy to guard the maritime approaches by which food-freighted merchantmen gain access to her shores from foreign ports.

No one can honestly pretend to suppose that these two statements are "one and the same." The Japan Herald merely plunges deeper into the mud of disingenuousness when it professes to find such assertions identical, and when it supplements its original attack by saying, as it does now:—"Evidently the editor of our contemporary, like Dr. Harris, is under the impression that the nations chiefly spend their time in scheming to prevent other countries from obtaining food-stuffs and are only kept in awe by war-ships." The Japan Herald is perfectly well aware that neither the editor of its contemporary nor Dr. Harris is under any such impression, and it is equally well aware that nothing which either the editor or Dr. Harris has said constitutes the slightest warrant for such an interpretation.

A NEW RACE CLUB.

The organization of a new race club in Tokyo—the Tokyo Keiba Kyokai—seems to be making much progress. It has already been frequently stated that the Japanese learned by bitter experience in the last war how much their horses are wanting in bone, muscle and weight. Occasions are on record where failure to bring batteries into action in advantageous positions was due solely to the impossibility of getting Japanese ponies to drag the guns over the obstacles en route. There is consequently a fixed resolution to correct this defeat, and our readers know that a bureau called the Basei kyoku has been formed in the War Office, and that the Diet, last session, voted 750,000 yen as an appropriation for this year's outlay. In connexion with this it is justly felt that official efforts alone can not secure full success. This was thoroughly recognised by the last Cabinet. Barons Sone, Oura and Kiyoura took up the question vigorously, and being assisted zealously by Viscount Fujinami and Viscount Kano, decided that a race club must be formed to promote popular interest in the improvement of the breed of horses. Lieut.-General Okura, Baron Senge and Mr. Ozaki Yukio are said to be lending active coöperation. A site for a race-course has been selected at Ikegami and work will be commenced so soon as the necessary funds—150,000 yen—have been guaranteed. The idea is to form a zaidan hojin, each member of which will put up 500 yen. Indeed this step has already been taken successfully, according to Tokyo journals. Some of the most prominent foreign members of the Nippon Race Club will be invited to join the Committee of Management, and it is said that English rules will be adopted, even to the extent of sanctioning betting. Old residents are aware that this is not the first race club formed in Tokyo. There used to be two of these associations, one having its course at Takata, the other at Uyeno. Why they languished and finally failed we do not now remember, but they were never taken up with any real enthusiasm. The course at Uyeno, though beautifully situated, is quite unfit for racing, especially if Occidental horses are running. H. I. H. Prince Kanin is spoken of as the President of the new club.

What he evidently meant was that unless the two countries were strong other countries would refuse to supply them with food.

EDUCATION IN JAPAN.

The thirty-first annual report of the Minister of State for Education, covering the year 1903-4, is now in the hands of the public. As usual it contains much valuable information. We learn from it that the percentage of children of school age who received instruction is steadily increasing, so that Japan now holds the record for the world. The per-centages in the case of male children during the past 5 years and those for female children are:—

	1899.	1900-1.	1901-2.	1902-3.	1903-4.
Male children...	85.06	90.55	93.78	95.80	96.59
Female "...	59.04	71.90	81.80	87.00	89.88

The girls, it will be seen, do not make quite such a fine showing as the boys. It is really wonderful to think, as regards the latter, that out of every hundred of school-going age, less than four fail to attend. If, however, the girls have not such a striking record in point of actual per-centages, their progress has been more marked than that of the boys, and the combined per-centage for both sexes, namely 93.23, leaves very little to be desired. Altogether the number of children of school age receiving elementary instruction is 5,976,124, and the number of teachers is 108,360, so that the average number of children per teacher is 56, approximately. Obviously the staff of teachers is not sufficient. As for kindergartens, there are altogether 281 with 748 instructors and 25,803 children attending them. Of blind and dumb schools there are 20 with 120 teachers and 1,043 students, namely 446 blind and 597 dumb. Technical education shows encouraging statistics. There are no less than 1,594 schools with 94,183 pupils and 3,285 instructors, of whom 57 are foreigners.

Turning to the question of expenditure, we find that the total outlay for public educational purposes in the year under review was 44,429,558 yen, divided as follows:—

	Yen .
Elementary schools .....	31,748,420
Normal schools .....	2,904,455
Middle schools .....	4,472,094
Girls' Higher schools .....	1,100,405
Special schools .....	256,253
Technical schools .....	2,836,104
Blind and Dumb schools .....	6,840
Miscellaneous schools .....	50,407
Kindergartens.....	135,595
Libraries .....	76,034
Miscellaneous expenses .....	842,919*

* N. B.—There is a slight discrepancy between the total of this column and the total given above but the difference is only 9 yen.

It will be observed that while 31¼ millions are spent on ordinary education, 8½ millions only go to higher education.

Towards the defraying of the above expenses the students themselves pay only 4,994,751 yen, or an average of 80 sen each yearly. In fact, education is virtually free. The Treasury grants 275,785 yen and the communes contribute 36,298,466 yen, the rest being made up by voluntary contributions (1,241,939 yen), school stock property, miscellaneous income, etc. No statistics seem to be available with regard to the expenditures of private schools.

It is a curious and interesting fact that Kyushu and the prefectures west of Tokyo show greater educational zeal than any other part of the Empire. With the exception of Kagoshima itself the whole of Kyushu sends to school between 95 and 99 per cent. of its eligible children. Okayama, Kyoto, Nara and Miyagi have an equally fine record, but the area thus distinguished in Kyushu is more extensive than any other with the exception noted above, namely, the prefectures westward of Tokyo, Saitama, Gumma, Nagano, Toyama and Niigata.

KOREA.

It is stated that a rising of about a thousand and insurgents, calling themselves Wi-pyong (Japanese Gihai), broke into rebellion at the close of April in the district eastward of Andon in Kyongsang-do. They were armed with matchlocks and on the 29th news reached Nakdong that they had sacked some villages in the Ninghai district and had carried away all the rice and implements of war they could find. Apprehensions were felt that they might attack Andon, and a Japanese detachment was sent to investigate.

Rumour says that Korean intriguers are taking advantage of the absence of Marquis Ito to spread all kinds of rumours, the principal of which is that the Marquis has fallen out with his lieutenant, Mr. Tsuruharu, and that the latter has sent in his resignation. We shall not be surprised to find very circumstantial versions of this story in the respectable Seoul daily or in the Tribune. Probably these organs have also appropriated, if they did not inaugurate, the recently circulated tale that the return of Marquis Ito to Japan and the departure of General Hasegawa to attend the Review were due to interference on the part of Western Powers who had espoused Korea's side against Japan.

It is stated that the gold mine at Yuensan has petered out and that the enterprise has been abandoned. A number of Japanese who were among the employees have been dismissed. This mine was worked by an English firm.

The business of road-making and water-works construction in Korea is about to be undertaken vigorously. An office called the Chido-kyoku has been organized, and four engineers, with eight assistants, are to be obtained from Japan. Already Mr. Sano Tojiro, who planned and constructed the Kobe water-works, has been appointed to discharge similar duties at Chemulpho. The present programme is that the business of surveying will be carried on during the second half of the current year, and the task of road-making as well as of other public undertakings will be commenced next spring.

Messrs. Wakatsuki and Yamaza, who proceeded recently to Antung in connexion with the opening of that place, are evidently about to return via Korea. Mr. Zumoto and other officials have been sent from Seoul to accompany them.

It is reported that the insurgents in the north of Kyongsang-do show considerable resolution and threaten to burn the Japanese school in the vicinity. Measures have been taken to deal with them. These particular insurgents are described as Ka-soku (fire bandits), which means, we presume, that incendiarism is their principal weapon.

The "clipping" and re-melting of old and defective nickels has been commenced in Seoul. The number dealt with daily is 163,000.

It is stated that simultaneously with the establishment of municipal autonomy for the Japanese settlements in Korea, as described in a recent issue, the settlement at Seoul will be extended so as to embrace Yongsan and Mokpho.

THE CHANGCHUN-KIRIN RAILWAY.

Again rumours come (via Hochi Shimbun) that the Russians are agitating to secure the concession of the Changchun-Kirin Railway.

They are represented as having originally endeavoured to give effect to a secret agreement said to have been concluded with the former Governor of Mukden, but the Chinese objected that this agreement had never received the sanction of the Peking Government and consequently could not be considered valid. In view of this strongly held objection it is now alleged that M. Pokotiloff has modified his position and is seeking to obtain permission for the construction of the line by a joint company of Russians and Chinese.

We have again to express our doubts as the correctness of this account. It may be well to recall what passed at the Portsmouth Conference. Baron Komura demanded that the East Chinese Railway should be surrendered to Japan from Harbin southward, and that Harbin should thus be the point of junction of the Russian and Japanese roads. Count Witte asked that Changchun should be substituted, and Baron Komura agreed on condition that if Russia had not already constructed a permanent line from Changchun to Kirin, that road should become Japanese property. To this the Russian Plenipotentiary agreed, but being unable, without reference to St. Petersburg, to give a definite answer as to the actual state of affairs in loco, the final settlement of the matter was deferred pending such reference. At the meeting of the Conference on the 29th August Count Witte informed Baron Komura that telegrams from St. Petersburg had made it clear that Russia possessed no railway between Kirin and Changchun, and accordingly, in consideration of that declaration, the Japanese Plenipotentiary agreed to substitute Changchun for Harbin as the junction of the Russian and Japanese roads. Thus Japan unquestionably acquired a preferential title to any concession that the Chinese Government might be induced to make for the construction of a line from Changchun to Kirin, and in the face of these unequivocal facts it is impossible to believe that M. Pokotiloff is taking the course now attributed to him. It would be an unequivocal breach of faith.

MORAL EDUCATION IN JAPAN.

On the 7th instant a meeting of the heads of elementary schools throughout the Empire took place at the Department of Education. The Minister, Mr. Makino, addressed the meeting. He observed that although all industries and undertakings in Japan had received a serious set-back owing to the war, such had not been the case with education, which, owing to the Sovereign's special wish, had been vigorously prosecuted. A certain staff officer had said that the victories won by Japan in the war had been due to the education given to her people. That was true. Even the children in the elementary schools learned the significance of war and were so trained that when a crisis came their fealty and obedience could be reckoned on. Thus at the base of the country's successes lay education, and for their share in conducting it the heads of schools were to be heartily thanked. Looking abroad he found that Japan possessed one signal blessing. In foreign countries moral educationists were divided into many parties each having its own theory, but in Japan the Imperial Rescript constituted the sole and universally adopted basis. It taught each subject his duty towards his country and his place in society. A foreign publicist had observed to him (the Minister) that while moral teaching had certainly assisted civilization, its chief effect had been to inculcate the virtues of mercy and charity, and thus it might be said to have attached prominent importance to the individual while relegating the State to a comparatively unconsidered place. But the war of the past two years had demonstrated that patriotism was the first of the seeds sown in the schools of Japan, and the fact had attracted wide attention in Europe. It was notable that many Western publicists had begun to speak of an ethical system independent of religion. Ethics founded on religion were inevitably infected with the schisms that split the religious world into so many fragments, and Japan had to congratulate herself that the ethics taught in her schools were not exposed to that danger. In September next there was to be held in London a great international assembly of persons interested in elaborating a system of ethics unconnected with religion. One of the members of that assembly had declared that the Japanese system deserved much praise. It depended largely upon the heads of elementary schools whom he was now addressing what heights the country would attain to in the future and he did not doubt that they would be worthy of the great trust reposed in them. They must regard themselves as leaders of thought in their respective localities; not educators of the young only but educators of all. Education tended to raise the personal status of the individual, and it was consequently a slow process demanding patience and unflagging assiduity. They should keep these facts in mind, and recognise fully the high responsibilities devolving on them.

THE AMERICAN AMBASSADOR.

His Excellency Mr. Luke E. Wright, the first American Ambassador to Japan, who arrives in Yokohama on Tuesday next by N. P. steamer Minnesota, has had a distinguished public career. Born in Tennessee in 1847, he was for eight years the attorney-general of Tennessee, and was a member of the Memphis bar when appointed to the post of Vice-governor of the Philippines. Mr. Wright is a Democrat and an ex-Confederate. The Brooklyn Eagle says of him:—"Governor Wright has been at the head of the Philippine administration since the close of 1903, and throughout the whole period of his service has earned an enviable reputation for industry, sagacity and executive talent. He succeeded to a difficult position at a difficult time and as a substitute for the present Secretary of War, whose fine career in the Philippines had established standards of excellence in administration that were none too easy to copy. Governor Wright will find in Tokyo very different conditions from any that have previously confronted American representatives there. The position of Japan in the international scale has been considerably shifted by war. Questions of commerce and politics affecting this country in its relation to Japan or to China as a neighbour, and in, one sense, a protectorate of Korea are almost certain to arise. To deal successfully with these a man of experience, intelligence and firmness is required, a man in whom the Government of his country reposes the same measure of confidence given by the Japanese Government to Viscount Aoki, the new Japanese ambassador to Washington. Governor Wright is such a man and the country is fortunate that he is available for the post."

THE FISHERY QUESTION IN NORTHERN SEAS.

Observers of current events must sometimes be disposed to suspect the existence of an organized attempt to stir up trouble once more in the Far East. Under that heading it is easy to classify the recently circulated rumours about Japan's designs against Siberia and the Philippines, as well as the frequently repeated statements that Russia is ignoring the Portsmouth Treaty directly or indirectly by manoeuvring for railway concessions in Manchuria or by wholly ignoring the position which the Treaty really assigns to her. We are inclined to think that the course now attributed to her in connexion with fishing privileges in the north seas belongs equally to the category of mischievous canards, though the Fiji Shimpo makes it the subject of a leading article and evidently attaches importance to it. The Portsmouth Treaty provides, it will be remembered, that Russia shall grant to Japanese subjects fishing privileges in the northern seas, with the reservation that such privileges shall not conflict with rights already given by her to others. The story now told is that she is hastening to extend the latter class of rights to such a degree that nothing will remain to grant to the Japanese when they come to discuss the practical operation of the Portsmouth Treaty. It may evidently be pointed out that the negotiations preliminary to carrying out this particular clause of the Treaty are not likely to be concluded before next winter, and that since, consequently, no fishing privileges can be actually enjoyed by Japanese subjects in Russian waters until next spring, the Russian Government would be entirely justified in making whatever exclusive arrangements it pleases with regard to the present year. But the point is that the wholesale rights she is granting to her own subjects are said to be for a term of six years, and if that be true then it follows that Russia is deliberately converting the Portsmouth Treaty into a dead letter so far as this matter of fishery privileges is concerned. Having explicitly promised to do a certain thing, she is of her own accord taking steps which will effectually preclude her from doing it. Is that credible? We think not. The story may be relegated, we think, to the class of canards which represent Japan as busily arming against the United States and M. Pokotiloff as pressing China to grant the concession of the Changchun-Kirin railway to a combined syndicate of Chinese and Russian subjects. Many purveyors of news appear to regard Russia as a fair target for any and every attribution of bad faith. Russia is not altogether irresponsible for that disposition, but she has to bear a great deal more than she justly merits.

FEATURES OF THE GREAT EARTHQUAKE.

In a long and very detailed telegram sent by the Asahi's Oakland correspondent on the 2nd instant it is stated that of some 300,000 inhabitants of San Francisco who had lost their homes by the earthquake, the greater part had now found refuge in neighbouring towns, so that the number still camping out did not exceed 30,000. Very few were living by charity. In connexion with this he mentions the evidence which the catastrophe afforded of America's great wealth. Already relief funds had been subscribed to the amount of 60 millions of yen and astoundingly large stores of provisions had been furnished. In distributing this food there was absolutely no discrimination; any one could go and obtain what he wanted, the result being that several men were sitting idle with the intention of living on the benevolence of the public for one or two months.

The same correspondent speaking of his own nationals says that they suffered greatly. Fully ten thousand lost everything they possessed. This was because there were still numerous Japanese subjects living in San Francisco—1,000 as clerks in American firms; some 2,000 as domestic servants, and about 1,500 working for foreigners in some form. All these, the correspondent alleges, are without means of sustenance. The number of Japanese-owned buildings that were destroyed by fire was about 335, the principal being the Consulate, the Specie Bank, the Toyo Kisen Kaisha's offices, 2 hotels, 55 fire-~~art~~ stores and 51 restaurants. He further declares that in spite of the talk usually heard as to driving out the Japanese and in spite of the prejudice shown towards the Chinese, the American relief Association did not discriminate in the smallest degree against the Japanese. On the contrary the Association treated them with marked sympathy. Thus the Japanese who were reduced to a state of distress soon found themselves in possession of shelter, bedding and garments. At first from 5,000 to 6,000 Japanese were obliged to live in tents here and there, but the greater part of these were quickly housed and not more than 600 or 700 are now in tents. Assistance constantly arrived from fellow-countrymen in the States, and, at the time of despatching the telegram, measures of aid to meet the emergency had already been fully taken, but it was feared that the greater part of the burned-out Japanese enterprises which had been working with small capital would not be resumed. The number that lost their lives had thus far been ascertained to be 10 and the wounded 27 or 28, but as was the case with other nationals, these figures might be subsequently augmented.

TOKYO IMPERIAL UNIVERSITY.

The calendar of the Tokyo Imperial University for 1905-6 has just been issued. It contains a mass of interesting and valuable information. The whole history of the University is given at the outset; then follow chapters containing the various ordinances relating to the institution, as well as the regulations; then full accounts of the six colleges, of the University Hall and of the library; then a statement as to the dormitories and minor matters; then a list of graduates since the foundation of the University, and finally a catalogue of the Journals compiled in the various colleges. This statement of contents will show that the Calendar tells everything there is to be known about the University. Nothing is more striking than the catalogue showing the number and nature of the learned essays which have appeared in the Journals of the University. The catalogue fills 50 pages closely printed in small type. It is a wonderful record of industry and ability, considering that it covers a period of only 19 years and that the compilers of the essays all belong to the nation of which certain superficial foreign observers used to say that imitation and not originality was its characteristic. The essays are all original and with very few exceptions they all throw light on most erudite subjects. There could be no more complete answer to these shallow critics. Unfortunately for a full appreciation of the contents of the Journals three languages are used by the contributors—English, German and Japanese—so that in part they do not appeal at all to Western readers and in part the appeal is divided. One of the most interesting chapters is that relating to the College of Agriculture. We read that the College has been endowed by the State with no less than three large forests: one in Chiba prefecture, covering 5,421 acres; one in Hokkaido, covering 57,700 acres, and one in Formosa, covering 144,050 acres and embracing Niitaka-zan (Mount Morrison)—207,171 acres of forest-land in all. The two forests in Hokkaido and Formosa are in a primeval condition; they have great potentialities. It is hoped to apply scientific principles to all three areas under the auspices of the College and thus to convert them into models. But as yet this large intention has been applied—and that in part only—to the Kyosumi section (835 acres) of the Chiba forest, where surveys have been made, roads projected, divisions and subdivisions marked off and accommodation provided for students. We have here some materials for estimating the immense wealth of woodland possessed by Japan.

THE SHUKYO-KA KYOWA-KAI.

A large meeting of representatives of various forms and sects of religion was held in the hall of the Young Men's Christian Association in Tokyo on the 7th instant. As the name kyowa-kai implies, the apparent object of the meeting was to reconcile and harmonize conflicting religions and to unite for charitable purposes. Bishop Harris delivered an eloquent address, in Japanese, and several Japanese prominent in the world of ethics spoke ably. Reading these various deliveries we can not discover that any very signal step was taken towards real union, though it appears to have been generally admitted by the speakers that certain cardinal principles lie at the base of all religions, and that these principles are identical. It is not, however, to the words used on such occasions that interest chiefly attaches, but to their results. We observe that the chairman of the meeting was Mr. Kanda Saichiro, a well known Unitarian, but we certainly do not infer that a majority of those who attended the meeting are prepared to enlist under the unitarian banner. The affair reminds us of the elective philosophers who, under the leadership of Professor Inouye Tetsujiro, started a movement some ten years ago with the object of collating the cardinal principles of all the world's religions and fusing them into a universally acceptable whole—universal, that is to say, so far as Japan was concerned. The movement, natural and laudable as it was, provoked a great deal of ridicule among foreign onlookers, who chose to interpret it as an evidence of Japanese conceit. "These Japanese," they said, "are so puffed up that they propose to themselves no less a task than to reconstruct the religions of the Occident?" Truly a shallow criticism, prompted mainly by the contempt too commonly shown in those days by Occidentals towards Orientals. The electics failed but the sense of need that inspired them remains perennial, and if such a thing were possible we should all most heartily welcome the discovery of some Elysian island beyond the sounds of jarring creeds.

Dr. Baelz, who is now in Berlin, will return to Tokyo in August.

A MARE'S NEST.

In its issue of the 2nd instant the Japan Herald published a translation of the Medical Practitioners' Law. The sixth article of the Law, as translated, says:—"Medical practitioners shall keep a register and enter therein the names, ages, occupations, residences, the name of malady and method of treatment thereof. The register mentioned in the foregoing clause shall be preserved for ten years." Commenting on this, our contemporary infers that the registers are to be available for reference, and upon that inference builds quite an excited indictment of the Japanese Government, charging it with "a very serious infringement of private rights and one which will be as objectionable to the general public as it will certainly be to the medical fraternity." The method of obtaining materials for this accusation is novel. Our contemporary, while admitting that "the Law is quite silent" as to official examination of the registers, opines that, "in view of other provisions," the registers are to be open to the inspection of officials of the Home Department at any time, and then, after some platitudes about the confidential relations between physician and patient, and about the secrets of the consulting room, makes the following sweeping declaration:—"Yet under the Medical Practitioners' Law of Japan, a physician's register is to be open to the inspection of any petty official who may choose to demand it, there being no guarantee that the information thus obtained will not be used for private purposes." This is certainly a very curious and interesting example of manufacturing a charge out of nothing. The Law is admittedly "quite silent" on the subject of inspection, yet, according to the Japan Herald, this same Law opens a physician's register to inspection by any petty official who may choose to demand it! Our contemporary endeavours to get over the difficulty of the Law's silence by reference to conclusions suggested by "other provisions," but this is an unhappy prevarication for from beginning to end the Law does not contain one word about official inspection of anyone or anything. Two points may be submitted for the Japan Herald's consideration. The first is that no law can be held to create a power about which it is absolutely silent; the second, that the keeping of registers may be designed, not for the purpose of exposing their pages to any petty official who may happen to be curious, but for the purpose of providing a valuable reference in cases under adjudication by Courts of Law.

THE SERICULTURISTS.

The Sericulturists Central Association is now holding a meeting at the Department of Agriculture, about 150 members being present. The Minister of Agriculture, Mr. Matsuoka, addressed them on the 9th inst. The gist and indeed the whole import of his speech was the vital importance of intelligent coöperation. He pointed out that whereas there are 12,000 districts in the Empire, only two thousand of them had hitherto formed guilds, and he referred to the case of Denmark where the poultry-breeders, by astute combination, had succeeded in building up an export trade in eggs which amounted to 16 million yen yearly. They must remember that the united wealth of individuals constituted the wealth of a country, and that no method of obtaining wealth was more efficacious than intelligent coöperation. Mr. Hara, Minister of State for Home Affairs, also spoke much in the same strain. He said that the administration of Japan in former times had always aimed at reducing the interval between the rich and the poor, and even now the same system prevailed, though perhaps in a lessened degree. Hence it was that there were no great capitalists on the one hand and no very marked extremes of poverty on the other. But a change in that respect appeared to be taking place, and this fact added to the importance of strenuous efforts of coöperation on the part of small capitalists. In combination and coöperation lay the chief resource of individuals to remedy their deficient strength and capital. Nothing was of more importance than to observe this principle, and the sericulturists throughout the empire might count on receiving every assistance from officialdom in the forming of guilds.

NO. 191 OF THE "KOKKA."

The last issue of the Kokka is interesting but the illustrations are not quite up to the high standard usually maintained by this excellent magazine. First we have a pair of so-called "Lions"—it would be better to give the proper name, "Dogs of Fo," to animals which bear so very slight a resemblance to the king of beasts—the motive of a decorative panel by the renowned Hoitsu. The beasts are out of drawing and can not be regarded as typical specimens of the great artist's work. On the back of the two leaved screen which these animals adorn in front, there is a black and white sketch of peonies incomparably worthier to be signed "Hoitsu." The second picture is a study of barn-door fowl by Ito Jakuchu. Deprived of the brilliant colours which doubtless distinguish the original, this picture strikes us rather by the apparent confusion of its composition than by the force of its execution. It is probably brilliant and full of life, but these features scarcely enforce themselves in the copy. Then follows a sketch of a crane, wonderful for the dash, verve and efficiency of the few strokes depicting it, but spoiled by an intrusive bamboo which conveys only the impression of a third and very much deformed leg which has miraculously grown out of the bird. Two delightful landscapes, "Summer and Winter," by Ganku, show all the fine qualities of the Chinese School which this master studied so successfully, and the statuary of ancient times is well represented by two wood carvings of Ben-ten and Tai-shaku-ten, which probably date from the 8th century. Illustrating a very interesting essay on Chinese Landscape Painting, by Mr. Taki Teichi, there are two pictures, one in colours, the other in black and white. The former is attributed to Yen Tsu-ping of the Sung Dynasty, the latter to Sun Chun-tse of the Yuan Dynasty. The Sung artist's picture certainly does not deserve the honour of reproduction in the pages of the Kokka. It does indeed possess the merits of broad expanse and subtle atmospheric effects, but on the other hand it displays conspicuously the common faults of Chinese artists, inability to paint water flat, and such a strength of outlines that the rocks seem to have been fashioned out of card-board and the trunks of trees to have been hewn into shape for the purposes of the painter. We have to remember, indeed, that we are looking at a work nearly a thousand years old, but there are innumerable examples of Sung pictures which stand on a far higher level of attainment than this. Sun Chun-tse's landscape is unfortunately so much faded that its characteristics are scarcely recognisable, but it strikes us as a fine production.

The letterpress—apart from descriptive and biographical sketches—consists of two essays which have much interest, namely, Mr. Hamada Kosaku's third chapter with reference to Græco-Indian Influence upon the Far-Eastern Arts," and Mr. Taki Seichi's first chapter on "Chinese Landscape Painting." Mr. Hamada's subject commands the earnest attention of all students, but we discover from his treatment, as indeed from his frank admissions, that materials for exhaustive or illuminating discussion are not yet forthcoming and probably never will be forthcoming. History prepares us to find that Grecian art reached China through India, but the sign-posts along the route it took are few and far between, nor are the evidences of its arrival in the Middle Kingdom very convincing. Still, Mr. Hamada's essay is the least unsatisfactory of all the dissertations hitherto published. Mr. Taki, who commences what will be, we trust, a long series of essays on Chinese Landscape Painting, appears to us, if we may judge from his opening chapter, to possess a deep knowledge of his subject. He appreciates at once the excellences and the limitations of Chinese artists, and he recognises the close affinity between the landscape paintings of China and Japan. He makes the following frank declaration:—"It should not be forgotten that Japanese landscape painters have largely followed the style of their Chinese masters, and that at least in this particular subject, if not in others, the art of the Middle Kingdom seems a little in advance of our own." We are disposed to endorse this verdict though if Mr. Taki hopes to persuade his readers, he must procure for illustrations Chinese pictures of a higher type than those accompanying his first chapter. His text, however, is very instructive and we strongly commend it to students of this subject.

ADMIRAL DEWEY AND JAPAN.

At a meeting of the Naval Council in Washington, Admiral Dewey is said to have stated that Japan, Germany and France were adding largely to their fleets. England was building big ships of the Dreadnought type, but Japan, he had been told, contemplated the construction of three iron-clads still more powerful. France, too, according to a statement made by the Minister of Marine in the Chamber of Deputies, had formed a similar programme, and Germany would add 18 new ships to her Navy by 1917. The Admiral went on to say that if the United States had to fight in the future, her enemy would be Japan or Germany, and she must prepare herself with due regard to the growing strength of these Powers. The Hochi Shimbun publishes this news in large type, heading it "the States regarded by America as her enemies" and expresses great regret that such a character should be assigned to Japan by a prominent American Admiral in spite of the exceptional and growing friendship between the two countries. It is indeed strange that this apprehension of Japan should exist in America. The possession of the Philippines seems to have made the Great Republic nervous and thus prepared it to credit the silly forecasts of sensationalists whose sole qualification for the role of prophet is, either that they seek notoriety, or that they labour under a sense of some personal grievance at Japan's hands.

"NANSHU MEIGWA-YEN."

Mr. Lawrence Binyon, Curator of the British Museum, says that the landscape art founded by the Sung artists in China and continued by the Japanese in the 15th century, "must rank as the greatest school of landscape which the world has seen." We are reminded forcibly of this verdict as we turn over the pages of the 6th and 7th volumes of the Nanshu Meigwa-yen (Garden of master-pieces of the Southern School) which has just issued from the press of the Shimbi Shoin. Each volume contains ten pictures and among them are some of the most beautiful and characteristic examples of Chinese landscape painting we have ever seen. Unfortunately the publishers, enterprising as they are, have not thought it worth while to append English or French translations of the text, and for the sake of those, to whom the Japanese text is an embarrassment, we here give the names of the artists in order, commencing from No. 1 of Volume VI.

- 1.—By Liu Yuan of the Ming Dynasty. Plum-blossom viewing; a noble study in foliage painting.
- 2.—By Chou Kwei, commonly regarded as one of the greatest of Ming masters. This picture of pines and a river-valley shows beautiful atmospheric effects, with much force and delicacy of brush-work but the treatment of the water leaves something to be desired.
- 3.—By Li Yu, a later Ming celebrity, who is said to have laid down his life for his country. A rustic scene in rain-time. A grand picture: the air is full of moisture and there is much power of line, but a defect is apparent in insufficiency of aerial perspective.
- 4.—By Kau Chipoi of the Tsing Dynasty. Seeking poetic inspiration among the pines in a river-valley. This is a good specimen of the so called "literary picture." The outline drawing is too heavy but the light is finely centred.
- 5.—By Wu Tan of that Tsing Dynasty, chief of the Nanshu artists of that epoch. The residence of a literateur in a plum grove. A composition of extraordinary charm, the three planes of the picture distinguished with high skill and the brush-work of the utmost delicacy and force.
- 6.—By Chang Kang of the early Tsing Dynasty. Crags and an autumn forest. Remarkable for atmospheric effects and boldness of execution. The serene air of the season is excellently produced.
- 7 and 8.—These are by a Japanese artist, Tachibara Kyosho, of the early 19th century. No. 6 represents fishing in the calm of evening. The aerial perspective is admirable but the water is impossible and the rocks seem to have been artificially chiselled. No. 7 depicts reeds and a kingfisher—a really beautiful picture, tender and full of vitality. It is easy to see that the Okyo influence has permeated this artist, though he is remembered as a student of the Ming and Tsing masters.
- 9.—By Nukina Kaioku, a renowned Confucian Scholar of Kyoto, who began by sitting in the Kano atelier and finally turned to the Ming masters. This example of his work represents a quiet temple amid high mountains. It is a pleasing bit of work but somewhat formal, if not artificial.
- 10.—By Hine Taizan of Kyoto. Abode of the Sennin (mountain geni); a fine though formal composition, showing skilful brush work but faulty in treatment of distances.

If the authors intend, as we must assume they do, that the Japanese pictures reproduced by them here shall be taken as worthy comparative examples of Chinese and Japanese landscape painting, they have done little justice to their own nationals. But probably their idea is merely to show what forms the landscapes of the Chinese Ming and Tsing masters assumed when taken as models by Japanese artists of the modern schools: that is to say, artists who flourished at the close of the 18th century and during the first half of the 19th. The works of these men can not be placed in the first rank of Japanese paintings.

The seventh volume contains the following pictures:—

- 1.—By Chu Chingyun of the Ming Dynasty. A river-valley in summer. Chu flourished about the Chenghwa era (1465-1488) and acquired much fame by his landscape painting. This picture is a good example of his work but the aerial perspective is not satisfying.

- 2.—By Wang Kienchang of the Ming Dynasty. Flower jewels and a spring valley. The brush-work is admirable as are also the atmospheric effects. The canvas, however, is over-crowded.

3.—By Su I of the Tsing Dynasty. Travelling among snowy mountains. A winter scene of much breadth and beauty. Su I's name is not preserved in history, though the picture shows him to have been a great artist.

4.—By Chang Hung of the Ming Dynasty. Rain threatening among the summer hills. Chang flourished at the close of the Ming and in the early years of the Tsing. He is honoured as the originator of a special style which approaches very closely to the best work of celebrated landscape-painters of the modern Occident, except that in combined powers and delicacy the advantage is signally on the side of the Chinese master. This picture is a typical example. The light forming a point of concentration in the middle distance, and the gathering mists creeping over the far-off hill-tops belong to a noble realm of art.

5.—By Sheng Shaohsien of the Ming Dynasty. An autumn landscape. Sheng was a native of Yangchow and is remembered as one of the greatest of the Ming masters. This example of his work has essentially Chinese characteristics. The unique aim of the painter is to convey an idea of the perfectly pellucid atmosphere of autumn at mid-day. He has succeeded so well that the effect is almost dazzling, and one does not miss the want of cast shadows, whose absence often mars Chinese paintings.

6.—By Lu Hsiao of the Tsing Dynasty. A mountain road in autumn. Lu Hsiao was renowned for his studies of figures and animals as well as of landscapes. In this picture the execution of the foliage and the broken lights on the cliff show great power, but it is plain that Lu did not make a faithful study of the habits of water, and his composition exhibits a defect not uncommon in Chinese pictures: it crowds the canvas to the exclusion of sky effects.

7.—By Ku Ta-shen of the Tsing Dynasty. Fishing under the pines. This artist was celebrated for the skill, minuteness and delicacy of his brush-work, merits which are well illustrated in this picture. But his outlines are unnaturally heavy and he makes his cliffs cast shadows in opposite directions simultaneously.

8.—By Chang Chiuku of the Tsing Dynasty. Lotus flowers. Chang was renowned as a painter of birds and flowers. He visited Japan in the Tenmei era (1781-1788) and resided for some time in Nagasaki. He followed Chen Nanpin in popularizing the style of the Nanshu artists in Japan. This painting is a noble specimen of his force.

9.—By Nakabayashi Chikudo (Japanese). Pheasants and flowers. Chikudo, a native of Owari, worked originally in Kyoto under Miyazaki Kimpo, and subsequently, by studying the works of the Yuan artists of China, he became the founder of a school in Japan. His birds and flowers leave little to be desired but his modelling of rocks is very crude.

10.—By Takahashi Sohyo. Coming home from fishing. This artist, a native of Kyushu, studied under Tanomura Chikuden and was much esteemed by Rai Sanyo and other great literateurs. He died at the early age of 32. This example of his art shows power of brush, but is heavy and unpleasing. There is no atmospheric breadth and the distances are not marked.

It must be repeated with regard to this volume also that while the illustrations depict the merits of the Chinese School with much fidelity, they do little justice to the Japanese, for neither Chikudo or Sohyo deserves a place in the gallery where the author has placed them. As illuminants of Chinese landscape paintings, however, the two volumes deserve close attention and will certainly evoke much admiration.

CUSTOMS PROTEST.

A decision was given by Mr. K. Hashimoto, Director of the Yokohama Customs, on a protest instituted by Messrs. Heller Bros. No. 176 Yamashita-cho.

On April 18th, the firm imported glass-beads for decoration purposes, on which the appraisers imposed 20 per cent ad val duty in accordance with No. 62-B of the Tariff and 15 per cent war tax. The importers contended that the goods were a kind of Venetian bead and consequently should be dealt with under No. 169 of the same Tariff. The protest was dismissed on the ground that being in the form of beads, these articles could not be taken as Venetian.

TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

We have received the following circular and for reasons which its readers will appreciate we extend to it the hospitality of our columns:—

PREAMBLE.

As a result of Russo-Japanese War, it is certain that commerce and industry of Japan would achieve a great advance and at the same time business of foreigners resident in this country would become brisk. And when business becomes brisk it would be inevitable for them to employ more people than they used to do hitherto. Judging from our experiences up to date, however, those who are employed in foreign firms are more inclined to do dishonest things such as misappropriating their employers' money by means of fraud or anything like that than those who are employed in Japanese firms. This is because the foreigners who are their employers being not well aware of Japanese customs and the people with whom such employes always deal being mostly Japanese, close watch cannot be kept, thus giving them a nice chance to perform misdemeanor. Under these circumstances, we can safely infer that foreign firms in general are making big losses on that account. And as to the result of such misdemeanor on the part of employes, Police Stations are constantly despatching detectives to arrest such people. But, even if they be arrested, it does not make good the loss suffered by those foreign firms because it is only to inflict penalty upon them by law.

Having been impressed with such an idea and also having considered that such misdemeanor on the part of employes would greatly mar the business connection between foreigners and Japanese, we have established an institution by which we can keep close watch upon the daily behavior of employes in foreign firms, and if there be any who is going to make dishonest act we would warn their employers beforehand or inform secretly before there occurs a big loss, thus saving the employers from any loss they may fall into and at the same time safe-guarding their properties. This done, we believe, it would greatly help to make smooth the business connection between foreigners and Japanese. We herewith beg to request all foreign firms to join us in accordance with the following stipulations:

Principal: I. J. R. MURAYAMA.

No. 53, Nogecho 2-chome Yokohama.

STIPULATIONS.

- Art. 1.—Our Company aims at the close watch, inquiry for personal circumstances and various other secret detections on employes in general.
- Art. 2.—Our Company's office is located at No. 53, Nogecho 2-chome, Yokohama, for the present. But, as location is now being selected at Yamashitacho (the Settlement), the office would be established there in course of time.
- Art. 3.—Anybody can join us, foreigner or Japanese.
- Art. 4.—Those who join us are requested to make contract in accordance with one of the following conditions:—
  1. To pay the fee of yen 60 for a year.
  2. To pay the fee of yen 40 for half a year.
  3. To pay the fee of yen 10 monthly for 3 months or for less period.
- Art. 5.—Those who do not make contract mentioned above but who ask us for our service whenever there occur some events, are requested to pay the fee of yen 5 per one event.
- Art. 6.—The fees specified in Art. 4 and 5 to be paid in advance.
- Art. 7.—Our Company shall never ask for any remuneration besides the fees specified in Art. 4 and 5. When, however, our staffs were despatched to outside of this city, the expenses incurred would be asked to be paid to us.
- Art. 8.—To those who made contract with us in accordance with Art. 4, we will now and then make report on the behavior of employes and other necessary items. To those specified in Art. 5, however, the result obtained is reported.
- Art. 9.—For those who joined us in accordance with Art. 4, not only we perform our duty specified in Art. 1, but also we would be their advisers and reply to various questions.
- Art. 10.—Even when those who joined us in accordance with Art. 4 and those who asked for our service according to Art. 5, cancelled this contract or cancelled their request by their own will, we shall never pay back the fee which we thereby received.

Form for Application.

Those who desire to apply to us will please send this form duly signed.

To HEART SHOKAI. ....19...

(Sign.)

OBITUARY.

Telegraphic information has been received from London by the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation announcing the death of Mr. H. M. Bevis, on the 4th inst. This news will come as a great shock to many residents in Yokohama. Mr. Bevis was formerly Manager of the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation here, and his geniality and hospitality made him a general favourite. He came out to the East for the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation in November, 1875, and since then has held many important posts. At the time of his death he was home on leave after some years of management of the Shanghai Branch of the Bank. The late Mr. Bevis was about 52 years of age.

The death is reported of a veteran journalist—Mr. J. Allen Quinton, who for some years was London editor and correspondent of the Melbourne Argus. Mr. Quinton was associated with the Religious Tract Society for several years and was at one time editor of the Leisure Hour and Sunday at Home. He was in his eighty-ninth year. A son of the deceased gentleman, Mr. A. W. Quinton, is at present on the staff of the Japan Mail and we record our sincere sympathy with him in his bereavement.

The death is reported of Captain D. Stuart Bailey, who was well known in Yokohama. He was drowned from a French mail steamer approaching Marseilles. Capt. Bailey left Yokohama in November last in command of the Mogul line steamer Ghazee, but took a passage home by a French steamer in the Mediterranean to take over the Sikh, the flagship of the line, and it was as the French steamer was approaching Marseilles that his death took place.

We regret to report the death of Mr. Samuel Paxton, Assistant Superintendent of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha, at Kobe, which occurred in the hospital at that port on the 10th instant at 4 a.m. from pleurisy. Mr. Paxton, who was from the North country, was still a young man, having come out to Japan in the N. Y. K. service as a junior engineer on the Tokyo or Saikyo Maru early in 1898. He was later on second engineer of the Satsuma Maru, and in 1899 was appointed Assistant Superintendent at Yokohama, with Captain Forbes. In 1902 he was transferred to the Kobe branch of the Company and has continued to fill that post at the sister port up to the time of his decease. More than a year ago he was laid up by a severe attack of pneumonia and pleurisy, and has never since enjoyed robust health. Mr. Paxton had never married and was not a man, we believe, that went much into society, but he was highly esteemed by those who knew him intimately, and also by his employers, for his strict business integrity and ability.

NOTES ON CURRENT EVENTS.

Telegrams from Formosa say that the advance of the Aiyu line is proceeding steadily. We explained in a recent issue what these Aiyu are—village troops—and our readers will have understood that the axe and the spade serve as important a part in the Japanese operations as the rifle. The method pursued is to open tracks through the forest and gradually occupy territory, driving back the Seiban (semi-savages). This process having been carried on successfully in the direction of Musha, two groups of the Seiban, designated the "Bantai" and the "Maiparai" in the telegrams, offered resistance, doubtless seeing that there was no other recourse except surrender. They both yielded, however, at sight of the Japanese strength, but the Maiparai's submission seems to have been merely a ruse, for they chose an opportunity to open a fierce fire under which two Japanese and one Aiyu fell, and four Aiyu were wounded. The Maiparai had the same number of casualties. They were completely repulsed. This happened on the 29th of April, and the Formosan authorities report that the affair need not cause any uneasiness, or be interpreted in any sense as a check. The work of subjugation is proceeding quite satisfactorily.

"The Naval Authorities have decided to sell, as they lie, about 21 vessels of sorts now on the bottom within and without Port Arthur and in four other places. Persons desiring to bid should make application at the Kansei-Hombu of the Naval Department or the Kosaku-sho of Port Arthur. There all the necessary documents and information may be obtained up to the 18th instant. The tenders must be put in by the 30th of June at Port Arthur.

It is stated that the new steamship service of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha to Bangkok will be opened in the middle of this month, the Company using chartered vessels at first. The prospects of the line are regarded with confidence. It will of course carry all the Siam cargo brought out by the Company's European and American liners.

A few days ago the Jiji Shimpō published an account—taken from British journals—of a new bank about to be established in the Far East under the name of the "Anglo-Japanese Bank." The Hochi repeats the news. The bank is to have a capital of two millions sterling in 200,000 shares of £10 each. Of this capital one-half is to be subscribed by the projectors and one half is to be offered to the public, but only £100,000 will be allotted to the Japanese, among whom the principal names thus far are those of Mr. Okura and Mr. Asano. Baron Shibusawa, however, is assigned the post of adviser and his association is of course important. The idea is not only to discharge the usual functions of a bank but also to lend foreign capital for the purposes of Far-Eastern enterprises. Among the names of the foreign projectors are mentioned those of the Right Honourable James Parker Smith, M.P., a director of the Union Bank of Scotland, Baron George de Reuter, a director of the Imperial Bank of Persia, Mr. Herbert Edimann, a director of the Merchants Banking Company of Liverpool, Mr. Joseph Macandrew, a director of the South American Bank of Mexico, and Sir Westby B. Percival, a director of the Union Bank of Australia. The bank is to be organized and worked under British law.

On the 4th instant Field Marshal Marquis Yamagata and General Terauchi gave a garden party in the Shinjuku Park to the military officers in Tokyo, the members of the Cabinet and other high officials. There were some 8,000 guests in all, and the beauty of the weather supplementing that of the Park made the affair a signal success. Five of the Imperial Princes were present. It will be observed that five entertainments in all have been given—the Emperor's banquet on the 1st; the Prince Imperial's on the 2nd; the Naval banquet on the 3rd; the military garden party on the 4th, and the City's garden party on the 5th.

News has been received that on the 29th of April a Russian tank-oil steamer, bound for Vladivostok, attempted to reach that port by a short route and struck a floating mine, with the result that she very nearly went to the bottom. The mine is stated to have been Japanese. That is very likely. It is known that when Rojestvensky's Squadron was nearing Japan, Admiral Togo caused the approaches to Vladivostok to be strewn with mines, concerning the whereabouts of which full information was given to the Russians at their request after the restoration of peace. Nothing has been heard, however, of operations to remove the mines. Port Arthur experiences proved the Russians to be very skilled at this kind of work, and it is possible that they swept the Vladivostok avenues without making much fuss over the operation. But if so they seem to have left some of the mines in situ, a result which was only too much to be feared.

Viscount Hayashi reached Yokohama on the afternoon of the 5th by the German steamer Prinz Heinrich. His Excellency, who was welcomed by local and British officials, proceeded in the first place to the Specie Bank and after a brief rest there took the train for Tokyo where he arrived at 6.25 p.m. He was met at the station by Count Matsukata, Count Katsura, General Terauchi, Mr. Hara, Mr. Makino, Mr. Chinda, Mr. Ishii, Mr. Kurachi, several other members of the Foreign Office, Mr. Tsuzuki Keiroku, Mr. Otori Keisuke and many other distinguished persons.

The officers of the Army have now been entertained most royally, but the non-commissioned officers and men have received little recognition, if we except the present of sake and sakana sent to them by the Emperor. It is stated that Barons Iwasaki and Mitsui and Messrs. Okura and Yasuda, with other leading citizens of Tokyo, are devising means to remedy this omission.

There is talk of another great celebration on the 27th instant to commemorate the naval victory in the Sea of Japan. The Jiji Shimpō is throwing its powerful influence into the scale in favour of this project.

Since there exists a small coterie of publicists whose business in life is to discredit Japan's Korean policy and who do not trouble themselves greatly as to the nature of their methods or materials, so there are sensationalists or intriguers who spare no efforts to invest Japan with an aggressive and truculent character in the eyes of the world. Some time ago St. Petersburg telegraphed that the Japanese were busy with warlike preparations and that their object was the invasion of Siberia. This rumour scarcely excited a flicker of attention, its source and its nature being alike calculated to discredit it. Then followed a persistent tale that Japan had purchased the Philippines from the United States and that one of the first duties of the new American Ambassador on his arrival in Tokyo would be to arrange the details of this transaction. We can not discover that the canard attracted much attention in America. At any rate press references to it were few and far between. But now again comes a circumstantial statement attributed to a Russian Major-General, by name "Homak," so far as we can discover from its transliterated form. This officer is said to have been in Japan on Red-Cross business, and the report attributes to him a due measure of circumspection in view of his official position. There are no evidences of circumspection in his story, however. He frankly declares that Japan is arming against the United States and that he assured himself unquestionably of the fact during his sojourn here. The Siberian fable was given to the world on the authority of an anonymous

Russian who had been among the Japanese prisoners at Matsuyama, but there is no anonymity in the last case, though there is certainly not less mendacity. We all know that nothing can possibly be so unlikely as to find no believers. These various lies, if they continue to be told with sufficient pertinacity, will have some discrediting effect on Japan's reputation. That is what their inventors count on. They have certainly climbed to the apex of absurdity when they depict Japan as arming against the United States.

Undoubtedly if the Post Office Authorities issue special post cards they ought to make arrangements to meet the confusion which has been abundantly proved by experience to be an inevitable feature of such occasions unless they are efficiently contrived. On the 6th instant the sale of senyeki kimen hagaki was announced to take place in Tokyo, but only seven post-offices were appointed for selling purposes, and the consequence, easily foreseeable, was that thousands of would-be purchasers assembled at these places, many of them having spent the greater part of the preceding night waiting for a chance to buy. The crowding and crushing were terrible and several instances of persons fainting or receiving more or less serious injuries are reported. Truly such impotence of organization is inexcusable. Why not sell at every postal-office or post-agency in the capital, and thus ensure the citizens against such occurrences? The whole thing is based on a senseless mania, which, in our opinion, is the only just epithet to apply to philately. But if the Authorities minister to the mania they should at least do so in such a manner as not to contravene their cardinal duty of preserving order and protecting life.

In England there is an apparently strong movement in favour of legislation to restrain juvenile smoking. The Times publishes a letter bearing the signatures of seven prominent men who urge that the Government should be pressed to introduce a measure prohibiting the sale of tobacco to children under 16 years of age. The signatories claim that by inquiries addressed to 450 members of the present Parliament, it has been ascertained that many of them are in favour of the project. This is exactly what was tried in Japan a few years ago, and the result was total failure. Possibly English legislators may devise some means of giving effect to such a law, but the thing is hard to conceive. How is supervision to be exercised? There is already an International Anti-cigarette League with a membership of over 57,000 boys who are pledged to abstain from smoking until the age of 21 at least, and with a thousand branches scattered over the United Kingdom. It is by agencies of that kind, we venture to think, that reform can be effected and not by legislation.

The American donations to the fund for relieving the distressed in the famine districts of Japan, which was remitted in various sums by the Christian Herald to the Japan Red Cross Society, aggregated yen 420,045.17 on May 5th.

Mrs. Stephen George Henty, the first white woman who landed in Victoria, Australia, died on February 3, at Hamilton, Victoria, at the age of 90. Mrs. Henty was born at Stokesby, Yorkshire, the daughter of Captain Walter Pace, of the East India Company, and went with her mother to Western Australia in 1832. At the age of 20 she was married to Mr. Henty, a Swan River pioneer, afterwards a member of the Legislative Council. Shortly after their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Henty left in a vessel of 60 tons burden, called the Sally Ann, which Mr. Henty purchased with the object of sailing to join his brothers in Portland. They went to Tasmania and sailed back to Portland, arriving in the bay one moonlight Sunday night in June, 1836. Mrs. Henty was carried ashore through the surf by a sailor, and this primitive disembarkation resulted in the foot of the first white woman stepping on Victorian soil. The party at this time were dependent upon themselves for supplies from Tasmania, as well as for protection from the natives, who were very hostile, and the runaway prisoners who visited the whaling establishment. In August of the same year Major Mitchell and his party came down through Victoria, and were surprised to find the party comfortably settled at Portland, where, in August, 1837, Mrs. Henty's eldest son was born—the first white male native of Victoria. Mrs. Henty was personally acquainted with all the Governors of Victoria, from Charles La Trobe to Sir Reginald Talbot.

According to Tokyo papers, the fund for relieving the distressed in connexion with the San Francisco earthquake and fire, which was collected by the Japan Red Cross Society from the public, amounted to yen 108,259.08 on May 7th. Of this yen 101,265.82 has been sent to America.

There was a somewhat severe earthquake at Osaka and Kyoto on the morning of the 5th at 8.09 o'clock. The observatory reports that a preliminary shock was felt at 6.20 a.m., but it was too slight to cause any apprehensions. The shock at 8 o'clock was vertical in direction and developed a movement of 6.25 mill. It lasted two minutes. No serious injury resulted. The centre is supposed to have been somewhere between Osaka and Shikoku, probably in Osaka Bay. Remembering Vesuvius and San Francisco the people at first showed some signs of panic, but it seems to have been soon recognized that the phenomenon was not of a very serious character. A slight shock was felt in Yokohama about the same time.

Trouble is reported from Shimonoseki in connexion with the water-works. An embankment, presumably of the reservoir, threatens to give way, and its collapse would mean the inundation of numerous habitations. It is said that the responsible engineer is found to have scamped his work and employed means which could not have had more than temporary efficacy. Consequently there is much excitement.

Prince Menchikoff (?) has published in the columns of the Novoye Vremya a strange article warning Russia that she will have to fight again against Japan very shortly. His main argument is that Japan having tasted the charms of victory will assuredly not rest content, and he speaks in very exaggerated terms of the preparations she is now making. It is useless to reproduce his words. They are easily conceived, being simply the vapouring of an excited man with a fixed idea. Two of his assertions, however, have special interest. One is that the Japanese officers, when taking leave of the Russian prisoners, assured the latter that they would meet again, and that the meeting would be sooner than might be expected. Conceive a publicist so credulous as to believe that such words were uttered, with the intent which Prince Menchikoff assigns to them. The second assertion is that Japan has not withdrawn a single soldier from Manchuria! If there be many Russian leaders of thought so fatuous and so ill-informed as Prince Menchikoff, the great Empire has bad guides. The Prince, however, is probably a very exceptional person.

A report which is published by the Tokyo Asahi to the effect that Mr. John McLean, the well-known American Vice and Deputy Consul-General in Yokohama, has resigned from the service, is, we believe, quite correct. He has spent many strenuous years at his post in the Consulate-General and now finds that the state of his health will not enable him to cope with the fast increasing mass of work which devolves upon his department. He has therefore decided to retire while he may yet hope to profit by the leisure to which he is so fully entitled. Mr. McLean will be greatly missed by all whose business takes them to the Consulate, where his courtesy and high business efficiency have ever been most marked. The American State Department will be fortunate if its work in this part of the Far East is carried on as efficiently in the future as it has been in the past during Mr. McLean's tenure of office.

The extraordinary cold snap of the past few days has done very great injury, it is said, to the mulberry trees and will cause a shortage of the silk crop. Snow has fallen in Koshu, Shinshu and Joshu to a depth of from 3 to 5 inches. Following so soon on the cold of last week this unreasonable weather is very unfortunate.

YACHTING.

The season of the Yokohama Yacht Club opened on Saturday afternoon with races for the 26 and 21-raters and the Larks. It is to be hoped that the conditions of the opening day will largely prevail during the season, a moderate to fresh breeze and fine weather. There should with favourable circumstances be good racing, at any rate in the 39 and 21-rater classes. The former now consists of Mary, Kingfisher, Maid Marion, Naniwa (the old Kingfisher), Nina, and Riever, which came up recently from Kobe. Valkyrien and Elsa sail in the cruising class and are fleetier than the old boats that composed this and the former cruising class.

The 26-raters were sent away first at 2 o'clock to go over the Lightship-Widow Buoy course. Valkyrien led Elsa all the way round, Surprise and Asagao nowhere. The times were

	Start.	Finish.
Surprise .....	2.0.06	4.00.09
Valkyrien .....	2.0.35	3.46.48
Elsa .....	2.0.10	3.48.46

The 21-raters went off at 2.30 p.m. on the Tachibana-Mandarin Bluff course, the first prize being the Nina Cup. Five sailed and Aimee got first through the harbour entrance, followed by Edna, who stuck to her fairly well to the Tachibana mark. There the former began to walk away and finished an easy first, Winsome displacing Edna. Times:—

	Start.	Finish.
Pete .....	2.15.23	3.50.48
Winsome .....	2.15.11	3.50.11
Edna .....	2.15.09	3.50.59
Sunbeam .....	2.15.32	3.52.32
Aimee .....	2.15.05	3.44.12

The Lark class went over the Mandarin Bluff course. Only two boats competed, the times at the finish being: No. 12, 3.15.41. No. 11, 3.17.49.

The 26 and 21 raters sailed under club time allowance.

On Sunday nearly a dozen boats sailed to Tomioka. The weather was fine, a moderate easterly breeze prevailing which freshened up as the day advanced. The crews tiffed at the hotel at the cove and a very pleasant afternoon was spent, all the boats returning home in daylight.

THE MONEY MARKET.

MUCH attention seems to have been attracted by the Bank of Japan's recent action in lowering its rate of discount by 2 rin daily, which means 0.730 per cent. annually. A similar reduction was made by the Bank on the 12th of March, and the two measures, coming so close together, seem to puzzle some financiers. The Nichi Nichi Shimbun represents these perplexed critics. Our contemporary is disposed to doubt whether the second reduction is judicious. It is true that the money market is very easy and that capital is eagerly seeking investment. But, on the other hand, the Government's demand for funds is heavy. Its borrowings from the Bank of Japan aggregate 95 million yen and the Treasury bills it has issued amount to nearly 100 millions. Thus the Bank is occupied chiefly with official finance, and its loans to the general public do not exceed 18 million yen. Moreover, its note issues continue to stand at 248 million yen, so that its residuum of issuing power is only 2 millions. Suppose then that by lowering its rate of interest it creates a demand for money, how will it meet that demand? Besides, although the money market is easy at present there will soon be a call in connexion with transactions in silk and tea, and we are further on the eve of an issue of 150 million yen worth of bonds to pay the rewards to officers and men of distinguished service. The present easiness of the money market will disappear in the presence of these conditions. Why then, precisely at this juncture, has the Bank taken a step which can scarcely fail to create a demand for money on the security of bonds?

The Kokumin Shimbun discusses the question somewhat differently. After noting that the accommodation granted by the Bank of Japan to the Government aggregates nearly 100 millions, and that the money market is nevertheless exceptionally easy, so easy that many banks are perplexed to find means of utilizing the funds at their disposal, our contemporary states that some financiers advocate an increased issue of Treasury bills, in order thereby to repay a portion of the debt to the Bank of Japan, thus enabling the latter to reduce the volume of its convertible notes, and in order also that the Treasury may gain the difference between the rate of interest on the bills and the rate it has to pay to the bank. Plausible, however, as this course seems, the Government, according to the Kokumin, hesitates to adopt it. Only a short time has elapsed since a domestic loan of 200 million yen was floated, and the effect that the monthly payments on that account will produce on the money market has to be seen. If, in addition, a further issue of Treasury bills were made, the double demand might be productive of inconvenient consequences. Hence there are good reasons for proceeding cautiously. But at the close of last month the Government, while redeeming 29 million yen worth of bonds with one hand, was able to issue 40 millions in Treasury bills with the other, and, at the same time, to reduce the rate of interest to 5.475 per cent. Moreover the spring payments on account of the 200-million-yen bonds were made without difficulty by the 25th of April. Hence it may be inferred that an increased issue of Treasury bills at this juncture would not cause any inconvenience, and there is a possibility that such a step will be taken. The Kokumin, our readers will observe speaks with circumspection resembling that attributed by it to the Government: it leaves us in doubt as to the Treasury's real intentions. Again, in speaking of the Bank's action in reducing its rate of discount by 2 rin daily, our contemporary suggests that the step was taken merely for the purpose of placing the Bank in line with the rates ruling in the open market. The Bank was charging its customers more than they had to pay at other banks, since while the latter's rate for secured bills was only from 1.7 sen to 1.9 sen daily, the Central Bank was demanding 2.1 sen. Such a discrepancy called for adjustment. Under ordinary circumstances it is for the Central Bank to set the example and for the other banks to follow, but in this case the sequence has been reversed.

There is also another consideration to which our contemporary alludes. Several arrangements have been concluded or are in progress for importing foreign capital, and a considerable quantity seems likely to enter the country soon. Recourse should not be had to foreign capital, however, until the nation has made full use of its own domestic capital, and if, in face of a large supply of liquid capital at home, there is still a strong tendency to look abroad, the only reason can be—we quote the Kokumin—that money is too dear in Japan. Hence the Central Bank's desire to lower the rate of interest, and hence the Government's hesitation to hamper the market by a large issue of Treasury bills. It is not anticipated that any sensible pressure will be exercised on the market by demands in connexion with the tea and silk trades. Real pressure will come when the post-bellum undertakings are inaugurated. A few are already on the tapis, but the Kokumin thinks that the present year will be occupied mainly in plans and that the demand for capital will not be great until next spring.

There is one point which our contemporary omits to note, namely, that although there may be a great deal of liquid capital in Japan, there is very little machinery for diverting it into the routes of enterprise. That there is a great deal of such capital is a fact to which we have frequently drawn attention. It could not be otherwise, in view of the immense sums spent in Japan during the war. But a large part of this capital is in the hands of the banks, and banks do not make long-period loans such as are required by men starting new enterprises. A perception of that deficiency in financial organization probably led to the establishment of the Kogyo Ginko which, however, fills only a part of the gap.

TIBET.

IT is alleged that M. POKOTILOFF repaired to the Waiwupu to make inquiries about the Tibetan Treaty—the ratifications of which are said to have been exchanged—and that he informed the Chinese Government that if any special privileges had been granted to Great Britain in Tibet, Russia would expect similar consideration elsewhere. The news has an air of credibility. Russia naturally objects to being left behind in the race of competition for empire, and from her point of view Great Britain's doings in Tibet probably bear the aspect of frank aggression. But after all there is a cardinal difference between the modern methods of Russia and England—we purposely say nothing of their old-time doings. That difference is that whereas England waits for occasions to offer, Russia manufactures occasions herself. Just now and for the next few years much anxiety may be expected on the part of Russian officials to make up lost ground. Tibet lies within the great Asian district where these recuperations find greatest facilities, and nothing is less likely than that the recently concluded Treaty should fail to be seriously considered in St. Petersburg. As for China, her policy of buffer States has already involved her in so many troubles that one might expect her to change front of her own initiative. She has had bitter lessons in Annam, in Burmah, in Korea and in Manchuria—though the propriety of applying the term “buffer State” to the last may be queried. There remain Tibet, Turkestan and Mongolia, and unless history be singularly unfaithful to its own precedents it will repeat itself in these regions. The Tibetan plum may be said to have fallen into England's lap, but that is all the more reason why Russia should busy herself in Turkestan and Mongolia. Seldom does the future present itself in such clear outlines. England has her buffer State in Afghanistan, and a most unconscionable source of mental anxiety does it furnish. But China's manner of treating her buffer States is conspicuously unpractical, for while she is wholly invertebrate in equipping them to resist aggression, she relies on them implicitly to discharge their function of fenders. It has often been said that for civilized Powers safety may be best assured by the closest contiguity. If Russia's borders marched side by side with England's in Central Asia the responsibilities of each State would be clearly defined and they would soon become friendly neighbours. But they prefer—or, at any rate, England prefers—to be separated by an uncivilized partition which constitutes a perpetual menace to the peace of both, and which could not be relied on by either in the event of an emergency. China follows suit in the helpless manner which she has made essentially her own, and if anything human can be certain, it is certain that she will have to encounter in Mongolia and Turkestan, if not in Tibet, embarrassments and ultimate losses precisely analogous to those she has suffered in the cases of Tonquin, Korea and Manchuria.

MONTHLY SUMMARY OF THE JAPANESE RELIGIOUS PRESS.

(CONCLUDED FROM LAST ISSUE.)

The Seikyō Shimpō (Greek Church) publishes two articles entitled "Evangelistic Work and the Question of Independence" in which the difficulties connected with rendering churches self-supporting are fully discussed. All Christian bodies agree, says the Seikyō Shimpō, in desiring to make their churches independent of foreign help, but as to the methods to be adopted for the realization of this end there is the greatest diversity of opinion. Reviewing the efforts that our churches have made with a view of eventually becoming independent, we see much that is lacking in stability, much that is unsound in principle. It is of course most desirable that every separate church should accumulate property of its own, either movable or immovable, that it should have a certain amount of capital. It is generally supposed that most of our country churches have funds on which to draw for church work. But the trouble is that though in name certain property and certain funds are at the disposal of the church, in reality they are entirely under the control of a few Christians, acting as private individuals. Now to us it seems that all Church property should be owned and controlled by properly constituted Church bodies, with pastors as presidents. If those who contribute money or who give land or buildings for the use of the churches have not sufficient confidence in ecclesiastical bodies to allow them to have exclusive control over property, then their Christian faith is in a very weak state. As things are now among us property that is stated to be church property is in reality no church property at all. The Christian owners manage it as they please. It is held in their names and church officers are powerless to interfere with it or to use it for church purposes when they may deem this necessary. Until this abuse is got rid of our churches can never reach a state of self-support and independence.

One great reason of the slow progress made in evangelistic work is want of funds. And why are there no funds available for the travelling expenses of evangelists and for the hiring of preaching stations and the like? Because each separate church is so anxious to add to the bulk of its capital that when money is subscribed liberally, after paying pastors and the like, the surplus is not devoted to mission work. It goes to increase the amount of the capital fund. Of course it is highly desirable that these Church funds should exist, though they are not held and administered as they ought to be, but what troubles us is the fact that the notion seems to prevail among our Christians that it is far better to hoard up money in Church funds than to spend it in mission work. While money is accumulating more or less all the time in the churches, our evangelists complain that they do not know how to make two ends meet. They are perpetually hampered in their operations for want of funds. Now, when we come look to into the matter closely we find that most of the Church funds that exist as capital funds are by no means adequate as capital funds and they have not been placed on a proper footing. As there is not sufficient money available to largely augment these funds and carry on urgent missionary work at the same time, we are strongly in favour of using every surplus yen that the Church gets hold of for evangelistic work. The duty of propagating the Gospel must supersede the duty of laying by money. Our Lord's words, "Let him sell his cloak and buy a sword" applies to this. The situation when these words were uttered was such that the garment which in ordinary times might be retained had to be bartered for the weapon needed for urgent immediate use. We now witness in our churches the anomaly of growing church funds and utter stagnancy in mission work. The money that is annually supplied to us from Russia cannot be increased so as to enable us to extend missionary work as much as we wish to do. The only hope of opening up fresh work lies in the adoption of an entirely new policy in the handling of the money that comes into our Church coffers. To be forming reserve funds when the working expenses of the churches are not properly met is to misunderstand the very object of the existence of churches. They exist to become centres of light and influence to outsiders, for the purpose of gathering in new converts all the time. Of course an ideal state would be for evangelistic work to be going on vigorously while Churches are rendering themselves more and more independent by the accumulation of money and other property. But as things are to-day, one of these causes has to be sacrificed to the other. There is not enough available money for an adequate support of both. Hitherto mission work has been invariably sacrificed to the cause of financial independence. We hold very strongly that we must put a stop to this practice or as a church sink into a state of hopeless inactivity. Financial independence and torpor do not represent a desirable kind of existence for Christian Churches.

The Nichiyō Sōshi (Protestant Episcopalian) (No. 194) comments thus on the modern tendency to describe everything in exaggerated language. In what a world of phrases do we live! Platform speakers and learned lecturers alike all seem to be striving to produce an effect on their hearers by means of ornate phrases. Words, words, words—all words is the impression one gets from listening to many orations. Not the phrases which are calculated to make truth plain are chosen, but rather those which are likely to please the ears of the audience. Words that sound grand, heroic, profound, or comprehensive are selected. The showiness and hollowness of modern speech in this country cannot be too strongly condemned. One expects to hear very young men rolling out ornate phrases for effect, but to find even well known scholars and literary men writing and speaking in an absurdly exaggerated style naturally causes astonishment. The use made of language by certain orators and speakers tends to obscure truth rather than to make it clear. It is at times very difficult to find any valuable ideas at all beneath the profuse display of those emblems of thought called words.

We continue our translations of extracts from the Raise no Unu (The Existence or Non-existence of a Future World).

(13) Mr. Kōda Rohan. Your questions I find difficult to answer, as I have no personal experience of the future life. But there is one of Oyūjō's (玉右丞) lines which says: Unu wa danjō (斷常) no ken (見), Seimetsu wa gemmu no ju (受). It is only the uninitiated that talk of existence or non-existence, continuance or non-continuance, life or death. They are no more real than a dream. These words I read with delight, why, I can't tell you. Poems impress us without our knowing why.*

(14) Mr. Nakamura Taiyō. Your inquiry is indeed a difficult one. The questions you put have been propounded and discussed again and again in all ages by philosophers and others. As long as men have souls and as long as they have feelings there will ever be three views relating to the future life. There will be those who feel sure there is to be one, those who feel sure there never can be one and those who do not know what to think one way or the other. There are those who contend that discussion on this subject will certainly die out as civilization and enlightenment advance. But that is not my opinion. I think that the belief in a future life is very comforting and that its effects on the minds of those who hold it is good and therefore I keep to it. It may be blind belief, with no ground in reason, but still I do not like to give it up.

(15) Baron Ishiguro Chūtoku. It is quite impossible to give a decided answer to either of your questions. But to me the existence or non-existence of a future life is a matter of no great concern. I try to do what is right and leave the future to take care of itself. If there be a future certainly no harm will come to him who does good in this world. To follow what is good and to shun what is evil is all that I set my heart on. With this the speculative question whether there be a future world or not has no direct concern.

* The jukuni u-mu, dan-jō, sei-metsu all have the same meaning here. Existence and non-existence, Continuance (jō) and non-continuance (dan), life and death, are terms that, though used to represent our limited point of view do not express realities. The view of the universe embodied in these terms is as unreal as a dream. In treating such subjects we deal in symbols only; of realities we know nothing, says Kōda Rohan.

(6) Mr. Sekino Tei. I have no ideas on the subject of your inquiry. It has never occupied my mind, therefore I have no views to state to you. Not even when some time ago, after making my will, I lay on the operating table awaiting an operation whose result nobody could foretell thus hanging between life and death, did a single anxious thought respecting a future world enter my mind. Hence you see I am in no way qualified to reply to your question.*

(17) Dr. Maeda Eiun.—I think there will be a future life; but to set forth in a scholarly way the arguments on which my belief is based in a few sentences would be impossible. So I cannot send anything on the subject.

(18) Mr. Takebe Tōgō.—We are born as members of society, we live as members of society. Just as in the past and the present we have lived in society so will it be in the future. Man's eternal life is in and through society.†

The Kirisutokyō Sekai (No. 1, 176) has a very timely article on the extreme backwardness of Japanese Christian literature generally, which we epitomize thus: In religion, faith, thought and taste intermingle with each other to such an extent that their separation is impossible. All the great questions of human life are connected with one of these subjects. What are their tastes? If we know this of any set of men we know all that is worth knowing. Intellectual life in modern Japan is undergoing rapid development. With this religion must keep pace or lose its influence over educated people. There are many men who would be attracted by Christianity could it boast of anything like high class literature. Not only have we no Christian magazine of a thoroughly learned type, but we have not as yet attempted to supply the country with translations of the great Christian literary masterpieces of Europe, Milton's Paradise Lost, Klopstock's Messiah, Dante's Inferno, and Tennyson's In Memoriam. Though unable to produce anything of our own worthy of comparison with these grand works, we ought to be equal to the task of reproducing them in Japanese. Till Christianity has taken hold of the literature of a country and permeated it, it can never be said to be permanent. Religion and literature in the West have an enormous influence on each other. Literature only reaches its sublimest heights and its greatest depths when it is used as a means of expressing religious thoughts. But not only are we ill-supplied with books expressing higher thoughts, but we lack even elementary Sunday School text-books. Our Sunday School teaching is very unsatisfactory partly on this account, though it is true that there is a sad want of order, system and management with our Sunday Schools. To sum up, what Japanese Christianity needs in the literary line to-day are (1) Good translations of standard Christian works; (2) high-class, representative magazines; (3) original works on Christian thought; (4) Christian class-books.

The Kirisutokyō Sekai of April 26th has an article on Japanese prostitutes in

* This is certainly a very remarkable confession and we believe it to be typical of a large class of Japanese. The subject of a future life has not the faintest interest for them and they consider its discussion a mere waste of time. If the publication of the Raise no Unu effected nothing else, it has conclusively proved the existence of wide-spread indifference to such questions as were propounded by the neo-Buddhists.—(WRITER OF SUMMARY.)

† Hito wa shakai ni umare, shakai ni bōssu. Kwako wa shakai nari, genze wa shakai nari, raise mo mata shakai nari. Hito wa shakai ni yori, shakai ni oite yeyen no seime wo yū su.

† A translation of this by a very able man, Mr. Tsuchii Banzui, is coming out in the Taiyō monthly. (WRITER OF SUMMARY.)

Manchuria. Information on this subject has recently been supplied to the paper by Messrs. Nishiuchi Tenkō and Yonezawa Shōzō. According to then the number of Japanese prostitutes is so great in Port Arthur, Dairen and elsewhere that throughout Manchuria it has become a national disgrace. In Manchuria every Japanese woman is taken for a prostitute (Nihon fujin to iyeba, kotogotoku shūgyōsha no imei [another name] to nareru no arisama nari to iu ni itatte wa, jitsu ni chōtōsoku [a long sigh] sezumba arazu). In Port Arthur prostitutes are to be seen driving in carriages in a most bare-faced manner and going in and out of high official residences. Most of the Japanese women who have gone to foreign countries have constituted a blot on the reputation of the country. In India, the Straits Settlements, America and elsewhere Japanese prostitutes swarm. After obtaining power in Korea and Manchuria by terrible sacrifices in the cause of humanity and in order to stop Russian aggression and immorality, we are now supplying those parts of the East with hundreds of bad women. This subject calls for strict inquiry and incisive measures. Many of the women who have taken to a life of ill-fame abroad left this country with the intention of engaging in ordinary occupations, others were mere children when they were taken from their homes in Japan. They were deceived by the men who took them across the seas. There certainly is a demand for official inquiry into the whole business, says the Kirisutokuyō Sekai. If this be not done, Japan's reputation throughout China and Korea will suffer greatly.

THE "ARABIAN NIGHTS" AT THE PUBLIC HALL.

More than a decade has passed since Mr. Sydney Grundy's farce "The Arabian Nights" was presented at the Public Hall, Yokohama. The players then were a poorly-equipped travelling company whose bright particular star was a Miss Marie Brian, to whose lot, however, fell the quiet and subordinate part of Daisy Maitland. On Saturday evening the same boards were trodden by amateurs from Kobe who played the farce amid most gorgeous furnishings under the familiar banner of the K.R., and A.C., an institution, which, though primarily devoted to athletic sports, has done much in its time to maintain the traditions of the temple of Thespis in the southern port. "The Arabian Nights" writes itself down without any circumlocution as a farce pure and simple, and as such it must be considered. It contains many bright lines of dialogue, many a diverting situation, and when played by such accomplished ladies and gentlemen as those engaged in its production on Saturday evening, is mirth-begetting from start to finish. Of course it enforces no moral lesson, but then it never sets out to do so. Strict moralists might also object to an entire evening being given up to laughing at a man who has not sufficient backbone to face the elemental facts of life and the ruthless tyranny of a managing mother-in-law with anything better than a string of preposterous tarradiddles. But human nature taken in the mass enjoys new and again such diversions as these and is well content to let its strivings for mental and moral advancement abide awhile while it halts by the way and enjoys a hearty laugh at the most inconsequential inanities. The caste on Saturday was as follows:—

Mr. Arthur Hummingtop.....Mr. Chas. Crowther.
Ralph Ormerod.....Mr. W. G. Feast.
Joshua Gillibrand.....Mr. J. P. Crowther.
Dobson.....Mr. G. Dell Clarke.
Mrs. Hummingtop.....Mrs. Harrold.
Mrs. Gillibrand.....Mrs. McWilliams.
Rosa Colombier (The Gutta Percha Girl).

Miss Crowther.
Daisy Maitland.....Mrs. Cosser.
Barbara.....Miss Cabeldu.

The outstanding characters were, of course, Mr. Arthur Hummingtop (a part beloved of Penley), whose unfortunate assumption of the rôle of Haroun Al-raschid gets himself and eventually all his friends into a terrible tangle; Rosa Colombier, the Gutta Percha girl; and Mrs. Gillibrand, the sne-dragon of a mother-in-law.

Mr. Crowther surpassed all expectations in his study of the man who slipped so sadly from the narrow path of veracity during the temporary absence of his wife, and whether in the "trying scenes" with his mother-in-law, with Rosa Colombier, or with his friend Ormerod, sustained the character faultlessly and as though to the manner born. As Rosa Colombier, the cause of all the tribulations which befel Hummingtop, Miss Crowther was the life and soul of the piece whenever she was on the stage, displaying all the verve and abandon which the part demanded. All the same we cannot say we relish seeing lady amateurs in such rôles of hopeless vulgarity; Miss Crowther's pre-eminent abilities are worthy of being exploited on a far higher plane of art than that she essayed on Saturday. The part of a traditional mother-in-law of the British school of farcical humour is unthankful at the best of times, but Mrs. McWilliams invested the character of Mrs. Gillibrand with all the astute craftsmanship of which she is so supreme an exponent. No wonder Hummingtop, with his invertebrate nature, quailed before her glance and shrank into a miserable poltroon beneath the hail of her invective. Of the minor characters, the Daisy Maitland of Mrs. Cosser was particularly dainty and sweet; Mrs. Harrold made a rather colourless Mrs. Hummingtop; Mr. W. G. Feast as Ralph Ormerod was satisfactory, though at times unconvincing; while as Joshua Gillibrand, Mr. J. P. Crowther would have created a better effect if he had exercised more restraint. The Barbara of Miss Cabeldu and the Dobson (or was it Dawson? both cognomens being used last evening) of Mr. G. Dell Clarke completed the bill in excellent accord with the rest of the company.

It goes without saying that the Public Hall was crowded, the gloomy prognostications afloat during the early part of the week being entirely falsified; that the applause and laughter were constant; that the ladies at the close were almost smothered behind banks of beautiful flowers; and that the whole evening can be written down as a success.

Before the curtain fell for the last time, Mr. Crowther advanced to the footlights and after thanking Yokohama for according Kobe players such a hearty welcome alluded to the imminent departure of Mrs. McWilliams from Japan. He paid a graceful tribute to her charm and ability as an actress and said that what would be Japan's loss in this respect would be China's gain. ("Hear, hear," and applause). In the name of those present he wished her bon voyage and the best of good luck in her new home.

CONSULAR REPORTS.

Japanese Consuls abroad send the following telegrams:—

Shanghai, May 5.
Owing to conditions in Japan, the cotton yarn market remains inactive, notwithstanding that stock is scarce. Purchasers are merely following the fluctuations in exchange quotations. The Indian yarn market is growing duller. During the week ended May 5th, 1,558 bales of Japanese yarn and 4,269 bales of Indian changed hands.

The cotton market presents no notable change owing to the fall in exchange. There is no enquiry for Japanese or American cotton goods.

The cause of the dormant condition in various markets is regarded to be due to slackness in exports and the fall in copper coin.

Hongkong, May 5.
There is no stock of Saigon rice. Siamese rice is in sole control of the market and business was reported brisk from Canton during the week ended May 5th and consequently prices went up by 15 cents on average. The market shows a further upward tendency.

Bombay, May 5.
The cotton market was very dull during the week ended to-day. Prices went down by between 5 and 8 rupees. The stock was estimated at 1,055,687 bales.

Lyons, May 5.
Owing to the cold weather, the growth of mulberry leaves and the hatching of silk-worm eggs are behind time. Hatching, however, is going on. It is said that the crop will exceed that of last year.

FIRES.

At 2 p.m. on May 3rd, fire broke out at Wakamatsu, in Aizu. Owing to a strong wind the flames spread at once throughout Hariya-cho, Kita-Koji-machi, and Shimo-Nanuka-machi, and destroyed two hundred buildings which comprised over six hundred dwellings.

The Governor of Niigata prefecture reports that an outbreak of fire took place at 10.40 p.m. on May 2nd in Gosen-machi, Niigata, burning down 250 houses. Various persons were killed or injured.

A Moji telegram reports that on the night of May 2nd, fire occurred at Moji, burning down several houses. A young woman was killed.

About noon on May 7th, fire broke out in a warehouse (140 tsubo) of the Kobe Customs, in which inflammable substances were stored. The flames at once spread to a junk loaded with sixty kwam of chloride of potash, which was moored near by. The building and the vessel, as well as their contents, were destroyed, those of the godown including 93 casks of alcohol, 486 packages of chloride of potash, 75 carboys of carbolic acid, 120 cases of yellow phosphate, oil essence, a quantity of Chinese rice, etc. The value of the merchandise is estimated at twenty thousand yen and it is reported to belong to the Mitsui Bussan Kaisha and the Iwai Shoten.

On the night of May 7th, fire broke out in the village of Kamo on Sado island burning down thirty-eight houses. The same day, another conflagration occurred in Noshiro, Akita prefecture, destroying 207 buildings, including 20 warehouses.

On the night of May 6th, fire broke out in the village of Noshiro, Akita prefecture, destroying two hundred buildings.

Fire broke out on the night of May 6th in the Arate Coal mine in Fukuoka prefecture. The flames raged until noon the following day. No one was injured.

A conflagration occurred at 1 p.m. on May 6th in Nedzu, Tokyo. Owing to the strong wind, the fire, which originated in the Sakai-za theatre, spread throughout Aizome-cho, Yayasaki-cho, Saga-cho, Sendagi-cho and Oiwake-cho, destroying 120 houses and damaging 28. The cause is unknown.

Fire broke out at 8.30 on Thursday night in the two storied kitchen of a Chinese house on the site of the former premises of Mr. Dentici in Honmura Road. The sub-station firemen of the Satsuma-cho brigade at No. 107 were promptly on the spot, and the flames were extinguished, having resulted in damage to an upper room by fire and to a lower room by water.

On May 8th, fire broke out in the village of Taira, near Takaoka, Toyama prefecture, destroying about fifty buildings, including a post office.

Another outbreak of fire occurred on the night of May 7th in Takibe, Yamaguchi prefecture. Some fifty houses were burned down.

At 10.30 p.m. on May 6th, fire broke out in the Kokugaku-In school, Iida-machi, Kojimachiku, Tokyo. The building was destroyed but the flames were subdued before spreading to the adjoining houses.

SNOW.

Nagano, May 9.
To-day, snow was experienced in the district of Shimonida, Kodzuke province, and in the district of Saku, Shinano province.

Shidzuoka, May 9.
Yesterday, the Fuji and Gotemba districts were visited by snow. Severe damage was caused to mulberry leaves in the districts of Sunayoshi and Kagozaka.

Asama, May 9.
Snow has fallen in the districts surrounding Asama-yama.

Fukushima, May 9.
In the districts of Date, Shinobu, and Adachi, Fukushima prefecture, heavy frost occurred to-day, causing severe damage to sericulture.

Maebashi, May 9.
On the night of May 8th, somewhat heavy snow was experienced in Kusatsu and surrounding places in Gumma prefecture. Such an occurrence is rare at this time of the year.

JAPANESE JOURNALISTS.

Japanese newspapers are habitually quoted by the foreign press in this country, but it is astonishing how few foreigners there are who possess any accurate and minute information as to the characters and the literary peculiarities of the men who write for these journals. As to Japanese literary style we can hardly expect the ordinary European or American to take much interest in it. But to students of the Japanese language and to all persons who watch sympathetically the general progress of the nation, the numerous changes which written Japanese is undergoing as a result of multifarious modern influences cannot but appear to be worthy of attention. The language of a country not only keeps pace with its general progress, but in many cases it serves as a reliable historical record of the stages through which national thought passes in its onward march. Language tendency in this country is a part and a very important part of the general modern tendency of the Japanese people. Up until very recently Japan in literary style failed to free herself from the thralldom of tradition. Even to-day the noted writers may be almost counted on one's fingers who are bold enough to say "Ancient or mediæval Japanese has no claim whatever on our allegiance beyond its utility in the present age. What our ancestors did to suit their convenience, we claim the right to do to suit ours. Our tongue is as clay in the hand of the potter to be moulded as he pleases." We are glad to see that a scholar who has made literature a specialty and who himself is a polished writer has compiled a set of Readers for Middle Schools in the preface to which he boldly asserts that Japan's standard language to-day is that used by living writers. Dr. Haga Yaichi, to whom we refer, spurns the notion that Japan should for ever sit at the feet of the ancients in literary style. A nation which has worked such wonderful transformations in other spheres of activity is surely equal to the task of originating a literary style that for all the purposes for which language is used shall prove the equal of ancient or mediæval Japanese. Each of the leading newspapers of Japan has its special style. In the case of two journals the Jiji Shimpō and the Kokumin Shimbun the newspaper offices have been regarded by the literary world generally as the originators and chief representatives of a class of writing that is quite distinct from all other styles. The authors of these two styles are the late Mr. Fukuzawa and Mr. Tokutomi Ichiirō. Literary style is the ultimate and enduring revelation of personality. The art of literature possesses the advantage of giving scope to the most diverse natures and dispositions and to tastes as far apart as the poles. It furnishes an avenue for the outflow of the whole group of mental qualities that combine to form personality. Morals, philosophy, politics, æsthetics, mood and conviction, creed and whim, habit, passion and demonstration, all clothe themselves in words and are transferred from the author's brain to the printed page. So in these writings men of striking personalities and special natural endowments live on to all time. Some of the men who figure largely in Japan's modern literary world may be forgotten a century hence, but there are others whose names will go down to distant posterity as the pioneers of Western civilisation in this land.

For much of the information as well as the literary criticism which we give in this article we are indebted chiefly to Mr. Toyabe Shuntei's writings. In his character sketches for the Taiyō this gentleman has displayed a very minute acquaintance with modern journalists and authors. He is a critic of no mean order, discerning and impartial and endowed with fine literary taste. In this age of Journalism there is a very large number of practised writers, but it is only in cases where a man's style is very pronounced and is part of his character that his literary productions impress the public mind and occupy a special position of their own. It may be said that modern Japanese writers generally, while aiming at making themselves understood, are careless about grammar and form. Consequently it is not safe to indiscriminately take them as models. Men of powerful personality like the late Mr. Fukuzawa become the authors of styles that are initiated and perpetuated by their literary disciples. Mr. Fukuzawa's style is now known as the Mitōryū. The greatest living representative of that style is Mr. Ishikawa Kammei, a man whose whole life and soul are absorbed by journalistic work. Week in and week out this indefatigable article-writer is to be found in the office of the Jiji Shimpō buried in literary work. He has no pleasure but that of work, no ambition beyond making a success of the paper with which he is connected. Things that other men strive for here regards with indifference. Quiet, unostentatious, painstaking labour is all he lives for. The personality of the writer is revealed in the calm, clear, business-like, matter-of-fact articles that appear daily in the Jiji Shimpō. The language flows on in one quiet stream. It is convincing and easily understood. There are no surprises; no special flights of eloquence. The words are mostly those which we are accustomed to hear in everyday life. The style of the Jiji Shimpō articles is a pure Japanese style and hence has charms for the reader which no heterotized Chinese (Kambun-kusushi no hentai) nor Europeanized Japanese possesses. Though Mr. Ishikawa has reached a very high state of development as a writer, as a thinker he lacks the talents and the spirit of the late Mr. Fukuzawa.

Another style affected by certain young men in Japan is what is known as the Min'yūsha-ryū, of which Mr. Tokutomi Ichiirō was the originator. It is sometimes called "The High Collar Style," because it consists of an attempt to write Japanese in foreign style. It is a distinctly new type of writing. It has a certain polish with it, and often strikes one as being somewhat clever. Though occasionally rather bombastic and exaggerated, the language is always refined. Mr. Tokutomi's writing is impulsive. He evidently aims at appealing to the feelings of readers. But though there is much bitterness and pungency in his sentences, they lack daintiness and sweetness, and hence not infrequently what he writes arouses animosity in the minds of his readers, producing the exact opposite impression to that intended by the writer. Men's weaknesses are often held up unmercifully to the gaze of the world, and there is too strong a tendency to use language that is undesirably plain and outspoken. These defects in the articles of the Kokumin Shimbun are much regretted by scholarly Japanese readers of that paper.

There are two gentlemen on the staff of the Kokumin Shimbun who are not much inferior as writers to Mr. Tokutomi. We refer to Messrs. Yamaji Aisan and Takekoshi Misa. Mr. Yamaji is trying his hand at producing a refined and yet easy semi-colloquial style. Is it not a mere imitation of the Mito writing. It aims at a higher level than that. Discerning readers perceive that words undergo a marvellous transformation in the Yamaji crucible and come out of it decked with beauty that did not belong to them previously. As a language-alchemist Mr. Yamaji has no rival in the whole of Japan. Mr. Takekoshi possesses a most wonderfully facile pen. The facility with which he dashes off sentence after sentence has been compared to the ease with which silk proceeds from a cocoon or the rapidity with which sawdust drops when a saw is in quick motion. His grammar is by no means faultless, but his articles display great natural talent and his command of language is quite wonderful. Compared with those of Mr. Tokutomi his sentences lack force and incisiveness. He does not use words so accurately as Mr. Yamaji, but his writing nevertheless has charms of its own. It is much to be regretted that at present Mr. Takekoshi's position in the Min'yūsha staff does not allow of his writing as much as he pleases.

Messrs. Kuga Minoru and Asaina Chisen have both done excellent work in the journalistic world; the former as editor of the Nippon and the latter as editor of the Nichi Nichi Shimbun. At present they are both ill and the papers they controlled have passed into other hands. The Nippon is now edited by Mr. Miyake and the Nichi Nichi by Mr. Yokoi Tokio. Mr. Yokoi has introduced punctuation in the leading articles of the Nichi Nichi. He has not hitherto had much experience as a newspaper writer, but his style is clear and simple. Compared with Mr. Kuga the range of topics treated by Mr. Yokoi is narrow, but in the matter of refinement of language and dignity of style there is not much to choose between these two writers. Taken all around as a model writer, Mr. Kuga has few equals in this country. His sentences are perfect in structure and his words are all well chosen. About Mr. Miyake's writing there is much that is very erratic. It is lacking in the qualities that render a style worthy of imitation. Among the contributors to the Nippon Shimbun there is a writer who signs himself "Mokudō." He is said to be a lawyer called Sasaki. His style is remarkable for its lucidity and logicalness. His articles have deservedly attracted much attention. With training he promises to become a second Kuga.

Mr. Ikibe Yoshitaru, the editor of the Asahi Shimbun, is certainly one of Japan's greatest journalists. No Tōkyō newspaper has a greater variety of weighty articles than the Asahi Shimbun. The discursiveness which makes many of the articles that appear in some other papers very tedious reading is never found in the leading columns of the Asahi. Even the news items in that journal consist of concise, business-like statements and never descend to the gossipy or twaddly style adopted by some other papers. The tone of the Asahi's articles is particularly calm. The editor shows himself to be a man with a well-balanced mind and to be unemotional. He brings all questions to the bar of reason and in passing judgment on men and things he shows great impartiality.

Mr. Naitō Chōnan, the editor of the Osaka Asahi Shimbun, writes in a modified Chinese style. There are certain modifications of Chinese that are unspeakably clumsy and ineffectual. But Mr. Naitō has avoided the rocks on which some other writers have run and he manages to express his thoughts in a somewhat telling manner in language that is far removed from the semi-colloquial style adopted by many other journals. There is a spirit and "go" about his writing that attracts young men especially, among whom the paper has wide popularity.

Mr. Ruroiwa Buiko, of the Manchō, has hitherto been known as a translator and a novelist rather than as a newspaper article writer. But he is showing considerable power in the rôle he is now playing. His well rounded sentences and his powerful logic attract attention to the paper that he edits. There is a big interval between him and the younger members of the Staff of that paper. The Manchō under Mr. Kuroiwa's editorship has ceased to belong to the yellow press class of journals.

Mr. Shimada Saburō, half journalist and half politician, is the sole remaining representative of the early pioneers of newspaper enterprise in this country. Some of those who entered the journalistic world at the same time as he did have passed away; others have long since ceased to write. The tone of the Mainichi Shimbun differs in many respects from that of all other papers. The personality of its editor is stamped on all its leading articles. Mr. Shimada's language is very perfect, simple yet expressive, and occasionally so striking that the reader cannot repress a sigh of sympathy or admiration. Though there is little variation in Mr. Shimada's style, his phrases are grouped together in a most masterly manner. He expresses his thoughts with the ease which only comes after decades of practice. He keeps his language in close touch with reality and not infrequently loads it with action and with passion. He writes for a special audience, largely of his own making, for the men and women of the new Japan who take a keen interest in the ethical aspects of all public questions. Mr. Shimada is justly regarded as one of Japan's greatest journalists.

Two journalists of some promise who in point of style are imitators of Mr. Asaina's writing have, to the regret of many of their admirers, left the journalistic world. We refer to Messrs. Kikuchi Gunzō and Inada Shūnosuke. They both were on the editorial staff of the Nichi Nichi Shimbun for a while and did excellent work for that paper. Then there is Mr. Hirata Hisashi, who for some little time displayed great ability on the staff of the Kokumin Shimbun. He has severed his connection with journalism and taken to book-keeping in the Mitsui Company, occupying a good post in that department. Mr. Tanaka Chōsaburō, who for some time edited the Jimmin Shimbun, is a writer of great promise, but he is little known. Then there is Mr. Tsukakoshi Teishun, who once acted as editor of the Kokumin Shimbun. He now only contributes occasional articles to the columns of the Tōkyō Nichi Nichi Shimbun. Among the younger generation of journalists there are doubtless many writers of great talent whose names are not widely known.

To certain minds the study of literary style has a great charm, because they realize that in studying style they are studying men. There is no part of a writer that is so much an exemplification of his very self as his style. Style cannot be taught. Writing on this subject, Professor Walter Raleigh says:—"All style is gesture, the gesture of the mind and of the soul. Mind we have in common, inasmuch as the laws of right reason are not different for different minds. Therefore clearness and arrangement can be taught. Thus incompetence in the art of expression can be partly remedied. But who shall impose laws upon the soul? It is thus of common note that one may dislike or even hate a particular style while admiring its facility, its strength, its skillful adaptation to the matter set forth. Milton, a chaster and more unerring master of the art than Shakespeare, reveals no such lovable personality. While persons count for much, style, the index to personality, can never count for little. 'Speak,' it has been said, 'that I may know you'—voice-gesture is more than feature. Write, and after you have attained to some control over the instrument, you write yourself down whether you will or no. There is no vice, however unconscious, no virtue, however shy, no touch of meanness or of generosity in your character, that will not pass on to the paper. You anticipate the Day of Judgment and furnish the recording angel with material. The art of criticism in literature, so often decried and given a subordinate place among the arts, is none other than the art of reading and interpreting these written evidences. Criticism has been popularly opposed to creation, perhaps because the kind of creation that it attempts is rarely achieved, and so the world forgets that the main business of criticism, after all, is not to legislate, not to classify, but to raise the dead. Graves, at its command, have waked their sleepers, opened and let them forth. It is by the creative power of this art that the living man is reconstructed from the litter of blurred and fragmentary paper documents that he has left to posterity." Hence the interest of the study of the literary idiosyncracies of the leading Japanese journalists of the Meiji era. Each of these men has contributed his quota towards the national transformation that has astonished the whole world. It is powerful personalities that move the world. Consequently it is hard to place a limit on the extent of the influence of Japan's principal modern writers. It is that makes modern Japanese literature worthy of serious study. W. D.

SPRING MEETING OF THE NIPPON RACE CLUB.

FIRST DAY, FRIDAY, MAY 4.

PATRONS:—H.I.H. Fushimi-no-Miya, H.I.H. Arisugawa-no-Miya, H.I.H. Kanin-no-Miya.

PERMANENT COMMITTEE:—Sir Claude Maxwell MacDonald, K.C.B., G.C.M.G., President, Dr. E. Wheeler, Vice-President, Baron A. d'Anethan, A. Bianchi, Esq., V. Blad, Esq., A. J. Easton, Esq., B. C. Howard, Esq., M. Ichihara, Esq., S. Isaacs, Esq., L. Mottet, Esq., K. Mori, Esq., B. Runge, Esq., Governor Sufu, F. Strahler, Esq., T. Thomas, Esq., T. Taniguchi, Esq., and A. G. M. Weale, Esq.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE:—V. Blad, Esq., Chairman, A. J. Easton, Esq., Hon. Clerk of the Course, T. C. Anderson, Esq., Hon. Treasurer, D. Marshall, Esq., V. A. Caesar-Hawkins, Esq., S. Isaacs, Esq., K. Mori, Esq., and Geo. Hood, Secretary.

In spite of the unpromising weather of the previous day, Friday morning opened bright and fine, with a rather high temperature and a light breeze from the south. The course was naturally rather heavy after the persistent drizzle of Thursday, but was in better condition than might have been expected. The attendance was fully up to the average of the first day of the meeting and the improved accommodation provided for visitors since last season was fully appreciated. The sport afforded by the nine events on the programme was perhaps better than usual; the fields were large in many instances and well contested, though owing to the condition of the course no record times were made. With the exception of the one unfortunate accident to the jockey Horikoshi, elsewhere mentioned, everything went off well, the duties of the day being satisfactorily performed by the Stewards of the meeting, comprising Messrs. V. A. Caesar Hawkins, Judge; B. Runge, Assistant Judge; A. J. Easton, Clerk of Course; Dr. Wheeler, Clerk of Scales; D. Marshall, Starter; F. H. Bugbird, Handicapper; and F. J. Hall, Timekeeper. The various events were as follows:—

1.—THE PEKING STAKES, value yen 400, the Second to receive yen 100, and the Third yen 50; for all China Subscription Ponies; weight as per scale; winners of 3 Races at date of entry excluded; of less than 3 Races 5lbs. extra. Three-Quarters of a Mile.

Mr. Cotton's Flounder, 160lb. ....(Jimba) 1
Mr. Swarby's Finasseur, 155lb. ....(Ichi) 2
Mr. News' Figaro II., 158lb. ....(Nakamura) 3
Mr. Rochester's Kobe II., 147lb. ....(Mr. Ferrier) 0
Capt. Leader's Duhallow, 158lb. ....(Capt. Leader) 0
Mr. Alexander's Manchuria, 160lb. ....(Yasu) 0
Major Trick's Grenadier, 150lb. ....(Hisakichi) 0
Mr. Island's Daijobu, 147lb. ....(Mr. Hudson) 0
Mr. Star's Enjoleur, 157lb. ....(Higaki) 0
Mr. Star's Kintoki, 152lb. ....(Tsubouchi) 0
Mr. Jorrocks' The Miller 160lb. ....(Mr. Mottu) 0
Mr. Duplex's Aeolus, 160lb. ....(Mr. Dietrich) 0
Mr. H. Kashiwagi's Bamboo, 157lb. ....(Kurosaki) 0
Enjoleur was made first favourite, Grenadier, Aeolus and Bamboo being also well supported. Two or three of the ponies bolted and went half way round the course before the large field could be got in line. After the wanderers had returned to the fold the mob, after several tries, were got away fairly well together, with one exception. Bamboo took the lead, with Aeolus next in order. Entering the straight Flounder got through and lead. Finasseur came up strong at the distance and nearly caught Flounder, who just won by a neck, with Figaro II third, about a length behind Finasseur. Time 1.36.70.

PARI MUTUEL, paid yen 79.

2.—THE FIRST CHINA GRIFFIN RACE, value yen 350, the Second to receive yen 100, and the Third yen 50; for China Subscription Ponies of Spring 1906; weight as per scale. Three-Quarters of a Mile.

Mr. Cotton's Kiso, 152lb. ....(Jimba) 1
Major Trick's Hussard, 152lb. ....(Hakodate) 2
Mr. Sport's Dai-ji-nai, 149lb. ....(Ichi) 3
Capt. Leader's Royal Kildare, 149lb. ....(Capt. Leader) 0
Capt. Leader's Canuck, 147lb. ....(Mr. Fletcher) 0
Mr. R. Loonen's Farceur, 155lb. ....(Horikoshi) 0
Mr. Monte Carlo's Blue Peter, 150lb. ....(Nihonyanagi) 0
Mr. von Hesselthal's Habenichts, 155lb. ....(Mr. Dietrich) 0

Mr. Island's Malta, 155lb. ....(Mr. Hudson) 0
Mr. Nanatsu's Ikuta, 152lb. ....(Nakazawa) 0
Mr. States' Pennsylvania, 155lb. ....(Sugiura) 0
Mr. B. Runge's Schnuckelchen, 155lb. ....(Sugiama) 0
Mr. H. Kashiwagi's Robin, 152lb. ....(Goto) 0

Kiso was a warm favourite. After a very bad start, the favourite got away with a good lead, with Dai-ji-nai next. At the Trees the latter made a good try and almost collared the leader, but Kiso responded to his rider's call and passed the post three lengths in front of Hussard, who had jumped into second place in the distance and finished a couple of lengths in front of Dai-ji-nai. Time 1.36.70.

PARI MUTUEL.—Paid yen 9.50.

3.—THE FIRST AUSTRALIAN GRIFFIN RACE, value yen 500, the Second to receive yen 125, and the Third yen 75; for Australian Subscription Horses of Spring 1906; weight for age. Five Furlongs.

Mr. Star's Gold Star, 137lb. ....(Higaki) 1
Mr. Snipe's Refined, 137lb. ....(Kawasaki) 2
Mr. States' Wyoming, 137lb. ....(Sugiura) 3
Mr. H. Lefebvre's Fleet, 137lb. ....(Horikoshi) 0
Mr. Cotton's Shinano, 137lb. ....(Awoki) 0
Mr. R. Loonen's Enjoleur, 137lb. ....(Kuramoto) 0
Mr. N. Kawakita's Ayame II., 137lb. ....(Yasu) 0
Mr. N. Kawakita's Kasumi, 137lb. ....(Isabano) 0
Mr. Trio's Vampa, 137lb. ....(Koide) 0

After a poor start, in which Fleet and another were left lengths behind, Gold Star jumped to the front, and gradually increasing her lead romped in an easy winner by half a dozen lengths. Refined finishing second, and Wyoming third, two lengths behind Refined. Time 1.07.50.

PARI MUTUEL.—Paid yen 8.50.

4.—THE SECOND AUSTRALIAN GRIFFIN RACE, value yen 500, the Second to receive yen 125, and the Third yen 75; for Australian Subscription Horses of Spring 1906; weight for age; winners at the meeting excluded. Three-Quarters of a Mile.

Mr. Kanagawa's Countess, 137lb. ....(Miyagawa) 1
Mr. Sport's Daitan, 137lb. ....(Mr. Catto) 2
Mr. Star's Silver Star, 133lb. ....(Kawasaki) 3
Mr. R. Loonen's Charmeuse, 137lb. ....(Horikoshi) 0
Mr. Swarby's The Duchess, 132lb. ....(Nakazuni) 0

Silver Star took the lead at the start, with Daitan close up, and Countess a length behind at the Trees. Entering the Straight Countess passed the two leaders and putting on a spurt won by eight lengths from Daitan, who finished second, three lengths ahead of Silver Star. Time 2.24.10. When near the Shakespear Mr. Loonen's Charmeuse, who was then last in the string, fell and threw her rider, Horikoshi, who received very severe injuries, and had to be carried off the course. On his arrival at the stables he was attended by Dr. Wheeler and another medical man, and it was feared that the injuries to the head, by a kick from the horse, would prove fatal.

PARI MUTUEL.—Paid yen 12.

5.—THE COLONIAL PLATE, value yen 600, the Second to receive yen 150, and the Third yen 75; for all Subscription Horses and Country Breds; winners of 3 races or less at date of entry, weight for age, of more than three races 5lbs. extra for each win over 3 wins, not exceeding 15lbs. in all. Three-Quarters of a Mile.

Mr. Kawakita's Hitachi, 142lb. ....(Ebano) 1
Mr. Green's Kachidoki, 149lb. ....(Tsubouchi) 2
Mr. Star's May-mie, 149lb. ....(Higaki) 3
Mr. Friends' Daylight, 137lb. ....(Hakodate) 0
Mr. Norfolk's Patricia, 137lb. ....(Mr. Dietrich) 0
Mr. Kawakita's Diamond, 139lb. ....(Yasu) 0
Mr. Tatsuta's Suma, 152lb. ....(Takahashi) 0

Hitachi was first favourite and justified the confidence placed in her. She got away well, took the lead from the start and kept it to the finish, winning easily by five lengths from Kachidoki May-mie third, three lengths behind. Time 1.20.30.

PARI MUTUEL.—Paid yen 17 each on Hitachi and Diamond, the stable.

6.—THE CRITERION PLATE, value yen 450, the Second to receive yen 125, and the Third yen 75; for all China Ponies; weight as per scale; Subscription Ponies 5lbs. allowance. Three-Quarters of a Mile.

Major Trick's Voltigeur, 130lb. ....(Hisakichi) 1
Mr. Duplex's Raubgraf, 147lb. ....(Mr. Dietrich) 2
Mr. Swarby's Finasseur, 155lb. ....(Ichi) 3
Capt. Leader's Royal Kildare, 139lb. ....(Tamazo) 0
Mr. Kanagawa's May-oui, 153lb. ....(Hakodate) 0
Mr. Alexander's Manchuria, 150lb. ....(Yasu) 0
Mr. Snipe's Bravo, 145lb. ....(Kawasaki) 0
Major Trick's Grenadier, 150lb. ....(Capt. Leader) 0
Mr. R. Loonen's Empereur, 152lb. ....(Mr. Mottu) 0
Mr. R. Loonen's Charmeur, 142lb. ....(Kuramoto) 0
Mr. Monte Carlo's Iron King, 150lb. ....(Nihonyanagi) 0

Mr. Tatsuta's Intermediate, 149lb. ....(Takahashi) 0
Mr. Star's Petit Canard, 147lb. ....(Igaki) 0
Mr. Star's Enjoleur, 147lb. ....(Kugasaki) 0
Mr. Tandem's Coot, 145lb. ....(Mr. Elliott) 0

This appeared to be anybody's race. After a capital start for such a big field, Voltigeur and Royal Kildare took the lead, the others all in a bunch. Before the Straight was entered, however, Raubgraf displaced Royal Kildare and the others were strung out. In the distance Voltigeur and Raubgraf had a fine struggle for first place, the former only winning by a head, with Finasseur third about a length behind. Time 1.20.30.

PARI MUTUEL.—Paid yen 152 on the stable, Voltigeur and Grenadier.

7.—THE MELBOURNE STAKES, value yen 600, the Second to receive yen 150, and the Third yen 75; for Australian Subscription Horses of Autumn 1905; weight for age; winners of 3 Races at date of entry excluded; of less than 3 Races 5lbs. extra for each win. Three-Quarters of a Mile.

Mr. Cotton's Yahagi, 140lb. ....(Rikizo) 1
Mr. Sport's Dekimasho, 143lb. ....(Mr. Catto) 2
Mr. Kawakita's Sazanami, 135lb. ....(Ebano) 3
Mr. Kanagawa's Princess, 140lb. ....(Miyagawa) 0
Mr. Star's Star, 130lb. ....(Higaki) 0

Sazanami got away with a lead and kept ahead until the houses were passed, when Yahagi, who was first favourite, came to the front. At the Trees Dekimasho ran into second place and coming down the straight made a good try to collar Yahagi, but just failed, the latter winning by half a length, with Sazanami third, a couple of lengths behind. Time 1.22.

PARI MUTUEL.—Paid yen 12.

8.—THE SECOND CHINA GRIFFIN RACE, value yen 350, the Second to receive yen 100, and the Third yen 50; for China Subscription Ponies of Spring 1906; weight as per scale; winners at the Meeting excluded. One Mile.

Mr. Alexander's Sceptre II, 152lb. .... (Yasu) 1
Mr. Jorrock's Artaxerxes, 151lb. .... (Ichi) 2
Mr. J. Koerting's Csardas, 152lb. .... (Sugiura) 3
Capt. Leader's Rory O'More, 152lb. (Capt. Leader) 0
Mr. Monte Carlo's Blue Peter, 158lb. (Ninonyanagi) 0
Mr. Tatsuta's Toba, 152lb. .... (Takahashi) 0
Mr. Green's Shoji, 158lb. .... (Tsubouchi) 0
Mr. Rubbling Well's Inbancor, 158lb. (Mr. Dietrich) 0

This appeared to be a very open event. After a good start Shoji went to the front and was joined by Csardas at the Trees. On entering the Straight Sceptre II rushed to the front and Shoji fell behind, while Artaxerxes ran into second place. After a fine race home Sceptre II finished about half a length ahead of Artaxerxes, Csardas three length behind in third place. Time 2.14 3/4.

PARI MUTUEL.—Paid yen 8.

9.—The THIRD AUSTRALIAN GRIFFIN RACE, value yen 500, the Second to receive yen 125 and the Third yen 75; for Australian Subscription Horses of Spring 1906; weight for age; winners at the Meeting excluded. One Mile.

Mr. Green's Otowa, 137lb. .... (Tsubouchi) 1
Mr. Alexander's Powerful, 137lb. .... (Yasu) 2
Mr. S. Saito's Fujiyama, 132lb. .... (Ebano) 3
Mr. H. Lefebvre's Flight, 132lb. .... (Kuramoto) 0
Mr. J. Koerting's A. G. G., 137lb. .... (Sugiura) 0
Mr. Tandem's Meta, 137lb. .... (Mr. Mottu) 0

Powerful got the best of the start with Fujiyama next. Going up the hill Otowa pulled up to the front and gradually increasing his lead won a good race from Powerful by three or four lengths, Fujiyama third about two lengths behind Powerful. Time 1.52 1/4.

PARI MUTUEL.—Paid yen 7.

SECOND DAY, SATURDAY, MAY 5.

The weather on the second day of the Spring meeting was far from being as bright and cheerful as on the first day, and during the latter part of the afternoon rain was momentarily anticipated, but fortunately held off. The attendance on the stands and enclosures was probably the largest on record while thousands of Japanese gathered around the borders of the course. The occasion was honoured by the presence of H.I.H. the Crown Prince, who arrived at Yokohama Station at 11.35 a.m. attended by his suite, consisting of Marquis Nakayama, Superintendent of the Crown Prince's Affairs, Marquis Kido, Grand Chamberlain, Commander Kuroki, Naval Attaché, Viscount Takatsuki, Chamberlain, and Viscount Nishikinojoki, Steward to the Crown Prince. The Crown Prince was received on the platform by Mr. Taniguchi, Secretary of the Kencho, and other officials, as well as by the members of the standing committee of the Prefectural Assembly. On arrival at the station the Prince entered a carriage bearing the Imperial insignia, which had been sent down by the Imperial Household Department on the previous day, and drove to the race-course at Negishi, Marquis Nakayama riding with the Crown Prince, while the other Court officials followed in another carriage. The procession proceeded along Main Street up the corner of the Central Post and Telegraph Office, and turning to the right passed along the road by the Recreation Ground, crossing the Hanazonobashi up Jizozaka for Negishi. From Bentenbashi in front of the railway station up to the Post and Telegraph Office both sides of the street were lined with the students of the Yokohama Commercial School and the Higher Girl's School, and a large number of enthusiastic spectators. The Crown Prince was dressed in the military uniform of a Major-General. All the Court officials were in Court uniform.

His Imperial Highness was received at the entrance to the Racecourse by Mr. Easton, Clerk of the Course, and was welcomed and conducted to the Imperial box on the upper floor of the grand stand by Sir Claude MacDonald, President of the Race Club.

Besides the British Ambassador, Baron d'Anethan, the Belgian Minister, and M. Bakmatieff, the new Russian Minister, a number of members of the Tokyo legations, and ladies from the capital were present, and in spite of the dullness of the weather the Grand Stand and lawn presented a very gay and charming scene, graced with the dainty spring toilets of the ladies.

The sport afforded was well up to the average of the best of ladies' days, and all went off without hitch or accident. The Emperor's prize, a beautiful silver bowl, was presented to the owner of Hitachi, the winning horse, by Mr. Ito, Grand Master of Ceremonies, and on the call of Sir Claude MacDonald, three hearty cheers were given by all present for His Majesty the Emperor.

After the 7th Race, the Ladies Purse, the Crown Prince left his box and, escorted by Sir Claude MacDonald and the officials of the Club, entered his carriage, which had been drawn up on the Course, and drove off, while the band played the National air. The Ladies Purse was presented, after the 8th Race, by Mrs. Barclay to the successful rider, Mr. Dietrich. Mrs. Barclay expressed the pleasure she had in presenting the Ladies' prize to so good a sportsman as Mr. Dietrich had proved himself to be, and Mr. Dietrich in expressing his thanks, referred to the interest shown by Mrs. Barclay and the ladies of Tokyo and Yokohama in presenting the purse and to the assistance such an action rendered to sport in Yokohama. At the close of his remarks Mr. Dietrich presented Mrs. Barclay with a handsome bouquet, and at the call of Mr. Easton cheers were given for Mrs. Barclay, and for Mr. Dietrich, the owner and rider of the winner.

According to information received on the Course during the afternoon, the injured jockey, Horikoshi, who was removed on Friday evening to Noge hospital, was still in a precarious condition, being paralysed all down one side.

THE EMPEROR'S CUP DAY.

1.—The CHINA DERBY, value yen 500, the Second to receive yen 150, and the Third yen 75; for all China Ponies; weight as per scale; Subscription Ponies 5lbs. allowance; Winners at the Meeting 7lbs. extra. One Mile and a Half.

Major Trick's Voltigeur, 144lb. .... (Hisakichi) 1
Mr. Monte Carlo's Iron King, 151lb. .... (Takahashi) 2
Mr. R. Loonen's Empereur, 152lb. .... (Mr. Mottu) 3
Capt. Leader's Duhallow, 153lb. .... (Capt. Leader) 0
Mr. Kanagawa's May-out, 155lb. .... (Hakodate) 0
Major Trick's Grenadier, 150lb. .... (Aoki) 0
Mr. Cotton's Flounder, 150lb. .... (Jimba) 0
Mr. Tatsuta's Intermediate, 149lb. .... (Ebano) 0
Mr. Star's Enjoleur, 147lb. .... (Kawasaki) 0
Mr. Duplex's Aeolus, 150lb. .... (Mr. Dietrich) 0

Ten out of twenty-six entrants faced the starter, the favourites being Empereur and Aeolus. After a capital start Flounder went to the front with Enjoleur and Aeolus next in order. Going up the hill Empereur ran into first place but was displaced by Voltigeur at the Trees. Coming down the straight Iron King joined the two leaders but failed to collar Voltigeur who won a good race by two lengths from Iron King, with Empereur a good third, half a length behind. Time 3.23 1/4.

PARI MUTUEL.—Paid yen 80 on the stable, Voltigeur and Grenadier.

2.—The YOKOHAMA DERBY, value yen 700, the Second to receive yen 200, and the Third yen 100; for all Subscription Horses and Country Breds; winners of 3 races or less at date of entry; weight for age; of more than 3 races 3lbs. extra for each win over 3 wins, not exceeding 15lbs. in all. One Mile and a Half.

Mr. Star's May-mie, 149lb. .... (Higaki) 1
Mr. Green's Kachidoki, 149lb. .... (Tsubouchi) 2
Mr. Tatsuta's Suma, 152lb. .... (Takahashi) 3

Only three competitors appeared for this event, the smallest field of the meeting so far. May-mie got the best of the start, and made the pace very fast. Kachidoki, who was the favourite, looked dangerous at one time, but May-mie was able to keep her lead and passed the post two lengths in front of Kachidoki, Suma half a dozen lengths behind. Time 2.49 1/4, just beating Kachidoki's record of Autumn 1904, of 2.49 3/4.

PARI MUTUEL.—Paid yen 29.50.

3.—The FOURTH AUSTRALIAN GRIFFIN RACE, value yen 500, the Second to receive yen 125, and the Third yen 75; for Australian Subscription Horses of Spring 1906; weight for age; winners of Races 3 and 4 First Day excluded; winner of Race 9 First Day 7lbs. extra. Three-Quarters of a Mile.

Mr. Green's Otowa, 137lb. .... (Tsubouchi) 1
Mr. States' Wyoming, 137lb. .... (Sugiura) 2
Mr. Sport's Daitan, 137lb. .... (Mr. Catto) 3
Mr. H. Lefebvre's Fleet, 137lb. .... (Fujisaki) 0
Mr. Cotton's Shinano, 137lb. .... (Awoki) 0
Mr. R. Loonen's Enjoleuse, 137lb. .... (Kuramoto) 0
Mr. N. Kawakita's Ayame II, 137lb. .... (Yasu) 0
Mr. N. Kawakita's Kasumi, 137lb. .... (Ebano) 0
Mr. Star's Silver Star, 137lb. .... (Higaki) 0

Otowa was a warm favourite. Enjoleuse showed very bad temper and gave a lot of trouble at the start. Wyoming got away first and led to the Shakespeare, when Otowa, who had been running second, took the lead and increasing it all down the straight won easily by six lengths, Wyoming second, four lengths in front of Daitan. Time 1.22 1/4.

PARI MUTUEL.—Paid yen 8.

4.—The THIRD CHINA GRIFFIN RACE, value yen 350, the Second to receive yen 100, and the Third yen 50; for China Subscription Ponies of Spring 1906; weight as per scale; winners at the meeting excluded. Three-Quarters of a Mile.

Capt. Leader's Canuck, 152lb. .... (Mr. Fletcher) 1
Mr. Sport's Daijina, 144lb. .... (Nakamura) 2
Major Trick's Hussard, 152lb. .... (Hakodate) 3
Mr. States' Pennsylvania, 158lb. .... (Sugiura) 0
Mr. Jorrock's Xerxes, 150lb. .... (Seikichi) 0
Mr. H. Kashiwagi's Robin, 152lb. .... (Kurosaki) 0
Mr. Green's Shoji, 158lb. .... (Tsubouchi) 0
Mr. Island's Malta, 150lb. .... (Mr. Hudson) 0
Mr. Monte Carlo's Blue Peter, 153lb. (Nihonyanagi) 0
Capt. Leader's Royal Kildare, 144lb. (Capt. Leader) 0
Mr. R. Loonen's Farceur, 150lb. .... (Kuramoto) 0

Hussard was most favoured of the eleven starters. Canuck got away first and led all the way, finishing a length and a half in front of Daijina, with Hussard a poor third. Time 1.38 1/4.

PARI MUTUEL.—Paid yen 21 on the stable, Canuck and Royal Kildare.

5.—The SYDNEY STAKES, value yen 600, the Second to receive yen 150, and the Third yen 75; for Australian Subscription Horses of Autumn 1905; weight for age; winners of 3 races at date of entry excluded; winners of less than 3 races 3lbs. extra for each win; winner of Melbourne Stakes First Day excluded. One Mile and a Furlong.

Mr. Sport's Dekimasho, 143lb. .... (Mr. Catto) 1
Mr. N. Kawakita's Sazanami, 139lb. .... (Ebano) 2
Mr. Kanagawa's Princess, 140lb. .... (Miyagawa) 3
Mr. Cotton's Chikuma, 137lb. .... (Jimba) 0

After a capital start the four horses passed the stand the first time in even line, but going up the hill Dekimasho drew away, with Sazanami next in order. After entering the straight Dekimasho increased her lead and won by three lengths from Sazanami, with Princess two lengths behind in third place. Time 2.13.

PARI MUTUEL.—Paid yen 7.50.

6.—The EMPEROR'S CUP, presented by His Majesty the Emperor. The Second to receive yen 200 and the Third yen 100; for all Subscription Horses and Country Breds; winners of 3 races or less at date of entry, weight for age; winners of more than 3 races at date of entry 3lbs. extra for each win over 3 wins, not exceeding 15lbs. in all; Australian Subscription Horses in Japan for their Second Meeting 3lb. allowance; Horses that have started at previous meetings but have not won a race 5lbs. allowance, allowance accumulative; Australian Subscription Griffins 12lbs. allowance; winners after closing of entries to carry 5lbs. extra cumulative. Previous winner of Emperor's Cup under these conditions excluded. One Mile.

Mr. N. Kawakita's Hitachi, 152lb. .... (Ebano) 1
Mr. H. Lefebvre's Flash, 140lb. .... (Higaki) 2
Mr. Norfolk's Parma Violet, 137lb. (Mr. Dietrich) 3
Mr. Norfolk's Patricia, 137lb. .... (Mayeda) 0
Mr. Cotton's Yahagi, 134lb. .... (Rikizo) 0
Mr. N. Kawakita's Diamond, 141lb. .... (Yasu) 0

Out of twenty-five entrants only six started, of whom Hitachi was first favourite. Flash, it was feared, would not be fit for the race and had done next to no galloping this season, but nevertheless found many backers. Parma Violet got away best at the start and led to the top of the hill, with Hitachi close up. Before the Shakespears was reached Flash came away from fifth place and passed both the leaders at the Trees, but on entering the straight Hitachi came up strong and after a fine race home won by a length from Flash, Parma Violet third, three lengths behind. Time 1.59.

PARI MUTUEL.—Paid yen 9 on the stable, Hitachi and Diamond.

7.—The LADIES' PURSE, presented; the Second to receive yen 100, and the Third yen 50; for all China Subscription Ponies; weight as per Scale with 5lbs. added; winners at the Meeting 5lbs. extra. To be ridden by Full Members of the Club, or Visitors, whose names must be sent in to the Committee before the Meeting and approved by them. One Mile.

Mr. Duplex's Raubgraf, 159lb. .... (Mr. Dietrich) 1
Mr. Tandem's Coot, 162lb. .... (Mr. Elliott) 2
Mr. R. Loonen's Charnear, 159lb. .... (Mr. Catto) 3
Capt. Leader's Duhallow, 163lb. .... (Mr. Fletcher) 0
Capt. Leader's Royal Kildare, 149lb. (Capt. Leader) 0
Mr. Alexander's Sceptre II, 152lb. (Mr. Andreis) 0
Mr. Island's Daijobu, 152lb. .... (Mr. Hudson) 0
Mr. Swarby's Finaisseur, 155lb. .... (Mr. Cox) 0
Mr. Star's Petit Canard, 159lb. .... (Major Cheyne) 0
Mr. Rochester's Mark, 162lb. .... (Mr. Ferrier) 0
Mr. Rochester's Kobe II, 152lb. .... (Mr. Warner) 0
Mr. News' Figaro II, 160lb. .... (Mr. Mottu) 0
Mr. Jorrock's The Miller, 162lb. .... (Mr. Hawkins) 0

For this, the gentlemen riders' blue ribbon event, the large field of thirteen weighed in and the race was keenly contested and created great interest. Raubgraf, Coot and Kobe II. appeared to be the favourites. Coot and Charmeur made the running from the start with Raubgraf a couple of lengths behind. At the Shakespeare Raubgraf came up with the leaders and at the Trees passed them both. Coot, however, hung close behind him down the straight and at the finish was only half a length behind, with Charmeur a fair third. Time 2.11.0.

PART MUTUEL.—Paid yen 9.50.

8.—The FIFTH AUSTRALIAN GRIFFIN RACE, value yen 500, the Second to receive yen 125, and the Third yen 75; for Australian Subscription Horses of Spring 1906; weight for age; winner of Race 9 First Day excluded, winners of Races 3 and 4 First Day 7lbs. extra. One Mile and a Furlong.

Mr. Star's Gold Star, 144lb. ....(Higaki) 1
Mr. Kanagawa's Countess, 144lb. ....(Miyagawa) 2
Mr. J. Koeting's A. G. G., 137lb. ....(Sugiyama) 3
Mr. H. Lefebvre's Flight, 132lb. ....(Kuramoto) 0
Mr. Alexander's Powerful, 140lb. ....(Yasu) 0
Mr. Snipe's Refined, 132lb. ....(Kawasaki) 0
Mr. R. Loonen's Charmeuse, 132lb. ....(Fujisaki) 0
Mr. S. Sato's Fujiyama, 132lb. ....(Ebano) 0
Mr. Sport's Daitan, 137lb. ....(Mr. Catto) 0
Mr. Tandem's Meta, 142lb. ....(Mr. Mottu) 0

After a fair start, Countess went to the front and led up to the top of the hill, when Gold Star got up to her and took the lead, with Daitan next in order. At the Trees A.G.G. displaced Daitan, and Gold Star, keeping up her advantage, finished two lengths ahead of Countess, while A.G.G. made a fair third, two lengths behind Countess. Time 2.10.0.

PART MUTUEL.—Paid yen 20.

9.—The FOURTH CHINA GRIFFIN RACE, value yen 350, the Second to receive yen 100 and the Third yen 50; for China Subscription Ponies of Spring 1906; weight as per Scale; winners at the Meeting 7lbs extra. One Mile and a Furlong.

Mr. Cotton's Kiso, 152lb. ....(Jimba) 1
Mr. Jorlocks' Artaxerxes, 155lb. ....(Ichi) 2
Mr. Bubbling Well's Inbancor, 158lb. (Mr. Dietrich) 3
Capt. Leader's Rory O'More, 152lb. (Capt. Leader) 0
Mr. Alexander's Sceptre II., 152lb. ....(Yasu) 0
Mr. Nanatsu's Ikuta, 152lb. ....(Nakazumi) 0
Mr. Tatsuta's Toba, 152lb. ....(Takahashi) 0
Mr. Green's Shoji, 158lb. ....(Tsubouchi) 0
Mr. J. Koeting's Sardas, 152lb. ....(Sugiyama) 0
Mr. B. Runge's Schnuckelchen, 155lb. (Sugiyama) 0

Kiso started a hot favourite. Mr. Runge's pony with the unpronounceable name got away with a good start, but was supplanted in the lead by Sceptre II. going up the hill. At the Shakespeare Artaxerxes came out of the crowd and drew up to the leaders, and after a fine race from the corner down the straight with Kiso finished second, only a short length behind Kiso, with Inbancor, who had displaced Sceptre II, a good third. Time 2.35.0.

PART MUTUEL.—Paid yen 8.50.

THE LAW COURTS.

CLAIM FOR SHORT DELIVERY.

A case in which Messrs Mendelson Bros. claim twelve hundred yen from Messrs Butterfield and Swire, was resumed on May 4th in the Yokohama District Court.

Producing two bills of lading, the defendants' Counsel said that the documents were for tin-plates to which Mr. F. J. Lias of Messrs W. M. Strachan and Co., referred at the previous hearing, when he was examined as a witness. Although Mr. Lias stated that a quantity of the material was still undelivered by Messrs Butterfield and Swire, and that he lodged a claim for shortage with the shipping agents, some misunderstanding seemed to have arisen. The whole of the cargo involved in the two bills of lading was delivered and the documents were given to the agents by the consignees. If there was a shortage in the cargo, the consignees would not have given the documents to the shipping agents until the claim was settled.

Plaintiffs' Counsel contended that according to several witnesses, Messrs Butterfield and Swire always received the bills of lading from the consignees before the cargo was delivered, consequently it was quite natural that the documents should be in the hands of the shipping agents notwithstanding that there was a shortage in the cargo delivered. The documents produced by the defendants' counsel, therefore could not constitute evidence of value. Counsel further discussed the evidence after which he asked the court to adjourn the hearing. The Court adjourned the case till May 18th.

THE RHINE DIVORCE CASE.

In the Yokohama District Court on May 8th, two judgments were delivered in the Rhine divorce cases. Mr. Charles F. Rhine asked for divorce from his wife, Mrs. Gretchen Marie Dorothea Rhine, now in Hamburg, and Mrs. Rhine petitioned for a similar purpose.

The first hearing of the action lodged by Mr. Rhine took place on April 21st last, and that of Mrs. Rhine on Sept. 27th. Later the two cases were heard jointly for the convenience of the Court.

Judgment was given separately as follows:

(1) Mrs. Rhine's petition was dismissed and she was ordered to bear costs.

(2) Mr. Rhine was permitted to divorce his wife, and she was ordered to bear costs.

CIGAR SMUGGLING.

The trial of Mr. Will A. Tom (27), a Hawaiian, charged with having infringed the Customs Law, took place on May 9th in the criminal section of the Yokohama District Court before Judge Satomi.

Mr. Y. Fujiwara, a lawyer, was employed for the defence.

Public Procurator Midzutani in opening the case for the prosecution said that defendant resided at No 635, Kitagata, Bluff. On February 13th defendant conveyed ninety-eight boxes of cigars—some boxes containing twenty-five cigars and others a hundred each; thirty-eight hundred cigars in all—from the steamer Hongkong Maru to the steam-launch Restless belonging to the Pacific Mail Steamship Co. The following day the accused tried to smuggle the cigars ashore at a place in the neighbourhood of the entrance to the canal near the Grand Hotel and Yato bridge. The attempt was discovered by a Customs official and the goods were seized.

The accused on being examined said that he received the cigars from Mr. J. Wilson, one of the crew of the Hongkong Maru, as a present. Subsequently the accused asked two of the sendo of the steam launch to keep the boxes until he could obtain a permit from the Customs to pass them. He did not ask the sendo to carry the cigars to the entrance of the canal, and did not know why the steam launch was in the canal at the time when the goods were seized by one of the tide-waiters of the Customs.

The Court—I. Hasegawa, one of the sendo, stated that he received an order from the accused to carry the cigars to the canal with a view to landing them without passing the Customs.

The accused—I never requested him to do so. I merely asked the sendo to keep the goods on the steam launch.

The Court—Another sendo, I. Usui by name, stated that the accused promised to pay them ten yen for carrying the cigars to the canal without being detected by the Customs authorities.

The accused—Yes, I promised to pay them ten yen for keeping the cigar boxes on the boat but not for any other reason. The accused further said that the cigars were for his own private use and not for sale.

At this stage, the Court read several letters produced by the public procurator as evidence. The first was information from the Director of the Yokohama Customs that the cigars were found on the Restless. The statements of the sendo, Usui and Hasegawa, were also read. The statement of Mr. Aisawa, tide-waiter of the Customs, was read, which said the steam-launch with the cigars was coming into the entrance of the canal on the evening of Feb. 14th, and the accused was watching the boat at the corner of the Grand Hotel. The customs official asked him some questions and found that the accused was trying to smuggle cigars. Finally, a letter was read from Mr. B. C. Howard, Agent of the Pacific Mail Steamship Co., to Mr. K. Hashimoto, Director of the Yokohama Customs.

The Procurator in his address pointed out that the accused asked the two Japanese to carry the cigars to a place which he considered beyond the purview of the customs authorities and offered them money as a reward. Later, the sendo, knowing that the secret landing of tobacco or cigars is against the law, decided to throw up the job, and subsequently informed the Customs authorities of the attempted smuggling. The two Japanese expressed profound regret for having participated in the attempted crime.

The accused said that he intended to pass the cigars through the customs after paying the duty. Before doing so, the goods were seized. Subsequently he received a notice from the Customs ordering him to pay yen 124.25 as duty on the cigars while informing him that the goods were confiscated.

Counsel in defence asked the Court for leave to examine Mr. J. Wilson; one of the crew on the Hongkong Maru, and Mr. Aisawa, the Customs official who personally seized the cigars. Counsel referred to the provisions of the Tobacco Monopoly Law and the Customs Duty Law and added that according to the instructions of the Minister for Finance given to the Customs, about two hundred cigars or cigarettes may be exempted from duty if brought by a steamer's passenger, etc.

The Public Procurator said that Mr. J. Wilson was released from service after the outbreak of the war, when the Hongkong Maru was employed on a certain mission, and since then he had not been on the steamer, consequently there was no necessity to summon him, although the accused insisted that the latter received the cigars from the former as a present. The Public Procurator added that there was also no necessity to examine Mr. Aisawa, the Customs official who seized the cigars.

After consultation the Court rejected the request of the defence.

The Court then made a further examination, during which accused's replies were somewhat different from his opening statement. He said that he intended to land two or three boxes from the steam launch at different times when convenient to him, as the customs would not impose duty on small lots. He asked the sendo to keep the cigars on the boat until such time as he could thus land them.

The Court declared that sentence would be delivered on May 11th.

THE CHARGE AGAINST CAPT. STEEDMAN.

In the Osaka District Marine Court on Saturday morning, judgment was delivered by the President in the case brought by the Inland Sea Pilots' Association against Captain John Steedman, of Kobe, a member of the Association, who was alleged to have infringed certain rules of the Association.

The President of the Marine Court, in delivering judgment, said the Court had been constituted to make inquiries into the agreements as to pilotage said to exist between the C.P.R. and Messrs. Dodwell & Co. of Kobe, and Captain Steedman, and to ascertain whether the latter had conformed to the rules of the Pilots' Association and deposited copies of those agreements with the Association. The inquiry had been held, but the evidence heard by the Court was of such an inconclusive nature that the Court had been unable to arrive at any decision, and the case was therefore dismissed on the ground of insufficiency of evidence.

KOBE LEASE CASE.

In the Osaka Appeal Court on Monday judgment was delivered in the appeals of Inouye Zenkichi and of Mrs. Smithers against the decision of the Kobe Chihō Saibansho, in the action brought by Inouye against Mrs. Smithers for the surrender of six lots of residential land in Kobe, which the lady holds under lease, and for damages.

The Kobe Court decided that the defendant should surrender the property as claimed but overruled the claim for damages. Plaintiff appealed against this judgment, and Defendant against the decision of the Court ordering her to surrender the property.

The Osaka Appeal Court has dismissed the appeal of Inouye and upheld the appeal of Mrs. Smithers. The decision of the Kobe Court against her is therefore quashed and Inouye's claim dismissed.

YOKOHAMA GENERAL CEMETERY.

The annual meeting of the Yokohama General Cemetery was held at the Board of Trade Room on Thursday afternoon. The chair was occupied by Mr. Hobart Hampden (Acting British Consul General) and there were also present Messrs. Fr. Retz, J. de Cuers de Cogolin, N. F. Smith, James Walter, L. J. Healing, M. Russell, H. J. Sharp, P. S. Bent, W. Karl Vincent, B. Gillett (Hon. Sec. and Treas.), E. W. Frazar, etc.

The CHAIRMAN, in opening the meeting, said he noted the attendance of the public was not very large. He feared that might be rather disappointing to the members of the committee who had served the community so well and so long, but as a member of the public himself he thought it was due not to want of interest in the Cemetery but rather to the fulness of the confidence in the committee themselves, which was well deserved. They felt the work was safe in their hands. Looking at the report suggested also that the Committee had not served the Yokohama community alone. He noticed that nearly half of the interments that took place last year were accounted for under the heading of "non-residents," which showed that the committee were acting also on behalf of many persons whose relatives were buried here but who, themselves, perhaps, had never visited the port. From time to time they received enquiries at the Consulate as to the condition of this or that grave, and it was always a great satisfaction to be able to reply that there need be no anxiety on that score. Not only was the Yokohama Cemetery one of the most prettily situated in the Far East but also one of the best managed and best kept, and that they owed to the members of that committee and other members of the community. The first business before them was the report and statement of accounts.

These were read by Mr. Gillett as follow:—

The Committee of the Yokohama General Cemetery beg to place before the Foreign Community of Yokohama the annual Report, and the Treasurer's statement of Receipts and Expenditure for the year which closed on the 31st December, 1905.

The interments during the year numbered 42, as against 27 in the previous year, 1904. The latter, however, as pointed out in the Report for 1904, was abnormally low, owing, firstly, to the falling off in the amount of shipping arriving in the Harbour, and, secondly, to the paucity in the number of visitors passing through Yokohama in consequence of the war. Hence it will be noticed from the statement given below, that the increase in the number of interments is for the most part accounted for, under the respective denominations of Visitors and Seamen.

7 of the above-mentioned 42 interments, were from visitors, temporarily living in Yokohama .....as against 3 in 1904.
13 were from seamen engaged on vessels lying in the Harbour .....as against 6 in 1904.
22 (7 of which were children under 5 years of age) were bona fide residents of Yokohama .....as against 18 in 1904.

42 Total .....as against 27 in 1904.
And were made up from the following respective nationalities, viz.—

21 British.....	as against 13 in 1904.
1 American.....	" 5 "
3 French.....	" 2 "
6 German.....	" 2 "
1 Danish.....	" 1 "
1 Swiss.....	" 0 "
1 Italian.....	" 1 "
4 Russian.....	" 0 "
0 Spanish.....	" 1 "
4 Indian.....	" 0 "
0 Unclassifiable interment.....	" 2 "

42 Total in 1905...as against Total...27 in 1904.

The Japanese Municipal authorities estimate that on the 31st December, 1905, there were 3014 Foreigners living in Yokohama (exclusive of 5334 Chinese); taking these figures as correct, and the 22 interments, as representing the number of deaths from the Yokohama community, we arrive at a death rate of 7 per mille in 1905, as against 5.584 per mille in 1904 and 7.202 per mille in 1903.

With regard to the general working of the Cemetery the Committee have but little to note of special interest. They are still without any official information from the Japanese authorities, as to the New Cemetery, at the end of the old Rifle Range, but as there have been two if not three interments of Foreigners made there during the early months of the present year 1906, the Committee presume that the ground in question is now available for interments when required.

Turning to the Treasurer's statement of account which accompanies this Report the respective items will for the most part speak for themselves. It will be observed that the Committee have received yen 600 from the Trustees of the "Yokohama General Cemetery Trust Fund," for one year's interest at 5 per cent. on the yen 12,000, which stood to the credit of the Trust Fund account on the 31st December, 1904.

As is customary at the end of each year the present Committee, consisting of Messrs. N.F. Smith; J. de Cuers de Cogolin; Fr. Retz; P. S. Bent and B. Gillett beg to tender their resignation.

YOKOHAMA GENERAL CEMETERY.

IN ACCOUNT WITH B. GILLETT, HONORARY TREASURER, FOR THE YEAR ENDING 31ST DECEMBER, 1905.

Dr.	Yen.	Yen.
To M. Jarman, Salary 12 months...	147.00
To Labour account 12 months .....	339.40	486.40
To Repairs.....
Superintendent's Lodge, Fences, &c.....		40.39
To Laying out New Ground, Renewing Paths, Turfing Graves, &c. ....		55.45
To Stone Mason .....		5.20
To Cost of Tools .....		4.02
To Postages and Sundries .....		3.40
To Books; Stationery; Advertisements, &c. ....		10.50
To Fire Insurance Premium on Buildings yen 1800 .....		20.00
		625.36

To Amount on Fixed deposit with the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank at 5 per cent.....	2,700.00
To Balance in the hands of Treasurer on 31st December, 1905 ...	250.53
	2,950.53

Cr.	Yen.	Yen.
By Balance brought forward from previous account, 31st December, 1904 .....		1,990.81
By Interment fees, 12 months ...¥.	590.00
By Fees for erecting Headstones and enclosing Graves .....	293.00
	883.00
By Sale of dead Tree .....	7.00	890.00
		2,883.81

By Amount received from the Trustees of the Yokohama General Cemetery Trust fund, one year's interest at 5 per cent. on yen 12,000.....	¥. 600.00
By Amount received from H. & S. Bank, one year's interest at 5 per cent. on yen 1,900 Fixed deposit.¥.	95.08
	695.08

1905.
December 31st, By balance brought down...2,950.53

E. & O. E.
Yokohama, 4th January, 1906.

B. GILLETT,
Honorary Treasurer,
Yokohama General Cemetery.

I have examined the account herewith, with the respective Vouchers relating thereto and certify to the same being correct.

A. C. PEARSON, C. A.

TRUSTEES' REPORT OF THE YOKOHAMA GENERAL CEMETERY TRUST FUND FOR THE YEAR 1905.

In accordance with the conditions of a deed of Trust dated 21st April, 1899, and which for safe keeping is deposited with the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation in Yokohama, the Trustees have, during the past year, 1905, collected the interest on the amount of the Trust viz., yen 12,000 at 5 per cent., per annum, say yen 600, and have handed the same to the Committee of the Yokohama General Cemetery to be applied by them to the keeping up of the present Cemetery grounds as per account annexed to this Report.

N. F. Smith.	Trustees of the Yokohama Cemetery Trust Fund.
J. de Cuers de Cogolin.
Fr. Retz.
P. S. Bent.
B. Gillett.

THE FOREIGN COMMUNITY OF YOKOHAMA, IN ACCOUNT WITH THE TRUSTEES OF THE YOKOHAMA GENERAL CEMETERY (YEN 12,000) TRUST FUND FOR THE YEAR 1905 INCLUSIVE.

To amount paid to General Cemetery Committee, one year's interest on yen 12,000 at 5 per cent. ....	600
---	-----

To balance carried down to new account placed on fixed deposit with the H. and S. Bank at 5 per cent.....	12,000
---	--------

CR. 12,600

By amount brought down from previous account, 31st December, 1904.....	12,000
„ amount received from H. and S. Bank, one year's interest at 5 per cent. ....	600

12,600

1905.
December 31st.—By balance brought down.. 12,000

E. & O. E.
Yokohama, January 1st, 1906.

I hereby certify to having seen the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank Fixed deposit note for yen 12,000 referred to in the above named account, all in order.

A. C. PEARSON, C. A.

Mr. GILLETT explained that the delay in the calling of that meeting had been due to the fact that they had had to wait for some statistics from the Japanese authorities, which were usually ready in February or March.

On the motion of Mr. A. M. KNAPP seconded by Mr. L. J. Healing the report was adopted, and on the proposition of Mr. H. J. Sharp the former committee was re-elected.

The CHAIRMAN speaking of the re-election of the new committee said it was a matter of gratification that that election had taken place, because their experience would be particularly valuable to the community at the present time when the new Cemetery was coming into use.

Mr. JAMES WALTER asked for information as to the date when it was probable the present Cemetery would be closed for further interments.

Mr. GILLETT said he did not think he could give any definite information on that point. From all appearances at the present time he thought that unless anything cropped up to prevent it interments could continue, especially if they were confined to residents, for another year and a half or two years.

Mr. WALTER then proposed a vote of thanks to the Hon. Secretary and Treasurer and to the other members of the Committee. Referring to Mr. Gillett he said they all knew the excellent work he had done for many years past. The whole community very highly appreciated the work he had done with regard to the Cemetery. Most of them visited the Cemetery or passed through it very frequently and they appreciated the way in which it was kept. It was a delight to old residents to see the beautiful order maintained at the Cemetery.

The resolution was seconded by the CHAIRMAN and,

Mr. GILLETT, replying, said he had many dear friends lying in the Cemetery and as he went round and took notice of their graves it was a work of gratification to see that their last resting places were in the order which each one of those present would gladly see with regard to their lost friends. It had been for many years a labour of love. There was some work connected with it, but he did that most willingly on the memory of the many old and dear friends with whom he had taken counsel and with whom he had walked in close friendship and happiness.

The meeting then concluded with votes of thanks to the Chairman for his presidency and to the Foreign Board of Trade for the use of the room in which to hold the meeting.

THE IMPORT OF SALT.

The China and Japan Trading Co. and Messrs Sale and Frazar, Yokohama, and Messrs. Otto Reimers and Co., Kobe, have been appointed Government importers of salt.

The British Admiralty has succeeded in placing the £10,000,000 policy to cover risks in connection with the participation of merchantmen in the naval manoeuvres at the end of June. Although several large marine insurance companies held aloof on the ground that the premium of 3s. 6d. was insufficient, the majority of the companies and a large number of London and Liverpool underwriters signed the policy.

THE PLAGUE.

A Hiroshima telegram says that on May 6th, a case of plague was reported in the village of Otake, Saiki district, the patient being a farmer named J. Tsunoda.

Another new case has appeared in the village of Oji, near Shimonoseki.

The Governor of Hyogo states that a case of bubonic plague was reported on the afternoon of May 6th in Ashihara-dori, Hyogo. The patient died the following day. The victim is a stone-cutter named Kawakami, 71 years old.

The Japanese Consul at Amoy wired on May 4th to the Home Office that plague is raging there at the present time. Eight or ten patients are reported every day.

A case of plague was reported at Shimonoseki on May 4th. The patient died the same evening. The same day a case of plague was reported in Osaka and another in Kobe.

According to official telegrams, a case of plague appeared on May 6th in Toyoura district, Yamaguchi prefecture, and another case in the village of Otake, Hiroshima prefecture. The same day, two dead rats infected with plague were found at Nagahori-cho, Fukagawa, in Tokyo.

On May 8th, a case of plague was reported in Sakai-machi, Kobe, the patient being a youth named G. Ota, who recently arrived there from the west.

Two new cases appeared the same day and the following day, in Yamaguchi prefecture. The Governor of that prefecture reports that there are fears of the disease spreading in the district of Toyoura.

THE N. D. L. REPORT.

The full report of the Norddeutscher Lloyd at Bremen has now been published. The report states that the passenger traffic on the East Asiatic mail steamers line has been so active that cabin berths have been more than fully filled. Of the goods traffic also, much activity has been witnessed, outgoing as well as homeward bound, but the rates of freight were not advancing. The company hopes for a more paying business from the new Mediterranean lines to Egypt and from the corresponding lines to East Asia. The traffic on the East-India and Chinese coasting lines during the past year has shown a large development. The traffic of the Australian lines is also showing an increase for the past year, especially as far as passengers are concerned, but also the goods traffic was satisfactory, and the freight rates have been of a paying character. The new line of freight steamers to Australia, which is working in addition to the subsidised passenger steamers, was opened on October 18th last by the steamers Franken, which has been followed by the Hessen, Schwaben, and Westfalen, while the steamers Lothringen and Thuringen are still in construction. The total profit of the company, including the balance brought forward from 1904, amounts to m.33,029,335, out of which m.1,401,449 have been applied for insurance purposes. The regular expenses amount to m.4,625,125 and for writing off purposes m.15,943,421 are applied, out of which amount m.13,741,000 are written off the sea-going fleet of the company. The net profits amount to m.11,059,280, out of which m.552,439 are applied for the reserve, while m.2,188,171 are handed over to renovation purposes; m.300,000 are paid to the Morgan Trust, and after paying m.251,290 as directors' fees, an amount of m.7,500,000 is paid as 7½ per cent. dividend to the shareholders, against 6 per cent. for 1904.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Mukden will be opened for foreign trade on June 1st. According to Tokyo papers, Mr. S. Hagiwara will be appointed Japanese Consul-General.

It is reported that Mr. Ming-Yung-Houi, a wealthy Korean, has contributed the sum of 5,000 yen to the relief fund of the Korean residents at San Francisco who are suffering from the effects of the recent terrible earthquake and fire, and that this generous sum was forwarded direct to San Francisco through the Japanese Post office.

An official telegram has been received by the Foreign Office to the effect that Count Witte and M. Dournovo, Russian Minister for Home Affairs, resigned on May 5th, and that M. Goremykin succeeded Count Witte.

Telegrams for San Francisco and other places in America will be transmitted now as usual via Manila. But as to telegrams for San Francisco, the Japanese postal authorities will not be responsible for delay, mutilation or non-arrival.

According to a telegram from Mr. Uchida, Japanese Consul-General in New York, under date of May 8th the raw silk market there is stationary but raw cotton business is active owing to brisk transactions in Liverpool. Prices for future delivery are steady.

The annual spring meeting of the Yokohama Union Boat Race Club, organized by leading bankers and traders, of which Mr. K. Otani is president, will take place on Sunday, May 13th, off the Bund, Yamashita-cho. If the weather be unfavourable, the races will be postponed till May 20th.

The Kwanto Horse Race Society, the Dai Nippon Race Society and the Shinobadzu Race Club have amalgamated, and the united association is now named the Kwan Hasshu Race Club. The spring meeting will take place on May 19th, 20th, and 21st, at Shinobadzu, near Uyeno Park, Tokyo.

Our Seoul weekly contemporary states that at a recent meeting held by the leading Japanese Medical authorities, in Seoul, it was decided to introduce vaccination to the Koreans, and if it is true that some 5,000 children under 5 years of age are to be vaccinated this month, and afterwards those over 5 years, there will be some hope of ultimately checking the spread of small-pox in the capital. Seoul has always been a frightful hot-bed for this ghastly disease.

Prince Nakonchaisi of Siam, on May 5th, proceeded to Yokosuka with Mr. Inagaki, Minister to Bangkok, now in Tokyo, Messrs Inaba and Hachisuka, Masters of the Board of Ceremonies, and Major Adzuma. His Highness paid a visit to the Naval Station and to the Soya and Sagami (formerly the Varyag and Peresmet). He was entertained at luncheon by Admiral Kamimura after which he left by the destroyer Hatsushimo for Yokohama, being escorted by the Kisaragi and a torpedo boat. At 4.40 p.m. he landed at the English Hatoba. After taking a short rest at the Customs' Examination office he left by the 5.32 p.m. train for Tokyo.

The Russian paper Volia publishes several telegrams in its issue of May 7th. Martial Law, which was proclaimed last year in the Caucasus, was recently abandoned and in its place an extraordinary special protection law was proclaimed. The city is now under the control of the gendarmes who are armed with rifles. The Kurds have organized a democratic party to which high class people have been elected as a committee, including Marquis Kafchawaz (?) a member of the Council of Political Affairs. A number of clergymen intend to hold a meeting with a view to establishing ecclesiastical independence. The editor of the Vladivostok Press has been removed for trial on a political charge.

A serious attempt at gaol-breaking occurred in Shanghai on May 4th, when the Chinese prisoners in Ward Road gaol rose against the warders. By some means they obtained the sword of an Indian warder and then tried to break out. The alarm was given immediately and a severe tussle ensued, in which a notorious criminal undergoing a 20 years' sentence, an associate of Vah Ka-der, and another prisoner were shot dead and several were injured, one fatally. The warders had a pretty stiff time in defending themselves. The head gaoler, Mr. W. D. Blennerhassett, received a sword cut over the right side of his head, and another sword cut on his left leg between the thigh and knee and had to be removed to the Victoria Nursing Home, while two Indian warders were badly injured and had to be sent to hospital.

Amongst the passengers to Vancouver from Nagasaki by the R.M.S. Monteagle is the Rev. H. Stout, D.D., one of the earliest missionaries to Japan. Dr. Stout, says our southern contemporary, came to Nagasaki in 1868 as a missionary of the Reformed Dutch Church of America and has laboured here practically continuously ever since. His experiences during that long period have been most varied but through them all he has retained the goodwill of foreign residents of the port and universal regret is expressed at his departure. He severed his active connection with the mission work about eighteen months ago and since then has been engaged in superintending the building of the Y.M.C.A. building, a task in which his knowledge of the Japanese and building enterprises has proved of material benefit. Few foreigners are so well acquainted with the history of this part of Kyushu as Dr. Stout, and his reminiscences of Nagasaki have given much pleasure to readers of "Cherry Blossoms." We trust that Dr. Stout will have a pleasant voyage home and that the remainder of his life will be as happy as his career here has been useful. Although he has no present intention of returning to Nagasaki, we feel sure that should he once again pay a visit to this port he will be warmly welcomed by many friends, both foreign and Japanese.

CORRESPONDENCE.

MIS-STATEMENTS.

(TO THE EDITOR OF THE "JAPAN MAIL.")

SIR—Will you allow me to call attention to some mis-statements which occur in a review of the Rev. John Inai's book on Bushido in your issue of 27th ult.

1.—The first mis-statement is a matter of minor consequence. Your review states that the author's "object is not set forth in the opening pages of the book: on the contrary it is carefully kept out of sight;" yet I find the author's object set forth on page 3 only a little less fully than in his final paragraphs.

2.—The second mis-statement is more serious. You say "whereas it is the very essence of Bushido to exalt the institution above the individual, Christianity teaches precisely the opposite." A Christian is guided by such rules as "render unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's, and unto God the things that are God's." "Let every soul be subject unto the higher powers; the powers that be are ordained of God." Believing institutions such as the family, the State, the Church, to be ordained of God he owes them the profoundest allegiance. If at any time the voice of any particular institution is at variance with the clearly apprehended voice of God the Christian of course has no choice as to which he shall obey. But obviously this cannot be described as exalting the individual above the institution: it is exalting God above the institution.

3.—You go on to say that "whereas life is incalculably precious in Christian eyes, it is altogether inconsiderable in the Bushi's creed as compared with the dictates of duty." I hardly think you can mean as much, but the words as they stand imply that a Christian's allegiance to duty (that is, in his case, to God) is less than a Bushi's allegiance to duty (which is, in his case, his code of honour). You moreover imply that a Christian, as such, is willing to sacrifice allegiance to God for the sake of preserving life—a strange comment indeed on the religion of self-sacrifice whose path is stained with blood-drops from Gethsemane and Calvary to China and Japan. I cannot but hope that some exigence of space or time has led you to use words which on reconsideration you would not wish to leave uncorrected. In conclusion I heartily accord with Mr. Inai's view that there seem to be noble elements in Bushido which should form a very worthy offering to them who came not to destroy but to fulfil.

Yours very faithfully, C. H. BASIL WOGLD.

Momoyama School, Osaka.

May 2, 1906.

THE SHIMBI SHOIN.

(TO THE EDITOR OF THE "JAPAN MAIL.")

SIR,—We beg to express our thanks for past favours and to extend our best wishes for your health and prosperity.

We have been established for some time at No. 52

Nichomachi, Shitayaku, Tokyo, and we are much pleased to be able to say that the Art-volumes, Albums of Reprints of the Old Masters, and various other Art publications which we have issued, have been received with great favour and admiration both at home and abroad.

The patronage which our work has received from our good friends, has accomplished for us a measure of prosperity for which we are deeply grateful. As it has become necessary for us to increase our capital, we have decided to incorporate ourselves as a Limited Liability Company, with the support of the following named gentleman:

Viscount Mitsuaki Tanaka.

Baron Yanosuke Iwasaki, Proprietor of Mitsubishi & Company.

Kichizaemon Sumitomo, Esq., Director of the Sumitomo Bank.

Soichiro Asano, Esq., Director of the Tōyō Kisen Kaisha.

Kihachiro Okura, Esq., Head of Messrs. Okura & Company.

Shinzo Takata, Esq., Proprietor of Messrs. Takata & Company.

Kinzaburo Kawasaki, Esq., Director of the Kawasaki Bank.

Tomitaro Hara, Esq., Proprietor of Messrs. Hara & Company.

Kahei Otani, Esq., and others.

Besides, as our former offices are too small and too inconveniently located, we removed to the address given below, as certain necessary alterations have been made in our new premises. We intend hereafter to be even more active and painstaking than we have been in publishing the most sumptuous and aesthetic volumes of Art Reproductions, and we earnestly beg a continuance of your past patronage and we solicit an increase of your favour in the future.

Yours faithfully,

THE SHIMBI SHOIN, LIMITED.

No. 13, Shinsakancho, Kyobashi-ku, Tokyo.

(Formerly No. 52, Nichomachi, Shitaya-ku.)

Tokyo, April 25th, 1906.

TELEGRAMS.

(REUTER'S SPECIAL SERVICE.)

ISLAMIC TIES AND BOUNDARIES.

London, May 3.

The Sublime Porte, in a Note to the Persian Ambassador, declares that in view of the fact that Islamism is common to the two countries, it desires at the earliest possible moment an understanding in the interests of both, and asks that Persia should send Commissioners to delimitate the frontier between the two States.

NATAL.

The natives of northern Natal are showing restlessness. All the reservists in Durban have been compulsorily ordered to parade for the purpose of impressing the natives.

THE OLYMPIC GAMES.

The Marathon race at Athens attracted 53 competitors, of whom 26 were Greeks, 7 were Britons and 5 Americans. The entire route of 26 miles was lined with spectators. Immense enthusiasm was displayed. Herring, a Canadian, won in 2 hours 51 minutes; Swanberg was second in 2 hours 57 minutes; Frank, an American, third, in 3 hours.

The Americans won 11 events, the British 4, and the Greeks 3.

RUSSIA.

London, May 4.

The Daily Telegraph's correspondent at St. Petersburg says that the reactionary M. Durnovo has been dismissed; and M. Goremykin, an extreme bureaucrat and enemy of Count Witte, succeeds the latter, whose resignation is said to be on account of ill-health, but is really due to the impossibility of fighting the reactionary section.

THE ENGLISH EDUCATION BILL.

London, May 4.

The Opposition met the motion for the second reading of the Education Bill in the House of Commons with a direct negative.

THE INCOME-TAX.

A Select Committee has been appointed to consider a graduation of the British income-tax.

COUNT WITTE RETIRES.

Count Witte retires into private life.

GERMANY NOT TO INTERFERE.

The Standard says that Count Metternich, German Ambassador in London, has informed Sir E. Grey, Secretary for Foreign Affairs, that the Sultan of Turkey cannot rely on receiving support from Germany, in the event of a quarrel with Great Britain.

KING EDWARD IN PARIS.

President Fallières gave a banquet to King Edward at the Elysée and the most cordial toasts were exchanged.

CHINESE REPATRIATION.

A proclamation has been published on the Rand informing all Chinese who desire to return to China that they will be given financial aid on certain conditions.

TURKEY AND GREAT BRITAIN.

London, May 5.

Great Britain has presented a Note to Turkey which is virtually an ultimatum demanding the withdrawal of the Turkish troops from Egyptian territory.

A telegram from Cairo confirms the removal of the boundary pillars at El-Arish, and states that a Turkish detachment occupies Egyptian territory. Its attitude is menacing.

TEA DUTY.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has given instructions to the Collectors of Customs which rectify losses through the change in date of the tea duty.

THE ULTIMATUM TO TURKEY.

London, May 6.

The ultimatum to Turkey expires in ten days.

Admiral Lord Charles Beresford, Commander-in-Chief in the Mediterranean; Rear-Admiral the Hon. Hedworth Lambton, commanding the Third Cruiser Squadron; and Rear-Admiral F. C. Bridgman have arrived simultaneously at Malta. Four cruisers and a flotilla of destroyers are proceeding thence to the Pireæus.

ROOSEVELT AND THE STANDARD OIL CORPORATION.

President Roosevelt, in his message to Congress says investigation has shown that the Standard Oil Company has benefited enormously by secret and unlawful methods and that the Sugar Trust and other great corporations have been guilty of similar practices. Prosecutions are being considered, but he urges Congress to strengthen the powers of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

THE TURCO-EGYPTIAN EMBROGLIO.

London, May 7.

The newspapers emphasize the significance of the French and Russian support of Great Britain in the Tabah questions. They regard this as more important than a naval demonstration. The French Ambassador has advised the Sultan to yield in the dispute with Egypt. The Russian Ambassador has been similarly instructed.

THE OPENING OF MANCHURIA.

It is reported from Washington that China has notified that she will open Manchurian ports and interior cities only after she has completed the preparation of regulations for the government of the foreign colonies in those places.

AMERICAN BATTLESHIP ASHORE.

London, May 7.

The American battleship Rhode Island is ashore in Chesapeake Bay and hitherto the tugs have failed to float her.

BIG EXPORTS OF GOLD.

Nearly four millions sterling of gold have been shipped by Cunarders only to America during the last three weeks. The American liner St. Paul took £367,000, mostly to meet British Insurance companies' claims in San Francisco.

THE CHINESE BOYCOTT.

Considerable apprehension is felt in America concerning the growing strength of the Chinese boycott.

THE AFFAIR WITH TURKEY.

London, May 8.

Four British battleships, four cruisers and four destroyers have arrived at the Pireæus. Sir Charles Hardinge, lately transferred from St. Petersburg to the Foreign Office, who accompanied King Edward on his Mediterranean tour, took advantage of the King's stay in Paris to have a conference with M. Bourgeois on pending international questions. French papers state that their coincidence of views further tightens Anglo-French bonds.

THE "RHODE ISLAND" FLOATED.

London, May 8.

The American battleship Rhode Island has been refloated.

A RUSSIAN ASSASSINATION.

General Jeltanowsky, Governor of Ekaterinoslavl, has been assassinated.

THE ZULU RISING.

Colonel Mansel, while making a reconnaissance in force in the direction of Cetewayo's Grave, Natal, was attacked by 200 Zulus, who desperately charged the vanguard. The Zulus descended a precipitous hill in single file and reached to within a few yards of the British force, but were repelled, leaving sixty killed and many wounded upon the field. The British force had three wounded.

THE TURCO-EGYPTIAN EMBROGLIO.

London, May 9.

Sir Edward Grey, Foreign Secretary, has made a detailed statement with regard to the negotiations with Turkey, showing that Moukhtar Pacha, Turkish Commissioner, in an interview with the Khedive demanded that the boundary should run from El Rased to Suez and thence to Akaba. The Khedive replied suggesting demarcation on the basis of the Grand Vizier's telegram of April 7th, 1892, that is say on a line running from El Rased to three miles of Akaba. Turkey replied that that telegram only referred to the Western side of the Peninsula and its interpretation concerned only Turkey. A British Note of April 3rd last supported the Khedive's proposals and asked for a favourable reply within ten days. Sir Edward Grey added that the extent of the demands and the tone and character of the Turkish communications to the Khedive made it impossible to defer a settlement indefinitely or to assent to the latest development of the Turkish demands. He read in them danger to the freedom of the Suez Canal, to the liberties of Egypt and to the Khedival dynasty.

THE EDUCATION BILL.

Mr. Augustine Birrell formally moved the second reading of the Education Bill and Mr. H. G. Wyndham moved its rejection.

CHICAGO INSURANCE COMPANY FAILS.

The Chicago Trading and Insurance Company has stopped owing to the San Francisco disaster. The stockholders lose £700,000 sterling, and policies amounting to thirty-two millions are wiped out.

PRESS SUPPORTS GREY.

Later.

The whole of the press warmly supports Sir Edward Grey's attitude with regard to the Sinai frontier.

TURKEY AND PERSIA.

A Persian Commission has left Teheran to delimitate the Turco-Persian frontier.

RUSSIA'S DOMESTIC POLITICS.

London, May 10.

The Duma assembled on May 13th. There was an elaborate ceremonial. The Tsar's speech from the Throne was made at the Winter Palace. New fundamental laws of the empire have been promulgated, asserting the autocratic power and limiting the power of the Duma. The Constitutional Liberals had a meeting in St. Petersburg last evening at which several members of the Duma were present. Troops broke up the meeting.

JORDAN SUCCEEDS SATOW.

Later.

Sir John Jordan, K.C.M.G., former Minister resident at Seoul, succeeds Sir Ernest M. Satow, G.C.M.G., as Minister at Peking.

JAPANESE TRAINING SQUADRON.

The Japanese Training Squadron has arrived at Melbourne. Extensive preparations were made for its reception.

(RECEIVED AT THE FOREIGN OFFICE.)

FLOODS IN CHINA.

(From Mr. Mizuno, Japanese Consul at Hankow.)

Tuesday, May 7.

For some time back the waters of Hsiang-Kiang have been rising exceptionally and have now reached an extraordinary height of flood. All the valleys along the course of the river are inundated. Homes have been swept away and numbers of people and animals have been drowned. At Hsiangtan the inundated buildings took fire and the greater part of the town was destroyed. The Japanese post-office and stores outside the walls of Changsha had to be moved into the city. The Consulate is safe. I have not yet heard of any casualties among my nationals. The telegraphs south of the Hsiang have been for some time unserviceable. The Hunan S.S. Company persists in running its boats but there are neither passengers nor cargo. Probably the rice-crop in these regions will be bad.

(BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT WITH THE "TOKYO ASAHI SHIMBUN.")

TURKEY WARNED.

London, May 7.

In support of the British ultimatum, that Turkey should withdraw her troops from the disputed territory on the Egyptian frontier, the Mediterranean Squadron has now entered Grecian waters. The Times correspondent at Constantinople learns that the Turks have received a most serious British warning. They have already attempted to cajole the British Ambassador and they will probably delay submitting.

MORE TURKISH AGGRESSION.

London, May 9.

A telegram from Constantinople says that the Turks are reported to have seized another district on the Persian frontier, which indisputably belongs to Persia.

DEPRESSION IN RUSSIA.

London, May 10.

A telegram from St. Petersburg says that the promulgation of new organic laws without approval of the Duma causes intense depression and resentment.

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.]

DEATH OF MR. S. PAXTON.

Kobe, May 10.

Mr. Samuel Paxton, Assistant Superintending Engineer in Kobe of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha, died in hospital at 4 o'clock this morning from pneumonia.

MAIL STEAMERS.

NEXT MAIL IS DUE

From	Line	Steamer	Date.
Hongkong...	C. P. R.	Monteagle	F. May 11
Hongkong...	G. N.	Dakota 1	M. May 14
Vancouver...	C. P. R.	Em. of China 2	M. May 14
Seattle...	G. N.	Minnesota 3	Tu. May 15
America...	P. M.	Mongolia 4	Tu. May 15
Hongkong...	C. P. R.	Em. of Japan 5	Th. May 17
Europe...	N. L. D.	Roon	Sa. May 19
Hongkong...	O. & O.	Coptic	Su. May 20
America...	P. M.	China	Tu. May 22
Europe...	N. M.	Salazie	W. May 23
America...	T. K. K.	Nippon Maru	Su. May 27
Hongkong...	B. T.	Hyades	Su. May 27
Hongkong...	P. M.	Siberia	Su. May 27
Seattle...	N. Y. K.	Shinano Maru	F. June 1
Vancouver...	C. P. R.	Athenian	Sa. June 2
Tacoma...	B. T.	Lyra	Sa. June 2
America...	O. & O.	Doric	Su. June 3
Hongkong...	T. K. K.	America Maru	Su. June 3

- 1 At Nagasaki on the 30th ult.
- 2 Left Vancouver on the 30th ult.
- 3 Left Seattle on the 29th ult.
- 4 Left San Francisco on the 2nd inst.
- 5 Left Hongkong on the 9th inst.

NEXT MAIL LEAVES

For	Line	Steamer	Date.
Europe...	N. D. L.	Prinz Heinrich	Sa. May 12
America...	P. M.	Korea	Sa. May 12
Vancouver...	C. P. R.	Monteagle	Sa. May 12
Hongkong...	C. P. R.	Em. of China	M. May 14
Seattle...	G. N.	Dakota	W. May 16
Hongkong...	P. M.	Mongolia	W. May 16
Europe...	P. & O.	Palermo	W. May 16
Europe...	N. Y. K.	Sanuki Maru	W. May 16
Seattle...	N. Y. K.	Kanagawa Maru	Th. May 17
Shanghai...	N. Y. K.	Hakuai Maru	Th. May 17
Vancouver...	C. P. R.	Em. of Japan	F. May 18
Europe...	M. M.	Caledonien	Sa. May 19
Hongkong...	G. N.	Minnesota	Su. May 20
America...	O. & O.	Coptic	Tu. May 22
Hongkong...	P. & A.	Aragonia	Tu. May 22
Hongkong...	P. M.	China	W. May 23
Tacoma...	B. T.	Hyades	M. May 28
Hongkong...	T. Y. K.	Nippon Maru	Sa. May 29
Australia...	N. Y. K.	Nikko Maru	Sa. June 2
Hongkong...	C. P. R.	Athenian	Sa. June 2
Hongkong...	B. T.	Lyra	Sa. June 3
Hongkong...	O. & O.	Doric	Tu. June 5
America...	T. K. K.	America Maru	Tu. June 5
Portland...	P. & A.	Arabia	Tu. June 5

LATEST SHIPPING.

ARRIVALS.

Tenshin Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,580, W. Hunter, 4th May.—Kobe via Yokkaichi, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Kosai Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,419, K. Homma, 4th May.—Shanghai via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Yechigo Maru, Japanese steamer, 712, A. Yamashita, 4th May.—Yokkaichi, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Jinsen Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,433, A. Christian, 5th May.—Ujina, Ballast.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Teucer, British steamer, 5,805, Barwise, 5th May.—Liverpool via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.
Yangtze, British steamer, 4,149, W. C. Lycett, 5th May.—Tacoma and Victoria, General.—Butterfield & Swire.
Prinz Heinrich, German steamer, 3,902, P. Grosch, 5th May.—Hamburg and Bremen via ports, Mails and General.—H. Ahrens & Co., Nachf.
Dupetit Thours (36), French cruiser, Captain Lespinatte de Saune, 5th May.—Hongkong.
Arcadia, German steamer, 3,412, G. Schmidt, 5th May.—Hamburg via ports, General.—C. Illies & Co.
Kagoshima Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,716, T. Tibballs, 6th May.—Taku, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Shikoku Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,006, T. Koyama, 6th May.—Yokkaichi, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Hongkong Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,437, E. Bent, 6th May.—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—Toyo Kisen Kaisha.

Moyune, British steamer, 3,017, D. P. Campbell, 7th May.—Liverpool via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.
Pronetheus, Norwegian steamer, 1,023, O. Korneliusen, 6th May.—China Coast, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Trieste, Austrian steamer, 3,203, D. Mistrovigo, 6th May.—Trieste via ports, Mails and General.—Heller Bros.
Sikh, British steamer, 3,216, Atkinson, 6th May.—Liverpool via ports, General.—Dodwell & Co., Ltd.
Mike Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,060, I. Shimizu, 7th May.—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Rosetta Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,402, K. Hayashi, 7th May.—Kobe, General.—Yamagataya.
Ginsen Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,245, C. A. Lee, 7th May.—Ginsen, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Helene Rickmers, German steamer, 2,255, Sanders, 7th May.—Rangoon, Rice.—Becker & Co.
Sithonia, German steamer, 4,249, Brehmer, 8th May.—Hamburg via ports, General.—C. Illies & Co.
Caledonien, French steamer, 2,100, C. Gregory, 8th May.—Marseilles via ports, Mails and General.—M. M. Co.
Dardanus, British steamer, 2,992, Nickelson, 8th May.—Liverpool via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.
Shawmut, American steamer, 6,195, E. V. Roberts, 9th May.—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—Dodwell & Co. Ltd.
Matsuyama Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,959, Y. Kishi, 9th May.—Oginohama, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Palermo, British steamer, 4,909, E. G. Andrews, 10th May.—London via ports, General.—P. & O. S.N. Co.
Chenan, British steamer, 1,350, H. E. Laver, 10th May.—Shanghai via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.
Kokura Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,591, R. Yamanouchi, 10th May.—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Korea, American steamer, 5,651, W. B. Seabury, 10th May.—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—P. M. S.S. Co.

DEPARTURES.

Tjilivong, Dutch steamer, 3,052, von Wyck Jurianse, 4th May.—Kobe, General.—Ed. van Nierop & Co.
Tenshin Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,580, W. Hunter, 5th May.—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
America Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,460, P. H. Going, 5th May.—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—Toyo Kisen Kaisha.
Yawata Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,364, W. Townsend, 5th May.—Sydney and Melbourne via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Hugo Maru, Japanese steamer, 882, N. Nielsen, 5th May.—Bonin Islands, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Polynesian, French steamer, 2,916, Broc, 5th May.—Marseilles via ports, Mails and General.—M. M. S.S. Co.
Flintshire, British steamer, 2,476, G. C. Cundy, 5th May.—Kobe, General.—Samuel Samuel & Co.
Amiral Exelmans, French steamer, 3,013, Gens, 5th May.—Moi, General.—M. M. S.S. Co.
Obra, British steamer, 3,524, McCormack, 5th May.—Yokkaichi, General.—Samuel Samuel & Co.
Culchas, British steamer, 4,279, Williams, 5th May.—Genoa, Marseilles and Liverpool via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.
Indian Monarch, British steamer, 2,818, Patey, 5th May.—Moi, Ballast.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Hiroshima Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,035, S. Wada, 6th May.—Otaru via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Yechigo Maru, Japanese steamer, 712, A. Yamashita, 6th May.—Yokkaichi, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Ameer, British steamer, 4,689, W. T. Hall, 6th May.—Kobe, General.—Becker & Co.
Concord, U.S. gunboat, 1,710, Com. C. J. Boush, 6th May.—Chefoo.
Benalder, British steamer, 1,959, Geo. McMillan, 6th May.—London and Antwerp via ports, General.—Cornes & Co.
Hiroshima Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,035, S. Wada, 7th May.—Otaru via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Fushiki Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,110, A. Keith, 7th May.—Shanghai via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Shikoku Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,006, T. Koyama, 7th May.—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Yangtze, British steamer, 4,149, W. C. Lycott, 7th May.—Kobe, General.—Butterfield & Swire.
Moyune, British steamer, 3,047, D. P. Campbell, 7th May.—Amsterdam, London and Antwerp via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.
Ceylon, British steamer, 2,637, C. F. Lockstone, 8th

May.—London and Antwerp via ports, General.—P. & O. S.N. Co.
Sailo Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,856, G. S. Lapraik, 8th May.—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Hongkong Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,434, E. Bent, 8th May.—San Francisco via Honolulu, Mails and General.—Toyo Kisen Kaisha.
Prometheus, Norwegian steamer, 1,023, O. Korneliusen, 8th May.—Hongkong, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Kaga Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,906, A. Christiansen, 9th May.—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Mike Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,060, I. Shimizu, 9th May.—Otaru via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Acadia, German steamer, 3,412, G. Schmidt, 9th May.—Kobe, General.—C. Illies & Co.
Trieste, Austrian steamer, 3,203, D. Mistrovigo, 9th May.—Trieste via ports, General.—Heller Bros.
Ceylon Maru, Japanese steamer, Kawahara, 9th May.—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Shanmuli, American steamer, 6,195, E. V. Roberts, 9th May.—Tacoma, Wash., via Victoria, B.C., Mails and General.—Dodwell & Co., Ltd.
Teucer, British steamer, 5,805, Barwise, 10th May.—Victoria, Seattle and Tacoma, General.—Butterfield & Swire.
Tottenham, British steamer, 2,943, L. R. Mann, 10th May.—Victoria and Tacoma, General.—Dodwell & Co., Ltd.
Kosai Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,419, K. Honma, 10th May.—Shanghai via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

PASSENGERS.

ARRIVED.

Per German steamer Prinz Heinrich, from Hamburg via ports:—Mr. Rolf Sauer, Mrs. and Miss Jones, Mr. and Mrs. W. Gowings, Viscount Hayashi, Mr. M. Hayashi, Mr. R. Nagashima, Mr. G. de Plancon, Miss and Master Ohly, Baron V. Bruggen, Mr. F. H. Kempthorne, Mr. Hanteneff, Mr. Shibayama, Mr. and Mrs. Ellis, Major Bartlett, Captain Wenn, Mr. P. D. Attades, Mr. B. H. Besly, Mr. G. Schultz and family, Mr. G. de Man, Mr. A. Schmidt-born, Mr. and Mrs. O. Broams, Mr. Antan Pleinxis, Mr. R. P. Tuman and servant, Mr. T. Redelsperger, Mr. T. W. Withington, Mr. J. Iviero, Mr. R. R. Garrett, Mr. A. Buttenhaff, Mr. W. Russaw, Mr. T. T. Parlin, Mr. Mrs. and Miss Fukuzawa, and Mr. Master, in cabin; Mr. S. Kanaya, Mr. T. M. Taid, Mr. Alamae, Mr. B. K. Mody, Miss Muhlen, and Mr. P. Kirchner, in second class; 10, in steerage.

Per Japanese steamer Hongkong Maru, from Hongkong via ports:—Mr. W. H. Cornelius, Mr. R. A. King, Mr. I. Nakamaru, Mrs. I. Nakamaru, infant and amah, Mr. Justus Briggs, Mrs. Justus Briggs, Mr. J. L. Goodrich, Mrs. J. L. Goodrich and infant, Miss Goodrich, Mr. J. C. Ormsby, Miss L. Rueth, and Mr. R. Thiel, in cabin. For Honolulu:—Mr. G. Doi, and Mr. Frank Govey, in cabin. For San Francisco:—Dr. W. Boone, Miss Carroll, Mr. F. A. Hollabaugh, Mrs. Fitzgibbons, Miss Fitzgibbons, Mr. L. Juinischek, Mr. A. R. Kepler and infant, Master Kepler, Mr. McCorkle, Miss Mary Moss, Mr. James Madison, Mr. J. Pugibet, Miss Jesse Lesser, Miss M. Roberts, Mr. C. W. Wood, and Mr. J. Winklin, in cabin.

LATEST COMMERCIAL.

[SPECIALLY COMPILED FOR THE "JAPAN MAIL."]

IMPORTS.

Yokohama, May 11.

There is nothing special to report.

COTTON PIECE GOODS.

White Shirting—{ 40 yds. 36 in. } ... 0.10 to 0.16
 { 50 yds. 36 in. } ... 0.10 to 0.16

Grey Shirting—8½ lb. 38½ yds. 36 inches V. 4.00 to 4.50
 Grey Shirting—9th, 38½ yds. 45 inches 4.50 to 5.25
 Prints—Assorted, 24 yards, 30 inches... 2.85 to 4.05

Cotton Italians and Satteens... 0.20 to 0.40

WOOLLENS.

Flannels... V. 0.50 to 0.65
 Italian Cloth, 32 in... 0.35 to 0.50
 Mousseline de Laine, Crape, 21 yards, 30 inches... 0.16 to 0.32

Cloths—Pilots, 54 to 56 inches... 0.50 to 1.00
 Cloths—Presidents, 51 to 65 inches... 0.90 to 1.00
 Cloths—Union, 54 to 56 inches... 0.50 to 1.00
 Blankets—Assorted 3 to 5 lb per lb... 0.60 to 0.80

Velvets—Black, 35 yards, 22 inches... 9.20 to 12.50
 Victoria Lawns, 12 yards, 42 3 inches... 0.90 to 1.80
 Turkey Reds—2.8 to 3.0 lb 24-25 yards, 30 inches... 1.90 to 2.25
 Turkey Reds—3.8 to 5 lb, 24-25 yards, 32 inches... 2.50 to 3.65

COTTON YARN.

Nos. 2/60, Gassed... V. 290.00 to 300.00
 Nos. 2/80, Gassed... 365.00 to 375.00
 Nos. 2/100, Gassed... 455.00 to 465.00

RAW COTTONS.

American Middling... 33.50 to 34.00
 Indian Broach... 28.50 to 29.00
 Chinese... 25.00 to 27.50

METALS.

No change in the metal market.
 Iron or Mild Steel, Bar, flat, round and square... V. 4.20 to 4.40
 Iron or Mild Steel, Plate... 4.35 to 4.65
 do Sheet... 4.70 to 6.00
 do Hoop (½" to 1½")... 5.00 to 5.50
 Galvanised Iron Sheets No. 30 G... 12.00
 Wire Nails, Ordinary assortments... 6.60 to 7.00
 Tin Plates, golts. I.C.W... 7.40 to 7.65
 Pig Iron, No. 3 "Redcar"... 2.30

KEROSENE.

The market has undergone no change.
 American... $3.27 to 3.47
 Russian... 3.34
 Langkat... 2.32 to 2.76

SUGAR.

There has been but little business.
 Brown Takao... V. 7.60 to 7.80
 Brown Manila... 8.70 to 9.70
 Brown China... 7.30 to 12.00
 White Java and Penang... 12.60 to 13.60
 White Refined... 14.50 to 16.75

INDIGO.

Nothing doing.
 Java, Medium to best... Nom. 250.00 to 300.00
 Calcutta, Medium to best... Nom. 180.00 to 200.00
 Madras (Kupah), Medium to best Nom. 130.00 to 160.00
 Madras (Dry Leaf), Medium to best...

EXPORTS.

RAW SILK.

Only a small business doing by foreign buyers and prices close easy. From the Oshiu district, mulberry plantations are reported to have suffered from frost, but the damage is not considered very serious.

QUOTATIONS.

Filatures—Extra Best, Coarse... 1,080 to 1,100
 Filatures—Extra, Fine... 1,080 to 1,090
 Filatures—Extra, Coarse... 1,060 to 1,070
 Filatures—No. 1, Fine... 1,005 to 1,020
 Filatures—No. 1½, Fine... 1,070 to 1,080
 Filatures—No. 1½, Coarse... —
 Filatures—No. 2, Fine... 990 to 1,000
 Filatures—No. 2, Coarse... —
 Common—Coarse... —
 Re-reels—Extra... —
 Re-reels—No. 1... —
 Re-reels—No. 1½... —
 Re-reels—No. 2... —
 Kakedas—Gold Cup Chop Extra... —
 Kakedas—Veiled Woman Chop No. 1... —
 Kakedas—One Horsehead Chop No. 1½... —
 Kakedas—No. 2... —
 Kakedas—No. 2½... —

WASTE SILK.

No change in prices. Very small business doing.

QUOTATIONS.

Noshi—Filatures, Best... —
 Noshi—Filatures, Good... —
 Noshi—Oshiu, Best... —
 Noshi—Oshiu, Good... 60 to 65
 Noshi—Oshiu, Medium... —
 Noshi—Shinshiu, Best... —
 Noshi—Shinshiu, Good... —
 Noshi—Bushu, Best... —
 Noshi—Bushu, Good... —
 Noshi—Bushu, Medium... —
 Noshi—Joshiu, Best... —
 Noshi—Joshiu, Good... 80 to 90
 Kibiso—Filatures, Extra... —
 Kibiso—Filatures, Best... 110 to 120
 Kibiso—Filatures, Second... 100 to 105
 Kibiso—Joshiu, Good... 40 to 60
 Kibiso—Bushu, Fair... —

TEA.

Supplies are increasing and prices continue on basis of opening of market. In other respects conditions are as reported last week—the cup quality continues good, the weather is on the whole favourable and there is promise of a first crop fully up to the average.

Up to the evening of May 10th, 1,128,200 kin changed hands in the Yokohama market since the first appearance of the new crop.

QUOTATIONS.

Choice... Y. 60 and upwards.
 Choice... 50 to 60
 Fine... 45 to 50
 Fine... 40 to 45
 Good Medium... 35 to 40
 Medium... —
 Good Common... —
 Common... —

HABUTAE.

The market, which remained inactive for several weeks past, has grown brisker. Prices are getting steady as enquiries appear in the market. This promising condition is expected to continue during the forthcoming week.

KANAZAWA.

Inches. 4½ me. 5 me. 5½ me
 Yen. Yen. Yen.
 19½ 10.00 9.70 9.60
 22½ 9.60 9.40 9.40
 27 9.55 9.10 8.95
 36 9.35 8.95 8.85

"PINE-LEAVES" MARK.

Inches. 6 me. 6½ me. 7 me. 7½ me. 8 me.
 Yen. Yen. Yen. Yen. Yen.
 22½ 9.00 8.90 9.10 9.10 9.00
 27 8.90 8.80 8.80 8.70 8.60
 36 8.50 8.40 8.00 8.40 8.40

"GOLD" MARK.

Inches. 4½ me. 5 me. 5½ me. 6 me.
 Yen. Yen. Yen. Yen.
 19½ 10.00 9.80 9.60 9.70
 22½ 9.50 9.10 9.00 8.80
 27 9.40 9.00 8.90 8.70
 36 9.30 8.90 8.80 8.40

RICE.

Tokyo, Osaka and Kobe markets were very quiet throughout the week with the exception of a slight rise in Osaka after speculative purchases by a few brokers.

Business in foreign rice was active causing a rise in price. Quotations were: Special Rangoon, yen 4.92; Second Rangoon, yen 4.75; third Rangoon, yen 4.60; Saigon, yen 4.67; and Yien, yen 5.20.

Domestic rice in Fukagawa... 1,346,505
 Foreign rice in Fukagawa... 231,368
 Closing Price, Yen.

Delivery.
 May... —
 June... 14.70
 July... 15.04

RICE AT WHOLESALE: STANDARD PRICE.

(Tokyo.) per koku.
 Superior... Yen 14.71
 Medium... 14.09
 Common... 13.51
 Average... 14.10
 koku, 4,0629 bushels.

(Osaka.) (Kobe.)
 May... 14.3675 May... 13.87
 June... 14.4075 June... 14.05
 July... 14.7655 July... 14.43

COTTON YARN (Osaka).

The Market is very dull.
 May delivery... Yen. 128.10
 June delivery... 125.55
 July delivery... 125.95

STOCK EXCHANGE.

The market is very dull. It is generally thought that the Anglo-Turkish dispute, the recent damage by frost to the mulberry trees, the rumour with regard to the Government's intention of issuing a new loan of two hundred million yen in Europe and America, and the falling of in Japanese bonds in London, have affected the domestic market.

During this week, no special business was done in the Tokyo, Osaka or Kobe markets.

EXCHANGE.

Yokohama, May 11

London silver unchanged, China sterling quotations not yet received, and local rates all unaltered, closing for the mails per steamers Monteagle and Korea as under.

London—Bank T T... 2/0 3/4 @ 1/4
 — Bills on demand... 2/0 1/4 @ 1/4
 — 4 months' sight... 2/0 1/4
 — Private 4 months' sight... 2/0 3/4
 — 6 months' sight... 2/1 1/4
 Paris & Lyons—Bank sight... 256
 — Private 4 months' sight... 260 3/4 @ 1/4
 — 6 months' sight... 262 @ 1/4
 Hongkong—Bank sight... per $100 104 3/4
 — Private 10 days, sight do 102 1/4
 Shanghai—Bank sight... 68 3/4
 — Private 10 days' sight... 70 3/4
 India—Bank sight... 152
 — Private 30 days' sight... 154
 America—Bank sight... 49 3/4 @ 1/4
 — Private 30 days' sight... 50
 — Private 4 months' sight... 50 3/4
 Germany—Bank sight... 208 1/2
 — Private 4 months' sight... 213
 Bar Silver (London)... 31

* Nominal.

ITCHING HUMOURS

SPEEDY CURE TREATMENT FOR EVERY HUMOUR.

Bathe the affected parts with hot water and CUTICURA SOAP, to cleanse the skin and scalp of crusts and scales, and soften the thickened cuticle. Dry, without hard rubbing, and apply CUTICURA OINTMENT freely to allay itching, irritation, and inflammation, and soothe and heal, and lastly take CUTICURA RESOLVENT PILLS, to cool and cleanse the blood. This pure, sweet, and wholesome treatment affords instant relief, permits rest and sleep, and points to a speedy, permanent, and economical cure of the most torturing, disfiguring, itching, burning, and scaly skin, scalp, and blood humours, eczemas, rashes, and irritations, from infancy to age, with loss of hair, when all else fails.

MILLIONS USE CUTICURA SOAP

Assisted by CUTICURA OINTMENT, for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, for cleansing the scalp of crusts, scales, and dandruff, and the stopping of falling hair, for softening, whitening, and soothing red, rough, and sore hands, for baby rashes, itchings, and chafings, and for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. Millions of Women use CUTICURA SOAP in the form of baths for annoying irritations, inflammations, and excoriations, for too free or offensive perspiration, in the form of washes for ulcerative weaknesses, and for many sanative, antiseptic purposes which readily suggest themselves to women, especially mothers.

CUTICURA RESOLVENT PILLS, CHOCOLATE COATED,

Are a new, tasteless, odourless, economical substitute for the celebrated Liquid CUTICURA RESOLVENT, as well as for all other blood purifiers and humour cures. Put up in screw-cap pocket vials containing 60 doses. CUTICURA PILLS are alternative, antiseptic, tonic, and digestive, and beyond question the purest, sweetest, most successful and economical blood and skin purifiers, humour cures, and tonic-digestives, yet compounded.

CUTICURA REMEDIES are sold throughout the world. Australian Depot: R. Towns & Co., Sydney. British Depot: 27-28, Charterhouse Sq., London. French Depot: 2 Rue de la Paix, Paris. Porter, Dugg & Co., New York, U. S. A.

Lea and Perrins' Sauce.

By Royal Warrant
to
His Majesty the King.

THE ORIGINAL AND GENUINE WORCESTERSHIRE.

BOVRIL

gives you Strength.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT

IS A HOUSEHOLD NECESSITY

It cures Rheumatism, Sciatica,
Stiff Joints,
Glandular Swellings,
Sore Throat, Quinsy, Mumps,
Burns, Piles, Fistulas, &c.

AND EVERY
FORM OF SKIN DISEASE.

Manufactured only at 78, New Oxford St. (late 553, Oxford St.),
London. Sold by all Chemists and Medicine Vendors.

VESSELS ON THE BERTH.

For KERLUNG, via Moji (from Kobe), 3rd, and 18th every month, at Noon, the "SAIKIO MARU."
—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
For KERLUNG, via Moji (from Kobe), 10th and 25th every month, at Noon, the "KOSHUN MAUR."
—Osaka Shosen Kaisha.
For TRIESTE, via Kobe, Hongkong, Singapore, Penang, Colombo, Bombay, Karachi, Aden, Suez, Port Said, and Fiume, about June —, the "NIPPON."—Heller Bros.
For SHANGHAI, via Kobe, Moji, and Nagasaki, May 12th, at 4 p.m., the "CHENAN."—Butterfield & Swire.
For BOMBAY, via Kobe, Moji, Hongkong, Singapore, and Colombo, May 13th, at 2 p.m., the "HAKATA MARU."—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
For HONGKONG, via Kobe, Inland Sea, Nagasaki, and Shanghai, about May 14th, the "EMPEROR OF CHINA."—Canadian Pacific Railway Co.
For NEW YORK, via ports and Suez Canal, about May 15th, the "SIKH."—Dodwell & Co., Ltd.
For HONGKONG, via Kobe, (Inland Sea), Nagasaki, and Shanghai, about May 16th, the "MONGOLIA."—P. M. S.S. Co.
For SEATTLE, Wash., May 16th, the "DAKOTA."—Great Northern S.S. Co.

(毎土曜日一發行)
編輯人 エフ・ブリンダリー
發行兼印刷人 エー・ビー・ブラス
洋行所 横濱市山下町五十五番
シヤン・バン・メル・新聞社

The Japan Weekly Mail.

特土曜日 A REVIEW OF JAPANESE COMMERCE, POLITICS, LITERATURE, AND ART. 一週刊行

No. 20.

REGISTERED AT THE G.P.O.
AS A NEWSPAPER.

YOKOHAMA, MAY 19TH, 1906.

明治廿五年三月廿日
第三千四百四十四號

Vol. XLV.

CONTENTS.

Summary of News .....	501
The Question of the Chinese Customs .....	502
The Keum-Kimura Dispute .....	503
Fort Arthur .....	503
The Official Visit to Manchuria and Korea .....	503
China .....	503
The Mercantile Marine of Japan .....	505
The "Kojushu" .....	505
The Proposed Manchurian Exhibition .....	505
Korea .....	505
President Roosevelt's Future .....	507
Saghalien .....	507
Japanese Emigrants .....	507
A Terrible Suicide .....	507
The German Ambassador .....	507
A Tokyo Race Club .....	508
U. S. Commander Voicicelli .....	508
The Tokyo Kisen Kaisha .....	508
The Noguchi Murder Case .....	508
The Sanyo Railway .....	509
Notes on Current Events .....	511
Dedication of the Church of the Sacred Heart .....	511
Yokohama Union Church .....	511
Indian Sympathy for the Faipine .....	511
Leading Articles:—
The "Korea Daily News" and "Japan Herald" .....	512
Foreign Capital .....	512
The Customs' Question .....	512
The Government and Foreign Capital .....	512
The Bookshelf .....	514
Mr and Mrs Wilson in Sendai .....	514
Naval news .....	515
Monthly Summary of Japanese Current Literature .....	515
The "Ohio's" Performance .....	516
Yachting .....	518
Spring Meeting of the Nippon Race Club .....	519
The Copyright Convention between Japan and the United States .....	520
The Plague .....	520
Japanese Prisoners .....	520
American Topics .....	521
The Law Courts .....	521
The San Francisco Disaster .....	522
Calisthenics .....	524
Correspondence:—
Norwegian Officers and the Siamese Navy .....	525
The Shokoku's Ceremony .....	525
Telegrams .....	526
Bank of Japan .....	527
An Oakland Paper on the Earthquake .....	527
Latest Shipping .....	527
Latest Commercial .....	531

"FAIS CE QUE DOIS: ADVIENNE QUE POURRA!"

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

No notice will be taken of anonymous correspondence. What is intended for insertion in the "JAPAN WEEKLY MAIL," must be authenticated by the name and address of the writer, not for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

It is particularly requested that all letters on business be addressed to the MANAGER, and Cheques be made payable to same; and that literary contributions be addressed to the EDITOR.

YOKOHAMA: SATURDAY, MAY 19TH, 1906.

BIRTH.

On the 17th May, 1906, the wife of THOMAS CALDWELL ANDERSON, of a Son.

MARRIAGES.

CARTWRIGHT—VON FALLOT GMEINER—On the 15th May, at St. Andrew's Church, Shiba, Tokyo, by the Rt. Rev. Bishop Awdry, D.D., assisted by the Rev. C. H. Shortt, M.A., JAMES STEWART, eldest son of James Strachan Cartwright, K.C., of Osgoode Hall, Toronto, and grandson of the late Hon. William Cayley, to HILDEGARD MARIE, eldest daughter of the late Otto von Fallot-Gmeiner, and step-daughter of the Rev. Arthur Lloyd, M.A.

At Englewood, New Jersey, on April 18th, CHARLES HASTINGS THORN to LILLIAN McALLISTER, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James R. Morse.

DEATH.

At Zurich, on the 30th March, 1906, M. JULES ADAM, Consul and acting First Interpreter at the Legation of France, in Tokyo; officer de l'instruction publique, officer of the Order of the Rising Sun, etc., aged 45 years.

SUMMARY OF NEWS.

MARQUIS Saionji, Premier, returned to Tokyo on the night of May 14th.

It is reported by the Jiji that Prince Tsai and other Chinese Commissioners now in England will pay another visit to Japan about the middle of June on their way home.

THE American cruiser Cincinnati is expected at Yokohama in about a fortnight.

THE Training Squadron under Admiral Shimamura arrived at Melbourne on May 5th.

A severe shock of earthquake was felt at Urawa, Saitama prefecture at 2.36 p.m. on May 10th.

GENERAL Viscount Sakuma, Governor of Formosa, will leave Tokyo this morning for his post.

PRINCE Ferdinand of Udine left Nagasaki on May 12th by the Calabria for Shanghai on his way home.

FROST was experienced in the district of Matsumoto, Nagano prefecture, on May 11th. Damage was caused to mulberry leaves.

Rock Sand, the famous Derby winner of 1903, has been sold to Mr. August Belmont, the American sportsman, for £25,000.

THE plans of the newest British battleship Dreadnought have been stolen from the Admiralty office. An American is suspected.

OWING to the prevalence of plague in Kobe, the embarkation of emigrants at the port was prohibited on May 12th for two weeks.

As a result of China's adhesion to the Tibetan Convention the proposal to organise Tibet into a province of the Empire has been dropped.

ON May 14th, T. Hashimoto, an employee of the Koshiro Bank, Saga prefecture, absconded with fourteen thousand yen belonging to the bank. He is still at large.

PRINCE Fushimi, the younger, has been appointed second in command of the Nanivva. He formerly occupied a similar position on the Okinoshima (Appaxin).

At the Benjamin Franklin celebrations held in Philadelphia on April 17, the degree of doctor of laws was conferred upon King Edward VII by the university of Pennsylvania.

THE Daiya Maru arrived at Moji from Port Arthur on May 14th with seventy thousand cases containing shells captured during the war. The ammunition was landed there.

ACCORDING to a London telegram received in Tokyo on May 15th, Japanese bonds which had been neglected for some weeks past have revived. Quotations show an average rise of five shillings.

It is reported by Tokyo papers that M. Maxime Gorky, the well-known Russian novelist, now in New York, will shortly arrive in Japan in company with Madame Androvka, a Russian actress.

AT 10.05 p.m. on May 11th, fire broke out in a shed attached to a warehouse where pumps are stored at the Yokosuka Naval Station, destroying the shed. Tobacco ashes are reported to be the cause.

ACCORDING to latest Government investigations, public and private hospitals throughout the Empire number 873; chemists, 2,898; druggists, 27,319; drug manufacturers, 2,369; and doctors, 35,160.

SOME Tokyo papers say that the Imperial Court has decided to send Prince Kan-in to America to convey Imperial sympathy with regard to the recent earthquake and fire. The Prince according to this report will leave Yokohama about June 25th for San Francisco.

A notification was issued on May 12th by the Kanagawa Kencho to the effect that owing to the prevalence of rinderpest in the prefecture, the transportation of horses to other prefectures is prohibited unless such animals have passed examination by veterinary surgeons appointed by the Kencho.

MESSRS. HASEBA and Takekoshi, of the Seiyukai, will leave Yokohama on May 16th for America and Europe to investigate police affairs. Leading members of the party gave a farewell dinner on May 11th at the Maple Club, Shiba, Tokyo.

COLONEL Oshima, of the artillery, and four other officers have been appointed commissioners to delimit the frontier between North and South Saghalien. They will leave Tokyo on May 20th. It is said that the Russian commissioners have already arrived.

AT 2.20 a.m. on May 11th, a freight train on the Kyushu Railway collided with another goods train at a point between Toyotsu and Saikawa. Both locomotives and cars were severely damaged and derailed. A fireman was killed and two brakemen were injured.

A Moji telegram says that the steamer Otto Hawk has arrived there with seven hundred Russian soldiers. She is on her way from Vladivostok to Odessa. The commander of the ship, apprehensive of an outbreak of trouble, asked the Harbour Police to set a watch on board. Subsequently a number of police were sent.

THE death is announced of Lieut-General Takehashi (an officer in reserve). The funeral took place at 1 p.m. on May 13th at the Aoyama cemetery. Previous to his death, the Emperor conferred on him the Double Rising Sun. During the China-Japan war, General Takahashi was superintendent of the Tokyo Military Arsenal.

ON Sunday, the fifth meeting of the Yokohama Union Boat Race Club—consisting of employees of the Specie, Hundred, First, Second, Third and Seventy-fourth Banks, the Nippon Yusen Kaisha, the Hara, Mogi, Mitsui Bussan, Kiito Gomei and other leading firms—took place off the Bund, Yamashita-cho, Yokohama. In spite of rainy weather, the races were successfully carried out.

A telegram from Otaru, Hokkaido, reports that at 8 a.m. on May 10th, fire broke out on board the steamer Okura Maru at Masuke Bay. The flames, which originated in the engine room, spread at once throughout the holds of the ship, destroying all the cargo, consisting of about four thousand packages. Severe damage was also caused to the hull and she sank at 11 a.m. All the crew were saved.

UNDER instructions of the central Government the governors of various prefectures have issued an intimation to leading business and industrial bodies in their jurisdictions, that the Industrial Bank will invite foreign capital, at low rates of interest, to encourage domestic enterprises. Companies who have raised loans at high interest or who intend raising loans are required to furnish the local Governments with details.

WHEN Prince Arthur of Connaught was in Japan he demonstrated more than once that he possessed the Royal faculty of remembering faces to a remarkable degree. An old school fellow whom he had not seen since his Eton days he recognised instantly on meeting him unexpectedly at the Y. U. Club in Yokohama. In Canada the Prince has given much satisfaction by his instant recognition at Ottawa, of Colonel W. E. Hodgins, whom he met on parade at Aldershot two years ago. "I've met you before," said the Prince, and a moment later he recalled the occasion and circumstances.

THE QUESTION OF THE CHINESE CUSTOMS.

Saturday, May 12.

It is evident that the appointment of a High Commissioner of Customs by the Chinese Government is regarded in Peking as intended to compel Sir Robert Hart to resign. The Fiji Shimpu's correspondent has visited the Representatives of England, America and Germany, as well as Sir Robert Hart, and has learned that they were not in any way consulted before the step was taken. Among the foreign community the event is considered to be designed as a means of forcing Sir Robert's resignation, and there is much talk of interference on the part of the Powers. But combined interference is not likely to be attainable. France and Germany are said to view the matter with comparative indifference, though England and America are determined to protest. The strong feature of the foreign case is that the customs revenue is pledged as security for the indemnity and for foreign loans, and the Powers may therefore justly claim some measure of supervision as to the manner of collecting the revenue. Correspondence from Peking speaks strongly of the impossibility of entrusting to the hands of proverbially corrupt Chinese officials the control of a source of revenue so important, but as to that it is to be observed that the income derived from the Customs has now been fixed under foreign management, and any diminution after the duty of collection had passed into Chinese hands would be at once a proof of dishonest administration, so that there is some check. If it be true that Sir Robert was not in any way consulted by the Chinese Government with regard to the new appointments, then his immediate resignation might have been expected, and we must assume that he refrains from submitting it under advice from Downing Street. The Fiji Shimpu writes very strongly on the subject. It recalls the fact that by the treaty of 1898 the Chinese Government is pledged to have a British subject at the head of the Customs so long as British trade is in the ascendant, and it refers to the whole history of the service as demonstrating that foreign administration is absolutely essential and that it must be administered by the representatives of one Power not by the representatives of several coöperating Powers. Our contemporary does not believe, however, that China will be able to accomplish her policy in the face of the opposition it must certainly provoke from the countries most seriously affected. On this occasion her error will probably not expose her to anything worse than some loss of "face," but if this policy of China for the Chinese is to be thus recklessly pushed, there is no telling what results it may entail. Meanwhile the return of Mr. Uchida, which was believed to be imminent, appears to have been deferred, and there is an idea that the postponement may be due to this complication. Another rumour, however, says that the Chinese Government is seeking to abolish the Japanese advisory police which has existed in Peking for some time, and that Mr. Uchida has been instructed to remain until that matter is settled. The correspondent of the Fiji Shimpu says that the Chinese are showing much obstinacy about this police question, and that they are supposed to be inspired by M. Pokotiloff, but we must be prepared to largely discount the catalogue of interferences attributed to M. Pokotiloff, whose activity can neither be as ubiquitous nor as sinister as rumour depicts.

Sunday, May 13.

The telegrams this morning show that the situation in Peking has not undergone any change. There is much excitement about the Government's precipitate action in issuing the decree with reference to a high commissioner of customs, and it is conjectured that advantage was taken of the absence of Sir Ernest Satow. The decree was issued on the 9th instant and communicated to Sir Robert Hart on the 11th, who, we are told, had not been previously consulted in any way. There are folks who affirm that Japan has prompted China to take this singular step and there are also folks who think that they detect Russia's hand behind the scenes, but neither suspicion has any tangible basis. Japan will always be viewed askance by the yellow-perilists and Russia will always be counted an intriguer so long as she continues to be an expanding empire. It need scarcely be said that the general impression in Peking is that Great Britain and her ally Japan will not quietly submit to this measure, but in view of the gravity of the situation the Cabinets of London and Tokyo are not likely to move until they have obtained whatever coöperation is available, especially that of the United States. There seems to be no second opinion as to the motive of the Peking Court in issuing the decree, namely, to promote the China-for-the-Chinese policy. No one could cavil at such a policy—seeing that it is the policy of all self-respecting States,—had China made any solid efforts to equip herself for the responsibilities she proposes to undertake, but she is doing things in the wrong order. At the same time, we must not forget that reforms of various kinds have been effected. Sir Robert Hart himself would be the first to acknowledge it—and it is notable that news comes just now of a great administrative re-organization, the gist of which would be to remodel the construction and competence of the various departments of State so that the central Government's authority should extend over every part of the empire. This would involve the abolition of Viceroyalties and their juniors as well as of much of the existing provincial administrative machinery, and the placing of each province under a governor directly responsible to the Board of Home Affairs in Peking. It has long been recognised that centralization was the prime need of the Chinese Empire. Under the present system of dislocation there is no entity called "China;" there is only a congeries of satrapies each engrossed with its own affairs and virtually indifferent to the fate of the nation as a whole. Patriotism is non-existent amid such conditions. The cry of China-for-the-Chinese is probably the very best force that could be conceived for integrating these disunited elements, and if the Government feels itself strong enough to seize the occasion for wholesale administrative re-organization on the lines indicated above, a new era may be opening for China. But, according to present appearances, very serious foreign complications are not unlikely to attend the movement, and no intelligent man can deny that an attempt to gather the fruits of reform while reform is only in embryo can not be endorsed by any of the Treaty Powers.

Thursday, May 17.

There is no definite news as to this affair. The Chargé d'Affaires of the United States is said to have asked the Waiwupu for an explicit explanation and a majority of the high officials in Peking are reported to be unfavourable to the action taken by the Throne, which action is now rumoured to have been prompted from Canton. An incident is reported, however, which goes to prove that there is no idea of deposing Sir Robert Hart or of impairing his power. The two nominees to the posts of High Commissioner and Assistant High Commissioner are said to have visited him for the purpose of consulting about their salaries, which are presumably to be drawn from the customs revenue. Incidentally it is mentioned that the Assistant High Commissioner, Tang Shaoi, is already in receipt of very fine emoluments. He has his pay as Vice-Minister of Foreign Affairs, and he has also 4,000 taels each per month from the Shanghai-Nanking, and Peking-Hankow railways, of which he is president. If, in addition, he receives a substantial sum from the Customs, he will be a well rewarded official. It is unusual for Chinese officials to be openly in receipt of great emoluments. The Asahi Shimbun has a powerful article on the subject but pending some certain information as to the significance attached to the measure by the Chinese Government itself, such utterances serve merely to show the mood of the Japanese people, which is already well known. No reader of the Tokyo journals can entertain any doubt that Japan is opposed to everything which tends to the expulsion of foreigners from China, or to abandonment of the open door. The Asahi now dwells upon the fact that the organization of the Customs was not a concession granted by China at foreign instigation, after the manner of railways and mines, but, though an abnormal institution, was deliberately sanctioned by the Chinese themselves. Hence any attempt to overthrow the institution by extreme measures could not be classed as a step in the programme of China for the Chinese. It would not have even that excuse, and, while bringing no material benefit whatever to China, it would cause her great immaterial loss. It may be doubted whether this proposition of the Asahi's with regard to the organization of the Customs is entirely consistent with history, for had not there been a Taiping rebellion and had not Shanghai been beyond the pale of Chinese jurisdiction, the Customs, as we know the institution, would scarcely have come into existence. One point made by the Asahi, however, is particularly interesting. It is that these happenings in Peking have demonstrated the disappearance of the solidarity which formerly marked the conduct of the Foreign Representatives in Peking. They used to join hands for the protection of foreign rights and interests, but they now seem to work independently. The United States alone has taken in this instance action pointing to union. But our contemporary may be reminded that the real import of the affair remains still uncertain. Until Sir Robert Hart himself is heard from the public must reserve judgment. Sir Robert appears to be quietly continuing his functions as though nothing had happened to disturb him, and perhaps nothing seriously disturbing has happened. That the two new Commissioners have gone to consult him about their emoluments certainly does not suggest his supersession.

There was a large and distinguished assembly at a meeting of the Royal Geographical Society on April 9th when the American Ambassador (Mr. Whitelaw Reid) presented to Captain R.F. Scott, C.V.O., R.N., Commander of the National Antarctic Expedition, the gold medal of the American Geographical Society.

THE REUMER-KIMURA DISPUTE.

The Japanese Naval authorities, speaking indirectly through the columns of the Tokyo press, have now explicitly denied the allegations publicly made in the columns of the Berlin Tageblatt by the Wireless Telegraphic Company of Germany. The allegations were embodied in an advertisement which is couched in curiously intemperate language. The German Company directly and explicitly charged Professor Kimura with having gained access to the laboratories of Germany and their secrets under pretence of selecting instruments for use by the Navy of Japan, and with subsequently palming off as his own invention the systems he saw there. It further accused him of having acquired from Professor Reumer knowledge of the latter's wireless telephonic methods, and having similarly appropriated them as his own. The terms in which the advertisement is couched leave its readers no room to doubt that the German Company is absolutely assured as to the identity of the German systems and the systems of Professor Kimura and his Japanese fellow-investigators, nor is there any mincing of epithets in denouncing Professor Kimura. We must assume that the directors of the German Company are absolutely certain of the justice of their case, but even on that assumption the language employed by them is unbecoming. The Japanese Naval Authorities now make the following rejoinder:—

1.—The system of wireless telegraphy used in the Japanese Navy is the result of researches conducted since the year 1900, and is entirely independent of the German system.

2.—The system of wireless telephony invented by Professor Kimura is radically different from that of Professor Reumer.

3.—During the war a representative of the German Telephone Company sought an interview with Professor Kimura, who replied that he would meet him at the Naval Club, but that he could not enter into explanations during the war with reference to the wireless telephony in use by the Japanese Navy. Subsequently photographs were shown to an expert of the Company.

4.—In 1902 Captain Tonami of the Imperial Navy and Professor Kimura were sent to Europe to examine the latest systems of wireless telegraphy. On receipt of their report the Japanese Government decided that it would be advantageous to continue employing the system already in use rather than to make any change.

5.—Finally, no one making a careful examination of the wireless telegraphy used by the Japanese Navy and of Professor Kimura's wireless telephony could entertain the least doubt that they are different scientifically and practically from the German systems, though the Japanese Naval Authorities are not now in a position to explain the difference. The assertions in the Berlin Tageblatt are based on pure conjecture.

The extraordinary affair of Professor Kimura and the wireless telegraphic and telephonic system used by the Japanese Navy, continue to be the topic of talk in Tokyo. So far as can be judged from the statements published at this side, the Berlin Wireless Telegraph Company seems to have publicly impugned the originality of systems concerning the nature and details of which it had no knowledge. Such an act is scarcely credible, and judgment must be reserved until the Company has an opportunity of elaborating its case, for certainly nothing seems less likely than that a Company among whose members are included several eminent German savants would have printed in a leading newspaper an abusive and scurrilous attack upon a Japanese professor and indirectly on the Japanese Navy without having very solid grounds for so extreme a course. Professor Kimura now addresses a long letter to the Tokyo press, the most important parts of the communication being reiterated statements that the systems in use in Japan have nothing whatever in common with the German systems which they are accused of plagiarizing, or rather of imitating in toto. He declares that from a naval point of view, the German wireless telephone scarcely deserves to be called anything better than a toy, inasmuch as it can not be employed on a ship in motion and that in all essential respects it is different from the Japanese system. He further declares that several specimens of the German Company's wireless telegraphic instruments are now in the hands of the Japanese Navy, having been taken from Russian vessels, and that even a tyro can recognise the radical difference between them and the Japanese instruments. He also claims that he has uniformly treated the German Company in the most friendly and helpful manner, and he denies that they can have any knowledge of the systems in use in Japan. Their idea apparently is that there can be no efficient system except the German, and that all others must be mere imitations of the latter.

Such is the gist, as we judge, of a long and very explicit letter. It places the German Company in the position of having acted in a hasty and unwarrantable manner, so hasty and so unwarrantable that we must remain incredulous until the question is more fully threshed. Professor Kimura is to start for Berlin by the Dakota on the 16th instant and he will doubtless take steps to vindicate his own reputation and indirectly the reputation of the Japanese Navy against the very extreme aspersions of the German Company. The incident is decidedly unfortunate, for however it ends there will remain a sentiment of anger on both sides.

This meeting of men of science, which was to have taken place in Berlin at the end of June, has been postponed until October, and Mr. Kimura, the Japanese delegate, has consequently deferred his departure. The Hochi Shimbun alleges that the Kimura-Reumer dispute is supposed to have been the cause of this postponement.

PORT ARTHUR.

Our readers are aware that the Governor-General's department in the Liaotung Peninsula was transferred from Dalny to Port Arthur on the 6th instant. We now read in the Kokumin that the organization consists of eleven sections, namely, the staff, aides-de-camp, artillery, the accountants, the medical, the veterinary, the judicial, the postal, the military administrative and the civil administrative. The department has taken up its quarters in one of the large buildings formerly occupied by Russian officials.

It was notified some time ago that an office for the settlement of foreigners' private estates would be opened in Port Arthur from the 12th of February, and that those having claims should apply personally or by deputy. It appears that the number who have taken advantage of this arrangement has been 53 up to the present, of whom, naturally, the majority are Russians, and after them in order is Germans, British subjects, Danes and Swedes. Fifty-six claims have been settled, of which twenty-six related to immovable property and the remainder to movables. There has not been one case involving an appeal to the law-courts.

At 7.09 p.m. on May 16th, a slight shock of earthquake was felt in Yokohama, the duration being about two minutes.

THE OFFICIAL VISIT TO MANCHURIA AND KOREA.

Marquis Saionji and his party seem to have made very thorough investigations during their visit to Manchuria and Korea. The Marquis devoted keen attention to everything, and even made a descent into the Fushun coal mine to witness the working. Three days were spent at Mukden, and it goes without saying that there were cordial exchanges of courtesies between the Governor and the Prime Minister.

Mr. Nomura, an engineer of the Department of Agriculture and Commerce, who was one of the party, says that nearly all the buildings at Talien have been restored and that several new ones have been constructed. The place has now all the appearance of prosperity, but a majority of the Japanese doing business there established themselves with the idea of catering for the needs of the army, and now that the troops have departed these people will probably close their shops. The means of communication and the various appliances are excellent, but if Talien is to become a commercial port, warehouses will have to be built. As to the general arrangements, the place is in no sense inferior to Yingkow. Port Arthur has no future except as a naval port. The old Chinese town has recovered much of its activity, but the great buildings in the new Russian town remain unrepaired and the forts are just as they were when Stoessel surrendered. There is a general air of destruction and desolation.

Yingkow is still the great emporium of trade in southern Manchuria. It has not, perhaps, recovered quite the degree of prosperity it enjoyed prior to the war, but the difference is scarcely perceptible. Concerning the apprehension that Talien may absorb the commerce of Yingkow, Mr. Nomura's opinion is that the latter will always remain the depot for Manchuria westward of the Liao while the former will attract the east-Liao trade. Talien certainly has a marked advantage in respect of sea communications and the railway, but Yingkow too is not without recommendations. Japanese subjects are now rapidly spreading throughout Manchuria. There are six thousand in Talien and four thousand in Mukden, while many are said to be repairing to Tieling.

The length of the military line from Antung to Mukden is 180 miles, but as it makes many detours to avoid tunnelling, the permanent road will probably be 20 miles less. As to the East-China line, the enlargement of the gage would cost little as the present sleepers could be used, but new rolling stock would have to be supplied. That would involve considerable outlay as would also the restoration and construction of stations and dwellings for the staff. Mr. Nomura thinks that there is a great future before the road, and that it has little to fear from the competition of the Liao River. He speaks in the highest terms of the Fushun mines. The coal is of the best quality, and the vein being 1,000 feet wide, 130 feet deep and 20 miles long, is practically inexhaustible. At present the mineral excavated is only 400 tons daily, a market not having yet been opened, but the quantity can be raised to 3,000 or 4,000 tons. The cost of excavation is 3 yen per ton—Mr. Den, it will be remembered, put it at 2 yen—and the carriage to Talien would add 3 yen more.

CHINA.

Telegrams say that much excitement has been caused by the appointments of Messrs. Tieh Liang and Tang Shao i to the posts of High Commissioner and Vice-High Commissioner of Customs respectively. It is said that this step was taken entirely without consulting any of the Foreign Representatives and even that the Imperial Rescript was published in their absence, though as to this latter assertion some doubt may be entertained seeing that the Ministers can not yet have left Peking for the hills. There is talk of concerted action on the part of the Powers to induce the Chinese Government to change its policy, but inasmuch as the long tenure of the important post of Inspector-General by a British subject has frequently excited the jealousy of other States, the hope of a combined effort to secure his continuance in office can not be counted very strong. Of course it has to be remembered that among the large staff of the Customs' employees there are men of every nationality. Sir Robert Hart, during the past forty years, has shown his impartiality and foresight by distributing his appointments in deference to merit and expediency without any racial bias whatever. Since then the transfer of the supreme control to Chinese hands, especially for the reasons now supposed to have prompted this step, must be expected to prelude the gradual replacement of all the foreign staff by Chinese subjects, the question has evidently a universal interest. The public will observe, however, that Sir Robert Hart himself has not yet been heard from. So long as his resignation is not announced we may take it for granted that he does not regard the new appointments as signifying his supersession. He is not the kind of man who would cling to office in the face of such a recognition of his fifty-three years service.

The news published in our last to the effect that disturbances had broken out in three districts in China is now supplemented by intelligence—only in the form of rumour, however,—that a Christian place of worship at Kianglioh in the Anhui district of Honan has been burned by the rioters, and that a similar event has occurred at Chingtu in Szechuan.

According to statistics collected by the Chinese Government and published by Tokyo journals, the foreign troops now quartered in North China, exclusive of the Germans at Kiaochow, number as follow:—

	Officers.	Rank and File.
British .....	123	2,155
German .....	134	1,920
French .....	88	1,643
Japanese .....	57	1,121
Italian .....	16	294
Russian .....	7	200
Austrian .....	6	175
American .....	4	101

Totals ..... 435 ..... 7,609

The fact that such a foreign garrison still occupies the province of Pehchili is generally forgotten.

A conflagration took place at the Fushun coal-mine on the 30th instant. The men were enjoying a holiday in connexion with the celebrations in Japan when flames burst out in a carpenter's work-shop and before any effectual resistance could be organized two buildings and a number of waggons loaded with stores were destroyed. The loss is estimated at 40,000 yen and the cause is said to have been tobacco ashes.

There is news of another riot at Kientgeih in the Anching district of Anhui. A Christian church is reported to have been burned and the houses of several native Christians were looted, but there was no loss of life. Further the rumour is revived that the United States Minister has warned the Waiwupu of the threatening attitude of the Mohammedans in Kiangsu.

On the 10th instant Mr. Den Kenjiro, Vice-Minister of Communications, delivered an interesting lecture at a meeting of the Daido Club. Referring to the fear often expressed that Yingkow (Newchwang), owing to its greater facilities of internal water carriage would steal the trade of Manchuria from Talien, Mr. Den called it a needless apprehension. Talien is much better suited than Yingkow in point of communications to be an international mart: ships of deep draft can enter there, whereas at Yingkow the entrance to the harbour is narrow, and nothing drawing over 16 feet of water can get in. Concerning the prospect of profitably working the East China Railway, there need not be any doubt. Changchun is the commercial centre of Manchuria and the railway south of Changchun has fallen entirely into Japanese possession. The wealth of Manchuria is in the north rather than in the south. Thus in the case of the great staples, beans and bean-cake, southern Manchuria produces only 2 millions of koku whereas the Kirin district produces 5 millions. Not more than 2 millions of koku find their way abroad, for river transport is not available during the season of frost and, moreover, carriage to the river is very costly. Thus whereas beans can be purchased in Changchun for 2.50 yen a koku, they cost 6 yen or more in Yingkow, the difference (3.50 yen) representing the expense of transport. But the staple can be profitably carried from Changchun to Talien (500 miles) for 10 yen per ton, which means 1.60 yen a koku, the result being that a koku can be sold in Talien at about 4 yen, compared with 6 yen in Yingkow. It is thus evident that the inevitable tendency of produce will be in the direction of Talien. Another feature which will materially help to ensure the profitable working of the railway is the Fushun coal-mines. At present under military auspices, the mines are not exploited to the extent of more than 1,000 tons daily. But if properly worked they would yield an output of from 2 to 3 million tons yearly, and as the cost at the pit's mouth is only 2 yen, and the transport to Talien 4 yen per ton, the price at Talien would be about 6 yen. Turning to the question of gage, Mr. Den declared himself in favour of the practically universal size, namely, 4 ft. 8 in. To re-construct the line to that gage would cost about 25 million yen, and some 5 million would have to be spent on preparations at Talien. Another 2 millions would be required in connexion with appropriations of railway-station lands for settlement purposes, and 5 millions on developing the Fushun mine, making 37 millions in all, to which 3 millions might be added as a reserve fund. Adding to these figures the sum of 80 millions spent by Russia on the Changchun-Talien road, the total cost would be 120 millions. Against this the gross earnings might be set down as:—

	Yen.
Carriage of 250,000 koku of beans, etc....	3,200,000
Carriage of 2,000,000 tons of coal .....	8,000,000
Carriage of 90 millions of passengers ...	1,800,000
Total .....	13,000,000

All owing, then, 7 millions for operating expenses, the net profit would be 6 millions.

To this would have to be added 500,000 yen on account of land leased for settlements and a million yen profit on coal, so that the aggregate earnings would be 7½ millions. Deducting from this 3,200,000 yen on account of the service of the new loan of 40 million yen (as enumerated above) and 300,000 yen as a reserve, the remaining 3½ millions would be clear profit—namely, 4.3 per cent. on the original cost (80 millions). Mr. Den concluded by recommending that the line should be owned jointly by the Government and by private individuals. He would have the Government's holding represented by the initial outlay (made by Russia) of 80 millions, and he would sell 40 millions worth of shares to Japanese, Chinese, British and American individuals.

The Kokumin Shinbun has a long letter from its correspondent in Antung. He draws a very rosy picture of the progress made by that place, and it certainly is very remarkable progress according to his figures. Antung, he says, is divided into the old town and the new. The former had only 500 or 600 Chinese inhabitants before the war and consisted mainly of squalid buildings. But it has now 30,000 inhabitants and many fine buildings adorn it. The new town—in which lies the Japanese quarter—has an area of 3 million tsubo. Its population already numbers 5,000 Japanese, and constant increments are taking place. Many solid edifices in Japanese and foreign style are being erected or have been put up already. The reasons for the rapid development are numerous. In the first place there is the fact that Antung constituted a kind of military base throughout the war and thus great sums of money were spent there. Then there is the fact that it was brought into regular railway communication with Mukden from the 1st of April, the military line having been opened to the general public on that date. This military line is now to be converted into a permanent track and of the 30 million yen required for the work a considerable part must be spent in the Antung region, the place also becoming an emporium for stores. Further, Antung will probably become a port of shipment of the Fushun coal mine as it is much nearer to Fushun than Talien is, and, again, it may be said to be in the most accessible situation as regards the best metal mines in Manchuria. A bridge is about to be thrown over the Yalu and this will mean that the produce of northern Korea will come to Antung for shipment, as will also be the case with timber felled along the course of the river by the united Chinese and Japanese Company. Antung used to be exposed to the ravages of floods, but this disadvantage has been obviated by the construction of a big embankment. The correspondent speaks finally, of admirable sanitary arrangements and of the provision of good educational facilities.

It is reported that a Japanese named Matsumori Tasaburo has set himself to raise a force of Hunghutsz in the Hwaijen region and that his action has caused considerable uneasiness, while, at the same time, injuring public faith in the law-abiding character of the Japanese. Perhaps this man may be the soldier who recently deserted from the Japanese army. He was on the eve of being sent home in the due routine of the service, but he had apparently imbibed such a love of adventure that he thought it more agreeable to become a free-booter than to return to the "set grey life" of a provincial rustic in Japan. He accordingly indited a letter in that sense and adding a postscript that he took the liberty of "borrowing" his rifle, he absconded, arms in hand.

France having maintained her ground unflinchingly with regard to the Nanchang affair, the Chinese are reported to have given in. It is stated that an agreement embodying France's wishes in their full form was submitted for the Throne's approval on the 14th instant.

A commission sent by the Chinese to investigate the conditions in the Amur region, is said to have discovered that all the mines in the vicinity of the river are being worked by Russians, who refuse to abandon their enterprises. The fact having been reported to the Peking Government, the latter has decided to make strong representations to the Russian Minister. If the state of affairs be rightly reported, it furnishes a striking illustration of China's administrative incompetence. We may assume, perhaps, that these mining operations had their origin during the war, but even then the fact that such work has been carried on within Chinese dominions without the knowledge of the Chinese Authorities is almost incredible. What may not be happening in Mongolia and Turkestan?

The Chinese Government having explained, as Reuter tells us, that the appointment of high-commissioners of customs is not intended to interfere in any way with existing arrangements, but is only designed to simplify the administration, the incident may be regarded as closed for the present at all events. It appears to us, as we have already stated, that the construction put on the affairs was somewhat exaggerated. Sir Robert Hart himself evidently did not attach so much importance to it or he would have resigned. The Nichi Nichi Shimbun, however, has a telegram from Peking saying that the Foreign Representatives were to hold a meeting at the Italian Legation on the 16th instant to discuss the propriety of concerted action. The United States seems to have worked most loyally with England all through, but the telegram says nothing of Japan's action, though we must assume that it was essentially coöperative, unless—which is very conceivable—Mr. Uchida had convinced himself that the Imperial Decree of the 4th instant was not of the nature generally imagined.

THE MERCANTILE MARINE OF JAPAN.

There have appeared in the Official Gazette some figures relating to the operations of the Japanese mercantile marine during 1904, namely, the first year of the War. We extract the principal points:—

NIPPON YUSEN KAISHA.

During the year commencing in October, 1903, and ending in September 1904, the greater part of this Company's vessels were taken up by the Government for the service of the State. In the following table vessels so engaged are not shown, but steamers chartered temporarily are included:—

	Number of Voyages.	Miles traversed.
Nineteenth year of company's operations.....	1,367	1,881,226
Difference as compared with previous year .....	—531	—1,111,579
	Tons of goods carried.	Number of passengers carried.
Nineteenth year of company's operations.....	1,833,979	290,627
Difference as compared with previous year .....	—747,394	—87,476

The changes in the Company's fleet were 2 ships (totalling 10,607 tons) built in Japan, 5 ships (totalling 19,393 tons) purchased abroad, 2 ships (2,465 tons) wrecked at sea, 1 ship

(1,107 tons) broken up, 8 ships (19,113 tons) sunk for blocking Port Arthur, and 3 ships (13,259 tons) sunk by Russian war-ships. The actual number of vessels owned by the Company at the close of the year was:—

	Ships	Tonnage	Difference compared with previous year.
Under 1,000 tons .....	6	4,574	—
1,000 tons to 3,000 .....	32	—	10
3,000 tons to 6,000 .....	65	683	—19,753
6,000 tons to 10,000 .....	17	—	4
Over 10,000 .....	72	507	—19,985
Total .....	15	—	1
Tonnage .....	93,492	—	6,139
Ships .....	70	—	7
Tonnage .....	236,256	—	5,907

The company had also 38 steam-launches totalling 1,097 tons, store-ships measuring 144 tons, and 223 lighters.

	Osaka Shosen Kaisha.	Miles traversed.
Year 1904 .....	6,976	2,801,324
Differences compared with 1903 .....	752	—369,681
	Tons of Goods carried.	Passengers.
Year 1904 .....	20,026,351	1,679,659
Differences compared with 1903 .....	11,164,894	—218,944

The Company's fleet at the close of the year comprised the following:—

	Under 100 tons.	100 to 500 tons.	Ships.	Tonnage.	Ships.	Tonnage.
Year 1904 .....	2	169	39	10,820	—	—
Differences from 1903 .....	—	—	1	419	—	—
	500 to 1000 tons.	1000 to 3000 tons.	Ships.	Tonnage.	Ships.	Tonnage.
Year 1904 .....	20	13,401	21	38,020	—	—
Differences from 1903 .....	—	—	3,183	—	—	—
	Over 3000 tons.	Total.	Ships.	Tonnage.	Ships.	Tonnage.
Year 1904 .....	2	6,631	84	69,041	—	—
Differences from 1903 .....	—	—	—	—	—	—

The company owned also 26 launches of 740 tons, 4 store-ships (4633 tons), 1 kerosene-boiler ship and 377 barges.

TOYO KISEN KAISHA.

This Company's vessels were almost wholly engaged for the public service. The following returns do not include ships so employed:—

	Voyages.	Miles.	Tons of Goods.	Passengers.
1904 .....	9	81,920	20,962	3,085
Comparisons .....	—66	—213,660	—105,808	—17,642

The Company owned, at the close of the year, 3 steamers of 6,000 tons and over (aggregating 18,646 tons), 1 of over 5,000 tons (5,248 tons), 2 of 3,000 tons and over (7,745 tons), making a total of 6 ships displacing 31,639 tons.

DAITO KISEN KAISHA.

This Company, whose steamers ply to Shanghai, Suchow, Hanchow and Chinkiang, did a tolerably regular business during the year (April 1904 to March 1905), though it suffered somewhat from the war.

	Voyages.	Miles.	Tons of Goods.	Passengers.
1904-5 .....	1,278	314,184	292,935	266,348
Comparisons .....	—53	—1,5414	—5,405	—16,932

The Company owned at the end of the year 11 vessels aggregating 474 tons, and 12 tugs aggregating 274 tons.

OYA SHOSHEN KAISHA.

This Company ceased its coastwise voyages in the Sea of Japan during the war.

HUNAN KISEN KAISHA.

This company opened its Hunan service in March 1904. Consequently no comparisons with previous years are possible. On the whole its business was fairly good.

	Year of 11 months ended Jan.	Voyages.	Miles.	Tons of goods.	Passengers.
1905 .....	60	28,480	229,295	18,640	—

At the close of the year the Company owned 6 steamer aggregating 3,131 tons.

THE "KOJUNSHA."

This, one of the oldest consultative societies in Japan,—it was founded by the late Mr. Fukuzawa—held its 27th meeting in the Sanyen-tei, Shiba Park, on the 14th instant. The object of the meeting was to pay a tribute to the non-combatant officials who had been intimately connected with the war, the idea being that public ovations to military and naval men alone left unfulfilled a part of the country's duty. Marquis Ito and Viscount Hayashi were the principal guests. Marquis Ito delivered a short speech, highly eulogising the services of Viscount Hayashi, and dwelling upon the onerous and often momentous duties that fall to the share of non-combatant officials. Speaking of Korea, his Excellency said that the time had not yet come to make any explicit statement of results, but he intended to spare no effort in carrying out the programme which circumstances showed to be best for Korea and for Japan. Viscount Hayashi deprecated the praise bestowed on him and declared that he did not in any sense deserve it. In old-fashioned days when means of communication were defective, when letters had to be carried by hand from place to place and no other means of conveying intelligence existed, a country's representatives and high officials were often called on to exercise and obey their own judgment at critical moments. But now they had the telegraph and the mail-steamer. A diplomat had thus become merely a superior kind of telegraphic operator. He could not claim any kind of credit for the work he did, and if he had the honour to be spoken of by the press, it was simply because of the position he occupied. He himself had been Marquis Ito's pupil from the outset of his career, and if the Marquis now had the kindness to applaud his humble services, the reason must be simply that the great statesmen desired to enlist public confidence for his successors.

THE P. OPOSED MANCHURIAN EXHIBITION.

It will be remembered that the merchants of Tokyo, Osaka, Kyoto, Nagoya, Yokohama and Kobe conceived some time ago the project of opening an exhibition of Japanese products and manufactures in Mukden. The scheme obtained the approval of the last Cabinet and was warmly supported by Baron Kioura, Minister of Agriculture and Commerce. The head of the civil administration in Liaotung also promised assistance to the extent of 50,000 yen. When the present Cabinet came into power, it was understood to be in favour of the enterprise and preparations were pushed vigorously. But there has intervened a change of official sentiment. We read in the Jiji Shimpō and the Nichi Nichi Shimbun that not only has the Government declared its inability to give any financial aid, but also that it declines to further the project for the present. The explanation seem to be furnished by local conditions. It is connected with the opening of Manchuria, but this part of the affair is difficult to understand clearly. One fact emerges distinctly enough, namely, that the Chinese Governor-General of Manchuria has withdrawn his consent—we are not sure that he ever gave it—and thus the enterprise, if pursued, would have to be carried out solely under Consular auspices. Probably the Japanese Government sees that the arrangement of the new settlement at Mukden and the business of establishing the Consulate can not be in a sufficiently advanced state to permit of the exhibition being opened on the originally projected date, namely, August 1st. At any rate the project has to be abandoned, and it is said that much discontent has been caused among the merchants and manufacturers who had already carried their preparations to an advanced stage.

KOREA.

It is stated that there is an intention of converting Ching-hai Bay into a naval station. The much-talked-of port of Masampho is in this bay. Russia made her bid for Masampho in the year preceding the war, but M. Pavlov did not show his usual astuteness in this instance and the design aborted. Every one has long felt, however, that Masampho must sooner or later become a naval station of the Power dominant in Korea. Its tenure, supplemented by that of Takeshiki in Tsushima, means absolute command of the Straits of Korea.

A telegram from Seoul announces the acquittal—or pardon—of Mr. Chin Sang-heung, who has been for some time in confinement charged with plotting the assassination of five Ministers of State who were concerned in concluding the treaty with Japan. Mr. Chin formerly held the position of Prime Minister. It will be remembered that immediately after the conclusion of the Treaty, Mr. Li Keung-thak, one of the members of the Cabinet, was attacked and severely wounded. Mr. Chin was suspected of complicity in that affair as well as of harbouring a more extensive scheme of murder.

It is stated that a question has arisen between the Residency-General and the Court with reference to the latter's entertainment of Mr. Schiff, the American capitalist. During his visit to Seoul the Court invited Mr. Schiff to a banquet without previously consulting the Residency-General and without inviting any representative of the latter to be present. The acting Resident-General has therefore addressed an official inquiry to the Court, asking for the reasons of that proceeding and requiring a list of those present. The Court will probably reply that the affair was entirely private, but whether this character may be assigned to it can not be known without explanation. It is an open secret that the Korean Court engages in intrigues to remove Korea from Japanese control. The Court sent Mr. Hulbert to America in the interests of that propaganda; it has sent envoys to Europe for the same purpose and it supports a newspaper whose metier is to discredit the Japanese. So long as it plays this double game the Court must expect to be treated with suspicion by the Resident-General.

The rumour is confirmed that Baron Shibusawa and Mr. Asano have planned to supply electricity to Seoul and Pyongyang by water power taken from the Han River. Application for a charter has been duly made. The projectors ask for a thirty years' lease and offer to pay five per cent. of the net profits into the Treasury.

The people of Chemulpho and Yuensan are petitioning to have all duties removed from Korean rice—the export duty in Korea and the import duty in Japan. It is thought probable that they will succeed.

A certain Marquis—we use this form of phraseology because the journal from which we translate does so, though we fail to appreciate the reason for such a display of futile reticence—a certain Marquis, who recently visited Manchuria and Korea, and who has just returned to Japan, made one of the pithy and graceful speeches for which he is famous at a banquet given in his honour by the Japanese residents in Seoul. His Excellency said that visiting the battlefields where the country's brave soldiers had won their triumphs, he had been profoundly impressed not alone with the glory of these conquests but also with the magnitude of the responsibility incurred. He had also seen the post-bellum undertakings carried on by the military authorities and he had appreciated their importance and hopefulness. The great desideratum, he thought, was that the Japanese in Korea, in Manchuria and in Japan should show by their conduct that they were worthy to discharge the difficult functions now devolving on them. There must not be any distinction of "official" and "private" in this matter. All must coöperate with equal zeal. Every Japanese subject, whatever his rank or position, must remember that by his acts he could either contribute to or obstruct the success of his country, and that on him, in his own degree, devolved the duty of assisting to reap the fruits of the great sacrifices made by Japan, the tens of thousands of lives that her gallant soldiers had laid down and the hundreds of millions of treasure that her people had expended. The speech, in short, was an eloquent appeal to the countrymen of the noble Marquis to unite, one and all, for the purpose of promoting Japan's best interests. He did not speak directly of the discreditable conduct of certain Japanese roughs in Korea. These were left to apply his words according to their own intelligence. But the speech can scarcely have failed to warn them that they too have a part to act in shaping their country's future, and that they have hitherto behaved in a manner such as to nullify the fruits of her victories.

The Commission which has just visited Manchuria and Korea consisted of Marquis Saionji, Mr. Wakatsuki (Vice-Minister of Finance), Mr. Yamaza (chief of the Political Bureau in the Foreign Office), Mr. Sakawa (chief of the Agricultural and Commercial Bureau in the Department of Agriculture and Commerce), Mr. Nomura (chief of the Bureau of Communications), Mr. Ichiki (Secretary of the Finance Department) and Mr. Honda (Secretary of the Foreign Department). It is believed that the results of the examinations conducted in loco by this commission will be very important, and will form the basis of estimates to be included in the next budget for the development of Korea and Manchuria. Evidently a pressing question is the gage of the railways. Owing to the necessity of employing their own rolling stock the Japanese had to convert the line from Port Arthur to Tieling into the narrow gage (3 ft. 5 in.) But the Russian trans-Asian system has a gage of 5 ft. 8 in. and the Japanese railways in Korea have a gage of 4 ft. 7 in. How are these differences to be reconciled? Plainly every dictate of expediency points to uniformity. It is out of the question that the Korean 55-inch lines should be extended to Mukden, there to join the Port-Arthur 41 inch roads, while the latter, in turn, link up with the Russian 68-inch tracks at Changchun. There is one assured fact in this welter of confusion, namely, that Russia will not change her gage. It would indeed be extravagant to expect that she should. Taking that into consideration, the simplest device, apparently, would be to alter the Korean gage to 68 inches, and to adopt that size for the reconstructed Liaotung-Changchun road as well as for the projected permanent way from Antung to Mukden. Another thing certain is that a great deal of money will be needed. There is renewed talk of a China-Japanese Bank.

Li Yong-ik was recently reported to be at Vladivostock, where his presence was associated by rumour with various intrigues; but we now suddenly hear of him embarking at Shanghai on the 13th instant for Korea, whither his return is regarded as likely to herald fresh commotion. Rightly or wrongly he is regarded as a kind of stormy petrel, and public opinion is probably more or less justified in so considering him.

Fourteen of the men arrested last February on a charge of being implicated in the attack on Li Keungthak, have been found guilty of conspiring to commit a crime which, however, they did not consummate, and have been sentenced to three years' imprisonment.

Prince Wi-hwa is to receive the title of "Imperial Prince" on his return to Seoul. It is stated that a sum of 20,000 yen has been sent to Tokyo to discharge debts contracted by him during his former residence in that city.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S FUTURE.

What to do with ex-Presidents is always a piquant question in the United States. President Roosevelt, as is well known, will refuse a third nomination and therefore every one is interested to discover what he will turn his hand to after he quits the office of Chief Magistrate. A strenuous man can never rust away in idleness and President Roosevelt is strenuously personified. A little while ago it was suggested that he might become head of the faculty of Harvard when the present venerable and beloved holder of the office retires. But the academic quiet of Harvard, we imagine, would have very little charm for Mr. Roosevelt. And so think most of his friends. Still something must be found for him to do, and the latest idea is to send him to the Senate as the representative of his mother-State, New York. Both of the present Senators from the empire State are more than 70 years of age, and it is generally understood that neither will stand for re-election. Mr. Platt will cease to be a Senator on the same day that Mr. Roosevelt will cease to be President, March 4th, 1909, while Mr. Depew's term will expire on March 4th, 1911. If he were elected to succeed Platt, Mr. Roosevelt could be sworn in as Senator, if he so desired, on the day of his retirement from the Presidency. Upon his accession to the Presidency in 1901, Mr. Roosevelt was the youngest man who had ever occupied that office. If he lives until the expiration of his present term he will be only 50 years old. He will then be thirty-five years younger than the Nestor of the Senate, Pettus of Alabama. John Quincy Adams, it may be remembered, served eight terms in the House of Representatives after he had ceased to be President in 1829. We imagine that between the position of President of Harvard and a Senatorship at Washington, Mr. Roosevelt will not be long in choosing.

In this context the following paragraph in the Manila Cablenews under date of May 2nd is interesting reading:—

A startling disclosure of the plans of the Administration for the coming elections has been made. President Roosevelt will back Mr. Taft for the Presidency. If Mr. Taft is elected Mr. Roosevelt will be Secretary of State. The building of the Panama canal and the management of the Philippines will be under him. They would be taken out of the office of the Secretary of War. Mr. Roosevelt's ambition is to build the canal and to push on the Philippines toward prosperity. Mr. Root will enter the Senate or go back into private life.

The Kawasaki Shipbuilding Co., Kobe, will hold a general meeting on May 30th. The company intends to add six million yen to the present capital of four million yen, making a total of ten million yen.

SAGHALIEN.

Mr. Kumagaya, head of the civil administration of Japanese Saghalien, speaking at a meeting of the Geographical Society on the 12th instant, said that before the war broke out there were about 4,500 Russian subjects living south of the 50th parallel. Among these some 3,000 took their departure last year, and a thousand left the island during the war or were killed in the fighting. Thus there remain now not more than 500, all of whom belong to the convict class. They include Chinese, Turks and Koreans. They will all be sent back to Russia before the close of this year. As for Japanese immigration, 1980 persons (including 348 females) have crossed to the island since last autumn. These people make it their first care to build houses. Three hundred have been already completed. The principal agricultural product of the island is wheat, but the processes followed in growing it belong to the primitive age, doubtless because all those hitherto engaged in agriculture have been convicts, who had no responsibility and were indifferent as to profit or loss. Forty or fifty Japanese farmers are among the recent immigrants. The climate and the vegetation are well suited for rearing horses and cattle, but this particular industry has hitherto waited on the development of agriculture so that everything has been on a small scale, the largest farmer not having more than 30 or 40 head of cattle and horses and the smaller men having only 3 or 4. These settlers at the time of their withdrawal deserted their houses and farm buildings, which have consequently been handed over to the Japanese immigrants. Mr. Kumagaya considers that mining and forestry offer good prospects, but there has not yet been time to make any detailed surveys. The fisheries are at present the principal source of wealth. They represent an income of some three million yen, which can probably be greatly multiplied if methods and appliances are improved. The fish principally taken are salmon, salmon trout and herrings. Chief among the places suitable for towns below the 50th parallel is Korchakoff. Here used to stand the Russian administrative offices and the Japanese consulate, but all were burned down during the war, and there remained only a very few dwellings. Reconstruction work is going on rapidly, however. The second place of urban importance is Vladimirofska, which is some 25 miles to the north inland. This place will be a centre of agricultural enterprise as there are large tracts of level uplands. The third town is Mauka. Here, too, there are wide plains and there is also the great advantage of a harbour virtually free from ice throughout the year. Some 700 Japanese have applied for permission to settle here for agricultural purposes and 200 houses have been built. Rumours were current recently that Vladimirofska would be made the seat of central administration, but according to Mr. Kumagaya Korchakoff will remain the capital and branch offices will be organized at Vladimirofska and Mauka. As to fisheries there are 252, and, under regulations framed by the military authorities, application as to rights of priority were invited to be sent in by last September. These applications numbered 330 and 108 were recognised, while to 33 licenses were granted. Taxes have to be paid by the latter, and the amount annually is 65,973 yen. The competitive tendering for fisheries other than the above brought about a thousand Japanese to the island, and the number of licenses granted was 112, the total price paid being 481,865 yen. Only 60,000 had been expected.

We may add that the Japanese committee for delimiting the Russo-Japanese frontier is said to have been appointed. It consists of Colonel Oshima, Major Watanabe, Mr. Nakashiba, an engineer of the Military Survey Bureau, and Captain Wada of the Navy. It is expected that very great hardships and difficulties will be encountered in tracing the 50th parallel of latitude.

JAPANESE EMIGRANTS.

It is alleged that the Foreign Office will by and by publish revised emigration laws, providing, among other things, that the representatives in Hawaii of the various emigration companies shall all be removed. The reasons assigned for this step are that there does not any longer exist the least embarrassment for an immigrant reaching Hawaii. In the days when very few Japanese had settled there some assistance had to be rendered and some supervision provided by the emigration companies, but that state of affairs has long disappeared. The Japanese residing in the islands aggregate from sixty to seventy thousand, being nearly one half of the total population, and consequently a Japanese subject arriving there finds himself virtually at home, and has no need of special assistance. A second reason assigned is that as the laws of the United States forbid all restraint, protection or special assistance in the case of workmen, the appointment of emigration companies' representatives in Hawaii would create a suspicion of violation of law, and might cause umbrage to the United States Government. It is true that, the emigrants being for the most part illiterate, to leave them entirely independent may seem to some people a perilous course, but any apprehensions on that score are more than outweighed by the considerations enumerated above. Besides—and this is probably the true cause—the emigration companies do not really consult the emigrants' interests but are bent rather upon pursuing their own selfish advantage. Thus the wisest plan apparently is to abolish these mischievous superfluities and to entrust to the Japanese Consul the function of looking after the emigrants.

The Yomiuri Shimbun, publishing the above facts, points out that since the law of Japan forbids the despatch of any emigrants to districts where representatives of an emigration company are not posted, the above measure amounts to depriving the companies of competence to carry on their business. Consternation, our contemporary adds, prevails among the companies. It may well prevail if the Yomiuri's account be correct, but we can not readily believe that the Government would take such a far-reaching step in the arbitrary manner described, and indeed there are grounds for doubting whether the project of the Authorities has not been mis-stated.

The Nichi Nichi explains the Government's policy with regard to Hawaiian emigration. The objects in view, we read, are to reduce the cost of emigration by abolishing fees of all kinds and all payments exacted from emigrants in addition to fees; to obviate an evil now of not infrequent occurrence, namely, the rejection of emigrants on the ground of physical unfitness unascertained previous to their arrival in Hawaii; to improve the hospital arrangements, and to prevent Hawaii from becoming a mere half-way house for the passage of Japanese labourers to the United States. Our contemporary does not show clearly how the Government intends to compass these ends but we gather, at all events, that there is no prime intention of interfering with the operations of emigration companies.

A TERRIBLE SUICIDE.

The case of the youths—five in succession if we remember aright—who perished from the epidemic of hurling themselves over the Kegon waterfall, seems not unlikely to find a still more shocking sequel. Yamada Naokuma, grandchild of the adopted son of Baron Yamada Nobumichi, a distinguished provincial Governor, has just ended his life by throwing himself into the crater of the Aso volcano. Naokuma had studied philosophy under Dr. Inouye Yenryo and had graduated with distinction. But during the course of the year before last his mind seemed to become affected and he was sent to his family home in Kumamoto to rest and recuperate. At the beginning of April he disappeared and nothing was heard of him until his pocket-book, found near the edge of the crater, revealed that he had deliberately made away with himself. It contained a farewell letter from which the following extracts are taken:—"How mistaken are they who say that suicide betrays weakness of will! Whatever be their condition they would preserve life. But the strongest will is his who can go down to a death that makes men shudder even to hear. The cowards to be vehemently denounced are the multitude who dare not die be their circumstances what they may. Alas, it is sad! The world is full of iniquity. Men are the slaves of lust. Their span of life is but 50 years, and with the dust of this fleeting world daily accumulating on them, they hasten to an inscrutable grave. Is society a state of pain, misfortune and sorrow, or is it a happy heaven? How miserable is this world of human beings! Grief and care invade their bosoms; pain and affliction encompass their existence. Where is hope to be found; where may peace be sought? What is glory, what is rank? All around is emptiness and solitude. Wealth avails nothing, and nothing is comprehensible or credible. Society is but a battle-field of sorrow and suffering, and throughout life men are as hungry demons fed on torturing scepticism. Alas for the infinity of it all! The tall mountain-peaks pierce the sky, the broad ocean spreads out its unending azure, but human life is as the dew of morning, as the flash of the lightning. It waxes but to wane; increases but to decline. All are plunged in darkness and know not what to look for. Mercy and benevolence are as the fleeting sentiments of a dream. Why should man torment himself with limitlessly painful thoughts; why should he wander in the paths of contaminating sin? Is it not the most blessed ending of human life to be received into the bosom of pure nature and for ever to quit the dust of existence? Thinking these things I pass into the smoke of Aso's crater."

Aso-san, where this suicide took place, is a volcano that has been active throughout the era of history, though there are evidences that the dimensions of the crater have undergone large diminution. Its latest eruption was in 1894. These cruel incidents bear eloquent testimony to Japan's need of some satisfying religious creed.

THE GERMAN AMBASSADOR.

His Excellency Baron Munim arrived in Tokyo on the 12th at 10.45 a.m. and proceeded at once to the Embassy in Nagatacho where he immediately assumed his duties. His Excellency will present his credentials and then leave Japan, probably at the close of this month or the beginning of June. His return to Japan is expected to take place next January.

The Nichi Nichi Shimbun publishes an article with reference to the arrival of the new Ambassador. His Excellency, says our contemporary, has been in China ever since the Boxer revolt and is thoroughly well versed in Far-Eastern affairs. It may be said that Germany is the tertius gaudens in the sequel of the Russo-Japanese war, for that conflict has greatly weakened the ally of her nominal enemy. She is supposed to have suffered a measure of diplomatic defeat at Algeiras, but the truth is that she demonstrated her great influence in Europe, for it was due solely to her interference that a consultation of the Powers took place to settle the Morocco question. Again, the attitude of Russia towards the Anglo-Turkish complication is regarded as foreshadowing an entente between London and St. Petersburg on the same lines as the Franco-British understanding, in which case Germany would be comparatively alone in Europe, unless, as seems now in contemplation, the Kaiser manages to re-knit the bonds between his Empire and Austria. Still, if Germany be isolated, the epithet "splendid" will be applicable to her isolation quite as much as it was to England's in former times, and altogether her position may be said to have been improved by the recent war. On the other hand, there is no denying that her Far-Eastern policy has not been free from errors, and the Nichi Nichi hopes that under Baron Munim's management a better record will be achieved.

A TOKYO RACE CLUB.

It appears that there exists in Tokyo a Race Club, calling itself the Kwan-hasshu Keiba-kai (race club of the eight provinces of Kwanto). We are not aware whether its organization is of recent date or whether it is a relict of the club existing many years ago, but at all events it announces that a race meeting will be held on the well-known Shinobazu course near Ueno on the 19th, 20th and 21st instant. Horses intending to compete must be entered by the 16th instant at latest. The idea is to encourage the breeding of good serviceable cattle, not of race-horses, and consequently farmers are invited to enter anything they possess in the shape of superior horse-flesh. It is stated that numerous entries have already been made from the prefectures of Tokyo, Saitama, Ibaraki, Gumma and Chiba. The following rules have been issued:—

- 1.—The course being 1,604 yards in length, there will be three kinds of races, namely, three-quarters round, once round and once and a half round.
- 2.—There will be no entrance fees and prizes of not less than 10 yen and not more than 100 yen will be given.
- 3.—Owners of horses entered will be allowed to stable them without expense at places indicated by the Race Club, but the cost of fodder must be defrayed by the owners themselves.
- 4.—Horses entered must be examined by the Club's veterinary surgeons, and only those that have received a certificate of fitness will be allowed to compete.
- 5.—Owners will each choose their own riders and must send in their names. But this does not apply to owners who have no riders.

6.—In the case of owners who are without riders the club will select riders by lot.

This institution has become an accomplished fact. The inaugural meeting was held in the Nobles Club on the 16th instant. Lt.-General Okura and Major Masuda spoke in the strongest possible terms of the imperative necessity of improving the breed of Japanese horses. The Lieut.-General, indeed, frankly declared that there was no denying the verdict of a certain foreigner who called Japanese ponies wild animals not horses, and Major Masuda, in language as explicit as was permissible, told his hearers that the inferiority of its cattle had seriously handicapped the Japanese Army in the recent war. Viscount Kano said that since 1902 he had entertained the project of a race club and had three times prospected for a good site for a course. Finally he had found an excellent position between Ikegami and Kamada. There a course one mile long with a width of 40 yards could easily be obtained by draining and filling. He went on to say that the club had 177 supporters, and that the sum of 100,000 yen which it had been originally proposed to raise, was now exceeded by 20,000, so that further subscriptions would be declined. The club is to be called the "Tokyo Keiba-kai." Thirty Australian horses have already been ordered, and it is proposed to hold the first races in November. Arrangements have been made for the closest cooperation with the Yokohama Race Club. The managing committee is to consist of 10 Japanese, namely, Mr. Ozaki Yukio, Viscount Kano, Mr. Yasuda Zenyemon, Mr. Yamagata Yuzaburo, Viscount Matsudaira (Y.), Mr. Ezoye Renzo, Mr. Kimura Riyemon, Mr. Mori Kenkichi, Baron Senge, and Mr. Ishii Sentaro, with four foreigners, namely, Mr. Blad, Mr. Davis, Mr. Isaacs and Mr. Runge.

COMMANDER VOLPICELLI.

Among the many visitors from South China now taking holiday in Japan is Commander Volpicelli, Italian Consul-General in Hongkong, who has identified himself in a marked degree with two recent movements of the widest human interest.

The first of these was initiated little more than a year ago, the first meeting being held in Hongkong under the auspices of H.R.H. the Duke the Abruzzi, and has for its object the abolition of judicial torture in China. A meeting of the Committee appointed to forward the aims of those interested in this reform was held on April 24th in Hongkong when Com. Volpicelli gave a sketch in the course of which he pointed out that important legislative measures had been taken by the Imperial Government of China, in abolishing the repulsive form of capital punishment known as ling chi'ih, while it had taken an important step towards the complete abolition of torture by limiting its use. He suggested the writing of another letter to H. E. Wu Ting-fang (one was written in June last to which a reply was received expressing an opinion in favour of abolishing torture in all cases) calling his attention to the practical difficulties to be met in the sudden abolition of torture and suggesting as a practical remedy the relieving of the present officials from their judicial duties, which should instead devolve on a special class appointed for the purpose, and whose independence from all political or other pressure should be properly guaranteed.

It was agreed that the letter referred to should be sent.

Com. Volpicelli has also interested himself deeply in the matter of submarine warfare, upon which, by reason of his early training, he is well qualified to form opinions. It is interesting to note that on the 27th March, 1906, in answer to two Deputies of the Italian Chamber, Prince Di Scalea, Vice-Minister for Foreign Affairs, declared that he was studying the question of submarine warfare with a view to an international agreement for the prohibition of mechanical mines. The Minister's views were based upon the report of the Italian Consul-General at Hongkong, and if they met with the approval of the Ministers of War and Marine, the question would be included in the programme of the Second Hague Conference. We had already learned from our Hongkong exchanges that Com. Volpicelli was engaged on this subject and that he had received valuable information from the Chinese and Japanese authorities. It may be added that he is desirous to receive any information or suggestions from seafaring people upon the subject of submarine mines, and if any such are addressed to this office we shall be most happy to forward them.

THE TOYO KISEN KAISHA.

A curious story is going the rounds of the Tokyo press. Its gist is this:—The S.S. Company called the Toyo Kisen Kaisha, whose vessels ply between Japan and San Francisco, desired some time ago to purchase the five steamers of the Pacific Mail Company which ply on the same route, but the negotiations did not mature owing to the high price demanded by the latter company. Subsequently Mr. Harriman came upon the scene and offered to sell the steamers, whereupon the directors of the Toyo Kisen Kaisha took steps preliminary to raising a loan of 20 million yen in London and also sent Mr. Shiraishi to the States to discuss details. But in the meanwhile American newspapers learned of the project and wrote a number of articles vehemently denouncing it as opposed to the interests of the nation. Mr. Harriman, therefore, instead of concluding the deal, made application to Congress for a subsidy, on the ground that his ships could not possibly compete with those of two Companies which are in receipt of substantial State aid, as are the Toyo Kisen Kaisha and the Norddeutscher Lloyd. He declared that unless a subsidy were granted he would sell the steamers in his possession, and since nothing could be done pending the decision of Congress, Mr. Shiraishi went on to London where he had other business to transact. Thereafter Congress apparently refused the subsidy, for Mr. Harriman again opened negotiations with the Toyo Kisen Kaisha, and Mr. Shiraishi again crossed to America. But now the San Francisco earthquake having occurred, the transaction had to be suspended. It is suggested that the offer to sell to the Japanese company may have been simply a manoeuvre for influencing public opinion in the States. Such is the story in brief. We can neither confirm nor deny it, but two remarks are obvious. One is that the Toyo Kisen Kaisha can scarcely have required 20 million yen to purchase 5 steamers of the kind now plying between Yokohama and San Francisco; the other that if Mr. Shiraishi approached London financiers he must have learned that the laws of Japan as at present framed do not permit the hypothecation of steamers as security for a debt.

THE NOGUCHI MURDER CASE.

The afternoon of the 16th instant resembled days of the war. Once again the streets of Tokyo echoed the sounds of the extravaganza's bell. The Asahi Shimbun stole a march on its contemporaries by circulating a sheet whereon was set forth in double-leaded type the result of the Noguchi trial. It was a disappointing result to many of the citizens. They had long been convinced that Noguchi Osaburo was the murderer of his brother-in-law, the poet Noguchi Neisai, of the little boy Kawai Sosuke who met his death under circumstances of special brutality, and of the apothecary Tsutsuki Tomigoro. He confessed to all these deeds. But the Court, after a session of 16 days, refused to accept his confession as to the assassination of the poet and of the little boy. In the first place, it could not be clearly proved that Noguchi Neisai had met his death by violence of any kind, and in the second place the confession of the accused betrayed some radical contradictions which rendered it unworthy of credence. The judges therefore acquitted him of murdering Neisai and Kawai, but convicted him of strangling the apothecary Tsutsuki, and he was accordingly sentenced to death. In delivering judgment the presiding judge said:—"This judgment is contrary to the confessions of the accused and to the contention of the Public Prosecutor. At all events you are sentenced to the death penalty. You have therefore to consult your conscience, and to reveal any facts that may still be hidden, so that your end may be manly." This adjuration seemed to affect the accused momentarily but he quickly recovered the calm demeanour he had maintained throughout. Perhaps the most curious feature of the trial was the display of contrition he made with reference to the murder of the apothecary. It transpired that the latter occupied a special place in the affections of parents who had suffered much on account of their other sons, and Osaburo professed to be profoundly moved by the discovery that he had deprived the murdered man's family of their last prop and comfort. He told the judges that if they did not sentence him to death for this particular crime, he should not be able to rest peacefully in his grave. Apparently his purpose was to prove himself morally incapable of perpetrating a murderous deed unless the consequences seemed to justify it.

THE S NYO RAILWAY.

The Sanyo Railway Company's report for the semi-annual period ended 31st March, 1906, shows the following main figures:—

	Yen.
Gross Earnings .....	3,511,730
Working Expenses.....	1,613,394
Net Earnings for half-year .....	1,898,336
Net profits of ferry service .....	4,696
Total Net Earnings .....	1,903,032
Less Sundry Expenses (as per special account) .....	374,624
Net Profit.....	1,528,408
Balance from previous half-year .....	961,241
Available for distribution .....	2,489,649
This last figure was disposed of as follows:—	Yen.
To Reserve .....	76,500
To Dividend (8 per cent. per annum).....	1,234,000
To Special Dividend (2 per cent. per annum).....	308,500
Bonus .....	13,500
Carried forward to next term .....	857,149
	2,489,649

The increase in the gross earnings during the half-year was yen 246,100, as compared with the previous term, but there was also an increase of yen 455,999 in the working expenses. This increase of working expenses is not explained in the report before us. The Company has now 367 miles of road open to traffic. It has spent 29,916,765 yen on construction, being an average of 73,679 yen per mile. It owns 142 locomotives, 526 carriages and 1,905 waggons, the total cost of which has been 6,346,196 yen.

NOTES ON CURRENT EVENTS.

It is stated that there is a great want of Japanese labour in Hawaii owing to the fact that many of the Japanese immigrants have found their way to the United States. The planters some time ago approached Mr. Sato, Japanese Consul at Honolulu, and urged that, in view of the heavy losses threatening them and the steady diminution of their production of sugar, the Japanese Government should be asked to remove all restrictions upon emigration to Hawaii. On receiving Mr. Sato's reports the Foreign Office summoned him to Tokyo to give explanations in person, and the result is that it has been practically decided to accede to the wishes of the planters. The latter offer to pay one half (30 yen) of each emigrant's passage is Hawaii and to engage the men as labourers without any contract. The Hochi Shimbun alleges that an emigration bureau is to be established by the Immigration Company of Hawaii, and that special facilities will be given to it by the Foreign Office, which arrangement our contemporary condemns on the ground that it will ruin the Japanese Emigration Companies. These have not always been above reproach, but some of them have carried on their business conscientiously and circumpectly, and it is hard that they should now be exposed to semi-official competition.

It will interest the friends of the late Mr. W. E. Cargill to hear, on the authority of a Kobe newspaper, that he was a "foreign engineer," and that the new railway enterprise in Japan in 1871 was conducted with his assistance. We had the pleasure of Mr. Cargill's personal acquaintance throughout the whole of his sojourn in Japan, but we never imagined that he was acting as a civil engineer. The fact is that the Oriental Bank, which undertook the financing of the Japanese loan—the loan contracted for the purpose of building the railway from Tokyo to Yokohama,—stipulated that Mr. Cargill should be employed by the Japanese in the capacity of financial adviser. Mr. Cargill had been one of the original promoters of the Bank and had sat for many years on the directorate, but circumstances which we need not explain made the Japanese appointment agreeable to him. The advising engineer was Mr. Morell, who died in Yokohama of pneumonia before the opening of the railway. All this chapter of Japan's modern history ought to be too well known to permit mistakes like that recorded above.

Nothing has been publicly heard of Captain Gunji since his return from imprisonment in Kamchatka. We now read that he left Shinagawa with two vessels belonging to the Hokogi-kai, on the 10th instant, his immediate purpose being to visit Shimushu and thence to proceed to Kamchatka with the object of ascertaining the fate of two of his comrades who are supposed to have been killed by Russians, as well as of eighteen others who, with four boats, proceeded to the coast of Kamchatka to fish, and have not since been heard of. It appears that ten Japanese remained at Shimushu when the main body of the settlers withdrew during the Russian war. Captain Gunji believes that if the Portsmouth Treaty be carried out in the matter of Japanese fishing privileges in the northern seas, Shimushu will become a main base of operations, and that its future prosperity is assured. We sincerely hope so. The enterprise and stubborn pertinacity shown by Captain Gunji and his comrades deserve success. We well remember the day, ten years ago, when Lieutenant Gunji—as was then his rank—and his fellow-adventurers started from the Sumida river in five boats to make the voyage northward, and we remember too that the enthusiastic send-off given to him by the citizens of Tokyo provoked some ridicule among foreign on-lookers. Japanese character was more misunderstood in those times than it is at present.

The copyright convention between Japan and the United States has now been ratified and promulgated. It is very short document but very comprehensive. Translations are permitted without obstacle but reproductions are effectually interdicted. The loss to Japan will be very considerable for there is in this country a very large republication of American educational works. Of course the new veto does not apply to books re-produced prior to its promulgation. These may continue in circulation and new editions of them may be printed. There has been some delay about the ratification of the Convention but we presume that some inevitable cause was at work.

We learn that Mr. and Mrs. Huntington Wilson will leave Japan on the 29th instant by the steamer Siberia. This date is somewhat earlier than the original forecast, but is stated that Mr. Wilson has been telegraphically requested to take up the duties of his new post as soon as possible after the arrival of the new American Ambassador in Tokyo.

Mr. Motono, Japanese Minister at St. Petersburg, wired on May 10th to the Foreign Office that the Tsar had consented to the application of Count Lamsdorff, Russian Minister for Foreign Affairs, for permission to resign. No successor has yet been appointed.

The telegrams are positive in asserting that M. Iswolsky has been appointed to succeed Count Lamsdorff as Minister of War in Russia. It is expected that this appointment will materially tend to draw Japan and Russia together. During his comparatively short stay in Tokyo M. Iswolsky's very exceptional abilities were fully recognised, and his liberal policy won universal approval. His transfer to St. Petersburg has long been talked of, and the Japanese will heartily welcome the accomplished fact. We recall, however, that M. Iswolsky strongly condemned the Anglo-Japanese alliance and predicted that war would be its outcome. The alliance, however, is now too solid to be disturbed, and M. Iswolsky is too wise to meddle with accomplished facts.

Recently a question was publicly asked as to whether skill in playing the game of bridge might be taken as indicating the possession of a special degree of general intelligence. The answers differed widely, as might have been expected, but it does not seem to have occurred to either the questioner or the repliers that the proposition can be stated in a form which dispenses with any need for profound analysis: namely, whether the possession of a special degree of general intelligence is necessarily accompanied by skill in playing bridge. Evidently the answer must be negative. We all know several, perhaps many, men who, while undoubtedly gifted with brain power far above the average, belong to a rank of bridge-players far below the average. It may be retorted that these good people have no taste for the game and that they could soon become proficient if they devoted attention to the matter. Precisely. That is just the point: "No taste for the game." Does not this plainly imply that something more than good brains, or, at any rate, something different, is needed for bridge? It must also be within the experience of us all that certain shining wax-lights at the bridge table are very dull "dips" in every-day life, an experience which confirms the conclusion suggested by the other line of thought.

News comes that the Handa mountain in Fukushima Prefecture, which has been worked for silver since ancient times, recently showed signs of renewed volcanic activity and there is much alarm among the inhabitants in its neighbourhood, especially those on the eastern face where the rumblings are heard most loudly. It is to be hoped that another Bandaizan catastrophe is not about to take place.

We read in all the Tokyo journals that the steamer Okinawa Maru has been for some time laying a submarine cable from the Riukiu Islands to Hachijo-jima. Her operations have been much interrupted by stormy weather but it is expected that the work will be completed by July. This cable, is to be joined to the American Transpacific telegraph, presumably at Guam, though nothing is said as to that point. With regard to the interval between Hachijo-jima and Japan, there is already a military cable laid down by the Japanese during the war. It will not suffice, of course, as a permanent line, but the intention is to use it at present and to relay it when a favourable opportunity offers.

The following list is published of ships soon to be added to the Japanese Navy:—

- Battle-ship Aki, 18,000 tons, building at Kure and to be launched next year.
- Battle-ship Satsuma, 18,000 tons, building at Yokosuka and to be launched in October.
- First-class armoured cruiser Tsukuba (14,000), built at Kure and already launched.
- First-class armoured cruiser Ikoma (14,000), built at Kure and already launched.
- First-class armoured cruiser Kurama (14,000), building at Yokosuka, and to be launched in August.
- First-class armoured cruiser Ibuki (14,000), building at Kure and to be launched in the summer of 1907.
- Cruiser Nagami (2,300), building at the Mitsu Bishi Docks and to be launched in July.
- Cruiser Yodo (2,500), building at the Kawasaki Docks and to be launched in July.
- Cruiser Tone (2,300), building at Saseho and to be launched this autumn.

To this list have to be added the battle-ships Katori and Kashima which have already been handed over to the Japanese. The result is that an addition of about 140,000 tons will be made to the Japanese Navy, which will then represent 430,000 tons in round numbers.

Mr. Kono Hironaka and his friends organized a ceremonial in Hibiya Park on the 13th instant in memory of the citizens killed and wounded during the riots of last September and by way of congratulation for their own acquittal. In spite of deluges of rain there was a considerable attendance. The police were conspicuous by their absence.

There died at Princeton, Ill., on March 16th, the Rev. H. V. Warren, who was born at Croton, Mass., on Feb. 16, 1827. At 17, this gentleman enlisted in the United States Navy and he accompanied the squadron of Commodore Biddle, U.S.N., which visited Yedo Bay in 1845. Mr. Warren is survived by his brother, Capt. Benjamin Warren, of George, Ga., who was also on the U.S. ship-of-the-line Columbus in Yedo Bay in 1845.

Mr. Schiff gave a banquet on the 14th instant at the Imperial Hotel to about 60 of the leading Japanese statesmen and men of business and to several prominent American citizens. Among the Japanese guests were Count Inouye, Count and Countess Matsukata, Mr. and Mrs. Sakatani, Baron Komura, Baron Kaneko, Marquis and Marchioness Nabeshima, Baron and Baroness Mitsui, Baron and Baroness Shibusawa, Mr. and Mrs. Okura, Marchioness Oyama, &c. Mr. Schiff spoke briefly. The gist of his speech was laudatory of Japan. Count Matsukata replied on the part of the guests, thanking Mr. Schiff for his exertions connected with Japan's foreign loans, but he deprecated the praise bestowed by the American capitalist on Japan who had very much to accomplish before she deserved such applause.

Various rumours are circulated about changes of high officials. Thus it is stated that Mr. Uchida, on his return from Peking, will be appointed Vice-Minister of Foreign Affairs and that he will be succeeded in Peking by Mr. Hayashi (G.), formerly Japan's Representative in Seoul. Baron Komura is expected to go to England as Ambassador and Mr. Chinda to the United States in the same capacity. Mr. Heki is spoken of as Mr. Inagaki's successor at the Siamese Court.

The Civil Service Estimates of Great Britain show two noteworthy facts. One is that the pay of the Ambassador in Tokyo has been fixed at £5,000 annually, and that the pay of the Japanese Secretary of the Embassy is £1,000. As to the former, the figure looks not unreasonable at first sight, since it shows that a thousand pounds has been added to the salary in consequence of changing the Legation to an Embassy. It is a sufficiently meagre addition but that is not what we find remarkable. The point is that by this increase the pay of the Ambassador to Japan has been placed on a level with that of the Minister to China. It thus appears that in the estimation of the British Government an Ambassador in Japan should rank financially with a Minister in China. That is a curious estimate. One would have been disposed to expect that the Japan of 1906 might bulk somewhat larger than China in the eyes of the British Government. Turning to the Japanese Secretary a still more remarkable fact is observable. He gets a thousand a year, whereas the Chinese Secretary in the Peking Legation gets twelve hundred. Do the gentlemen responsible for these estimates labour under the hallucination that the Japanese language is easier to acquire than the Chinese, and that the duties of a Japanese Secretary of Embassy in Tokyo are less onerous than the duties of a Chinese Secretary of Legation in Peking?

It would seem so, though in truth there ought to be a clearer atmosphere of knowledge by this time in Downing Street.

The Nippon Club entertained Viscount Hayashi on the 15th instant. Baron Kikuchi occupied the chair, with Marquis Hachisuka on his left and Mr. Kato Takaki for vis-avis. In proposing Viscount Hayashi's health the Baron recalled the fact that they had made the voyage to England together 40 years previously as students. Since that time Viscount Hayashi had distinguished himself highly, and his country was at once proud of him and grateful to him. Viscount Hayashi, in replying, said that the party of students referred to by the Baron had numbered 14, the oldest being the late Professor Toyama and the youngest Baron Kikuchi, who, though only twelve years of age, at the time, was the best scholar of all. Out of those 14 students only 4 now survived and 2 of them were present this evening. Baron Kikuchi had been kind enough to allude in very flattering terms to his (the Viscount's) services, but he could not for a moment accept such praise as merited. Whatever had been accomplished was the work of the officials in Tokyo. Sitting opposite to him was Mr. Kato, who had contributed far more than he himself to the Anglo-Japanese Alliance, and who might even be called the parent of the alliance. It was to Mr. Kato that the credit belonged and if they persisted in giving any share of it to him (Viscount Hayashi) he must simply listen in silence.

New York received its first intelligence regarding the great earthquake by means of the following telegram sent by an official of the Postal Telegraph Company:—

There was an earthquake hit us at 5.15 this morning, wrecking several buildings and wrecking our offices. They are caring dead from the fallen buildings. Fire all over town. There is no water and we lost our power. I'm going to get out of this office, as we have had a little shake every few minutes, and it's me for the simple life.

(Signed) R., San Francisco, 5.50 a.m.

Mr. "R" evidently got out, for there was nothing doing for a brief interval after that. The operator at the New York end pounded at his key, but San Francisco was silent. The Postal people were wondering if it was all the dream of some crazy operator or a calamity when the wire woke up again. It was Superintendent Lorer of the San Francisco force this time. "We're on the job and are going to try and stick," was the way his message began and then followed details of the catastrophe.

When questioned as to the probable cause of the San Francisco earthquake, Professor Milne told a London journalist that the first inquiry ought to be addressed to astronomers, because it was believed by some scientists that earthquakes are largely caused by the earth failing to swing perfectly true on its axis.

The Chuo Shimbun asserts with every semblance of assurance that Japan's estimate of the expenses incurred by her in maintaining the Russian prisoners is 80 millions of yen, and that Russia's estimate of the expenses similarly incurred on her side is 4 millions. Consequently Japan will receive 76 millions, and the money will be handed over in London. It is a little difficult to credit this. Assuming that the Russian prisoners numbered seventy thousand and that they were maintained for a period of 15 months on the average—both hypotheses being distinctly liberal—the sum of 80 million of yen would mean that the cost of supporting each man averaged 74 yen per month, approximately. It is not apparent, however, how any such expense can have been needed. Half of the money will probably be found nearer to the truth.

The Evening Sun, commenting on Viscount Aoki's appointment as Japanese Ambassador in Washington, says:—"As we opened Japan, so it is fitting that Washington should be regarded by the Japanese as the most important foreign capital, even though Great Britain is the actual ally of Japan. For it is at our seat of government that the disputes of the Far East may be best settled, away from the jealousies, the cabals and the intrigues of the European Diplomatic centres." That, in our judgment, is a typical specimen of the vapid paragraph. It sounds fine but in sense it lacks badly. How are the disputes of the Far East to be settled in Washington? Is the President of the United States to assume the functions of a perpetual mediator, and is the Hague Tribunal to be removed to the American city?

One outcome of the great revival campaign in Philadelphia has been the employment of the telephone for proselytizing purposes. A certain young lady, who had intended to spend the evening at a dance, had her telephone switched on to a revival meeting, and instead of carrying out her profane purpose, she stayed at home listening to the sounds of the service, with the result that she "went to the armory and gave her heart to God." Another young person, an operator at a telephone exchange, received the "gospel message" over the wires and found it a "lasting blessing." It is difficult not to be revolted by these statements. There seems to be something shockingly incongruous in the use of a telephone to preach Christianity. Yet, why not?

DEDICATION OF THE CHURCH OF THE SACRED HEART.

The ceremony of dedicating and blessing the new Roman Catholic Church which has been in process of erection for some months on the fine compound No. 44, Bluff, Yokohama, took place on Sunday fore noon. The weather was unfortunately stormy, and thus prevented some portion of the arranged ceremony from being carried out; but these same perverse climatic conditions kept the attendance within the limits of the seating accommodation, though a large company of residents were present over and above the congregation proper. The officiating priest was Mgr. P. X. Mugabure, Coadjutor to the Archbishop of Tokyo, Mgr. Osof, who was prevented by health considerations from attending, and he was assisted by various clergy in the capacities of assistant priest (Rev. Father F. Iemaréchal), deacon (Rev. Father P. Rey), sub-deacon (Rev. Father J. Dauner) and master of ceremonies (Rev. Father P. Mayrand). The Bishop began the ceremony by leaving the sacristy preceded by the bearer of the cross, the acolytes and the clergy, some thirty in all, and proceeding to the main entrance. He said a short prayer and the anthem "Thou shalt sprinkle me with hyssop" was sung. The clergy next recited the 50th Psalm "Have mercy upon me," the Bishop sprinkling the external walls with holy water. Another prayer was said and the procession entered the Church, and as it proceeded to the altar the litany of All Saints was sung by the Bishop and his assistants. The choir then sang the anthem "Bless O Lord this house which has been built to thy name" and the three Psalms "In my trouble I cried to the Lord" (Ps. 119), "I have lifted up my eyes to the mountains" (Ps. 120), and "I rejoiced at the things that were said to me," (Ps. 121) during which the Bishop passed around the inside of the edifice sprinkling the walls. Having blessed the whole Church he dedicated the organ and the Mass began.

The Mass selected for celebration was Gounod's Meise Solennelle (1855) a somewhat ambitious work, we must confess, for so small a choir. The broad and imposing harmonies with which the Mass abounds failed to stand out in all their rugged beauty, this on account of the choir being somewhat unevenly balanced. In our opinion a few more voices added to the ranks of the alti, tenori and bassi would have considerably enhanced the beauty of this fine work of Gounod's. Nevertheless, to their credit be it said, the members of the choir attacked the somewhat difficult music with an entire absence of fear—the choruses were sung with plenty of spirit and enthusiasm—their work being faithfully and well done. The soloists were Miss Mendelson, Mr. Cooper and Mr. Somerton, and to comment on their good work is needless. Their voices blended most sympathetically in the various trios which abound in the Mass, while the solo numbers were rendered in a manner which can only call forth praise. Rev. Father Papinot, who was at the organ during the first part of the ceremony; conducted the Mass, whilst Mr. W. Karl Vincent acted as its organist and musical director.

The new organ which is situated just above the main entrance to the Church was built by Mons. J. Abbley of Versailles (France). The slight damages sustained by the instrument on its outward journey were ably rectified by Mr. C. Thwaites, to whom also fell the task of erecting it in its new home. The instrument, though not in size and power so large as those in Christ Church or Union Church, is admirably suited to the requirements of the sacred edifice which it adorns. An excellent feature is that the organist sits at a console with his back to the instrument; he thus can see the progress of the service, his position giving him besides a certain command over his choir. The organ has two manuals and contains a few very sweet sounding, stops admirably adapted for accompanying purposes. The tone of the flue-work is excellent, but in our estimation the reeds are slightly over-powering, so much so that in a full crescendo, there is a decided want of a solid foundation-tone. This may improve as soon as the instrument settles down. During the Offertory the Organist extemporized for a few minutes, thus availing himself of an excellent opportunity of exhibiting a few effective stop-combinations of the new instrument. The specification is as follows:—

CREAT ORGAN. (Compass CC. to A" 56 Notes).

Bourdon .....	16
Bourdon .....	8
Montre .....	8
Flute Harmonique .....	8
Prest int .....	4

SWELL ORGAN. (Compass CC. to A" 56 Notes).

Trumpet .....	8
Cor de Nuit .....	8
Viole de Gamba .....	8
Voix Celeste .....	8
Flute Octave .....	4
Octavin .....	2

PEDAL ORGAN. CCC. to F. 30 Notes.

Soubasse .....	16
Basse .....	8

COUPLERS.

Swell to Great.
Swell to Pedal.
Great to Pedal.

ACCESSORIES.

Tremulant.
One composition pedal to Swell.

The clergy and congregation of the Church of the Sacred Heart are to be heartily congratulated on having at last obtained an instrument worthy of its name. The musical service as rendered yesterday was thoroughly enjoyed by those who were present, and we trust it will not be long before the congregation will have the pleasure of hearing some of the fine Masses written by Haydn, Mozart, Schubert, etc. etc.

The Church of the Sacred Heart, of which that dedicated on Sunday is the successor, was built at No. 80 Settlement in 1862 by Father Gerard, the first missionary to modern Japan, where he had arrived in 1858. At first it was somewhat in the form of a large Japanese house, but frequent alterations were made as the years went past. Its earlier style of facade was Greek, but some 28 years ago this was transformed into Gothic. Other important changes were made in 1875, and at length when it was resolved to move to the Bluff where most of the congregation live, it was found that much of the material employed in the old building could be utilized for the new edifice, the wood which was all keyaki, being in a fine state of preservation. The necessary structural changes were made by Pere Papinot, and he is to be congratulated on the beauty of the Church as now completed. During its long existence the incumbency of the church has been held by three priests in succession, Father Gerard, Father Marin, and Father Pettier. The latter, coming out to Japan in 1868, spent some 13 months with Father Marin, was then sent to Hakodate and in 1872 was called to the office that he has since filled with such acceptance to the people. The new church, which is of brick, occupies the front part of No. 44, and fronts the Bluff main road, being this a prominent object in the configuration of the Bluff as viewed from the former settlement, the native city, or the adjoining country. It is in style Gothic of the 13th century and the front is flanked by two stone and brick towers 89 feet in height and of three stories, having octagonal steeples, each with four small turrets. Between the towers a central rose window lights the organ loft. Under the left tower within the church a place is reserved for the baptismal font. The inside length of the new structure is 108 feet and it is 42 feet wide; the central nave is 18 feet wide and the side aisles 12 feet. The height of the central nave is 34 feet and of the side aisles 15 feet. There is a chapel on each side of the sacred edifice, one of the Blessed Virgin and the other of St. Joseph. The Church is admirably lighted, the sanctuary having no fewer than seven stained glass windows, that in the centre representing the Saviour on the Cross. The building is very strongly constructed the framing consisting of strong beams securely bolted together. Its acoustic qualities are admirable. The electric light has been installed throughout. It might be mentioned that the Catholic Fathers connected with the Mission have their home in the same compound, using the commodious residence for long the home of the late Mr. Witkowski.

YOKOHAMA UNION CHURCH.

The May meeting of the Yokohama Union Church was held at Van Schaick Hall on Monday evening, the Rev. H. Loomis presiding over a fair attendance.

Mr. L. Pollard reported on behalf of the Church Building Committee that roughly they had yen 1,000 more to raise before the price of the land, yen 13,000, was paid. His report was accepted.

Mr. J. Macbeth, Honorary Treasurer, reported a balance in hand of yen 1,286.30, of which yen 894.89 stood to the credit of the Pastor's Fund. The balance, yen 391.41 was in the general fund. The report was accepted.

A discussion arose regarding the advisability of calling a Pastor, but eventually the matter was left in the hands of the Elders and the Trustees and the meeting closed with the Benediction.

INDIAN SYMPATHY FOR THE FAMINE.

The third list of contributions by Indian sympathizers to relieve the Famine in the North Eastern Districts, received by the Relief Association through the Mitsui Bussan Kaisha, is as follows:—

Messrs. Ralli Brothers.....	500
Messrs. Currimbhoy Ebrahim and Co. ...	500
Messrs. Volkart Brothers .....	300
Messrs. Talati and Co.....	151
Messrs. Jagalkesor Ganshamalal and Co....	51
The Sale proceeds of "Fruitarian Literature" by Companions of the Golden Age.	7

Amount already received ..... 1,509
9,868

Total to date ..... 11,377

THE "KOREA DAILY NEWS" AND THE "JAPAN HERALD."

WE desire to ask the Japan Herald to consider seriously whether it is serving any good purpose when it reproduces the violently anti-Japanese articles of the Korea Daily News. This latter journal is the most prejudiced organ that has ever been published in the Far East. The Japan Herald itself was one-sided enough in the old days; the days when the question of treaty revision kept the community in a constant state of greater or less ferment. The programme then adopted by the Japan Herald was to demonstrate, not that the abolition of consular jurisdiction would be premature because Japan had not yet fully qualified to be entrusted with the care of foreign life and property, but that the Japanese were constitutionally unfit for any such trust and that they never would be fit. Doubtless the editor sincerely believed in the truth of his own views and the justice of his protests, but the chief result of his untiring detractions and harsh judgments was to offend the Japanese profoundly and to import into a discussion which ought to have been dispassionate a most unhappy measure of heat and mutual resentment. Still, even in the bitterest epoch of its anti-Japanese crusade, the Yokohama journal never climbed the heights of prejudice and bigotry to which the Seoul newspaper has attained. One may say that scarcely a day passes without the appearance of some violent anti-Japanese diatribe in the columns of the latter print. If the Seoul organ stood alone very little attention indeed would be paid to its assaults, but when they receive the hospitality of the Japan Herald's columns, new currency is imparted to them. One of the latest of these slanders takes for its subject Mr. KATO, adviser to the Korean Household Department. A more reckless and disgraceful libel we have never seen in print. The shamelessness of the writer is conspicuous throughout, and his references to the evidence on the strength of which Mr. KATO is thus virulently assaulted, betray an almost incredible lack of discrimination. This foul libel is reproduced by the Japan Herald without a word of deprecation or explanation, though such reproduction has the plain significance of endorsement. The Japan Herald is not an irresponsible journal, setting forth the opinions of its editor alone. It is owned by a syndicate of German residents and it is avowedly run in German interests. When then it constitutes itself the alter ego of the Seoul slanderer, when it deliberately assists the latter to bring the Japanese into contumely and to render them objects of contempt and hatred, we must assume that it acts with the approval and under the direction of its German proprietors. There is no alternative hypothesis, for it would be plainly extravagant to conclude that a course so remarkable and extraordinary could be overlooked by the syndicate. Their organ is conspicuous for the passionate vehemence with which it assails any criticism of Germany or the Germans, however moderate may be the critic's language, yet it does not hesitate itself to assist in circulating slanderous attacks of the cruellest character against the Japanese. We are entitled to inquire whether the Germans consider that in thus employing the Japan Herald they promote their own interests in the Far East, and whether they suppose for a moment that such procedure can fail to beget in the bosoms of the Japanese a response to the antipathy it betrays. We have also a right to draw emphatic attention to the fact that the newspaper pursuing this course is not English, though printed in English, and does not represent English views, though edited by an Englishman. So far indeed as our own knowledge goes, German views also are not represented, for among the Germans of our acquaintance, and they are not a few, we have generally heard Japan discussed in a tone sympathetic and appreciative though not always laudatory. Nothing bears less resemblance to the expressed opinions of these men than do the calumnies of the Seoul journal, and nothing would be less likely to enlist their approval than that their countrymen should assist in publishing abroad these defamations. Nevertheless the German syndicate which owns and controls the Japan Herald must be content that their views should be interpreted by its utterances and must bear the responsibility of openly allying themselves with Japan's most inveterate enemies. Let there be on their part an end of talking about the duty of preserving good-fellowship within the comparatively narrow circle of this small community while they themselves are all the while labouring to alienate the friendship of the Japanese. If they find these words too severe, their course is plain: let them instruct their organ to adopt a different programme. Even though that be done, time will be needed to efface the evil impression already produced, but time is happily available.

FOREIGN CAPITAL.

THE Nippon publishes a curious attack on the Government, charging it with interfering between its nationals and would-be lenders of foreign capital by requiring that all transactions of that nature should pass through the hands of the Industrial Bank. It is hinted that when Mr. TAKAHASHI, Vice-President of the Bank of Japan, canvassed for British purchasers of the Industrial Bank's shares, he gave some kind of engagement that the influence of the Authorities should be exercised to secure business for the latter Bank. In proof of the correctness of this accusation our contemporary adduces the case of the Hokuyetsu Railway Company which borrowed money from the Bank, and the case of a British capitalist who had entered into direct negotiations with the Osaka Municipality when the Government stepped in and required the latter to apply to the Specie Bank. The Nippon ridicules this action on the part of the Authorities and alleges that the only effect is to enhance the cost of foreign capital for the borrowers since the Industrial Bank does not work for nothing.

Undoubtedly such action would be exceedingly unwise. There is no longer the slightest occasion for official interference with the ordinary course of financial affairs. The procedure referred to could only have the effect of conferring a monopoly on the Industrial Bank and thus depriving foreign capital of its chief recommendation, cheapness, by preventing competition. We are not aware what measures the Finance Department may really have taken, nor do we know anything about Mr. TAKAHASHI'S negotiations in London. But we are in a position to say that the two examples quoted by the Nippon are erroneous. The Hokuyetsu Railway Company did undoubtedly borrow money from the Industrial Bank and moreover paid interest at the rate of  $7\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. But that was not because the company obeyed official instructions to seek foreign capital through that medium. Foreign capital did not enter into the question at all, as we understand. The Hokuyetsu Railway Company, for reasons that need not be detailed here, deemed it impossible to obtain foreign capital by the ordinary method of floating a loan or issuing debentures, and consequently had recourse to the capital commanded by the Industrial Bank. The second example as to interference between a British capitalist and the Osaka Municipality is also incorrect. We happen to know, although we should not be warranted in offering an explicit demonstration, that the Industrial Bank's connexion with that particular transaction was the result of perfectly normal incidents. Since, then, all the evidence offered by our contemporary in support of its accusation against the Finance Department labours under the disqualification of error, we shall probably be safe in inferring that the alleged official interference is imaginary. The present Minister of Finance is much too enlightened and far-seeing to inaugurate a system of meddling which must seriously discredit Japan by creating the impression that business can not be done with her along ordinary lines, and that foreign capitalists seeking investments in this country are liable to find themselves confronted by Governmental obstruction at any moment. Anything more detrimental could hardly be conceived, and as the mischief must be quite obvious to any intelligent person, we venture to conclude that nothing of the kind has taken place.

Reference may be made here to another criticism heard in some quarters, namely, that the nationalization of the private railways shook foreign confidence in Japanese industries by suggesting that they might be suddenly taken over by the State. As to that, there was no element whatever of suddenness in the transaction. The nationalization of private railways had been under discussion for many years before the Diet was asked to legislate, and every observant foreign capitalist must have known well that the project was in sight. In the second place, nationalization would not weaken in any degree the position of a foreign capitalist who had lent money on the security of a Japanese railway, for, in purchasing the private lines, the Government takes over all their liabilities and is bound to implement all their contracts with third parties. Hence the effect of nationalization in the case of any road carrying a foreign debt would merely be to place the Government in the debtor's position previously occupied by the Company. In short, the result would be to improve the nature of the security without in any way altering the terms of the contract. These considerations are so obvious that the criticisms referred to lose all semblance of seriousness.

THE CUSTOMS' QUESTION.

IT appears that, after all, there may be no solid reason for the excitement about the Imperial Decree of the 9th instant. Telegrams from Peking state that on addressing enquiries direct to the new High Commissioner of Customs, Mr. TIEH LIANG, and his second, Mr. TANG SHAOI, Sir ROBERT HART received for answer that no change whatever was contemplated in his position or competence, and that he was requested to continue his service as before. The Commissioners explained that the intention of their appointment was to remove the final control of the Customs from the hands of the Waiwupu to those of independent officials. We do not learn how Sir ROBERT HART received this explanation or whether he is satisfied with the new arrangement. It can scarcely be supposed that such a measure as the special creation of a new high inspectorate of customs by imperial decree is intended to be a pure formality not entailing any appreciable practical consequences. There must be some purpose underlying the measure. We are the more impelled to this conclusion by the receipt of intelligence that the project of issuing such an imperial decree provoked considerable opposition among high Chinese officials and that the step was consummated over the heads of an objecting majority by the advice of Viceroy YUAN, whose preponderating influence thus receives further demonstration. The American Legation is reported to have addressed to the Waiwupu a very strong protest, calling attention to the engagement given to Sir CLAUDE MACDONALD on the 10th of February, 1898, and also urging that in consideration of the five loan transactions concluded with foreign countries between 1894 and 1898, on the security of the Customs' revenue, it was absolutely essential that a British subject should be at the head of the Customs and that he should have competence to appoint and dismiss the foreign employees. We are disposed to doubt, however, that any such independent remonstrance has been made by the United States Legation. The opinions embodied in the alleged remonstrance are probably entertained at the Legation, but that they should have been already formulated officially is scarcely credible. Another story current is that Sir ROBERT BREDON, on the publication of the imperial decree, welcomed the event and hastened to leave his cards on the new high commissioners. That is not to be believed. The fact—if it be a fact—that Viceroy YUAN's influence has been paramount in this matter, is interpreted in some quarters in Peking as an indication that Japan's influence has been secretly exercised to move the VICEROY, since it is generally believed that his Excellency derives much inspiration from Tokyo. The Jiji Shimpō takes the trouble to combat that suspicion most vehemently. It attributes the rumour either to unreasoning yellow-perilists or to persons who deliberately seek to sow seeds of discord between Japan and the West. Our contemporary declares that Sir ROBERT HART has the respect, confidence and esteem of all educated Japanese; that they would spare no effort to maintain his position, and that did his advanced years compel him to retire from office Japan would be first among those advocating the appointment of a British subject to succeed him. Japan's interests in China are identical with those of the Western Powers, and she is determined to walk hand in hand with England. Thus this interference attributed to her is a monstrous supposition (motte no hoka no okusoku), and if any foreign Representatives in Peking allow themselves to be swayed by such doubts, they will merely be playing into China's hands. The Nichi Nichi Shimbun does not deal with this particular hypothesis but it is equally strong in condemning China's procedure, assuming that the latter points to the removal of Sir ROBERT HART. The arguments used by our contemporary are not new though the manner of their expression is forcible. They may be summed up into this: that China must prepare herself for a change in her foreign relations before she attempts to make one, and that to transfer the control and management of the Customs to the hands of her own officials would be to destroy her financial credit abroad, her Customs' revenue being the chief security for her foreign debts.

THE GOVERNMENT AND FOREIGN CAPITAL.

IT appears that there is the usual modicum of truth in the circulated story as to the Government having advised borrowers of foreign capital to operate through the Industrial Bank. The advice was not conveyed directly. It was addressed by the Minister of State for Finance to the Governors of Prefectures on the occasion of their recent assembly in Tokyo. His Excellency suggested that the Governors should intimate to local bodies, companies or individuals in their various districts the benefit of making the Industrial Bank their medium in the event of a desire to procure foreign capital. It is understood that the Minister frankly refers this procedure on his part to a conviction that when an institution has been started at official instance and is in receipt of State support, there devolves on the Government a duty to promote its prosperity by all legitimate means. Whether many thoughtful persons will be found to endorse that view of the case may be greatly doubted. One of two results must attend such action. Either all foreign syndicates or banks organized to supply capital to Japan will stand aside and leave the Industrial Bank in possession of a monopoly, or they will combine to block the inflow of capital through this unduly favoured source. In the former case the only sufferers will be the Japanese people. In the absence of all competition the financiers through whom the Industrial Bank works in London will charge their own price for accommodation, and it will certainly not be a price fixed with much reference to the convenience of borrowers. On the other hand, if the leading foreign syndicates resent—as they are very likely to resent—this sudden irruption of the Japanese Government into a field which it has no legitimate reason to enter, they can very readily create in financial circles a sentiment fatal to the successful floating of all Japanese loans. Nothing could be easier than to educate such a feeling. The only measure needed is to give currency to the fact that all transactions between foreigners and Japanese are unsafe since the Japanese Government may at any time step in and make an arbitrary use of its official authority. Proof is ready to hand in the form of this recent injunction to the local Governors. Were it urged in defence of the Treasury's action that provincial borrowers of foreign capital lack experience of conducting negotiations direct with foreign capitalists and will therefore benefit by the intervention of the Industrial Bank, the plea would have some semblance of legitimacy. But only a semblance. For the day has long passed when Japanese provincials were in need of such dry-nursing or when their ignorance could be thus exploited by foreigners. No explanation of that kind is understood to be mainly relied on, however. The chief official argument is simply that the Government is morally bound to promote the prosperity of institutions founded under its auspices. That appears to us to be an erroneous conception. It signifies, when analysed, nothing more or less than that a financial instrument like the Industrial Bank should be aided by the State, not in the interests of the Japanese public at large, but in the interests of the Bank's shareholders. Unquestionably the outcome of all this will be to suggest to foreign capitalists that Japan is not a safe field of operations, since persons doing business there may at any moment find themselves confronted by official interference against which no private body can hope to struggle. Red tape is bad enough. Japanese progress is hampered in every direction by the multitudinous formalities which attend all transactions. The present Cabinet has set its face against that unfortunate state of affairs and seems sincerely bent upon mending it. But apparently the same enlightened purpose does not extend to all branches of administration, nor does it seem to be clearly understood that official meddling is fatal to wholesome development.

THE BOOKSHELF.

The New Far East, by THOMAS F. MILLARD; New York, Charles Scribner's Sons; Tokyo, the Methodist Publishing House.

This book may be called the recoil of the big guns used heretofore to salute Japan's victories. There has been too much praise and a reaction is inevitable. Perhaps, however, it will be more accurate to say that Mr. Millard has taken advantage of the movement of repulsion for the purpose of giving momentum to a programme of his own. His deliberate purpose is to discredit Japan; to render her an object of profound suspicion to Western nation, and to persuade them that their interests counsel her suppression. This bias crops out in every page of his work. The book teems with it from cover to cover, and the result will be that people of ordinary fairness, detecting his prejudice, can not fail to discount all his utterances. For ourselves what surprises us chiefly is the strange mis-statements of facts with which the volume abounds. We shall point out a few of them, prefacing our indications by saying that Mr. Millard must not be mistaken for an expert in Far-Eastern subjects; his only qualification to discuss them is that, in his own words, he made "several sojourns in the Far East during the last six years."

The first thing that strikes us in reading his work is the manipulation of the press which he ascribes to the Japanese Government:—

A Japanese press bureau was established in London, with branches in Europe and indirect connections in America, for the purpose of keeping the Japanese point of view conspicuously to the fore. This bureau supplies special articles for publication to various news-distributing concerns which operate in England, Europe and America. It also supplies a special telegraph news service to newspapers published in the Orient that will print it, and most of them do so.

This is virtually a romance from end to end. The only step of the kind taken by the Japanese Government—so far as we know and we may claim to be tolerably well informed—was to send Baron Suematsu to London, whence he addressed articles on current Japanese topics to various leading journals and periodicals. But they were all over his own signature. There was absolutely no surreptitious attempt to colour newspaper opinion. The writings of Baron Suematsu were frankly Japanese and explicitly his own. As for "the special telegraph news service to papers published in the Orient," it is a pure invention. There never was any such service.

Naturally Russia made some efforts to counteract this carefully planned propaganda. Two newspapers were established in the Far East by the Russian Government, printed in English, which are supplied with a telegraphic service and are edited in the Russian interest. But no attempt is made to conceal the fact that these publications are subsidized. * * * Besides, their tone is, on the whole, very mild and reasonable compared to the pro-Japanese publications and they are in a hopeless minority. The extract, even if it stood alone, would amply suffice to demonstrate the writer's bias. What are the two journals edited in Russian interests? And how can it possibly be pretended that no attempt has been made to conceal the fact? If Mr. Millard had paid even the most superficial attention to the events happening in the Far East, he would know that when charges of being influenced to espouse Russia's cause were preferred against two or three English papers in China, they strenuously asserted their independence and they continue to assert it. If there be any publications subsidized by the Russians, instead of "no attempt being made to conceal the fact," it is most studiously concealed; so studiously that we, who have been in the journalistic arena all the while, do not know certainly of any such papers and would be at once contradicted if we ventured to name any.

Although the scene of hostilities was far away from Japan, a strict censorship was maintained during and even after the war on press despatches sent out of the country.

If this means that written communications to newspapers or periodicals were censored, it is totally untrue. For a purpose—the preservation of military secrets—universally recognised to be essential and warranted more than ever by Japan's experience, telegrams were censored, but letters to newspapers and periodicals in Europe or America passed through the post absolutely immune from official scrutiny or interference. Surely such official is the only term applicable to accusations about a propaganda which left all foreign correspondents in Japan wholly free to write what they pleased in the European and American publications which they represented.

We must not fail to note that Mr. Millard associates Great Britain with Japan in his charges of a large scheme to mislead public opinion. He speaks of "a situation in every way most favourable for keeping to the front the Japanese and British point of view, and most unfavourable for the dissemination of information likely to show the contrary side." Evidently he knows very little about Englishmen and their ways.

The plain truth is that the time is still far off when Japan can be regarded except as an Oriental nation, and diplomatic intercourse or policy that does not keep this in view runs the risk of committing an error that may be very grave in its consequences.

We quote this, not with any intention of refuting it—a volume would be required for that purpose—but to show the prejudice which sways Mr. Millard. A publicist who could pen such a verdict is at once discredited.

Rightly or wrongly, the average Japanese has not the slightest doubt just now of his nation's ability to whip any country in the world. * * *

There is not the slightest doubt that Japan wishes to extend her political sovereignty over at least some, perhaps all, of the territories to which she sends emigrants.

Now if in these sentences we substitute "Englishmen" or "Germans" for "Japanese," and "England" or "Germany" for "Japan," would the assertions sound very strange? So it is that what would be permissible in other nations is counted a sin in Japan. Apart from that view of the case, however, it is plain that no conscientious publicist would venture to make such sweeping assertions about any nation's sentiment or aims, above all when not a jot of affirmative evidence can be adduced.

As security for the foreign loans the Government has hypothecated about everything in the country that would be accepted for the purpose, including the customs and the tobacco monopoly, the Government railways and some other minor resources.

The Government has not mortgaged the railways. Neither has it mortgaged any minor resources. These flagrant misstatements show how little care Mr. Millard exercised in procuring his material.

Should Western opinion begin to turn against Japanese policy, * * * one of the consequences will be to give full force and expression to the latent antipathy of the Japanese people toward the West and its fundamental ideas, the existence of which was so aptly illustrated by the anti-Foreign outburst following the publication of the peace terms in Japan.

It is scarcely credible that any author should be so radically misinformed as to speak to-day of the Japanese people's antipathy to the West and its fundamental ideals, and still more incredible is it that he should be so reckless of truth as to call the riots of last September an "anti-Foreign outburst." This again illustrates Mr. Millard's conspicuous unfitness to discuss the subject he has chosen.

In her embarkation upon this war and the policy it foreshadows is recognisable the inherent gambling instinct of the Oriental.

Does not this dictum about "the inherent gambling instinct of the Oriental" come aptly from a representative of the Occident which taught Japan how to play cards, how to bet on races, and how to stake large sums at poker, but has not yet succeeded in propagating among her people at large the gambling spirit which makes bridge the accredited pastime of nearly all the upper classes and of both sexes in English-speaking countries?

Diplomatic relations between the two countries were severed February 6th, 1904. Although it was not known at the time, Admiral Uriu's squadron * * * had already left Japan. Even before negotiations were formally broken off, Japan, as is now known, had begun hostilities by the seizure of Russian ships at sea. The "Russia" was seized in the Korean Strait on February 5th, and one or two smaller Russian merchant vessels were seized off the Korean coast on the same or the following day.

This statement contains four serious falsehoods. Admiral Uriu's Squadron did not leave Japan before February 6th. It left on that day in company with Admiral Togo's fleet. Orders to break off negotiations were telegraphed to Mr. Kurino on February 5th. He informed the Russian Government on February 6th, and on February 6th the Japanese Squadron sailed from Sasebo. Japan did not seize Russian ships before the negotiations were broken off. The Russia was not seized on February 5th she was seized on February 7th. No smaller Russian vessels were seized on either the 5th or the 6th. All these things are matters of history open to every inquirer. What is to be said of an author who either does not take the trouble to ascertain elementary facts, or deliberately perverts them to fit his own argument?

The Japanese fleet, consisting of seven large ships and a number of smaller ones, concentrated its fire on the Varyag.

This is another flagrant falsehood singularly adapted to achieve Mr. Millard's purpose of discrediting the Japanese. Admiral Uriu had not seven large ships under his command. He had only one, the Asama (9,750 tons). His 5 other ships were all much inferior to the Varyag namely the Chiyoda (2,450 tons) Nanika (3,727 tons) the Nitaka (3,420 tons), the Takachiho (3,727 tons), the Suma (2,200 tons) and the Akashi (2,700 tons). Among these ships those that chiefly engaged the Varyag were the Asama and the Chiyoda.

Mr. Millard alleges that having asked a leading foreign resident in Seoul how his interests would be effected if the Foreign Representatives were withdrawn from the Korean capital and the Japanese left in unequivocal control, he (Mr. Millard) received this answer:—

I can not bring myself to think that our Governments will abandon us in that manner. But should they do so, notwithstanding that I have spent the best years of my life building up my interests here, I would sell my property for what it would bring and leave the country.

If Mr. Millard had any knowledge of the Far East he would know that large-mouthed statements of this kind were commonly heard in the open ports of Japan on the eve of the abolition of consular jurisdiction. But no one has sold his property for what it would fetch and left the country. On the contrary, all are remaining very comfortably. If again Mr. Millard had followed the course of events he would know that although the Foreign Representatives have been withdrawn from Seoul leaving the Japanese in "unequivocal control," there have been no sacrifices of foreign property nor any affrighted exodus of foreign residents, and we venture to affirm that the "leading foreign resident" whom he quotes is quietly and happily staying in his old place among his built-up interests.

It need scarcely be said, after the acquaintance our readers have now made with Mr. Millard's book, that his story of Japanese doings in Korea is taken without query and with implicit trust from the most violently anti-Japanese sources there. He alleges that, on the occasion of the signature of the Ito convention, "thousands of Japanese troops were brought into the city * * and arranged about the palace, excluding the Koreans and making the Emperor and the recalcitrant Ministers actual prisoners." He affirms that of the ministers who signed "several either committed suicide or were assassinated soon afterwards." He accepts as literally true the extraordinary story given out on the authority of a London newspaper's correspondent who is said to have come to the East expressly to conduct a campaign against Japan, the story that the Emperor of Korea asserted that "his signature to the suzerainty agreement was forged." And he affirms that these details—though he admits that he has them only on the testimony of one foreign resident of Seoul—are substantially supported by all unprejudiced press accounts that I have seen, though not one solitary newspaper in the Far East except the most notoriously prejudiced of them all, has published any original account of the doings in Korea.

This exposure of falsehoods, exaggerations and unsupported tales might be continued through columns. Thus Mr. Millard gives publicity to a wild story that "26 Chinese newspapers are directly or indirectly controlled in the Japanese interest"; he sets down the flagrant lie that Marquis Ito proposed to adopt Christianity as the national religion of Japan; he affirms with equal mendacity that "many laws have been recently passed, designed to place limitations upon the development of foreign vested interests in Japan"; he asks his readers to draw the conclusion that the tobacco monopoly was established in Japan for the sake of driving out an American firm which had obtained an important footing in the trade; he knows so little of this subject that he represents the tobacco monopoly as having been conceived after the war with Russia had begun; he inserts with evident credence the ridiculous canard that the Mitsu (sic) Bussan Kaisha is "contributing a per-centage on sales of its products to the support of the boycott" of American goods in China; he grants the hospitality of his pages to an assertion that the Chinese have pledged themselves to consult a Japanese expert in regard to the purchase of all railway material throughout the Chinese Empire; in short, he seems to have limited his inquiries to the most inveterately anti-Japanese sources of information and to have accorded to their statements a degree of credence which betrays only too plainly the strength and direction of his own bias. A more misleading book we have never perused, yet its errors being wrapped up in sententious and not ungraceful English and relieved by frequent simulations of impartiality will probably find a lodgement in some minds.

MR. AND MRS. WILSON IN SENDAI.

(COMMUNICATED)

At the request of the Americans residing in Sendai the United States Chargé d'Affaires and Mrs. Huntingdon Wilson visited that city and were the guests of their nationals from the 5th to the 8th May. Arriving late Saturday night they were not only met at the station by Americans, but the great station was crowded with provincial and city and military officials, prominent ladies and gentlemen, and representatives of schools, who welcomed them most cordially. An informal invitation to a dinner from the Governor and Mayor was at once extended to them, and they were notified that the city wished the privilege of giving them a public welcome.

Sunday was spent in visiting the dozen churches of the city, and our guests were astonished at the conspicuous place that Christianity has won here. They saw four self-supporting, self-governing, and self-propagating churches, and they witnessed the impressive services of the Catholic and Greek churches. They knew that the Y.M.C.A. had sent more than a score of able Christian workers to Manchuria during the war, whose valuable services received the praise of even the Emperor. But they were surprised to find four of these workers were pastors of Sendai churches.

As the gifts from America to the famine sufferers came largely through our Embassy, Mr. and Mrs. Wilson were eager to see something of the effects of the famine. So they went to Iwanuma and saw the distribution of food to about one hundred families. Mrs. Wilson's father had sent her 400 yen for use in the famine region, and she gave 100 of this to the poor of Iwanuma and 300 to the Mayor of Sendai for the destitute of the city. Mr. Wilson's deep interest in relief work was manifested at the very beginning of the famine when he generously contributed 300 yen. He was much impressed at the scientific manner in which the Mayor had handled the famine problem in the city, so that out of a population of 93,000 only 19 families were now receiving free food, work being provided for all the rest. Such a mayor at such a time is worth having.

The Americans held a reception for their distinguished guests in the new school building of the Dutch Reformed Mission. Our guests expressed wonder at seeing such a large and magnificent and thoroughly equipped recitation hall in connection with missionary work. It is the most conspicuous building in the city and probably the best piece of middle school architecture in the Empire. The finely built Girls' School of the same mission was also visited and excited much admiration.

The dinner given by the Governor and Mayor was, to the delight of the guests, a purely Japanese feast, followed by three historic performances accompanied by native music and dances which were highly appreciated.

Of course Matsushima was on the programme. And here too the authorities kindly arranged everything for the comfort and enjoyment of our guests, providing an extra car for the party and a steamer through the islands.

The welcome extended by the city was held in the First Middle School, the gateway of which was adorned by a huge arch crowned with an English welcome. Addresses were made by the Governor, Mayor, General, and others, the sum and substance of which were warmest appreciation of the most helpful sympathy of America, to which Mr. Wilson responded as follows:—

LADIES, YOUR EXCELLENCIES, AND GENTLEMEN: After the eloquent words of the distinguished speakers to whom we have listened, and especially to an audience of the people of Sendai, a city filled with so many learned doctors and professors, it is difficult for me to speak—yet I wish to say a few words. I wish most heartily to thank my hosts, his Excellency the Governor, who is unfortunately unable to be present to-day, but who is so well represented by Mr. Suzuki; the Honorable Mr. Muramatsu, M.P., and Mr. Nozoye; who have honored my wife and myself in giving us this splendid reception. I also wish to thank General Nishijima, General Ishibashi, Mr. Tashiro, and the other distinguished officers and officials and the representative people of Sendai for giving us the pleasure of meeting them to-day. The very, very kind words of the distinguished speakers, I gratefully accept, not for myself, but as signs of friendly feeling for the country which I happen at this time to have the honour to represent. I wish to thank the honorable speakers for the deep appreciation they have expressed of the small material assistance which, in the hard winter of the famine, was sent from the United States, through the Legation in Tokio, to the distressed provinces of Miyagi, Fukushima, and Iwate. The President's suggestion that Americans assist their Japanese friends and neighbours in combatting the famine in these provinces was the natural impulse of his magnanimous, humanitarian character, which cherishes the spirit of international brotherhood.

The facts about the famine became known in America through the writings of the Americans of Sendai, a community of whom I am proud; and I am glad to know from the previous speeches that this fact is understood and appreciated here. The appeal of the Christian Herald, a religious newspaper, and the efforts of the American Red Cross were responded to not so much by a few rich people as by small donations by folk of moderate means throughout all parts of the United States. This fact gives the American assistance interest and importance as an expression of goodwill by one great nation for another. The money aspect of the matter is quite unimportant, but the sentimental aspect is really important.

When San Francisco was recently visited by a great disaster due to earthquake, expressions of Japanese sympathy came from every quarter, both high and lowly. I read in the newspapers that His Imperial Japanese Majesty was graciously pleased to send a large sum for relief of the sufferers, also that the business men of Tokio subscribed a very handsome sum for the same purpose. The offer was also made to send to San Francisco a Red Cross Hospital ship, but this proved unnecessary. As his Excellency the Minister for War pointed out at the meeting in Tokio to discuss plans for Japanese relief for San Francisco, it is not a question of whether foreign aid is necessary, but a matter of showing forth the spirit of helpfulness.

In this way these two disasters, the famine here, and the earthquake at San Francisco, will have been the occasion for welding one more link in the long, strong chain of mutual goodwill which has been the relation between Japan and America from the days of Perry and Townsend Harris to the present, when America and Japan, as two great Powers, are exchanging ambassadors.

If you will permit me to say a word of your city of Sendai, I would express my admiration of it as a centre of education and thought. In a year when this part of the country is poor in material riches it must be a source of satisfaction to you all to feel what a wealth of the highest riches, the riches of the intellect and the spirit, you have in this place. You will pardon me if, as an American, I say that I feel pride in the part which my countrymen have in the intellectual and spiritual life of their fellow townsmen of Sendai.

I hope you will excuse me for correcting one statement made by two of the gentlemen who have spoken. My visit to Sendai was not to investigate the famine conditions, but to see Sendai; to meet some of the men who have fought the famine with such energy and determination, and to visit the American community here, who are such thorough citizens of Sendai that I thought I would come and remind them that they are also citizens of the United States.

I thank you all for your kind attention.

The people of Sendai never do things by halves. Mr. and Miss Wilson were profoundly impressed at the cordiality of this public welcome, and their wonder and pleasure deepened as they were presented by the Mayor in the presence of 500 ladies and gentlemen with a fine specimen of ancient armour and a kiri box of silk handkerchiefs of Sendai manufacture.

When the night train with our guests aboard pulled out of the station, the platform was again crowded with the élite of Sendai, whose voices made the place ring with

"Wilson, Kakka! Banzai! Reifujin, Banzai!"

NAVAL NEWS.

The equipment of the new cruiser Tsukuba will be completed at Kure in November this year. Capt. H. Takeuchi at present commanding the Asahi will be appointed to the Tsukuba.

The Tenryu in the third reserve at Kure will be employed in surveying work. Recently she took on board about two hundred officers and bluejackets of the Kure Naval Station. She will shortly leave for the north for mine-clearing work in the neighbourhood of Port Arthur, which was stopped during the winter but has now been resumed. It is expected to be concluded this year.

The Tsugaru (formerly Pallada) is still under repairs at Port Arthur. The damage is reported to be extensive. It is added that the torpedo-ship Amur is still sunk at the entrance of the east dock.

The hospital ship Kusuho Maru (formerly Orel, captured in the battle of the Japan Sea) has been employed at the Kure Naval Station for a similar purpose. As there is no further use for her she will be transferred to the Red Cross Society.

Some cases of typhus have been reported among the crew of the Asama at Kure. She was removed to quarantine on May 12th. Rear-Admiral Yamada, Commander of the First Squadron, has removed his flag from the Asama to the Otona.

The Teikoku Volunteer ship Society, on May 12th, ordered a new steamer from the Mitsu Bishi Shipbuilding Co., Nagasaki. The tonnage of the ship is 3,000 tons; length, 335 feet; width, 43 feet; draft, 17 feet and speed 18 knots.

A telegram from Takamatsu says that the steamer Koyei Maru on the night of May 15th collided with a vessel carrying thirty cows, off Sakade, Sanuki province. The last named craft sank with the cattle.

MONTHLY SUMMARY OF JAPANESE
CURRENT LITERATURE.

The last number of the Bunshō Sekai contains articles by Dr. Inoue Tetsujirō, Messrs Takekoshi Yosaburō, Abe Isoo and many other well known writers. The general tone of the writing in this new magazine is one of dissatisfaction with the present state of Japanese literature. Dr. Inoue says that, speaking generally, since the beginning of the Meiji era literary style has been quite neglected and as a consequence there are few scholars even who know how to clothe their thoughts in language that is at once clear and impressive. This is one of the results of the rage for the study of foreign languages which prevailed in the early decades of the present era. Numbers of scholars became proficient in the knowledge of special subjects by the attention they paid to English or German without acquiring the power to compose gracefully in their own language. The Chinese and Japanese books that furnished models in the point of style were totally neglected (Ishin igo Wakan no gakumon nado ga ichiji hotondo zempai saretai yō na koto ga arimashita). Students passed through the various schools without being able to read and understand the best written newspaper and magazine articles unless by the aid of kana,* and even after these men had reached maturity their deficient knowledge of the literature of their own country and their pitiable helplessness when required to put their thoughts on paper in their own language were apparent to everybody. The literary inaccuracy of Japanese specialists is dwelt on at considerable length by Dr. Inoue. In his conception there are three qualifications which all influential writers possess. (1) They have definite views; (2) they are earnest-minded; (3) they have the courage of their opinions. Writing that is deficient in either of these qualities merits no attention and attracts no interest. Of these three qualifications the first is considered by Dr. Inoue to be by far the most important. But we have no space to follow him further in this discussion.

Mr. Takekoshi Yosaburō gives the following advice to students who desire to become good writers:—(1) Let them read extensively; (2) let them acquire the habit of analysing all they read and all they hear about in daily life; (3) let them ponder deeply over the facts that they have collected and analysed; (4) let them study language; and (5) let them take lots of exercise; to keep their heads clear and to aid digestion. To this last piece of advice Mr. Takekoshi attaches much importance.

In a very interesting article Mr. Abe Isoo, of the Waseda University, discusses the relation of writing to public speaking. Here is the gist of his remarks. In recent years the written language of Japan has been approaching the colloquial more and more. This is considered desirable by the majority of scholars. How far the blending of the two can be carried is a question it is not easy to answer. It has always seemed to me that Japanese colloquial is a very unsuitable medium for public speaking. The monotonous endings of sentences considerably mar the effect of even the most eloquent orations. One wears of perpetual repetitions of arimasu, gozarimasu, nai desu, omoimasu, and the like.† In written Japanese there is a charming variety in the forms in use at the end of sentences; and some of them are very telling. If speakers were to adopt a few of these, the wearisomeness of hearing sentence after sentence concluded in the same way would be considerably alleviated. Public speaking in this country is at present in a very backward state. The speeches of members of the Diet and other politicians when recorded by stenographers just as they are delivered read very badly. Beauty of language there is next to none. Solecisms abound. Obscurity and ambiguity are most common. It is quite evident that most of our public speakers do not take the trouble to prepare their speeches. In Europe and America a large number of speakers make use of a manuscript when speaking and the general opinion in the West seems to be that the language used by these speakers is more correct and effective than that employed by the ordinary run of extempore speakers. In this country at present there seems to be a prejudice against constant reference to a manuscript in speaking. Certain Ministers of State have read speeches to the Diet, but this was done because our statesmen are not accustomed to public speaking and because they were apprehensive that in an extempore speech they might use words which would furnish material for cavilling members of the Diet to use for their own purposes. Most of our public speakers seem to think that language preparation is unnecessary. They may arrange their thoughts beforehand, but there is no labour spent on the choice of words, figures of speech, apt illustrations, and the like. Hence the extreme mediocrity of our public oratory. Our colloquial speech must be improved by imparting to it some of the dignity, expressiveness and conciseness of our written language. Speeches should be sufficiently accurate and telling to allow of their being read with as much pleasure as written books.

A great many pages of the Bunshō Sekai are devoted to a discussion of the future of women's written language in Japan. It is doubtless known to many foreigners that women's letters are composed in quite a different style to those of men. A number of Japanese ladies have contributed to the Bunshō Sekai articles proposing changes. Mrs. Hatoyama's views seem to us to hit the golden mean between downright impoliteness and the tedious repetition of a number of introductory and concluding empty phrases. She thinks that women's letters should begin as men's do with the simple haikai and end with the keihaku or the sōsō fuisu (物々不一), but that in the body of the letter the language used should always be distinguished by feminine gentleness and modesty. Masculinity of tone is decidedly objectionable in a lady's letter, says Mrs. Hatoyama.

A new Life of Rai Sanyō, compiled by Mr. Kiseki Kōshō, entitled Katei no Rai Sanyō, has recently been published by the Kinkōdō. It covers nearly 600 large sized pages and sells at 1 yen 75 sen. Mr. Ueda Mannen in his preface alludes to the enormous influence on Japanese thought which Sanyō's poetry and prose have had. No verses are more popular with young people than his, and his great work the Gwaishi is as eagerly read to-day as when it first appeared. Mr. Kiseki has obtained a good deal of new material throwing light on the home life of the great historian. The work treats of all the different stages of his life—with his sojourn in Edo, his life in Kyōto, his journeys in Kyūshū, &c. The Dai Nihon Kenkokushi is the name of a newly published History of Japan, compiled by Mr. Kimura Takataro and issued by the Shōyukan. The price of the book is 1 yen 50 sen. This work aims at bringing out prominently the peculiarities of the Japanese people. It is written on conservative lines with no attempt to distinguish between fact and fable, mythology and history. To foreign readers perhaps the most interesting chapters would be those which discuss national traits. Chap. XII, is on famous women in old Japan. Chap. XIII, is on esthetics and on the great cheerfulness of disposition displayed by the Japanese. Chap. XIV, is on family customs generally, the relations of brothers to each other and marriage. Chap. XV, is on the introduction of Buddhism into Japan.

A long but interesting article from the pen of Baron Gotō Shimpei on Japan's colonial policy appears in the Taiyō. Baron Gotō first calls attention to the dangers attending the present mood of the Japanese people. The general feeling is that after the enormous expenditure caused by the war in every direction Japan must retrench. But there are some fields of enterprise where, instead of retrenching, for some years to come she must increase her expenditure. The island of Formosa is one of those fields. To expect the island to pay its way now is most unreasonable. To work the island for the benefit of the home country almost exclusively would be very bad policy. What it must be Japan's endeavour to secure is the full confidence of the inhabitants of Formosa in the mother country. The Formosans must be bound to Japan by ties of interest as well as by such sentiment as the two peoples have in common. In a country like Formosa two opposing forces are at work, says Baron Gotō; one being centripetal (Kyushinkyoku), the other centrifugal (Enshinkyoku). We cannot afford to repeat the blunder that England made in governing the American colonists. We must bind the Formosans to us not merely by law and by the display of physical force but by making it plain to them that our rule is beneficial to them. We must ever bear in mind that if we are backward in giving financial aid to the Formosans for the development of the country, there are Powers that are only waiting for an opportunity to gain prestige in the island by the expenditure of capital on enterprises there. But in our management of Formosa men are more important than money. To find a sufficient supply of suitable administrators of government is not easy. Japan's experience in governing alien races is very limited. She cannot pretend to possess the sagacity, far-sightedness and broad-mindedness of some Western Powers. She has much yet to learn. But what I wish to impress on my fellow-countrymen is the importance of our making a thorough success of the colonizing experiment we have in hand. By a large section of politicians the successful development of Formosa is not regarded as a matter of vast moment to Japan. They fail to perceive that Japan's future destiny as a nation depends very much on successful colonization. Consequently our capitalists are by no means eager to supply the island with money for the development of various industries. There is far too much indifference to colonization in the whole nation. Among all the post-bellum measures there is not one that is so important as the development of the territory which has come under our flag. If this be not done our victories will have brought us little permanent good. By these victories we have created for ourselves opportunities for national expansion of a rare kind. Is the nation going to utilize these opportunities in a whole-hearted way? Our future position among advanced nations will depend very largely on the colonial policy we now adopt and carry out. The most successful countries in the West have all relied largely on foreign possessions. By means of these each country creates markets for its goods while obtaining a large supply of food stuffs and other needed products. What is wanted to-day among us is more lively interest on the part of the whole nation in colonial development. Baron Gotō's long article breathes throughout a spirit of great dissatisfaction with the general narrowness of view displayed by Japanese leading politicians, and he thinks there can be no great national expansion until the Japanese people as a whole are fired with the desire to found a great foreign empire.

A long article reviewing the whole situation in the Far East appears in the Taiyō, entitled Jūnen no Gwaishi oyobi Kokusei (Our Foreign Policy and National Administration during the next 10 years) from the pen of Dr. Takebe, of the Tōkyō Imperial University. We have only space to give a bare outline of the first part of the learned writer's article. The general conclusion which Dr. Takebe reaches is that though the war with Russia was quite unavoidable it has failed to remove some of the most formidable difficulties Japan has had to encounter in the Far East in recent years. With these she will still have to grapple. The notion that with the return of peace she can rest on her oars is only entertained by people who are ignorant of the real situation in China at the present moment. Dr. Takebe discusses the political situation in the Far East under nine headings. We will endeavour to state in a few words his opinions on the various topics treated.

I.—Before the War and after the War. It is perhaps quite correct to say that among

* Our experience is that even to-day this remark of Dr. Inoue holds good among the majority of students.—(WRITER OF SUMMARY.)

† Such as:—ni arazu nanshiya? seshu ni nosommu tokoro nari, nasazaru bekarazu, . . . naru oya, nari to so, . . . subeki nomi, . . . no hana-hadashiki mono nari, shō suru ni tarubeshi, etc.

well informed people there is a feeling of regret that beyond solving the problem of Korea to a certain extent the war with Russia has not changed the position occupied by Japan among nations competing for power in the Far East (To-A ni okeru rekkoku kakuchiku (角逐) no keisei wa Chōsen mondai no ikubun ka kaiketsu uo milaru koto no hoka, amari ōku no henkō wo sensen sengo ni oite mizaru koto wa osoraku tenka shikisha no tomo ni ikan to suru tokoro de arō). The state of things in China has not been improved by the war. In some respects the elements there have been rendered more combustible. It is perhaps safe to predict that during the next ten years the existence of the Anglo-Japanese Alliance will prevent any great political explosion. But after that it is impossible to say what may occur, and even during the next ten years there is no guarantee against a number of minor disturbances such as are going on at present. Now it seems to me that it is of vast importance that we as a nation should decide on a fixed policy in reference to China—a policy that even after the ten years have expired, in the event of the non-continuance of the Anglo-Japanese Alliance, we should strive our utmost to carry out.

II.—Russia in Manchuria to-day. Before the war Russia had promised China to withdraw her troops within 18 months, but she had no intention of doing it. Remembering this, it is perhaps natural that certain people in this country should regard with suspicion the dilatoriness she is now showing in carrying out one of the stipulations of the Portsmouth Treaty relative to the withdrawal of her troops. But is not this most probably the result of that inefficiency of organization which characterized her whole conduct of the late war? Under this heading Dr. Takebe goes at some length into what he conceives to be Russia's designs in Manchuria. He quotes from a semi-official Russian journal a passage to show that apparently Russia proposes to keep more troops in Manchuria than are needed for the guarding of the railways run by her, and he refers to various telegrams that have been published, which taken together seem to Dr. Takebe to indicate that by skilful diplomatic measures at Peking Russia is managing to hold on to portions of Manchuria. His object is to show that the war has not affected Russian policy in the least as far as outsiders can see.

(3) The Gospel of Peace. Japan has no cause for regret that she has withdrawn her troops as rapidly as was possible, and since Russia professes to champion the cause of peace and has figured before the world as an advocate of peaceful methods of settling international disputes, Japan as a matter of courtesy is bound to put as friendly an interpretation as possible on her action in China to-day. Yet the situation is by no means such as warrants the self-satisfaction with which some of our publicists regard the results of the war. To imagine that the war has done more than solve one out of a number of difficult problems in the Far East is, it seems to me, to take too optimistic a view of the real situation. Of course much will depend in the future on the action of Germany, France, England and America, but nothing is surer than this, that the blow Japan dealt to Russia is nothing like as crushing as many of us have been wont to suppose.

(4) The Adoption of a mixed Policy—half light and half shade, half true half false.—Nothing seems to me more clear than the necessity of our taking to the diplomatic methods of some other countries unless we mean to be left behind in the struggle for precedence in the Far East. The situation demands a temporizing policy. We can no longer hold to one straight course and give out to the world that if we are not permitted to follow it we will appeal to arms a second time. We must enter the field of diplomacy and use the devices that our competitors employ with so much skill. For the next 10 years the rôle we have to play will be an uncongenial one to us, but our position in the Far East depends entirely on our playing it successfully.

(5) The Relinquishment of our Military Policy.—For the sake of the State and of society generally we must be prepared to be hated by the world gladly*. We must figure prominently before the world as a State that has entirely subordinated its militarism to the cunning devices of diplomacy. That the adoption of this policy is at present a most urgent necessity is my firm belief. It may seem like ingratitude to our brave warriors to write thus. But it is not so. The State must be placed even before those who have served it so well at a great national crisis. Its interests now require that by peaceful methods we make sure our position in the Far East. The spirit of the age throughout the West is in favour of the peaceful development of national power and prestige. To possess armaments, but not use them unless in tremendous emergencies is the rôle that all our great rival Powers are endeavouring to play. There is a danger of our attaching undue importance to our naval and military achievements, of our thinking that military pre-eminence is a stable basis for national pre-eminence in this modern world. Against this in the hour of its elation over recent victories the nation needs to be warned. We reserve the last part of Professor Takebe's long article for notice in our next Summary.

Commenting on Count Ōkuma's connexion with the Shimpotō in the May Taiyō, Mr. Toyabe Shuntei says:—There are people who are clamouring for the retirement of Count Ōkuma and for the appointment of a younger man to the leadership of the Shimpotō. But to me it seems that these people do not know what they are talking about. What power the Shimpotō has in the country comes largely from Count Ōkuma's connection with it. Though getting up in years, he still retains the use of all his mental powers. In the ranks of the party to-day there is nobody who could fill his place with any prospect of achieving the success he has achieved. It is even questionable whether the party could be held together at all without Count Ōkuma. But, on the other hand, there is doubtless truth in the assertion that as long as Count Ōkuma remains its head the Shimpotō is not likely to come into power. He is no trimmer and no bargainer and is too outspoken to please the majority of contemporary statesmen. He once went into harness with Itagaki, but soon broke loose from him again. He tried to work in harmony with Matsukata, but found it to be quite impossible. He knows how to so impress his talents on certain people as to make them follow him, but when he meets with people who are not susceptible to this kind of influence he has a way of treating them with indifference, instead of endeavouring to lead them in other ways. The fact is he cares nothing for political power apart from the opportunity it affords for the carrying out of his fixed political ideals. If to become the head of a cabinet means constant compromises, constant concessions which he himself considers undesirable, then pre-eminence in the State has no charms for him. He is one of those comparatively rare statesmen who are not prepared to sacrifice their deepest convictions to the exigencies of party government. He would always prefer to resign rather than make serious concessions.† It is this peculiarity in the Count's character that constitutes one of the chief causes of the failure of the Shimpotō to attain to supreme power in the Legislature. There are no doubt men in the ranks of the party who regard with envious eyes the political sugar-plums obtained by the Seiyūkai by a series of compromises, and they would welcome the appointment of a more flexible president than Count Ōkuma. The names of Barons Kodama and Yamamoto are mentioned as possible leaders of the Shimpotō. It is conceivable that some years hence one or other of these able men may become candidates for such a post, but at present they are both too well acquainted with the abuses prevailing in political parties to-day to throw in their lot with them in a light-hearted manner. It is not a change in the presidency that the Shimpotō needs to-day, continues Mr. Toyabe, but rather a radical alteration of its policy as a party. It has in its ranks a number of politicians who far surpass the average members of the Seiyūkai as political debaters and critics, and yet it is condemned to pass year after year in obscurity in dreary political wastes. The Shimpotō has not moved with the times. Its principles and policy to-day are just the same as they were 10 years ago. Politics all over the world have undergone great changes during the past decade. The nations are now engaged in a big struggle one against another and political parties can only accede to power when after recognizing the situation they are able to come forward with programmes containing promising remedies for existing drawbacks and evils. The policies on which modern political parties depend for their popularity are invariably positive in character. Now, the Shimpotō fails to adjust itself to this condition of success. It opposes the active policies of its rivals and in effect argues in favour of passivity. If an extension of armaments be proposed, it declares against it. If the land taxes are to be increased, it denounces the whole movement. What measures it cannot actually oppose for fear of being deemed unpatriotic it supports only in a most lukewarm way. Now a party can not prosper if it be nothing more than obstructive; if its policy is all negation. The Shimpotō plays the rôle of a censorer of all Government programmes without having a programme of its own to set before the country. In policy and principles it shows no initiative. It aspires to represent the people, but it does not represent the higher intelligence of the people, but merely the vague and crude notions of the ill-informed section of constituencies. The views of political specialists, of learned publicists, of the select few to whom it is given to discern what are the real state issues and to suggest ways of dealing with them, the Shimpotō treats with undisguised contempt, while uttering soft speeches to the comparatively ignorant ō polloi. As long as the party continues to pursue this course, it will never command the respect of the nation as a whole. If a new president is needed in order to insure a new departure in policy then the sooner he is appointed the better. But as we have already remarked, a suitable successor to Count Ōkuma it would be hard to find. Probably, with the weight of his declining years, nobody would rejoice more over the appointment of the right man more than the Count himself.

* We give Dr. Takebe's exact words:—Shibaraku wagahai wa Kokka no tame, shakai no tame ni amanite tenka no nikumare mono to naru koto wo ayete shiyo. Wagahai wa inyō kyōjitsu (light and shade, true and false) shugi no daiichi-i (一位) no jikko to shite, gunkoku shugi wo shilabi (下火) ni suru koto ga kongo shibaraku no aida waga shakai no saidai kyūyōji no hitotsu de aru to kakushin suru koto uo kōgen suru.

† Tan ni seiken ni suru no mokuteki wo motte omoi-kitaru daidai (大々) jōho (讓歩) wo nasu koto wa Haku no seikaku ni oite yoku shinobi iru tokoro ni arazu.

Mr. Toyabe contributes to the Taiyō an obituary notice of the late Viscount Nagaoka, which we have no space to deal with here.

* * *

The 1906 number of the Sekai Nenkan (The World's Annual) has just appeared. The statistics have been collected by specialists and are well up to-date. It covers over 600 large-sized pages. The subscription price is 65 sen per copy. The Japanese part contains a number of tables on population, education, religion, commerce, industry, &c. It is issued by the Hakubunkan.

Dr. Anezaki's work entitled Kokumin no Ummei to Shinkō (National Destiny and Faith) has had a most wonderful run, having now reached its 46th edition. It is nearly 600 pages in length and sells at 1 yen a copy. Its design is to show that all the great nations of the world have at their most prosperous times had faith in certain moral and religious ideals—that a nation without an ideal is doomed to comparative failure in the world's competition. Mr. Ōse Jintarō is the author of a bulky volume entitled Oshū Kyōiku Shi (A History of European Education) which sells at 2 yen 50 sen a copy and also of a volume of lectures on education entitled Kyōikagaku Kōgi which sells at 1 yen 40 sen a volume. Both works are highly spoken of. The Saimin (催眠) Shinrigaku (Psychology) of Mesmerism) is a most elaborate and exhaustive account of the curious mental phenomena that modern students of mesmerism have discovered. Mr. Fukurai Tomokichi, who has devoted many years to this study, is the author. The work is published in two good sized volumes and sells at 3 yen a copy. The thoroughly scientific facts and inferences which are based on hundreds of careful experiments are clearly stated in this book, which is highly praised by experts.

* * *

Baron Kaneko has just published a work entitled "The Future of Japanese Education." It gives the impressions received by the Baron during his recent sojourn in the United States. The price is 29 sen only. For sale at the Kōdōkwan.

Dr. Inouye Tetsujirō has started a magazine of his own called Tō-A no Hikari (The Light of Eastern Asia). From the first number, which he has kindly forwarded to us, we extract the following account of its origin. There are already hundreds of Magazines published in this country. People may well ask what moves us to add one more to the list? The reason is that I and my fellow-thinkers are of opinion that we have something to say to the young men of the present age that nobody else will say in exactly the same way. We aim at guiding the thoughts of readers into safe channels. The spread of Western civilisation in this country has been attended with many evils which will require time and strenuous effort on the part of educationists and philosophers to eradicate. The young men of our time are naturally perplexed to know what guides to follow. Mental culture generally was doubtless considerably interrupted by the excitement caused by our war with Russia. But there are signs that its importance will henceforth be recognized more and more. There is a great spirit of inquiry abroad and in their eagerness to find satisfaction many young men are consulting teachers of all sorts and hearing from them diametrically opposite theories of life and its significance. To be told to pin their faith to Buddhism or to Christianity as taught here does not by any means solve the doubts or set at rest the many perplexities that harass the minds of young men. They find it hard to implicitly trust either priests or ministers of the Gospel, both of which are transmitters of traditional doctrines. At such a time as this we are of opinion that there is need for a philosophical magazine whose chief object it will be to promote the cause of high mental culture. The subjects which will receive most attention from us will be philosophy, ethics, religion, education, psychology, fine art and literature generally.

Dr. Haga Yaichi contributes an interesting article to the Tō-A no Hikari entitled "Literature for the Eye." As may be known to some of our readers Dr. Haga belongs to that small coterie of scholars who maintain that the Japanese language can dispense with the Chinese ideographs without losing its expressiveness or suffering in intelligibility. During the past two decades a contest has been going in the linguistic world between what may be designated the "Eye" party and the "Ear" party. Japanese literature has been wedded to the Chinese for centuries. Two questions are perpetually asked and answered by writers on this subject. (1) Is a divorce desirable? Does not the Japanese language receive numerous benefits from its use of the pictorial symbols of its highly talented neighbours? (2) Is a divorce practicable? Could the same accuracy, intelligibility and expressiveness be maintained were any kind of alphabetical signs used instead of the pictorial characters? That is, can an eye language be converted into an ear language? Dr. Haga is one of those who thinks the transformation is possible. He rightly points out that the nation is undoubtedly moving in the direction of the severance of the tie that binds Japanese to Chinese. The ephemeral literature of to-day is certainly very different from what was published 15 or 20 years ago. The introduction of purely colloquial phrases into learned articles is becoming more and more popular. The same may be said of modern verse writing. It is dispensing with dependence on the ideographs more and more. It is pointed out by Dr. Haga that there is a large class of ancient Japanese literature that is not dependent on the written ideographs for its charm on the Japanese mind. There are undoubtedly a good many books that would lose their interest altogether to Japanese readers were they written in kana, even surmising, as we are by no means warranted in doing, that they could be understood. These books would of course in future be only read by a few specialists, as the majority of scholars would possess a very limited knowledge of ideographs. Dr. Haga is one of those who think that the Japanese language has sufficient vitality to survive its severance from the Chinese ideographs. With the notion that Chinese characters are needed to give a depth or width of meaning to Japanese words he does not agree at all, and he desires to see all writers' relinquishing the practice of appealing to the eye by the multiplication of ideographs, often four in number when one would suffice. It seems to us that it is a question of cultivating a comparatively new taste in the nation to take the place of that now prevailing. Dr. Haga thinks the "Ear" party is gaining ground. Musical development is on their side. The growing popularity of the operatic songs called utai, the attention paid to public speaking in the Middle and High Schools and the Universities, Diet oratory, preaching and lecturing of all kinds are all contributing to help the Japanese to wipe off the reproach with which the late Mr. Fukuchi Genichirō taunted them a few years ago when in his outspoken manner he called them "A Tongueless and Earless People" (Mimi to kuchi wo kakeru Nihonjin).

THE "OHIO'S" PERFORMANCE.

The performance given at the Public Hall on Saturday evening by the Minstrel and Vaudeville Troupe of the U.S. flagship Ohio, for the benefit of sufferers from the San Francisco earthquake, proved a decided success and fully justified the little flourish of trumpets in the local press which preceded the entertainment. The only fault was that the boys in blue gave the community a little too much of a good thing, as the performance was not over till about a quarter-past twelve. After a grand overture by the full Ohio orchestra, the first part opened with a chorus by the entire company sung from behind the curtain. When the curtain went up it discovered the troupe seated in the usual semi-circle but all appeared in variegated Japanese kimono, a distinct novelty, while a couple of nēsan at the front executed a Japanese dance and song. Then the lights were turned down and a lightning change was effected, the kimono being discarded and the company appearing in shining black evening dress, only the corner men showing the ebonised faces of the orthodox minstrel. The stage effect was certainly brilliant and novel. The duet "My Lula San" was most effectively rendered by Messrs. Porter and Quinn, "Tell all the Coons I'm comin'" by Messrs. Ropper and Clark, and "The Dusky Cavaliers" by Messrs. Whittaker and Burns, the last named following on with another comic song. Who's There." Mr. Henty, who is gifted with a fine round bass voice, sang the sentimental melody, "I'll meet you in the gloaming, Genevieve" in a style that evoked a vociferous encore. Mr. Clark followed with "Everybody works but Father." The next was a comic song by Mr. Ropper, "My Angemime," which was succeeded by a sentimental ballad "The Little Church where you and I were wed," by Mr. St. John. Perhaps the best of the comic songs was Mr. Whittaker's, (corner man) "Deacon Johnson, Shame on You," while the last item in the first part, a medley "The Yankee Doodle Boy," sung by Mr. Munroe, with the full company standing in the chorus, brought down the house, and had to be repeated. The choruses were all rendered with plenty of spirit and gusto, and the jokes and conundrums cracked between "Mr. Johnson" and the corner men were all new and amusing. After a short interval, at the conclusion of which the orchestra played another selection, the second part of the programme opened with a clever acrobatic act by Messrs Tobler and St. John and was followed by a farcical sketch "The Black Choice," by Messrs. Ropper, Clark and Monroe, which kept the audience in roars of laughter, and incidentally introduced a capital topical song, "The Little Side Door," with reference to the China question. The Ragtime Triplets, Messrs Bunn, Whittaker and Dans executed a trio on banjo, guitar and mandolin, and a step dance and song. A capital exhibition of Indian club exercise, with electric clubs and batons was made by Messrs. Russler and Gerean, and Messrs. Hyland, Isbell and Harvey appeared in a musical skit, the performance concluding with an original farce entitled "At the Side Show," or "Bill Barley's Collection of Freaks," which was certainly amusing, but rather too long drawn out. The orchestra played out the full house to the inspiring strains of "The Star Spangled Banner" after a very enjoyable evening's entertainment.

YACHTING.

Saturday was a capital yachting day. There was little sea anywhere on this side of the bay and a fine moderate to fresh south-easterly breeze blew the yachts over their courses so nicely and agreeably that all the big boats finished within a space of twenty-five minutes, mostly, a little after 4 o'clock, having started at 2 in the afternoon, while of the Larks one capsized, and another broke her masthead, only one coming home in safety for the prize. Maid Marion had an accident which the weight of the wind could hardly be blamed for: she broke her topmast backstay and sprung the topmast just after rounding the Widow Buoy.

There was a good show of 39 raters, larger than we have seen for years, the nearest to it, if we remember aright, being in 1900 when Haidee, the then Kingfisher, Mary, Maid Marion, Golden Hind and Spray raced together. The same number of yachts turned out on Saturday—Mary, Kingfisher, Maid Marion, Riever, Aborigine, and Naniwa and there would have been seven if Nina had not remained at her moorings. They got away very promptly, Riever alone lagging 58 seconds behind the gun. Mary, though not first across, soon ran past the Maid and was first out of the harbour entrance. It was a close reach to the Lightship for the leaders,—Kingfisher was now in second place—but some of the others made wide work of it. Mary at this point was two minutes and a quarter in the lead, and Kingfisher was a minute and a half ahead of Naniwa, the old boat doing very well indeed in the hands of Mr. Boyes, to whom Capt. Weston transferred her when his new yacht came into being. At the spit buoy Mary was 5 min. 20 sec. to the good, Kingfisher cutting it a bit fine and having to make a short board at the mark. Maid Marion and Naniwa raced for the buoy together and got round at the same time but here the Maid had her accident and Naniwa drew away from her. At the Lightship Kingfisher had knocked 35 seconds off Mary's lead but the latter gained only a quarter of a minute on reaching in to the harbour entrance and added a couple of minutes coming home to windward. The times were:—

	Start. h.m.s.	H. Buoy. h.m.s.	Finish. h.m.s.
Mary .....	2.00.15	3.05.30	3.44.59
Kingfisher .....	2.00.15	3.10.50	3.51.57
Maid Marion .....	2.00.01	3.19.00	4.04.23
Riever .....	2.00.58	3.26.15	4.08.45
Aborigine .....	2.00.20	3.25.45	4.09.43
Naniwa .....	2.00.23	3.19.00	4.01.35
Corrected Club Time.
	h.m.s.	Handicap time.	h.m.s.
Mary .....	3.44.26		3.44.59
Kingfisher .....	3.51.57		3.51.57
Maid Marion .....	4.01.25		3.54.23
Riever .....	4.07.00		3.53.45
Aborigine .....	4.06.45		3.49.43
Naniwa .....	3.52.26		3.41.35

Record Points: Mary 5, Kingfisher 4, Naniwa 3, Maid Marion 2, Aborigine 1.

Prizes: Kingfisher first, Naniwa second.

Nos. 5, 11, and 13 started in the Larks' race No. 5 capsized, 11 broke her masthead and 13 came home at 4.05.20 to take the prize.

SPRING MEETING OF THE NIPPON RACE CLUB.

THIRD DAY, FRIDAY, MAY 11.

PATRONS:—H.I.H. Fushimi-no-Miya, H.I.H. Arisugawa-no-Miya, H.I.H. Kanin-no-Miya.

PERMANENT COMMITTEE:—Sir Claude Maxwell MacDonald, K.C.B., G.C.M.G., President, Dr. E. Wheeler, Vice-President, Baron A. d'Anethan, A. Bianchi, Esq., V. Blad, Esq., A. J. Easton, Esq., B. C. Howard, Esq., M. Ichihara, Esq., S. Isaacs, Esq., L. Mottet, Esq., K. Mori, Esq., B. Runge, Esq., Governor Sufu, F. Strahler, Esq., T. Thomas, Esq., T. Taniguchi, Esq., and A. G. M. Weale, Esq.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE:—V. Blad, Esq., Chairman, A. J. Easton, Esq., Hon. Clerk of the Course, T. C. Anderson, Esq., Hon. Treasurer, D. Marshall, Esq., V. A. Caesar-Hawkins, Esq., S. Isaacs, Esq., K. Mori, Esq., and Geo. Hood, Secretary.

The third day of the Spring Meeting was favoured with fine bright weather, though the road to the races and the paddock and approaches were uncomfortably dusty. The course was in capital condition and some good going was made, particularly in the fifth race, when that splendid mare Hitachi, carrying 160 lbs. come very near beating her own record of Spring, 1904, when, carrying 5lbs. less she covered the mile in 1.48½; her time to-day being 1.48½. Capital sport was afforded by most of the events and the attendance of visitors, particularly of ladies, was larger than usual in the third day of the meeting.

The events were as follow:—

1.—BRISBANE HANDICAP, value yen 600, the Second to receive yen 150, and the Third yen 75; for Australian Subscription Horses of Autumn 1905. Winner at the Meeting excluded. One Mile.

Mr. N. Kawakita's Sazanami, 145lb. (Takahashi) 1
Mr. Kanagawa's Princess, 141lb. (Miyagawa) 2

Only two of the seven entrants started in this race, Sazanami being far and away the favourite, Princess, on the inside, got the best of the start, but was passed by the favourite at the rise and the latter led by two lengths at the Shakespeare. At the Trees Princess pulled up a little and entering the straight was level with Sazanami, and a good race home resulted in Sazanami winning by half a length. Time, 1.54.

PARI MUTUEL.—Paid yen 6.

2.—THE ALL CHINA SUBSCRIPTION HANDICAP, value yen 400, the Second to receive yen 100, and the Third yen 50; for all China Subscription Ponies; winners at the Meeting excluded. One Mile and a Quarter.

Mr. R. Loonen's Charmeur, 157lb. (Mr. Mottu) 1
Mr. Tandem's Coot, 149lb. (Mr. Elliott) 2
Mr. Rochester's Mark, 135lb. (Sikichi) 3
Mr. Alexander's Manchuria, 145lb. (Yasu) 0
Mr. Island's Daijobu, 140lb. (Mr. Hudson) 0
Mr. Swarby's Finasseur, 146lb. (Ichij) 0
Mr. Star's Petit Canard, 147lb. (Igaki) 0
Mr. Star's Kintoki, 136lb. (Awoki) 0
Mr. News' Figaro II., 145lb. (Nakamura) 0
Mr. Jorrocks' The Miller, 149lb. (Mr. Fletcher) 0
Mr. Duplex's Aeolus, 135lb. (Mr. Dietrich) 0

Coot and Charmeur were the most favoured of the eleven starters, but it was a very open event at the weights. A poor start was made, but at the Stand Coot and the Miller led by a length and half. At the top of the hill Petit Canard joined the leaders. Entering the straight Charmeur got to the front and after a close race home with Coot, won by half a length, while Mark finished third, two lengths behind Coot. Time 2.48½.

PARI MUTUEL.—Paid yen 17.

3.—THE AUSTRALIAN GRIFFINS' FIRST HANDICAP, value yen 500, the Second to receive yen 125, and the Third yen 75; for Australian Subscription Horses of Spring 1906; winners at the Meeting excluded. One Mile.

Mr. S. Sato's Fujiyama, 140lb. (Ebano) 1
Mr. Alexander's Powerful, 150lb. (Yasu) 2
Mr. J. Koerting's A. G. G., 145lb. (Sugiyama) 3
Mr. Cotton's Shinano, 122lb. (Awoki) 0
Mr. R. Loonen's Charmeur, 125lb. (Fujisaki) 0

Powerful and Charmeur were most in favour out of the five starters. A. G. G. was first away, but rising the hill Fujiyama took the lead and a little later Powerful also passed A. G. G. This order was maintained to the finish, Fujiyama winning by five or six lengths from Powerful, and A. G. G. third, about the same distance behind. Going up the hill Awoki, on Shinano, was thrown, but was not seriously hurt and was able to walk back to the stables. Time 1.54½.

PARI MUTUEL.—Paid yen 14.

4.—THE CHINA GRIFFINS' FIRST HANDICAP, value yen 350, the Second to receive yen 100, and the Third yen 50; for China Subscription Ponies of Spring 1906; winners at the Meeting excluded. One Mile.

Mr. Bubbling Wells' Inbancor, 155lb.

Major Trick's Hussard, 145lb. (Mr. Dietrich) 1
Mr. Sport's Dai-ji-nai, 142lb. (Hakodate) 2
Mr. R. Loonen's Farceur, 131lb. (Ichij) 3
Mr. Nanatsu's Ikuta, 133lb. (Nakazumi) 0
Mr. Tatsuta's Toba, 147lb. (Takahashi) 0
Mr. Green's Shoji, 152lb. (Tsubouchi) 0
Mr. States' Pennsylvania, 138lb. (Sugiyama) 0
Mr. B. Runge's Schnuckelchen, 143lb. (Sugiyama) 0
Mr. Jorrocks' Antaxerxes, 156lb. (Capt. Leader) 0
Capt. Leader's Rory O'More, 140lb. (Tazamo) 0

Hussard appeared to be the favourite amongst the big field of starters. Dai-ji-nai led at the start but was overhauled by Shoji at the top of the hill, with Hussard next in order. Between the Trees and the entrance to the straight Inbancor came to the front and after a very fine race down the straight with Hussard won cleverly by a head with Dai-ji-nai third about a length and half behind. Time 2.13.

PARI MUTUEL.—Paid yen 63.
5.—THE COSMOPOLITAN HANDICAP, value yen 600, the Second to receive yen 150, and the Third yen 75; for all Subscription Horses and Country Breds. One Mile.

Mr. N. Kawakita's Hitachi, 160lb. (Ebano) 1
Mr. Star's May-mie, 150lb. (Higaki) 2
Mr. Sports' Dekimasho, 120lb. (Mr. Catto) 3
Mr. H. Lefebvre's Flash, 140lb. (Yasu) 0
Mr. Kanagawa's Princess, 101lb. (Tamazo) 0
Mr. Norfolk's Parma Violet, 131lb. (Mr. Dietrich) 0
Mr. Norfolk's Patricia, 125lb. (Sugiyama) 0
Mr. Cotton's Yabagi, 125lb. (Jimba) 0
Mr. N. Kawakita's Diamond, 125lb. (Nihonyanagi) 0

Mr. Tatsuta's Suma, 140lb. (Takahashi) 0
Mr. Green's Kachidoki, 150lb. (Tsubouchi) 0

After a fairly level start Dekimasho and Parma Violet showed at the front, but were shortly overhauled by Hitachi and Flash. At the Trees May-mie came away from the tuck and in the straight passed Dekimasho and challenged Hitachi for the lead. The latter, however, kept her advantage and won by half a length from May-mie, Dekimasho finishing third a length and half behind May-mie. Time 1.48½.

PARI MUTUEL.—Paid yen 28 on Hitachi and Diamond; the stable.

6.—THE MIXED AUSTRALIAN HANDICAP, value yen 600, the Second to receive yen 150, and the Third yen 75; for Australian Subscription Horses of Autumn 1905 non-winners at the meeting, and Australian Subscription Horses of Spring 1906. Three-Quarters of a Mile.

Mr. Star's Gold Star, 150lb. (Higashi) 1
Mr. Green's Otowa, 150lb. (Tsubouchi) 2
Mr. Kanagawa's Countess, 143lb. (Miyagawa) 3

Only three out of thirty-one entrants started for this race, many of course being excluded by previous wins. Countess led to the half mile post, when Gold Star took the lead, and a little later Otowa displaced Countess in second place. The same order was maintained to the finish, Gold Star winning by a length from Otowa with Countess eight lengths behind. Time 1.21½.

PARI MUTUEL.—Paid yen 19.

7.—THE ALL CHINA HANDICAP, value yen 450, the Second to receive yen 125, and the Third yen 75; for all China Ponies. One Mile and a Quarter.

Mr. Tandem's Coot, 142lb. (Nakayama) 1
Mr. Duplex's Raubgraf, 160lb. (Mr. Dietrich) 2
Mr. R. Loonen's Empereur, 154lb. (Mr. Mottu) 3
Capt. Leader's Duhallo, 122lb. (Tamazo) 0
Mr. Kanagawa's May-oui, 138lb. (Miyagawa) 0
Mr. Alexander's Sceptre II., 148lb. (Yasu) 0
Mr. Snipe's Bravo, 135lbs. (Kawasaki) 0
Major Trick's Grenadier, 138lb. (Hisakichi) 0
Major Trick's Voltigeur, 154lb. (Hakodate) 0
Mr. Cotton's Flounder, 145lb. (Rikizo) 0
Mr. Cotton's Kiso, 148lb. (Jimba) 0
Mr. R. Loonen's Charmeur, 155lb. (Kuramoto) 0
Mr. Monte Carlo's Iron King, 157lb. (Takahashi) 0
Mr. Tatsuta's Intermediate, 133lb. (Enano) 0
Mr. Star's Enjoleur, 135lb. (Higaki) 0
Mr. J. Koerting's Csardas, 140lb. (Sugiyama) 0

This race brought out the biggest field of the meeting, 16 ponies facing the starter, and was a very open event. Kiso got rather the best of the start but at the Stand Sceptre and Coot were leading. At the half mile Grenadier ran the first flight with Duhallo close up. In the straight Raubgraf worked to the front and after a fine race home with Coot finished second, the latter winning by about half a length, Empereur third, a length behind. Time 2.47½.

PARI MUTUEL.—Paid yen 144.

8.—THE AUSTRALIAN GRIFFINS' SECOND HANDICAP, value yen 500, the Second to receive yen 125, and the Third yen 75; for Australian Subscription

Horses of Spring, 1906; winners at the Meeting excluded. Three-Quarters of a Mile.

Mr. Snipe's Refined, 135lb. (Kawasaki) 1
Mr. Sports' Daitan, 140lb. (Mr. Catto) 2
Mr. States' Wyoming, 140lb. (Sugiyama) 3
Mr. H. Lefebvre's Fleet, 127lb. (Kuramoto) 0
Mr. H. Lefebvre's Flight, 115lb. (Fujisaki) 0
Mr. Cotton's Nagara, 145lb. (Jimba) 0
Mr. Star's Silver Star, 132lb. (Higaki) 0
Mr. H. Kawakita's Ayame II., 125lb. (Nihonyanagi) 0
Mr. H. Kawakita's Kasumi, 130lb. (Ebano) 0

Refined got away with the best of the start, Nagara being left behind. Daitan ran into second place at the Shakespeare and coming down the straight, kept that position, Refined keeping her lead and winning by two lengths, while Wyoming finished third a couple of lengths behind Daitan. Time 1.30½.

PARI MUTUEL.—Paid yen 36.50.

9.—THE CHINA GRIFFINS' SECOND HANDICAP, value yen 350, the Second to receive yen 100, and the Third yen 50; for China Subscription Ponies of Spring 1906; winners at the Meeting excluded. Three-Quarters of a Mile.

Major Trick's Hussard, 160lb. (Hakodate) 1
Mr. B. Runge's Schnuckelchen, 156lb. (Sugiyama) 2
Mr. Tatsuta's Toba, 138lb. (Takahashi) 3
Capt. Leader's Royal Kildare, 144lb. (Capt. Leader) 0
Mr. R. Loonen's Farceur, 135lb. (Kuramoto) 0
Mr. Island's Daijimai, 157lb. (Ichij) 0
Mr. Monte Carlo's Blue Peter, 138lb. (Nihonyanagi) 0
Mr. Island's Malta, 138lb. (Mr. Hudson) 0
Mr. Nanatsu's Ikuta, 142lb. (Higaki) 0
Mr. States' Pennsylvania, 150lb. (Sugiyama) 0
Mr. Jorrocks' Xerxes, 145lb. (Mr. Hawkins) 0
Mr. H. Kashiwagi's Robin, 138lb. (Goto) 0

After a capital start Hussard made the running, with Pennsylvania next, and kept this order to the entrance to the straight, where Schnuckelchen ran into second place. Hussard won by about four lengths from Schnuckelchen, Toba, who had come up in the distance, finishing third, a full length behind. Time not posted.

PARI MUTUEL.—Paid yen 15.

FOURTH DAY, SATURDAY, MAY 12.

The fourth day of the Spring Meeting was again favoured with splendid weather conditions. The attendance was probably the largest on record for the last day, and the sport afforded by the nine events was fully up to the average.

1.—CHINA GRIFFIN WINNERS' HANDICAP, value yen 450; for China Subscription Ponies of Spring 1906; forced entry for winners at the Meeting. One Mile and a Furlong.

Major Trick's Hussard, 145lb. (Hakodate) 1
Mr. Alexander's Sceptre II., 150lb. (Yasu) 2
Mr. Cotton's Kiso, 155lb. (Jimba) 3
Capt. Leader's Canuck, 138lb. (Mr. Fletcher) 0
Mr. Bubbling Wells' Inbancor, 150lb. (Mr. Dietrich) 0

Kiso, the favourite, made the running at the start, but was displaced in the lead by Sceptre II at the top of the hill. Between the Trees and the bend Hussard worked up to the front and down the straight increasing his lead, won by five lengths from Sceptre II, the favourite, Kiso, a good third. Time 2.31½.

PARI MUTUEL.—Paid yen 31.50.

2.—THE CHINA WINNERS' HANDICAP, value yen 600; for all China Ponies; (Subscription Ponies of Spring 1906 excluded) forced entry for winners at the Meeting. One Mile and a Furlong.

Mr. Tandem's Coot, 152lb. (Mr. Mottu) 1
Mr. Duplex's Raubgraf, 160lb. (Mr. Dietrich) 2
Mr. R. Loonen's Charmeur, 142lb. (Higaki) 3
Mr. Cotton's Flounder, 142lb. (Rikizo) 0
Major Trick's Voltigeur, 150lb. (Hisakichi) 0

Flounder led for the first three-quarters, when Coot, who had been running in second place, took the lead, and finished by four lengths in front of Raubgraf, who had run into second place in the straight; Charmeur third. Time 2.31½.

PARI MUTUEL.—Paid yen 19.50.

3.—THE CHINA NON-WINNERS' HANDICAP, value yen 350, the Second to receive yen 100, and the Third yen 50; for all China Ponies, (Subscription Ponies of Spring 1906 excluded) that have started at the Meeting and not won a race. One Mile.

Mr. Duplex's Aeolus, 148lb. (Mr. Dietrich) 1
Mr. News' Figaro II., 135lb. (Nakamura) 2
Mr. Monte Carlo's Iron King, 143lb. (Nihonyanagi) 3
Capt. Leader's Duhallo, 135lb. (Tamazo) 0
Mr. Kanagawa's May-oui, 135lb. (Miyagawa) 0
Mr. Snipe's Bravo, 135lb. (Kawasaki) 0
Major Trick's Grenadier, 138lb. (Hakodate) 0
Mr. R. Loonen's Empereur, 155lb. (Mr. Mottu) 0
Mr. Island's Daijobu, 129lb. (Fujisaki) 0
Mr. Swarby's Finasseur, 140lb. (Ichij) 0
Mr. Tatsuta's Intermediate, 132lb. (Ebano) 0
Mr. Star's Petit Canard, 130lb. (Awoki) 0
Mr. Star's Enjoleur, 135lb. (Higaki) 0

Finaisseur made the running as far as the Trees, whom Aeolus came to the front and won by a length from Figaro II; Iron King a good third. Time 2.10 1/2.

PARI MUTUEL.—Paid yen 54.

4.—The AUSTRALIAN GRIFFIN WINNERS' HANDICAP, value yen 600; for Australian Subscription Horses of Spring 1906; forced entry for winners at the Meeting. One Mile and a Furlong.

Mr. Green's Otowa, 145lb. .... (Tsubouchi) 1
Mr. Star's Gold Star, 155lb. .... (Higaki) 2
Mr. S. Sato's Fujiyama, 133lb. .... (Ebano) 3
Mr. Kanagawa's Countess, 138lb. .... (Hakodate) 0
Mr. Snipe's Refined, 135lb. .... (Kawasaki) 0

Otowa ran into second place soon after the start and at the corner into the straight displaced Gold Star in the lead and won by three lengths from the latter; Fujiyama a good third. Time 2.09 3/8.

PARI MUTUEL.—Paid yen 10.

5.—The AUSTRALIAN AND COUNTRY BREDS WINNERS' HANDICAP, value yen 750; for Australian Subscription Horses and Country Breds; (Subscription Horses of Spring 1906 excluded). Forced entry for winners at the Meeting. One Mile and a Furlong.

Mr. Star's May-mie, 145lb. .... (Higaki) 1
Mr. Sport's Dekimasho, 122lb. .... (Mr. Catto) 2
Mr. N. Kawakita's Hitachi, 160lb. .... (Ebano) 3
Mr. Cotton's Yahagi, 117lb. .... (Awoki) 0
Mr. Kawakita's Sazanami, 122lb. .... (Nihonyanagi) 0

Hitachi and May-mie were almost equally backed for this event. After a capital race the latter, who started with the lead, won by three lengths from Dekimasho, Hitachi, who was carrying 160lbs., third. Time 2.05 1/2.

PARI MUTUEL.—Paid yen 13.

6.—The CHINA GRIFFINS' CONSOLATION, value yen 300, the Second to receive yen 125, and the Third yen 50; for China Subscription Ponies of Spring 1906 that have started at the meeting and not won a race; weight as per scale. One Mile.

Mr. Jorrock's Artaxerxes, 155lb. .... (Ichi) 1
Mr. Sport's Daijinai, 144lb. .... (Seikichi) 2
Mr. Green's Shijo, 158lb. .... (Tsubouchi) 3
Capt. Leader's Rory O'More, 147lb. .... (Mr. Fletcher) 0
Capt. Leader's Royal Kildare, 147lb. .... (Capt. Leader) 0

Mr. R. Loonen's Farceur, 150lb. .... (Fujisaki) 0
Mr. Island's Malta, 150lb. .... (Koide) 0
Mr. Nanatsu's Ikuta, 152lb. .... (Higaki) 0
Mr. Tatsuta's Toba, 152lb. .... (Takahashi) 0
Mr. States' Pennsylvania, 155lb. .... (Jimba) 0
Mr. J. Koerting's Csardas, 152lb. .... (Sugiyama) 0
Mr. B. Runge's Schnuckelchen, 155lb. .... (Sugiyama) 0

After a very close race with Dai-jinai Artaxerxes won by half a length. Time 2.15 1/2.

PARI MUTUEL.—Paid yen 14.

7.—The MIXED CONSOLATION HANDICAP, value yen 500; the Second to receive yen 125, and the Third yen 75; for Australian Subscription Horses and Country Breds (Subscription Horses of Spring 1906 excluded) that have started at the meeting and not won a race. One Mile and a Quarter.

Mr. Tatsuta's Suma, 143lb. .... (Takahashi) 1
Mr. Green's Kachidoki, 155lb. .... (Tsubouchi) 2
Mr. Kawakita's Diamond, 130lb. .... (Ebano) 3
Mr. H. Lefebvre's Flash, 149lb. .... (Mr. Catto) 0
Mr. Norfolk's Patricia, 127lb. .... (Mr. Dietrich) 0

This was expected to be a win for Flash or Kachidoki, but the old veteran Suma showed that she has a lot of going yet left in her and after laying back in third and then second place till the corner entering the straight, put on a spurt and won by half a length from Kachidoki. Time 2.21 1/2.

PARI MUTUEL.—Paid yen 23.50.

8.—The AUSTRALIAN GRIFFINS' CONSOLATION value yen 450, the Second to receive yen 100 and the Third yen 50; for Australian Subscription Horses of Spring 1906 that have started at the Meeting and not won a race; weight for Age. Three-Quarters of a Mile.

Mr. Sport's Daitan, 127lb. .... (Mr. Catto) 1
Mr. States' Wyoming, 137lb. .... (Sugiyama) 2
Mr. Alexander's Powerful, 137lb. .... (Yasu) 3
Mr. H. Lefebvre's Fleet, 132lb. .... (Kuramoto) 0
Mr. H. Lefebvre's Flight, 132lb. .... (Fujisaki) 0
Mr. Cotton's Nagara, 137lb. .... (Jimba) 0
Mr. Cotton's Shinano, 132lb. .... (Awoki) 0
Mr. N. Kawakita's Kasumi, 137lb. .... (Ebano) 0
Mr. Star's Silver Star, 137lb. .... (Higaki) 0

This was considered a very open event. The race resulted in a match between Wyoming and Daitan, the former having the lead for half the distance when Daitan came up and won by half a length. Time 1.24 1/2.

PARI MUTUEL.—Paid yen 11.50.

9.—The CHINA CONSOLATION, value yen 350, the Second to receive yen 100, and the Third yen 50; for all China Subscription Ponies that have started at the Meeting and not won a race; weight as per Scale. One

Majoor Trick's Grenadier, 155lb. .... (Hisakichi)*1
Mr. News' Figaro II, 150lb. .... (Nakamura)*1
Mr. Swarby's Finaisseur, 155lb. .... (Nakazumi) 2
Capt. Leader's Duhallow, 153lb. .... (Capt. Leader) 0
Capt. Leader's Rory O'More, 147lb. .... (Mr. Hawkins) 0
Capt. Leader's Royal Kildare, 144lb. .... (Mr. Fletcher) 0
Mr. Kanagawa's May-oui, 158lb. .... (Hakodate) 0
Mr. Island's Daijoubu, 147lb. .... (Mr. Hudson) 0
Mr. Tatsuta's Toba, 152lb. .... (Takahashi) 0
Mr. Green's Shijo, 158lb. .... (Tsubouchi) 0
Mr. Star's Petit Canard, 152lb. .... (Higaki) 0
Mr. Star's Enjoleur, 152lb. .... (Jimba) 0
Mr. Rochester's Kobe II, 147lb. .... (Tamazo) 0
Mr. Rochester's Mark, 150lb. .... (Seikichi) 0
Mr. J. Koerting's Csardas, 152lb. .... (Sugiyama) 0
Mr. B. Runge's Schnuckelchen, 155lb. .... (Sugiyama) 0
Mr. Jorrock's The Miller, 155lb. .... (Mr. Mottu) 0

* Dead heat.
The race brought out a record field of 17 ponies. For the first quarter mile the ponies ran in a big bunch but the next quarter strung them out. Figaro and Grenadier struggled for the lead at the entrance to the straight and could not get away from each other, finishing in a dead heat, Finaisseur next. Time 2.13.

Afterwards the dead heat was run off and Grenadier won.

THE COPYRIGHT CONVENTION BETWEEN JAPAN AND THE UNITED STATES.

His Majesty the Emperor of Japan and the President of the United States of America being equally desirous to extend to their subjects and citizens the benefit of legal protection in both countries in regard to copyright, have, to this end, decided to conclude a Convention, and have appointed as their respective Plenipotentiaries:—

His Majesty the Emperor of Japan, General Count Taro Katsura, Junii, First Class of the Imperial Order of the Rising Sun, Third Class of the Imperial Order of the Golden Kite, His Imperial Majesty's Minister of State for Foreign Affairs; and

The President of the United States of America, Lloyd C. Griscom, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States of America to Japan;

Who, having reciprocally communicated their full powers, found in good and due form, have agreed as follows:—

Art. I.—The subjects or citizens of each of the two High Contracting Parties shall enjoy in the dominions of the other, the protection of copyright for their works of literature and art as well as photographs, against illegal reproduction, on the same basis on which protection is granted to the subjects or citizens of the other, subject however to the provisions of Art. II of the present Convention.

Art. II.—The subjects or citizens of each of the two High Contracting Parties may without authorization translate books, pamphlets or any other writings, dramatic works, and musical compositions published in the dominions of the other by the subjects or citizens of the latter, and print and publish such translations.

Art. III.—The present Convention shall be ratified, and the ratifications thereof shall be exchanged at Tokio as soon as possible. It shall come into operation from the date of the exchange of ratifications, and shall be applicable to such works only as shall be published after it shall have come into operation. Either of the Contracting Parties shall have the right, at any time, to give notice to the other of its intention to terminate the present Convention, and at the expiration of three months after such notice is given this Convention shall wholly cease and determine.

In witness whereof the above-mentioned Plenipotentiaries have signed the present Convention and have affixed thereto their seals.

Done in duplicate at Tokio, in the Japanese and English languages, this 10th day of the 11th month of the 38th year of Meiji, corresponding to the 10th day of November, of year one thousand nine hundred and five.

(L. S.) TARO KATSURA.
(L. S.) LLOYD C. GRISCOM.

(Translation.)

Foreign Office,
November 10, 1905.

Monsieur le Ministre,

With reference to Art. III of the Copyright Convention signed this day between Japan and the United States of America, I have the honour, in order to avoid any possible misunderstanding in future, to declare that the Imperial Government take the word "published" used in the said Article as intended to mean "published for the first time," and consequently that the convention shall not be applicable to any reproduction in future in one of the two contracting countries of works published in the other country prior to the exchange of ratifications. The Imperial Government should be much gratified to be assured that Your Excellency's Government concur in the interpretation above given.

I avail myself, etc. TARO KATSURA.
His Excellency
LLOYD C. GRISCOM,
&c., &c., &c.
American Legation,
Tokio, November 10, 1905.

Monsieur le Ministre,
In reply to Your Excellency's note of to-day regarding the meaning of the word "published" used in Art. III of the Copyright Convention signed this day between the United States of America and Japan, I have honor to state that the American Government entirely concur in the interpretation given by the Imperial Japanese Government to the said word "published" and that the said Convention shall not be applicable to any reproduction in future in one of the two contracting countries of works published in the other country prior to the exchange of ratifications.

I avail myself, etc.
(Signed.) LLOYD C. GRISCOM.
His Excellency
COUNT KATSURA TARO,
&c., &c., &c.

THE FLAGRA.

It is reported by the Governor of Fukuoka that the British steamer Dongola, which left Bombay on April 18th, arrived at Moji on May 13th via various ports. Two cases of bubonic plague appeared among the firemen while on the way between Bombay and Penang, and one of the victims died and another was removed to hospital at Penang. Disinfecting measures were, therefore carried out on the ship. Her cargo consists of cotton, wool, and sundry goods. Three hundred and fifty bales of raw cotton among the cargo were landed at Moji and the remainder is destined for Kobe and Yokohama.

The Japanese Consul at Chefoo wired on May 13th to the Foreign Office that the sanitary authorities there have decided not to continue the enforcement of disinfecting measures on vessels from Osaka and Kobe.

On May 15th a case of plague appeared among the patients in a hospital attached to the College of Medicine, Fukuoka.

The Governor of Hyogo prefecture reports a new case of plague the same day at Hyogo Railway Station. The victim is a fireman.

JAPANESE PRISONERS.

The examination of Lieut.-Commander T. Mizoguchi, of the transport Kinshu Maru, which was destroyed by the Vladivostok squadron off Wonsan, Korea, during the war is reported by the Hochi to have been concluded at the Yokosuka Naval Station and he was committed for trial. According to the statement of the accused, says our contemporary, the soldiers on the ship under his command should be regarded as non-combatants at sea. Consequently he proceeded to the enemy's ship to request the stopping of the firing upon the Kinshu. When he reached the enemy's ship, he was at once placed under arrest. He had not intended to surrender to the enemy. Colonel Murakami, Ensign Umezawa, and Major Togo, who were undergoing examination at the offices of various Divisions, were recently released and restored to their posts. It may be remembered that Major Togo was captured at Wiju, Korea, before the outbreak of the war, and that Colonel Murakami and Ensign Umezawa were seized in Manchuria while left on the field wounded.

S. Wakabayashi (31) a grog-shop keeper in Ashibiki-cho, Yokohama, at 3 p.m. on May 14th attempted to murder his wife, Shima (25), and a workman named R. Yoneyama (25) at a small inn, in Sueyoshi-cho inflicting on them severe injuries with a short sword. He was at once arrested by a policeman. The same evening he was removed to the Yokohama District Court. Jealousy is said to be the cause.

AMERICAN TOPICS.

[WRITTEN FOR THE "JAPAN MAIL."]

New York, April 1906.

Great Gotham is so accustomed to big things, that what I am about to describe are matters of course in the Manhattan borough of the city that is getting to be of London-like proportions.

To attend a lecture on the Commodore Perry Expedition of 1853-54, and then to make a voyage by elevator to the twenty-eighth story of his grandson's "Hotel Belmont," and to go from pictures of the Susquehanna and Mississippi type of ship, to the New Amsterdam ocean "liner" of 30,000 tons burden, is to enjoy contrasts. In the Public School or Board of Education courses of lectures, two hundred or more addresses illustrated by stereopticon are given in the various boroughs of Greater New York, every week from October to May. Last evening, Mr. Speiden, who, as son of the fleet pursuer in Perry's squadron, stepped on land at Kurihama and Yokohama, and saw much of the treaty-making episode, both on deck and shore, gave a pleasing account of his experiences.

I myself, as a little boy, saw the launching of the U. S. S. Susquehanna at the Philadelphia Navy Yard, but very recently met three hale and hearty young men who were with Commodore Biddle in the Bay of Yedo in 1845. Mr. Chas. Caswell, who was an active marine engineer in the thirties, and repaired the Mississippi during the Mexican War, is daily in his office at the City Hall. How young these early voyagers to Japan are! Possibly, after all Dai Nippon may be the Horai Shima, and the Isles of Mortal Youth.

This morning I went over, or rather, up and down, the Hotel Belmont, from the roof of which one can see if not all the kingdoms of the world and the glory of them, he can at least catch hints. Southward is the sea and northward the great river, eastward Brooklyn, and westward Jersey City and the Palisades. Between the Atlantic and the Catskills, the eye ranges over the region at which Henry Hudson in 1609, first of white men, doubtless (even supposing Verrazanno told the truth) first looked. Under one, among the wilderness of roofs, glinting in the morning sun, the Committee, to plan the celebration of the three hundredth anniversary (in September 1909) of the great explorer, is sitting. The Legislature has approved and made appropriations to carry out the scheme of a week's frolic and instruction, including a naval pageant up the river to Albany, with landings all along, with spectacles and processions.

Americans are strong on celebrations. This very week the Daughters of the Revolution are gathering in all their Easter finery and irrepressible patriotism, twelve hundred strong. For the most part the masculine societies who uphold America Damashii steadily reach the dinner eating stage, but the women—noble conservatives, in the State as in the Church,—do the most work. It is the women who rear the memorial tablets, mark the ancient heroes' graves, and secure the proper instruction in their own tongues of the Italians, Poles, Russians and various nationalities that come to the land of freedom.

All records are broken this week, when 225,000 European immigrants land at Castle Garden.

But to the Hotel Belmont! It stands four-square on the S. W. corner of 42nd St. and 4th Avenue just across from the Grand Central Station—the only one in New York City—all other railroads except the New York Central and the New York, New Haven and Hartford railways being obliged to ferry their passengers across the East or Hudson river to the Island of Manhattan. Hotel Belmont is five minutes from everywhere: "The tunnel," the subway, the surface and the elevated lines of cars ("trams" they call them in England) are at the doors of the hotel. Mr. O. H. P. Belmont, having opened subterranean Manhattan, now owns real estate hundreds of feet in the air skyward.

Four years ago, I saw the first blast which rent the solid granite on the surface of Fourth Avenue. For many months the eighty or hundred feet of foundation was being blasted out. When

May 1st—New York's moving day, ever since the Dutch landed to make homes in 1623—shall have come, and the thousand rooms are inhabited, Mr. Belmont's bills, paid or payable, will be about five millions of dollars. Below the side walks are five stories, and above are 22. In this 27-story house, are 900 bedrooms, heated, lighted ventilated, furnished in latest modern style, with telephones, letter chutes, and whatever facilitates comfort. Between six and seven hundred persons will have their names on the pay roll and help to make patrons happy. I found, this morning, that even for general exploration, a guide was almost necessary as the mirrors delude and bewilder one by their prodigality of numbers. Looked at from the street level, the edifice seems modest and one cannot realize that two or three thousand people can be comfortably housed under its roof until he looks high in air. Hotels not very dissimilar are building by the dozen all over New York.

But land and air, and the space under the earth are not the only portions of the planet pre-empted and struggled for on narrow Manhattan. The Pennsylvania Railway people are burrowing rapidly toward the light. Already the old Broadway Tabernacle at 34th St. and Broadway and Sixth Avenue—Herald Square—is nearly leveled and next month will be as "the base fabric of a vision." Other structures, counted luxurious as well as famous, a generation ago, are passing away, and "structural steel" frames, to be veneered with stone slabs or brick, cancellate the sky line and tell of more sky-scrapers which turn the streets into tunnels. New York's problem is hourly increasing in see-saw style. It is how to transport, within one or two hours time, a half million persons in a hurry, from the north end to the south end of Manhattan island from 7 to 9 a.m. and to get them back between 6 and 7 p.m. The river ferries have much the same problem with the "suburbanites," and "commuters. "Will New York ever be finished?

If it be pendulum on land, it is shuttle on the water. Americans must go to Europe to see, and Europeans must come to America to grow up. Steamer companies race each other in time and are rivals in capacity. One wonders what is to become of Italy—but even more of the United States. How digest the mass? Looking on the surface one is disquieted. Going into the public schools, seeing often forty nationalities represented, but all speaking, writing, using English, and keeping in close touch with the educating, evangelizing, conservative forces—that lie deep under the cheap newspapers—one feels more reassured. Within a very few hours, Maxim Gorky found even the hotels closed against one whose peculiar marital status is not, in the average eye, to be excused by "genius."

The New Amsterdam, a big Dutch "liner" that arrived yesterday can carry 450 first, 250 second, and 3,000 third class passengers. Her maiden voyage was finished yesterday and to-morrow night a banquet will be served on board to friends and guests of the N. A. S. M. (Netherlands Americanische Stoomvaart Maatschappij). Instead of such "words of learned length and thundering sound," the term "Holland-America Line" is used on this side of the Atlantic. Built for comfort instead of speed the New Amsterdam is a nine days boat, 615 feet long, 68½ feet beam, and 48 feet deep, of 17,250 tons register and 30,000 tons displacement. There are five decks, the promenade space covering 8,200 square feet. The decoration is Dutch-Japanese-American. Not a few Americans, including your correspondent, expect to cross May 30th to Holland to attend the ter-centenary of Rembrandt, which occurs at Leyden and Amsterdam, July 14, 15, 16.

The two hundredth anniversary of Benjamin Franklin to be held in Philadelphia April 17-20 will attract a throng of the learned in and outside of the Quaker City. The Asiatic Society of Japan will be represented by four of its members. Prof. Benj. Lyman, Prof. Geo. W. Knox, and your correspondent are in the number. Prof. Nicolls, of Cornell University, which has a medalion to "Franklin the first American electrician," will read the paper contrasting the electrical theories of Franklin. On Sunday last, Easter,

Rev. Dr. Arthur Smith of China (who sails from Seattle, June 7th) preached in the pulpit of Saga chapel, Cornell University. The two Chinese embassies visited Ithaca. Mr. Hu Chang, who wrote the first book in the Chinese language on railways and is now chief engineer of the Hankow-Szechuen railway was also at his Alma Mater, Cornell, last week. Another visitor in Ithaca at the same time was Rev. George Heber Jones of Seoul, Korea. Before returning to Cho-sen, Dr. Jones will visit the Koreans in Hawaii. Professor Homer Hulbert, editor of the Korra Review, is said to be here in New York writing a book on Korea. Certainly a trustworthy and comprehensive work on the Land of Morning Calm is much needed. The late Dr. David Murray's Story of Japan, revised to date and with a chapter by Baron Kaneko is to be out this month. In the literature of criticism we note the letter of Perry Belmont—another of Commodore Perry's grandsons—which is a sharp arraignment of President's Roosevelt's "muck rake" speech in Washington last Saturday. Antiquarians and freemasons noted that the gavel used in laying the corner stone of the Business Office of the House of Representatives—which gives each congressman a room to himself—was held and used by five presidents, including Washington and Fillmore, by the latter, at the extension of the capitol in 1852.

We are to have not only a new biography of President Millard Fillmore, who by his personal interest and executive backing made Perry's Expedition a success, but also a life history of Secretary of the U.S. Navy William A. Graham, who selected Perry for the work and persevered in the work of assembling and despatching the vessels of his squadron. In John A. Trise's "Recollections of (seven?) Presidents," soon to be out we shall get a lively book. He is the son of the famous Virginia Governor. We may have as piquant reminiscences as some of those in Mrs. Roger A. Pryor's. She tells, among other things, how when the Li Kamon no Kami embassy reached Washington, she laid her fan on the elder "ambassador's" hat, and secured his (much lower-priced!) one in return, as souvenir. What a jolly world, rich in frivolities that make April showers of gaiety and "problems" that vex the soul!

W. E. G.

THE LAW COURTS.

CIGAR SMUGGLING.

In the Yokohama District Court on May 11th, sentence was given in the criminal case instituted against Mr. Will A. Tom, a Hawaiian, charged with having infringed the Customs Law. Judge Satomi ordered defendant to pay a fine of yen 124.25 and decided that the ninety-eight boxes of cigar concerned in the case be confiscated.

THE KOBE DIVORCE CASE.

In the Kobe Chiho Saibansho on Wednesday, says the Kobe Herald, the hearing of Mr. Ehrig's petition for divorce was resumed. Mr. Yamashita, Counsel for the petitioner, produced a certificate from the German Consul at Kobe to the effect that Mr. Ehrig is a German subject. Counsel also submitted exhibits to show that adultery is one of the grounds for divorce recognised by German law.

After brief arguments by Mr. Yamashita, and Mr. Hirano is support of the petition, the Public Procurator stated, at the request of the Court, that he had no objection to the divorce being granted.

Judgment was reserved until the 16th instant.

CLAIM FOR SHORT DELIVERY.

The hearing of a case instituted by K. Iwai of Osaka against Captain Weston, claiming yen 1,276.50 for short delivery of cargo was resumed on May 12th in the Yokohama District Court before Judge Nagata.

Defendant's Counsel said that the cargo which is alleged by the plaintiff to be yet undelivered had, in fact, been all duly landed by the defendant. A cask of chlorate of potash, which was included in the list of short delivery, was lying at the Customs warehouse owing to delay in taking delivery by the plaintiff.

To define the position of the defendant, plaintiff's Counsel produced in Court several copies of the delivery notes issued by the defendants and said that the defendants had acted throughout as independent landing agent and not as landing agent of the steamship company concerned.

Defendant's Counsel stated that it was a practice with the Steamship Company not to invite consignees to take delivery of cargo direct from alongside the steamer, but appointed Captain Weston as landing agent. Up to September 14th last year the defendant had acted as landing agent under the authorisation of Messrs. Butterfield and Swire and the consignees were to receive their cargo from the defendant by first showing the bill of lading duly countersigned by the shipping agents. After that date the firm established a landing department to transact landing business. Counsel produced a copy of the bill of lading and stated the counter-signature appearing thereon clearly established that the defendant was acting as landing agent for the steamship company. According to commercial usage claims for short delivery were first sent in to the steamship company to whom the landing agent was only held responsible for short delivery if such were caused through his own negligence.

Plaintiff's Counsel stated that the point of dispute was whether the defendant had undertaken the lading of cargo as landing agent of the steamship company or acting as agent of the plaintiff. Counsel contended that the defendant had acted as agent of the plaintiff, and asked the Court to call Mr. Yanagisawa, a Customs broker, Mr. Hattori of the Kaitsusha, Customs brokers and transport agents, and Mr. H. D. Bell, of Messrs. Butterfield & Swire, to ascertain the commercial usage in existence with regard to the point.

Mr. Sato suggested that Mr. Inouye be called instead of Mr. Yanagisawa, because the latter was an employee of the former.

The Court decided to examine Mr. Inouye, Mr. Hattori and Mr. Bell on May 31st.

CLAIM BY A TRANSPORTATION AGENT.

On May 12th, a case in which H. Kawai, forwarding agent, claims yen 258.50 from Messrs. Faber and Voight, came up again in the Yokohama District Court.

Mr. Arai, was examined as witness. He deposed that on February 14th he was requested by the defendants to negotiate with the for plaintiff peanuts for shipment. The plaintiff complied with the request on the stipulation that the draft attached to the way-bill be duly honoured the next day. The cargo was duly shipped, and on the following day he demanded payment of the draft of Mr. Kummel of the defendant's company without success. The demand was repeatedly refused afterwards. He thought the draft was for yen 254.

Plaintiff's Counsel stated that the plaintiff had delivered the goods simply for the purpose of accommodating the defendants as it fell on a mail day. The defendants, had, however, refused to honour the draft, despite the explicit stipulation. The plaintiff was, therefore, compelled to pay the amount of the draft to the bank.

Defendants' Counsel said that the defendants had received no notice from the bank relating to the draft. The plaintiff had paid the bank before the maturity of the draft, and his action was entirely uncalled for.

The Court intimated that judgment will be given on May 17th.

CLAIM FOR SHORT DELIVERY.

In the Yokohama District Court, the hearing of a case in which Messrs. Siber, Wolff and Co. claim yen 1,541.80 from Messrs. Butterfield and Swire was resumed on May 14th.

Plaintiff's Counsel said that Messrs. Siber, Wolff and Co. had applied to the customs asking for repayment of duty and extraordinary special tax—about forty yen—which the importers had paid on certain cases of flannel and white shirtings. As the merchandise was not landed, the Customs would repay the amount to the consignees, and the sum should therefore be reduced from the amount claimed. Counsel further referred to the details of the invoices of flannel and white shirtings after which the parties entered into a brief discussion.

Judgment will be delivered on May 18th.

CLAIM FOR DAMAGE.

The hearing of a case in which Mr. J. C. Wilkinson, of Kobe, claims yen 161,919.47 from Mr. E. Mendelson, the local agent of the Crown Cork Co., Limited, of London, was resumed on May 16th in the Yokohama District Court.

At the outset, plaintiff's counsel produced evidence consisting of seventy-three letters. Defendants' Counsel refused to admit the documents as direct evidence in the present dispute. As to his reason for declining to admit them, Counsel made a lengthy explanation.

Plaintiff's Counsel asked the court to leave to examine Messrs. J. M. Mur and G. A. Reid, both of the firm of Mr. J. Clifford-Wilkinson, Tararadzuka, and Mr. T. Kershaw, and two Japanese O. Wakayanagi and I. Yamashita, all of Kobe, as witnesses. The Court decided to examine all with the exception of the gentleman first named and to ask the Kobe Local Court to hold the commission.

The Court then rose.

DEATH SENTENCE IN THE NOGUCHI CASE.

Sentence was passed on May 16th in the Tokyo District Court by Judge Imamura and two associates, and Public Procurator Shimadzu, in the Noguchi murder case.

It may be remembered that Takebayashi Osaburo (formerly Noguchi Osaburo; but divorced from the Noguchi family after he had been charged with this crime, his register as a result, being restored to his original house) was accused of various charges: (1) the murder of a youth named Kwai Sosuke in order to make soup with the latter's flesh on the ground that it would be a remedy for leprosy, from which Mr. Noguchi Neisai, the well-known poet, and elder brother of the former wife of the accused, suffered; (2) the forgery of a graduate's certificate of the Tokyo Foreign Language School and other official and private documents; (3) the murder of the poet; and (4) the murder of Tsudzuki Tomigoro, a drug merchant. During the trial, the accused denied the first three charges, but confessed that he had murdered the druggist by assaulting him with a stick, inflicting fatal injuries on his head.

The Court read sentence to the effect that the evidence against the accused for the first three charges was insufficient, but that for the last was sufficient. The accused was sentenced to death.

THE SAN FRANCISCO DISASTER.

Full details of the earthquake and fire at San Francisco are now to hand. They fill a couple of pages of the Vancouver News-Advertiser for days—indeed practically up to the latest date that has reached us—April 29th. We reproduce the following extract giving first news of the calamity. It is dated at Oakland, April 18th:—

Earthquake and fire to-day have caused the greatest calamity California has ever known. In San Francisco alone it is estimated that 1,000 persons have perished, while as many more are suffering from injuries. The entire business portion of the city is in ruins, and the flames, which, owing to lack of water, cannot be checked, except by the blowing up with dynamite of buildings in their path, are plunging through the city. It is utterly impossible at present to estimate the property loss, for the extent of the conflagration cannot be told until the fire has burned itself out. Thousands of people are homeless and many are huddled in the parks and public squares, beside the household goods they were able to save. The city is under martial law and all the down-town streets are patrolled by cavalry and infantry. Details of troops are also guarding the banks.

Most of the principal buildings have already been destroyed and others are in imminent danger.

Over all the scene of desolation hangs a dense pall of smoke. Communication with outside towns is almost cut off, but the report comes from Palo Alto that all but one of the buildings of Leland

Stanford, Jr., University, have been wrecked, and that the splendid Memorial Church, one of the finest structures of its kind in the world, is a mass of ruins. One student is known to have lost his life. In Oakland five persons were killed. San Jose and Sacramento, Berkeley, Alameda and other places heard from suffered severely, but report no loss of life.

The dreadful earthquake shock came without warning at precisely 5:13 o'clock this morning, its motion apparently being from east to west. At first the upheaval of the earth was gradual, but in a few seconds it increased in intensity. Chimneys began to fall and buildings to crack, tottering on their foundations. People became panic-stricken and rushed into the streets, most of them in their night-attire. They were met by showers of falling buildings, bricks, cornices and walls. Many were instantly crushed to death, while others were dreadfully mangled. Those who remained indoors generally escaped with their lives, though scores were hit by detached plaster, pictures and articles thrown to the floor by the shock.

It is believed that more or less loss was sustained by nearly every family in the city.

Tall steel structures stood the earthquake better than the brick buildings, few of them being badly damaged. The big eleven-story Monadnock Office Building, in course of construction adjoining the Palace Hotel, was an exception, however; the rear wall collapsed and many cracks were made across its front. Some of the docks and freight-sheds along the water-front slid into the Bay. Deep fissures opened in the filled-in ground near the shore, and the Union Ferry Depot was damaged. Its high tower still stands, but will have to be torn down. A portion of the new City Hall, which cost more than $7,000,000, collapsed, the roof sliding into the courtyard, and the smaller tower tumbled down, the great dome being moved but not falling. The new Post-Office, one of the finest in the United States, was badly shattered.

The Valencia Hotel, a four-storey wooden building, sank into the basement, a pile of splintered timbers, under which were pinned many dead and dying occupants of the house. The basement was full of water and some of the helpless victims were drowned.

Scarcely had the earthquake ceased to shake when fires broke out simultaneously in many parts of the city. The Fire Department promptly responded to the first call for aid, but it was found that the water mains had been rendered useless by the underground movement. Fanned by a light breeze, the flames quickly spread and soon several blocks were seen to be doomed. Then dynamite was resorted to, and these explosions added to the terror of the people. All efforts to stay the fire, however, proved futile. The south side of Market Street from Ninth Street to the Bay, was soon ablaze, the fire covering a belt two blocks wide. On this, the main thoroughfare of the city, are located many of the finest edifices of the city, including the Grant, Parrot, Flood, Call, Examiner and Monadnock Buildings, the Palace and Grand Hotels and numerous wholesale houses. At the same time the commercial establishments and banks north of Market Street were burning. The burning district in this section extended from Sansome Street to the water-front and from Market Street to Broadway. Fires also broke out in the Mission and the entire city seemed to be in flames.

The flames, fanned by the rising breeze swept down the main wholesale business streets to within 100 feet of the Union Ferry Depot, the high tower of which stood at a dangerous angle. The big wholesale grocery establishment of Wellman, Pack & Company was on fire from cellar to roof, and the heat was so oppressive that passengers from the ferry-boats were obliged to keep close to the water's edge in order to get past the burning structure. It was impossible to reach the centre of the city from the Bay without striking the shore for a long distance, so as to get round the burning district. At about 8 o'clock the Southern Pacific officials refused to allow any more passengers from trans-bay points to land, and sent back those already on the boats. The ferry and train service of the Southern Pacific was entirely abandoned, owing to damage done to the power-house by the earthquake at Emersville.

At 9 o'clock this morning 1,000 men from the Presidio arrived down town to patrol the city. The Thirtieth Infantry, 1,000 strong, arrived from Angel's Islands a little later and went on patrol at once. The soldiers have been ordered to shoot down thieves caught in the act of robbing the dead, and to guard with their lives the millions of dollars' worth of property which has been placed in the streets, that it may escape the ravages of the flames. The first California Armoury, 200 strong, two companies, have been detailed to patrol duty on Ellis Street. More companies are patrolling Broadway in the Italian section.

Commissioner E. Myron announced at noon that the 80 odd fire insurance companies interested had decided to pay dollar for dollar to every one insured with them. The companies will not discriminate between fire and earthquake and every one insured will be paid to the extent of the loss. But two of the companies affected are Pacific Coast concerns, the others having their principal offices in the East, or in Europe, and all will stand the loss without danger of failure.

One of the first orders issued by Chief of Police Din in this morning was the closing of every saloon in the city. This step was taken to prevent drink-crazed rioting in the streets.

There is little dynamite available in the city. At 8 o'clock Mayor Schmitz sent a tug to Pinole for several cans of the explosives. He also sent a telegram to Mayor Mott, of Oakland. At 10.30 he received this reply to his Oakland message: "Three engines and hose companies leave here immediately. Will forward dynamite as soon as obtained."

Another dispatch from Oakland stated that accounts of the catastrophe must be meagre and disjointed as the telegraph lines with the exception of the Postal Company's were completely broken. The shock was felt at Victoria, B. C., and at Washington, D. C.

Towards noon a second shock was felt and people rushed into the streets, fearing a repetition of the morning's horrors, but no further damage was done.

The Mechanics' Pavilion was taken over as a morgue and already (afternoon of 18th) more than 300 bodies, crushed and mutilated, were lying there awaiting identification, while every minute brought new additions to the long rows of silent victims.

Reports from cities near San Francisco showed that the destruction was general. Santa Rosa, 60 miles north, was in flames, and the damage there was over one million dollars. The loss of life was not known.

At Napa, many buildings were shattered and the loss will amount to $300,000. No loss of life was reported.

At Vallejo the damage was slight in comparison with that suffered in other cities. The loss will be about $10,000.

As to the damage an early report was as follows:—

San Francisco, April 18.

The latest reports at police headquarters show that the entire district bounded by Vallejo, Howard, East and Sansome Streets, embracing practically the entire wholesale portion of the city, has been swept clean by the fire. Also the district bounded by Second, Market, Eighth and Folsom Streets has been devastated. In the latter district are included most of the city's finest and most substantial buildings. The area covered by the flames up to the present time is about eight square miles, or several hundred city blocks. Very little, if any, water is available, and the blowing up of buildings by dynamite is the only means of checking the progress of the flames. Most of the buildings untouched by the flames have been greatly damaged by the earthquake shocks. The pecuniary loss at this hour (4 p.m.) is conservatively estimated at $100,000,000.

Other news which must be summarised, reported the destruction of the Agnews state insane Asylum near San Jose, the death of the superintendent and his wife and of many of the insane and the escape of the other inmates. Almost every stone or brick building in San Jose was damaged. Stanford university was practically demolished. At Salinas the shock was severely felt and the loss was stated at million dollars.

Latest news received at the Postal Telegraph offices in New York from their building in San Francisco at 3.30 p.m. was from Electrician Swain there, who had attempted to enter the building after its abandonment. He said that the authorities were preparing to dynamite the buildings in the neighbourhood. He was ordered to leave at 5 o'clock. The Company's cables are under Market Street, and it was not regarded as likely that they could be tapped nearer than at Hut Station, near the Cliff House. "The Company was over-whelmed with messages for friends and relatives in the stricken city, but all had to be accepted only subject to indefinite delay. After the Militia took charge of the city the advices were that it was impossible to deliver messages in the city even if they managed to get them in."

At evening of the 19th it seemed hopeless to save even the small portion of the city left. Indeed a Chicago telegram said that at that hour the Postal Telegraph Company received a message from Oakland saying that "Fire Chief Marshal, of San Francisco, advises that more than two-thirds of the area of the City of San Francisco has been destroyed, and that there is no possibility of saving the balance of the city. The following is the district north of Market Street now devastated: Sansome to Market Streets, to Sacramento, to Buchanan, thence to California, to Hyde, to Eddy, to Larkin, to Gough and to Market. On the south side of Market Street the fire extends along Market Street to Fourteenth, and below the Southern Pacific tracks to the boundary." It had been decided to attempt to check the fire at Van Ness Avenue. A telegram describes the operations;

San Francisco, April 19. With each succeeding hour, the devastation in this stricken ruin of a city grows and grows. At 6 o'clock to-night, it seemed as if nothing could save the comparatively small portion of the city that yet remains unburned. The entire business district is now only a glowing furnace, while the giant tongues of fire have reached westward far beyond Van Ness Avenue and are wiping out buildings and seeking more to devour. At 4 o'clock Mayor Schmitz and Chief Dinan saw that the only hope of saving the Western Addition with its forest of frame dwellings, and the Richmond District, with its thousands of homes, was to check the cruel march of the wall of fire at Van Ness Avenue, which crosses the city from north to south, where the retail store and fine apartment house district ends, and where the residence section begins. This avenue is 90 feet wide, and the possibility of checking the march of the flames here looked hopeful. Orders were given to concentrate every fire-engine at this Avenue, to marshal troops of soldiers there, the police and all the army of workers, and make one last determined stand to save the remainder of the city. The co-operation of the artillery was secured and huge cannon were drawn to the Avenue to aid the dynamiters in blowing up the mansions of the millionaires on the west side of Van Ness, in order to prevent the flames leaping across the highway. Every available pound of dynamite was hauled to the spot, and the sight was one of stupendous havoc as the cannon were trained on the palaces, and the shot tore into the walls and toppled the buildings in crashing ruin. At other points the dynamite was used, and house after house, dwellings worth millions were lifted into the air by the power of the blast and dropped to the earth.

The work was necessarily dangerous and many of the exhausted workmen kept going and working through a stretch of 48 hours without sleep and scarcely any food through force of instinctive heroism alone. Many have been killed while making this last desperate stand.

The fire line at 6 o'clock extends a mile along the east side of Van Ness Avenue from Pacific Street to Ellis. All behind this excepting the Russian Hill region and a small district along the North Beach, has been swept clean by the flames, and great steel hulks of buildings and pipes and shafts and spires have been dropped into the molten mass of debris like so much melted wax.

While the heroic fire-fighters were making their last stand at the fire line on Van Ness Avenue, panic reigned among the survivors in other parts of the city. The intense heat and the absence of water has been so terrible that scores have become frantic and others have dropped from exhaustion in the streets. The streets are still choked with refugees hurrying hither and thither, scrambling wildly for an avenue of escape.

In the panic many mad things are being done. Even soldiers have to prevent men and women, made insane from the misfortune that has engulfed them, from rushing into doomed buildings in the hope of saving valuables from the ruins. In nearly every instance such action has resulted in death to those who tried it.

At Napa many buildings were shattered and the loss was put at $300,000. We read in a Victoria paper that

The seismograph established by the Meteorological department in the basement of the old custom house building recorded the earthquake at San Francisco and vicinity. Yesterday (April 18th) Mr. Haynes Reed, chief of the meteorological bureau, took the strip from the seismograph and developed it to see if any record had been made. At the extreme end of the strip, which elsewhere recorded an even line in the centre, showing how steady had been the needle until this morning, was the record of the shock which has caused so much destruction in California.

The record shows that the first tremor was recorded here at 5.16 a.m., which would be within a few seconds of the occurrence, as the waves travel rapidly. Two minutes later, at 5.18 a.m., to be exact, the first vibration is recorded, and the pictured record of the seismograph shows that it was evidently a very severe one. The needle has vibrated considerably in recording the effect of the shock, and from that time the records are shown almost continuously over a period of nine minutes' duration.

The following was given on the 18th as an incomplete list of the principal buildings destroyed or damaged:

Call building, entirely destroyed; Claus Spreckles building, gutted by flames; Hearst (Examiner) building, collapsed; Chronicle building, hardly damaged at all; the White House, walls badly cracked, all plate glass windows gone, every piece of stock in building removed before 9.30 a.m.; the Winchester Hotel, Third street, totally destroyed; Grand Opera House, entirely destroyed; Claus Spreckles' house and stables on Van Ness avenue, badly damaged; St. Luke's Episcopal Church, Van Ness avenue, will have to be pulled down; Mechanics' Library building Post street, cornices fell, building slightly damaged; Crocker building, Market and Post streets, slightly damaged; Lick House, walls and rear of building largely caved in; Upham building, Pine and Battery, totally destroyed, the loss on this building alone being $550,000; Fire House adjoining California Hotel on Bush street, Chief Sullivan and wife sleeping in the engine house, severely injured by bricks crashing through the roof from the hotel; California Hotel, Bush street, upper walls collapsed and upper floors wrecked; building in course of construction to be occupied by Hammam Baths will have to be rebuilt, it is located on Post street near the Olympic Club, the walls are badly warped and the roof has fallen in; San Francisco Gas and Electric Co., Post street, plant slightly damaged; St. Francis Hotel, exterior slightly cracked and seamed, but not seriously damaged; Pacific Union Club, Post and Stockton streets, front damaged and fissures in rear wall; St. Dominic's Church on Pierce street, total loss. The interior of this church is wrecked and there are large fissures in the walls; the structure will have to be pulled down. The parochial house in the same block is a partial wreck. The loss to the parish is about $300,000. The ornamental top on St. Dunstan's, the apartment house on Sutter street and Van Ness avenue, fell into the street. The Concordia Club building on Van Ness avenue has several fissures in the side and rebuilding will be necessary. The Hotel Granda is badly damaged.

General Funston in a dispatch to the War Department reported that the fire crossed Van Ness Avenue to the west at 3.30 p.m. and said it was almost certain that the entire city would be destroyed. Fortunately as a later telegram reported the fire crossed that thoroughfare in but a few places to the west. The Sub-Treasury was destroyed but the vaults in which the money was stored were safe and as soon as possible placed under guard. Some of the experiences related are most moving. One came from Los Angeles, dated the 19th:—

Los Angeles, April 19.

Egbert H. Gould, President of the Chicago Heater Company, of Chicago, was one of four persons to arrive here at 11 o'clock to-day. Mr. Gould said:—

"I was asleep on the seventh floor of the Palace Hotel, at the time of the first quake. I was thrown out of bed and half-way across the room. Immediately realising the import of the occurrence I made my way down the six flights of stairs into the corridor. I was the first guest to appear. The hotel employees were running about as if they were mad. Within two minutes after I appeared, other guests flocked into the corridor, most of them in their night clothing. I returned to my room and got my clothing, then walked to the office of the Western Union in my pyjamas and bare feet to telegraph to my wife in Los Angeles. I found the telegraphers there, but all wires were down. I sat down on the sidewalk and picked the broken glass out of the soles of my feet and put my clothes on. This took about 20 minutes. Within that time below the Palace, the buildings for three blocks were a mass of flames, which quickly communicated to other buildings. Billows of fire seemed to roll from the business blocks, soon half-consumed, to other blocks in the vicinity only to climb and loom again."

The Call building I saw to be more than a foot out of plumb and hanging over the street like the leaning tower of Pisa.

I remained in San Francisco until 7 o'clock and then took the ferry for Oakland, but returned to the burning city an hour and a-half later. At the time the city seemed doomed. I remained but a few minutes, then made my way back to the ferry station. I hope I may never be called to pass through such an experience again. People by the thousands, and seemingly devoid of reason, were crowded round the ferry station. At the iron gates they clawed with their hands as so many maniacs. They sought to break the bars and, failing in that, turned upon each other. Fighting my way back to the gate like the others, the thought came into my mind of what rats in a trap we were. Had I not been a strong man I should certainly have been killed.

When the ferry drew up to the slip and the gates were thrown open, the rush to safety was tremendous. Those who fell saved themselves as best they could.

A brief account by a woman reads:—

Mrs. Agnes Zink, of the Hotel Broadway, said: "I was stopping at 35 Fifth Street, San Francisco. The rear of the house collapsed and the landlady and about 30 of the roomers were killed. I escaped simply because I had a front room, and when I got out, the roof and stairways had collapsed in the rear half of the house. Out in the street it was impossible to find a clear pathway. I saw another lodging-house near ours collapse. I think it must have been 39 Fifth Street, and I know all the inmates were killed, for the wreck was complete. In ten minutes the entire block to Mission Street was in flames."

On the 19th at 1 p.m. a Committee on Safety had met, organized a Finance Committee and received reports of arrangements for relief. Except for an occasional accident no loss of life was reported on this day as people had time to leave threatened buildings. Water was promised by the Water Company in the Western Addition that afternoon and in the Mission by the following day. Water was the great need of the people as well as of the firemen, for the supply even of drinking water was very scanty. A proclamation was issued by the Mayor intimating that the troops and the regular and special members of the police force had been authorized by him to kill any persons bound engaged in looting or in the commission of any other crime and requesting all persons to remain in their homes from darkness until daylight.

A long-distance telephone message from Salinas, 115 miles south of San Francisco, at 1 o'clock to-night said. "One hundred and twenty bodies have been taken out of St. Agnew's Asylum, and there are many more corpses in the ruins. The main structure was demolished." On the night of April 19th it was estimated that Oakland housed and fed 50,000 of the inhabitants of San Francisco, a telegram from Los Angeles dated the 19th ran: At San Jose the Vendome Hotel annex was badly wrecked and 15 persons were killed. The Doherty block was completely burned and one woman killed. Dr. McKrow was killed and his wife badly injured. Every business building was demolished. Martial law has been declared and the militia and 500 deputies are guarding the street. It is estimated that fifty people have been killed. The Post-Office was partly wrecked, the Presbyterian Church totally demolished and the Court House wrecked.

Passengers arriving from other cities in California bring tales of death and disaster from Santa Cruz, Gilroy and Hollister. The death list at Santa Cruz is large; Santa Rosa is a total wreck, and 1,500 people are homeless. The loss of life will probably reach hundreds. Main Street is piled many feet deep with fallen buildings. Not one business building is left intact. The four-storey Court House is a pile of broken masonry. Citizens fled to the fields and hills to watch the destruction of their homes. The water system was destroyed by the earthquake.

Later dispatches are as follow:

San Francisco, April 19. Thousands of people are sleeping on the hills to-night or standing gazing with grim faces on the lurid scene below them.

Women and children and little babes in arms are huddled together with the injured. In Golden Gate Park the people are huddled together, with gnawing hunger the companion of all. The wails of injured and the calls of frantic survivors for friends and relatives who are missing are most pitiful. These crowds are constantly increasing and the Relief Committee is doing all in its power to get bedding and food for the homeless.

Oakland, Berkeley and Alameda are short of food and in a few days will themselves be facing a serious shortage unless relief comes from the outside. Expressmen are charging from $25 to $50 to haul a load of baggage or give any aid to refugees. Liquor stores in the North End were robbed and hundreds of men carried away the bottled goods. When the soldiers arrived the men had to be clubbed before they would drop the bottles. Soldiers smashed the bottles on the stones and drove the mob at the point of the bayonet. When the mansions on Nob Hill, the Fairmont and Mark Hopkins Institute were approached by the flames to-day many attempts were made to remove some of the priceless works of art, from the buildings. A crowd of soldiers were sent to the Flood and Huntington mansions and Mark Hopkins Institute of Art to rescue the paintings. From Huntington Home and the Flood mansion canvases were cut from the frame with the knives. The collections in the three buildings are valued in the hundreds of thousands. Very few were saved from the ravages of the fire fiend.

The greatest suffering to-day was from thirst. Although the shock had broken water mains no water or very little appeared on the surface of the ground. Public fountains located on Market Street gave out no relief to the thirsty thousands. At the corner of Powell and Market Streets a small stream of water spouted through the cobble stones and formed a muddy pool. From this pool many knelt and drank, women as well as men.

Wherever the soldiers saw a man with a bottle of liquor they forced him to give it up and immediately smashed it. The work of the regular soldiers in suppressing disorder, preventing looting and in rescuing people from dangerous positions is worthy of the greatest praise. Everywhere they show the highest degree of courage. They did not hesitate to shoot whenever they found any one looting and probably twenty victims fell before them during the day.

Western Division, Bulletin, 2 p.m. April 20th San Francisco time.—The fire is now positively stated to be under control with the probability that one quarter of the city lying west of Franklin Street, and known as the Western Addition, northward to the Presidio, will be saved. The stand made at Van Ness Avenue was generally successful, the flames crossing that avenue to the west in but few places. The strongest fire at noon to-day was toward North Beach, east of Van Ness Avenue, but will be controlled.

San Francisco, April 23. On Saturday night triplets were born to one of the homeless at the Presidio, and the same night eight little tots made their first appearance on the Reservation at Fort Mason. Six were born in the Emergency Hospital and two of them on the vacant space adjoining the Fort, where the mothers had taken refuge. The babies are all reported to be healthy youngsters.

The museum at Golden Gate Park was not seriously damaged by the earthquake. The main entrance is not injured, but half the north wall has suffered. The pictures and the relics which the building contained, were not destroyed but some of the desirable relics were broken. The band-stand is not badly damaged. The balustrades of the viaducts bridging the main driveway near the museum, are wrecked.

The Finance Committee of the General Relief Committee reported that it had received contributions to date amounting to $1,551,536.95; $172,000 is the amount of the local subscriptions, making a total of $1,723,536.95. Three hundred and sixty-six thousand dollars has been promised locally. The Committee is not satisfied with the local subscriptions, and urges the citizens of San Francisco to subscribe more liberally.

San Francisco, April 23. The condition of the 5,000 or more people camped in Jefferson Square Park is something terrible. Not more than five per cent. have even an army tent, and the make shifts are constructed of carpets, bed sheets and every imaginary substance. The are totally inadequate to keep out the heavy rain which is falling to-day.

At Fort Mason there is little misery on account of the cold rain. About 8,000 people are encamped there, and on account of the sandy and sloping ground, sanitation is not bad, food is plentiful and of a fair variety.

By the 24th it was being telegraphed that so fully had the situation been grappled with that no one in San Francisco need be hungry that night. The papers were chiefly taken up with reports of the resumption of business, and the handling and distribution of food supplies.

CALISTHENICS.

A very pleasant entertainment was given in Van Schaick Hall on Wednesday afternoon by the Calisthenic classes who are receiving their training from the capable hands of Miss E. Burdett-Leach. The senior class is composed of young ladies attending Ferris Seminary, while the junior class consists of foreign girls and boys ranging in age from five to eight. The various exercises were capitally gone through by both classes, the marching in particular being very good. Interspersed between the different exercises was a miscellaneous musical programme in which the following took part:—Duet, "Orphee" (Offenbach), Mrs. A. Bellamy Brown and Mr. W. Karl Vincent; song, "The Fairies Lullaby," Mrs. W. T. Payne; piano solo, "Air de Ballet," Mrs. E. P. W. Skirmshire; song, "Life's Lullaby," Mrs. E. C. Irwine; song, "The devout lover," Mr. S. H. Somerton.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

A new case of plague was reported on May 16th at Sumoto in Hyogo.

Lieut.-General Y. Kurose, a staff officer of the Seventh Division, has been retired.

The destroyer Hatsuharu (First Spring) will be launched at the Kawasaki Shipbuilding Yard, Kobe, on May 21st.

Sir Ernest Satow, late British Minister to China, arrived at Nagasaki from Shanghai by the Coptic. On May 16th, he left for Yokohama on his way home.

It is rumoured, says the Asahi Nichi, that some Koreans have arrived in Tokyo for the purpose of assassinating Prince Wi-hwa who is now in the capital. The police are taking precautionary measures.

Colonels T. Okamoto and T. Goto have been promoted to Major-General, and Major-Generals H. Tomoyasu and M. Naito to Lieut.-General. Lieut.-General Y. Iseji, a staff officer of the Imperial Body Guards, has been released from service.

The Vicomte de Fontenay, of the French Legation at Belgrade, has just been appointed French Consul-General at Budapest. The Vicomte de Fontenay was for some time in charge of the French Legation at Seoul during the Russo-Japanese war.

Prince Nakonchaisi arrived Osaka on May 16th. The following day he left for Hiroshima where he witnessed infantry and artillery evolutions by the Fifth Division after which he visited the Naval Arsenal at Kure. On May 18th he will leave for Shimonoseki to embark for Korea. It is reported by Tokyo papers that the Prince will extend his travels to China.

The Russian Consul at Nagasaki has given notice to the Governor of Nagasaki prefecture that the steamer Mytheol came into contact with a mine while entering Vladivostock without a pilot. The Consul adds that he received a warning from the Superintendent of the Vladivostock Harbour office to the effect that vessels to that port must take on pilots at Askold island.

As already reported, a meeting to celebrate the extension of the railways throughout the Empire to five thousand miles will take in Nagoya. In order to be present Marquis Yamagata; Viscount Kodama, Chief of the Staff; General Terauchi, Minister for War; Mr. Yamagata, Minister for Communications; and other high officials will leave Shimbashi on May 19th by the 8.30 a.m. train.

The two shields of copper presented to the captains of the Katori and Kashima as gifts from the British and Foreign Sailor's Society are fashioned out of metal from the Victory, and bear in deep relief the picture of the Victory beating up to Gibraltar with Nelson's body on board after Trafalgar. The shields are to be awarded annually to officers or seamen of the respective ships for deeds of helpfulness.

Much regret will be felt in Tokyo at the death of M. Jules Adam, formerly Interpreter of the French Legation, which occurred at Zurich on March 30th. M. Adam was buried at his native place, Kaisersberg, Alsace, on April 3rd. It will be remembered that when he left Japan he was in indifferent health, but it was hoped that a holiday at home would set things right. These hopes have not been fulfilled. In him Japan loses a sympathetic friend.

The president of the Russian Red Cross Society recently presented medals to Count Matsukata,

President of the Nippon Red Cross Society, and Baron Ozawa, Vice-President, and Professor Ariga, law-adviser of the investing army at Port Arthur during the war. Letters were also sent returning thanks for several thousand hospital bandages which the Japanese presented to Russian invalids during the investment of the fortress, and for kind treatment rendered towards the Russians after the latter's surrender.

About 4 a.m., on Wednesday, May 16th, at the Horairo-ro, Maganecho, Yokohama, a jinrikisha coolie named H. Zama (50), residing in Miyakawa-cho, attempted to murder a girl named Nakamura Hana (34) by inflicting severe injuries on her right temple with a large fish knife. He also attempted to commit suicide by cutting himself in the throat with the same weapon. The woman was at once removed to the Yokohama Hospital and the coolie to his own house. The Kotobuki-cho Police believe the cause to be jealousy.

The Hokkaido Colliery and Railway Co. held an extraordinary meeting on May 13th at Tokyo. Mr. K. Inouye, one of the directors, presided and submitted to the shareholders a proposal with regard to a fifth issue of shares and other projects. One of the auditors explained the plans, giving the result of his investigation. The Chairman delivered a speech in which he said that when the railway is nationalised, the price will be at the rate of seventy-five yen against a paid up share of fifty yen. There would remain in the possession of the shareholders, the coal mines, various vessels, forests and other property besides the reserves.

K. Yamada (23), formerly an employee of the Ya-ami Hotel, Kyoto, which was burned down on April 17th, was arrested on May 13th at Gion, in the same city, on a charge of theft. According to the Osaka Mainichi, he had in his possession several gold rings and brooches with precious stones, gold watches and other valuable articles which he confessed at the Kawabata Police Office to have stolen from rooms in the hotel from which foreign guests had escaped after the fire broke out. Some of the articles were returned to the owners who are still in the city. The paper adds that the cause of the fire is not yet ascertained but that there is suspicion of incendiarism since this man has been arrested.

The N.-C. D. News of the 11th inst. says: Particulars have just become known of a gallant act which was performed by Mr. McKie of the out-door Customs staff on the arrival of the M.M.S. Calédonien at Shanghai on her last voyage from Europe. A Sister of Charity of the Order of St. Vincent de Paul was a passenger and in stepping off to the tender in the darkness she missed her footing and fell into the water. Mr. McKie saw the accident and immediately jumped in after her. The lady in her terror seized him by the throat, but her rescuer was fortunately able to seize a rope thrown out and both were safely brought on board. The gallantry of the deed was enhanced by the fact that it was done at a time when the dangers of the current were made the greater by the darkness. But for the rope both rescuer and rescued must have been drowned.

CORRESPONDENCE.

NORWEGIAN OFFICERS AND THE SIAMESE NAVY.

(TO THE EDITOR OF THE "JAPAN MAIL.")

SIR,—In the Penang Gazette of the 23rd is an article concerning the engagement of Japanese officers for the Siamese Navy, and I therefore take the liberty to send you the following cuttings from the same paper.

In the Siam Free Press of March 13th and 14th you will see all about the incident which caused the resignation of the Norwegian officers in His Siamese Majesty's Navy.

It is good for the Siamese Navy that Japanese officers will replace the Europeans, but no Japanese officer will put up with such treatment as that meted out to Lieut.-Commander Christiansen and to Lieutenant Samuelsen. The Siamese Naval Department will, however, think twice before they serve an officer of a powerful nation in the same manner as they have served the Norwegian officers, and the presence of Japanese naval officers at the Naval College will have a salutary effect on the conduct of the young men there.

According to the Penang Gazette the engagement of Japanese officers is in the hands of Mr. Tanabe, the Japanese Charge d'Affaires in Bangkok, and this gentleman will no doubt take care that all is arranged in such a manner that the Navy Department cannot help fulfilling their obligations.

Hoping that the Japanese officers will not be disappointed in their expectation and frustrated in their reorganization of the Siamese Navy,

I remain, etc

TH. RING.

Penang, April 25th, 1906.

[We are unable to find space for the whole extract that Commander Ring has sent us, but it may be condensed. It appears that on the return to Bangkok from a cruise of the gunboat Bali, a vessel of 600 tons built at Hongkong, it was learned that a story was afloat in official circles that the Chief Officer, Lieutenant Samuelsen, had kicked one of the sailors with the result that the man died in hospital 24 hours later. This officer denied that he had kicked any one "to such a degree that any harm could have come of it." But, the Lieutenant's explanation went on: "He remembered having given a man, Nai Von, a couple of slaps on the ear and a slight kick one day, because he refused to go in a boat, complaining that he was sick. The man had, at the time, a slight touch of beri-beri, being a little swollen about the ankles, and should therefore be moving about, in order to get well. Instead, it was alleged, he lay down on the bridge the whole day long. For this reason, Lieut. Samuelsen, growing impatient with the man's laziness, gave him a couple of slaps on the ear and a slight kick in his breeches to impress upon him the necessity of hurrying down in the boat. After that day he was apparently quite well, and took part in the daily work and drill. He never complained of any sickness until over three weeks later, when he had beri-beri. It was then decided to send him to Siracha hospital where he was sent on 8th November." But, it was alleged, "Captain Phra Pradiyat, Commander-in-chief of the fleet, had received a report, written in Siamese, from the Japanese doctor in charge of Siracha hospital, which he showed to Lieut.-Commander Christiansen, according to which Nai Von, of the Bali, had died 24 hours after his admission. As the Japanese doctor found the case curious, he made a dissection of the man's body, and thereby found that the liver had burst, and several injuries had taken place in his stomach and chest, which went to prove that the man had died from the effects of blows or kicks in the stomach and chest." It was stated, on the other hand, that the Japanese doctor denied dictating such a report to his Siamese interpreter, and it was further alleged that the staff surgeon Dr. Hays, held a conference with two other medical practitioners and certified that the man had died from beri-beri. On Dec. 6th Lieut. Samuelsen was discharged from the Siamese Navy on the ground (as this passage is placed within quotation marks we presume it is part of the official letter of dismissals that "although it was not yet proved that Nai Von's death was caused by the kick from Lieutenant Samuelsen the Naval Department would, however, no longer suffer ill-treatment of the sailors." Lieut.-Commander Christiansen, commanding the Bali, had, it was said, no knowledge of the matter, but he was blamed by the Naval authorities "for having suffered such unauthorized acts to take place on board the ship he commanded," and was asked to resign. This he did. His enforced resignation was followed by the voluntary resignations of Commander Th. Ring, Lieut.-Commander Pettersen and Lieut. R. Nielsen who in the course of a letter contended that a court-martial should have been held in each case and that the commanding officer of a ship should not be made to suffer for an action of which he knew nothing committed by a subordinate officer. They concluded: "We will not say that we consider it right to strike the sailors or administer a kick, but it has at times been necessary to do so in the interest of the service, for instance when quick action is necessary. As the punishment for such acts up to the date of Lieutenant Samuelsen's dismissal has been a fine, the undersigned consider this sudden dismissal not only of the offending officer but also of his commanding officer, to be stronger measures than can be reasonably expected for such acts without previous warning. The unjust dismissal of Lieutenant-Commander Christiansen has caused us to resign and our reasons have been stated accordingly."—Ed. J.M.]

THE SHOKONSHA CEREMONY.

(TO THE EDITOR OF THE "JAPAN MAIL.")

SIR,—One of the worst things about this pestilential habit of newspaper reading is that one is moved to answer things that appear in print and so although one has eaten the lotus he is in spite of himself driven close to the borders of the strenuous life. My attention was called recently to a statement in your columns to the effect that there is some Christian objection to the Ceremonies of the Shrine on Kudan hill. If this is true will you kindly give us the chapter and verse for the statement. I would not presume to question for a moment that in some out-of-the-way corners of the British Empire, say among the Boers of South Africa, there might linger an objection to such practices and you are quite right in giving voice to the sentiments of such people. They have right to a hearing as every one else has, but the question is whether among the more enlightened there is any such feeling or not. I have been told that the steamers going up and down the Potomac river when they pass the tomb of Washington on Mount Vernon toll their bells out of reverence to the Spirit of the Father of His Country. I never heard of a Christian's objecting to that. On Decoration Day all over the United States we go out with flowers and flags and bands of music, and after service in the churches we proceed to the cemeteries and there with appropriate ceremonies we place them upon the graves of those who gave their lives for their country, and we make no distinction between the Blue and the Grey. We do make a distinction between those who have died in honour or in disgrace. I remember well going with the S. S. of the Cathedral Mission of the Good Samaritan of San Francisco, by the invitation of the priest-in-charge, to Angel Island and there was requested by the Chaplain of the troops, a black man, but a highly polished and cultivated gentleman, to address the men before the ceremony. Of course I advised them in planting the flags to utter a prayer for the souls of the departed. There was one man's grave down in a wet place in a corner far away from the others; and the soldiers had a pretty lively discussion as to whether they should give him a flag or not. It was finally decided that Christian charity demanded that on that day his faults should be forgotten or, to put it in the words of the men, "Aw! give the poor devil one. He has gone where he has had to suffer enough by this time." I asked the reason for his grave being at a distance from the well-ordered ranks of the others and the general feeling against him and was told that he was stabbed in a drunken row over a woman. I mention all this at length to show that even in an open and confessedly pagan country like ours there is a feeling that Decoration Day means something to the souls of those soldiers out of our sight and that we approach very near to the point of view of our Japanese friends. Some years ago, when I was the Curate of Holy Trinity Church, San Francisco, there was a sheet called the Argonaut published there the influence of which was most seductively immoral. I warned my people constantly in private against it with the result of whetting their appetite for forbidden fruit. The Editor, Frank Pixley, was always blathering in his paper about "the Pope's Irish." On my return to San Francisco I found "the Pope's Irish" on top, the Chancellor of the Roman diocese calling the Mayor "a dish-rag on a stick" in public meetings on the river-front, and howling him out of office although he was an Irish R.C., and whooping up the Labour party to put in the present Mayor Schmidt who makes no pronounced profession of religion, so far as I know. This political power of the Roman Church is the result of the abuse heaped on it by Frank Pixley, and I myself assisted at masses for the repose of his soul in the Church of Saint Mary the Virgin, that is so close an initiation that a poor servant girl attended it for a whole year, before she found that she was damning her soul by attending a Protestant place of worship. I merely mention this to show that a solid belief in the reality of the supernatural will survive in the midst of the most blasphemous denial of its reality; or why did Pixley endow that Church? It was my great joy and privilege to be present at the Midnight Mass at Easter in the Holy Orthodox Cathedral on Surugadai and on the next succeeding feasts when the faithful living remember before the Lord the names of the faithful departed; when the Bishop in cope with mitre and pastoral crook reads out their names in the midst of the prayers and blessings with book and candles the sweet-meats offered up before the Holy Doors to the view at least of those "who shall hunger no more nor thirst any more." I went out from that service to plant some Christian Cross of Constantine flags on the graves of Barnabas the priest and Matthias the little boy in the Uyeno Cemetery.

In China it is our custom to go out on All Saints Day and visit the graves of those who sleep in Christ. But some may answer all these customs that so much resemble Shinto ceremonies are Catholic of some sort or other, Anglican, Greek or Roman. Are they? Then listen to my longer tale. In Sendai just after the China war all the foreigners were asked to attend as members of the Red-Cross Society the Sho Kun Sai festival at the temporary shrine in front of the barracks. I among others was induced by a very good looking woman to contribute for a large cake marked with crosses, etc., that was duly offered to the manes of the departed. I was told that two Protestant Doctors of Divinity went in front of the shrine and put up their hands in the attitude of devotion common to all Shinto believers. I mentioned the matter to one of them later and he gloried in it in spite of Psalm XLIV, 21, Prayer Book Version. Our relation to the souls of those out of sight is a subject of perennial interest to young and old in all ages, and especially is it so when people are thinking of making some slight changes in their ancestral religion. I remember some years ago in Mayebashi a very bright young man who went back and walked no more with us on the way to life because I in my sacerdotal capacity forbade him the right to burn incense to his father's spirit as Nigori Sama. He has since been baptized after long and careful preparation. Per contra again and again it has happened with me when I have been preparing catechumens for baptism that I have told them that they must not worship before the Kami-dana or the Butsu-dan and the catechist who was paid to help me tells them that they can so long as they worship the true God in their hearts. The great danger of the hour is that even the strictest Pharisees among us may be dragged into the swim of worldliness and indifference that has again and again immersed the Church in ages past and that in the words of the comic opera it will be

"Oh! you are right and I am right
And we all are right as right can be."

It is perfectly easy to unite if we consent to eliminate everything that is worth fighting for. When in San Francisco I sat beside Bishop Harris and Miss Patterson and heard the speeches of the Consul, Mr. Uyeno, and the Reverend Father James Daijro Yoshimura in clerical costume, and of a Buddhist priest in secular garb at the opening ceremony of the Japanese cemetery. I could not help but notice the absence of any attempt at devotion of any sort, and as I reported to Mrs. Jefferys, "We dedicated the cemetery on Saint Patrick's Day and we did not worship any god but ourselves." This present movement towards union on the part of various forms of religion may result in the return of Shinto to that primitive form of monotheism for knowing which and stating the fact Prof. Kume was ejected some years since from the Imperial University.

One thing we may all do: after all is said, it is the corporal works of mercy that are of prime importance. Vide S. Matthew XXV. Let us see to it that Mannen-machi and Shinami-cho and Samaga-hashi shall stand for something better than they do at present.

Sincerely your servant,

HENRY SCOTT JEFFERYS.

May 9th 1906.

N.B.—No one is responsible for my statements but myself now or at any time.

TELEGRAMS.

(REUTER'S SPECIAL SERVICE.)

THE TURCO-EGYPTIAN DISPUTE.

London, May 11.

A strong patrol of Egyptian Coast Guards, with five guns, has proceeded East of the Suez Canal (in the disputed territory).

Admiral Prince Louis of Battenberg (who was in command of the British Squadron which recently visited America) has arrived with two cruisers at the Piræus. Other vessels, representing a second British cruiser squadron are expected to-morrow.

LABOUR PARTY FOR PEACE.

In the House of Commons, Mr. Vivian, Labour member, moved, and the Government accepted, a resolution demanding drastic steps for the reduction of armaments, and the inclusion thereof in the programme to be put before The Hague Conference. The House adopted the resolution unanimously.

THE TURCO-EGYPTIAN TROUBLE.

Later.

The cruiser Minerva is at Port Said. Rear-Admiral Lambton is on board on his way to Cairo.

THE POSTAL CONGRESS.

The Postal Congress at Rome has agreed to increase the unit of weight for letters from 15 to 20 grammes and to retain the 2½d. minimum rate, but for every additional 20 grammes to charge 1½d.

KAISER'S VISIT TO AUSTRIA.

The Kaiser's visit to the Emperor Francis Joseph is being much discussed. It is regarded as evidence of the Kaiser's determination to secure Austria's friendship with a view to meeting a new entente between France, Russia and Britain.

THE TURKISH EMBROGLIO.

London, May 12.

Sir Edward Grey, British Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, speaking in the House of Commons, said that Turkey's claims raised issues far beyond Tabah, and that the British Government could not refer the safety of the Canal to arbitration. The best method, he said, was defining the frontiers by a joint Commission as Great Britain proposed.

CHINESE COMMISSIONERS IN ENGLAND.

King Edward has received the Chinese Mission in audience.

JAPAN AS A MISSION FIELD.

The Archbishop of Canterbury, speaking at the meeting of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel, said that Japan was one of the great fields for future missionary work.

BRITISH EDUCATION BILL.

The Education Bill has been read a second time in the British House of Commons by a vote of 410 to 204.

WILL THE PORTE YIELD?

Yesterday Tewfik Pasha visited Sir Nicholas O'Connor, British Ambassador to Turkey, who rejected certain proposals made by Turkey and insisted on absolute compliance with the British demands. The British Ambassador reminded his visitor that the term of grace was drawing to a conclusion.

THE CRISIS.

London, May 13.

Rear-Admiral Lambton with H.M.S. Thetis, Perscus and Minerva is at Port Said. The ultimatum expires at midnight on Sunday.

The fleet will take action immediately thereafter.

It is understood that there are grounds for hoping that the dispute with Turkey is on the eve of a settlement.

TURKEY EVACUATES.

Later.

Turkey has agreed to evacuate Akabah and all other points within Egyptian territory.

THE DUMA.

London, May 14.

On Saturday the Duma, after the delivery of vigorous speeches insisting on the sufferings of the people, instructed a committee to draft a reply to the Throne, including a request for full amnesty and the abolition of the death penalty.

THE TURKISH QUESTION.

London, May 15.

Reuter's correspondent at Constantinople, wiring on Saturday, says that while the Porte's reply agreed to the evacuation and delimitation, Sir Nicholas O'Connor, British Ambassador to Turkey, considered the form in which it was presented as unacceptable and insisted on complete satisfaction before Sunday.

Other telegrams state that the reference to the delimitation was in the vaguest terms, leaving opportunity for the renewal of the dispute whenever favourable occasion arises.

Sir Edward Grey, British Foreign Minister, was to make a statement concerning the Anglo-Turkish trouble on Monday afternoon.

TURKEY'S REPLY.

Later.

Turkey has finally accepted the British demands.

Sir Edward Grey, speaking in the House of Commons, said that the Turkish reply was satisfactory and that a joint Commission will be appointed to fix the boundary and maintain the status quo. The boundary will run from Kafeli south-easterly to a point not less than three miles from Akabah. There is every reason to hope that a complete and satisfactory settlement of the matter will be reached.

ANOTHER ASSASSINATION.

Admiral Misnitz, the unpopular commander of a fortress in St. Petersburg, has been killed by a workman. The Admiral wished to prevent the workmen from celebrating the Russian May Day.

SIR JOHN JORDAN.

Sir John Jordan, the new British Minister to China, sails by the C.P.R. steamer Empress of Britain on July 7th.

FATHER GAPON.

A body found hanging from a ceiling of a closed villa at the Russian health-resort, Oserki, has been identified as that of Father Gapon.

THE CHINESE CUSTOMS EDICT.

London, May 16.

Replying to British and American representations, the Chinese Government has explained that the Edict was only intended to simplify the administration of the Customs and not to supersede the present establishment.

PLURAL VOTING BILL.

The House of Commons has read the plural voting bill a second time.

THE RESERVE FORCES BILL.

In the House of Commons the reserve forces bill has passed the third reading.

THE AMNESTY QUESTION.

London, May 17.

The Russian Council of Ministers has expressed itself favourably for amnesty; but leaves scope for action open.

THE DUMA.

In the Duma, during a debate on the address to the Throne, violent speeches were made, demanding the punishment of those authorities responsible for filling the prisons, and attacking the Council of the Empire.

(RECEIVED AT THE FOREIGN OFFICE.)

[From Mr. Motono, Japanese Representative in St. Petersburg.]

OPENING THE DUMA.

On the 10th instant the Emperor of Russia, assembling the members of the two Houses of Parliament at the Winter Palace, preformed the ceremony of opening the national assembly. After the ceremony His Majesty immediately returned to Peterhoff.

PULO LAUT.

With regard to the report published by The Times that Germany intends to obtain the island of Pulo Laut, southeast of Borneo, for the purposes of a naval station, Wolf's News Agency declares the rumour to be entirely baseless. In German official circles it is announced that nothing is known of the matter.

NEW STEAMSHIP LINE.

The year before last a project was started for the establishment of a regular line of steamers between Seattle and Vladivostok, but it was for a time abandoned. Seattle newspapers now state that steps pointing to the opening of the service have been taken.

(By SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT WITH THE "ASAHI SHIMBUN.")

TURKEY AND GREAT BRITAIN.

London, May 12.

If Turkey continues defiant England will seize Lemnos, Mitylene and afterwards other islands.

FRENCH NAVY.

London, May 15.

Telegrams from Paris says that the French navy programme for 1907 provides for three fleets consisting, the 1st and 2nd, of 12 destroyers, and the third of older battleships and three best cruisers, to supplement the Eastern division of four cruisers and 6 destroyers.

TRADE OF JAPAN.

Summary of the foreign trade of Japan for April 1906, and comparison with the corresponding month of the previous year:—

EXPORTS.

MANUFACTURED ARTICLES.		1906.	1905.
		Yen.	Yen.
Silk tissues, habutae.....	2,363,441	2,379,078
Silk tissues, kaiki.....	33,944	37,522
Silk handkerchiefs.....	394,518	383,430
Cotton tissues.....	902,220	740,045
Towels.....	237,422	177,557
Matches.....	1,075,763	1,050,490
Mats and matting, hanagoza.....	479,917	486,290
Porcelain and earthenware.....	655,353	452,663
Lacquered ware.....	147,171	89,649
Umbrellas, European.....	293,702	232,370
Cigarettes.....	124,021	364,756
Others.....	4,180,127	2,176,439
Total.....	10,887,961	8,570,289

MANUFACTURED ARTICLES, HALF WROUGHT.

	1906.	1905.
Silk, raw.....	3,708,953	5,097,909
Silk, noshi and kibiso.....	401,065	340,194
Cotton yarns.....	2,984,339	2,779,131
Straw-plait.....	173,353	326,109
Tea.....	96,278	61,071
Camphor.....	311,331	301,802
Others.....	3,981,074	2,484,817
Total.....	11,656,393	11,391,033

RAW PRODUCTS.

	1906.	1905.
Coal.....	1,505,604	1,287,037
Rice.....	359,108	417,709
Cuttle-fish.....	40,891	109,732
Sea-weeds and cut sea-weeds.....	129,124	26,665
Mushroom, dried.....	92,773	79,052
Copper, coarse & refined.....	2,161,913	1,206,243
Fish oil.....	59,369	74,636
Vegetable wax.....	106,891	40,561
Others.....	1,791,483	1,199,079
Total.....	6,247,156	4,440,714

Total exports..... 28,791,510 24,402,036

Summary of total value of Specie and bullion exported from and imported into Japan for the same period.

EXPORTS.

	1906.	1905.
Gold.....	653,266	208,600
Silver.....	323,671	11,889
Total.....	976,937	220,489

IMPORTS.

	1906.	1905.
Gold.....	15,902,386	1,361,417
Silver.....	1,962,802	238,809
Total.....	17,865,188	1,600,226
Excess of exports.....	—	—
Excess of imports.....	16,888,251	1,379,737

Summary of the Shipping (foreign trade) for the same period.

	ENTERED.	Tons.	Tons.
Japanese.....	562,461	124,568
Foreign.....	1,025,809	1,141,364
Total.....	1,588,270	1,265,932

CLEARED.

	1906.	1905.
Japanese.....	578,632	130,922
Foreign.....	1,005,091	1,107,134
Total.....	1,583,723	1,238,056

IMPORTS.

GROUP I.

	1906.	1905.
	Yen.	Yen.
Cotton, raw.....	11,245,184	11,068,629
Cotton yarns.....	329,094	47,550
Wool.....	707,731	692,437
Flax, hemp, jute, &c.....	360,576	261,942
Iron nails.....	340,364	239,276
Rail.....	303,499	30,644
Iron, bar & rod.....	610,887	448,733
Iron pipes and tubes.....	194,983	110,842
Other iron and steel.....	896,435	1,598,570
Indigo, dry.....	368,310	159,737
Paper.....	596,943	435,450
Leather, sole and other.....	240,573	1,238,278
Machinery and engines.....	1,433,514	2,440,938
Locomotive-engines and rail-way cars.....	73,283	107,337
Steam vessels.....	221,657	1,178,809
Others.....	3,956,920	5,769,327
Total.....	21,879,953	25,828,499

GROUP II.

	1906.	1905.
	Yen.	Yen.
Mousseline de laine.....	304,911	226,234
Woollen cloths.....	1,371,876	1,591,185
Shirtings and cotton prints.....	621,859	437,150
Cotton satins and velvets.....	177,218	222,581
Sugar, brown and white.....	1,536,298	674,773
Others.....	2,316,246	3,260,804
Total.....	6,328,408	6,412,727

GROUP III.

	1906.	1905.
	Yen.	Yen.
Rice.....	6,761,225	9,842,129
Beans, peas and pulse.....	642,166	724,950
Flour, wheat.....	386,704	642,992
Kerosene oil.....	1,137,290	1,022,433
Oil-cake.....	2,190,531	651,250
Others.....	3,377,858	5,328,083
Total.....	14,495,774	18,211,837

Grand total.....	42,704,135	50,453,063
------------------	------------	------------

Total of exports & imports.....	71,495,645	74,855,099
Excess of exports.....	—	—
Excess of imports.....	13,912,625	26,051,027

Summary of the foreign trade and shipping of Taiwan (Formosa) for the same period.

	1906.	1905.
	Yen.	Yen.
Exports.....	386,939	401,190
Imports.....	1,757,290	1,035,450
Total.....	2,144,229	1,436,640
Excess of exports.....	—	—
Excess of imports.....	1,370,351	634,260
Exports, specie & bullion.....	108,238	34,714
Imports, specie & bullion.....	771	6,772
Excess of exports.....	107,467	27,942
Excess of imports.....	—	—

Summary of the shipping (foreign trade) of Taiwan for the same period.

	ENTERED.	Tons.	Tons.
Japanese.....	8,744	768
Foreign.....	12,628	16,157
Total.....	21,372	16,925

CLEARED.

	1906.	1905.
	Tons.	Tons.
Japanese.....	10,352	800
Foreign.....	10,686	13,746
Total.....	21,038	14,546

AN OAKLAND PAPER ON THE EARTHQUAKE.

A copy of the Oakland Tribune, printed on Wednesday, the day of the California disaster, has on its first page the following warning to the people:—

"Keep cool. Keep your heads. Keep your courage.

"Don't exaggerate.
"Don't get panic-stricken.
"An earthquake shock of great violence and long duration is an appalling calamity, but a panic is infinitely worse.

"Reason, courage and calmness dissolve in times of panic like snow in a spring thaw, and confusion, irresolution prevail at a time when judgment and action are the supreme necessity of the hour. Beware of crediting and circulating wild rumours, and avoid idle lamentation.

"A great disaster has befallen San Francisco, Oakland and several other California cities, due to mysterious elemental disturbance. There has been widespread damage to property and considerable loss of life. Careless and imperfect construction is responsible for nine-tenths of the damage and a great majority of the casualties.

"It may be a thousand years before there is such another disturbance in this locality, but the consequence of this one is an admonition not to repeat the errors of the past. The damage is so far from being irreparable that it should dishearten no one. Therefore it is wise to take counsel of reason and courage, and shun the fearful infection of the timid, the superstitious and weak-minded.

"Now is the time for citizens of Oakland and San Francisco to summon up their fortitude, their strength of mind and their faith in the future. Lisbon was almost totally destroyed by an earthquake infinitely more dreadful than the one we have just passed through a hundred and sixty years ago, but it has never been seriously damaged by seismic shock since.

"No part of the earth seems to be free from these mysterious visitations, and there is no cause to despair when they occur.

"Every citizen should address himself to the task of restoring confidence, quieting fears, repairing damages and rendering succour to those sorely smitten by calamity.

"Happily the people of Oakland have taken the disaster with philosophy and comparative calmness. They have not given way to undue excitement or idle fears. They were a bit shaken and startled, but they retained their presence of mind and had begun to repair the damages within an hour after the heavy shock subsided. As they take account of stock they find that the damage is far less than was at first apprehended. It is more apparent than real. The city stands fairly intact.

"Not a single building has been completely wrecked, the only complete destruction being a few frame houses destroyed by fire. Otherwise Oakland is right side up with care, and in a few days will wear its wonted appearance.

"Again we say, keep your courage. Be calm and help yourselves and your neighbours, for God reigns and the heavens still smile in California. Above all things avoid magnifying the damage and making foolish predictions calculated to weaken confidence and alarm the nervous and impressionable."

MAIL STEAMERS.

NEXT MAIL IS DUE.

From	Line	Steamer.	Date.
Europe.....	N. L. D.....	Roon 1	Sa. May 19
Hongkong.....	O. & O.....	Coptic	Su. May 20
America.....	P. M.....	China	Tu. May 22
Europe.....	M. M.....	Salazie 2	W. May 23
America.....	T. K. K.....	Nippon Maru 3	Su. May 27
Hongkong.....	B. T.....	Hyades	Su. May 27
Hongkong.....	P. M.....	Siberia	Su. May 27
Seattle.....	N. Y. K.....	Shinano Maru	F. June 1
Hongkong.....	C. P. R.....	Tartar	F. June 1
Vancouver.....	C. P. R.....	Athenian 4	Sa. June 2
Tacoma.....	B. T.....	Lyra	Sa. June 2
America.....	O. & O.....	Doric	Su. June 3
Hongkong.....	T. K. K.....	America Maru	Su. June 3
Vancouver.....	C. P. R.....	Em. of India	M. June 4
Hongkong.....	C. P. R.....	Em. of China	Th. June 7
America.....	P. M.....	Manchuria	M. June 11
Hongkong.....	G. N.....	Minnesota	Sa. June 23
Seattle.....	G. N.....	Dakota	Sa. June 23

- 1 Left Shanghai on the 14th inst.
- 2 Left Hongkong on the 15th inst.
- 3 Left San Francisco on the 10th inst.
- 4 Left Vancouver on the 14th inst.

NEXT MAIL LEAVES

For	Line	Steamer.	Date.
Vancouver.....	C. P. R.....	Em. of Japan	F. May 18
Europe.....	M. M.....	Caledonian	Sa. May 19
America.....	O. & O.....	Coptic	Tu. May 22
Hongkong.....	P. & A.....	Aragonia	Tu. May 22
Hongkong.....	P. M.....	China	W. May 23
Shanghai.....	N. Y. K.....	Kasuga Maru	Th. May 24
Europe.....	N. D. L.....	Roon	Sa. May 26
Tacoma.....	B. T.....	Hyades	M. May 28
Hongkong.....	T. Y. K.....	Nippon Maru	Tu. May 29
America.....	P. M.....	Siberia	Tu. May 29
Europe.....	N. Y. K.....	Tamba Maru	W. May 30
Australia.....	N. Y. K.....	Nikko Maru	Sa. June 2
Vancouver.....	C. P. R.....	Tartar	Sa. June 2
Hongkong.....	C. P. R.....	Athenian	Sa. June 2
Hongkong.....	B. T.....	Lyra	Su. June 3
Europe.....	P. & O.....	Dongola	Su. June 3
Hongkong.....	C. P. R.....	Em. of India	M. June 4
Hongkong.....	O. & O.....	Doric	Tu. June 5
America.....	T. K. K.....	America Maru	Tu. June 5
Seattle.....	N. Y. K.....	Riojun Maru	Tu. June 5
Portland.....	P. & A.....	Arabia	Tu. June 5
Hongkong.....	P. M.....	Manchuria	W. June 13
Seattle.....	G. N.....	Minnesota	M. June 25
Hongkong.....	G. N.....	Dakota	Th. June 28

LATEST SHIPPING.

ARRIVALS.

Hakuai Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,419, T. Sekine, 11th May.—Shanghai via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Fusan Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,551, H. Mikumi, 11th May.—Anping, General.—Osaka Shosen Kaisha.

Inaba Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,839, Wm. Bainbridge, 11th May.—Oginohama, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Montara, American steamer, 1,695, Hall, 11th May.—Yokosuka, Ballast.—Samuel Samuel & Co.

Niigata Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,353, K. Sato, 12th May.—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Yeiyo Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,538, N. Teranaka, 12th May.—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Victoria, Swedish steamer, 989, J. Hellberg, 12th May.—Takao, 7th May, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Hansa, German Cruiser, S. Weber, 12th May.—Shanghai, 5th May.

Monteagle, British steamer, 4,492, Parry, 12th May.—Hongkong via ports, 4th May, Mails and General.—C. P. R. Co.

Rosetta Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,216, K. Hayashi, 12th May.—Kobe, General.—Toyo Kisen Kaisha.

Aki Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,995, Murai, 13th May.—Mojji, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Tanushima Maru, Japanese steamer, 994, Sumi-miya, 13th May.—New Chang, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Manica, British steamer, 2,657, R. Leslie, 13th May.—London and ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Raleigh, U.S. Cruiser, 3,213, 8,500 I.H.P., F. Fletcher, 13th May.—Shanghai.

Mikawa Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,060, Buhei Ima, 13th May.—Newchang, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Minnesota, American steamer, 13,323, J. H. Rinder, 13th May.—Seattle, Wash., Mails and General.—G. N. S.S. Co.

Tenshin Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,580, W. Hunter, 13th May.—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Empress of China, British steamer, 3,003, R. Archibald, 13th May.—Vancouver, B.C., Mails and General.—C. P. R. Co.

Galveston, (10), U.S. protected cruiser, 4,700, Comd. Wm. G. Cutler, 13th May.—Cavite.

Challanoga, (10), U.S. protected cruiser, 4,700, Comd. Sharp, 13th May.—Cavite.

Pocasset, British steamer, 1,726, W. N. James, 14th May.—Saigon, Rice.—Samuel Samuel & Co.

Tsuan, British steamer, 1,459, C. Lindburg, 14th May.—Sydney via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.

Zoroaster, British steamer, 2,384, John Ewan, 14th May.—Christmas Island, Phosphate Rock.—To Order.

Yechigo Maru, Japanese steamer, 712, A. Yamashita, 14th May.—Yokkaichi, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Mishima Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,197, K. Kinoshita, 15th May.—Keelung, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Eastern, British steamer, 2,272, S. H. Powell, 15th May.—Sydney via ports, General.—Carnes & Co.

Yamaguchi Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,038, Iizawa, 15th May.—Hakodate, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Kanagawa Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,813, J. W. Wale, 15th May.—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Dakota, American steamer, 13,305, E. Francke, 15th May.—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—G. N. S.S. Co.

Mongolia, American steamer, 8,700, W. P. S. Porter, 15th May.—San Francisco, Mails and General.—P. M. S.S. Co.

Urajio Maru, Japanese steamer, 833, T. Arakawa, 16th May.—Newchwang, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Sado Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,856, G. S. Lapraik, 16th May.—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Taihoku Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,733, T. Kitano, 16th May.—Takao, General.—Osaka Shosen Kaisha.

Kowloon, German steamer, 1,487, Keer, 16th May.—Anping, Sugar.—Osaka Shosen Kaisha.

Benmahr, British steamer, 1,935, Alex. Webster, 17th May.—London via ports, General.—Carnes & Co.

Anhui, British steamer, 1,350, A. H. Harris, 17th May.—Shanghai via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.

Willehad, German steamer, 3,012, E. H. Obenauer, 17th May.—Sydney via ports, Mails and General.—H. Ahrens & Co., Nachf.

Empress of Japan, British steamer, 3,003, H. Pybus, 17th May.—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—C. P. R. Co.

DEPARTURES.

Dardanus, British steamer, 2,992, Nicholas, 11th May.—Saigon, General.—Butterfield Swire.

Yechigo Maru, Japanese steamer, 712, A. Yamashita, 11th May.—Yokkaichi via Handa, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Matsuyama Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,959, Y. Kishi, 11th May.—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Sithonia, German steamer, 4,249, Brehmer, 11th May.—Kobe, General.—C. Illies & Co.

Korea, American steamer, 5,651, W. B. Seabury, 12th May.—San Francisco via Honolulu, Mails and General.—P. M. S.S. Co.

Chenan, British steamer, 1,350, H. E. Laver, 12th May.—Shanghai via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.

Kokura Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,591, R. Yamanoichi, 12th May.—Otaru via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Prinz Heinrich, German steamer, 3,902, P. Grosch, 12th May.—Hamburg and Bremen via ports, Mails and General.—H. Ahrens & Co., Nachf.

Giram Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,815, T. Kitano, 13th May.—Kobe, General.—Osaka Shosen Kaisha.

Inaba Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,839, Wm. Bainbridge, 13th May.—Kobe via Yokkaichi, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Yeiyo Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,538, N. Teranaka, 14th May.—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Empress of China, British steamer, 3,003, R. Archibald, 14th May.—Hongkong via ports, 14th May, Mails and General.—C. P. R. Co.

Rosetta Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,039, Tachibana, 14th May.—Kobe, General.—Toyo Kisen Kaisha.

Helene Rickmers, German steamer, 2,255, Sanders, 15th May.—Singapore, General.—Becker & Co.

Tenshin Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,580, W. Hunter, 15th May.—Otaru, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Hansa, German cruiser, 5,885, B. Marwede, 15th May.—Tsingtau.

Victoria, Swedish steamer, 989, J. Hellberg, 15th May.—Wakamatsu, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Sikh, British steamer, 3,213, Atkinson, 15th May.—New York via ports, General.—Dodwell & Co. Ltd.

Niigata Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,353, K. Sato, 16th May.—Shanghai via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Yechigo Maru, Japanese steamer, 712, A. Yamashita, 16th May.—Yokkaichi, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Mikawa Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,060, Ima Buhei, 16th May.—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Dakota, American steamer, 13,305, E. Francke, 16th May.—Seattle, Wash., Mails and General.—G. N. S.S. Co.

Minnesota, American steamer, 13,323, J. H. Rinder, 16th May.—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—G. N. S.S. Co.

Tsuan, British steamer, 1,459, C. Lindburg, 16th May.—Australia and New Zealand via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.

Samuki Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,793, Matheson, 16th May.—London and Antwerp via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Dupetit Thours (36) French cruiser, Captain Lespinatte de Saune, 16th May.—Kobe.

Montcalm (36) French flagship, 9,500, Capt. Martel, 16th May.—Kobe.

Palermo, British steamer, 4,909, E. G. Andrews, 17th May.—London and Antwerp via ports, Mails and General.—P. & O. S.N. Co.

Yamaguchi Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,028, T. Iri-sawa, 17th May.—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Hakuai Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,419, T. Sekine, 17th May.—Shanghai via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Mongolia, American steamer, 8,700, W. P. S. Porter, 17th May.—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—P. M. S.S. Co.

Mishima Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,192, H. Kinoshita, 17th May.—Anping via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Urajio Maru, Japanese steamer, 833, T. Arakawa, 17th May.—Awomori, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Kanagawa Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,813, M. J. Cumow, 17th May.—Seattle, Wash., via Victoria, B.C., Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

Willehad, German steamer, 3,012, E. H. Obenauer, 17th May.—Sydney via ports, General.—H. Ahrens & Co., Nachf.

Taihoku Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,733, T. Kitano, 17th May.—Kobe, General.—Osaka Shosen Kaisha.

PASSENGERS.

ARRIVED.

Per American steamer Korea, from Hongkong via ports:—Mrs. Simpson, Miss Holbrook, Mr. Woodward, Mrs. Wm. Woodward, Miss Woodward, Miss Woodward, Mr. C. Helm, Mr. R. Ruegg, Mr. C. A. Clark, Col. C. Gardenet, Mrs. Col. Gardenet and two children, Mrs. Huntington, Miss Huntington, Mr. Hopkinson, Mr. J. Hartwell, Miss F. Lane, Miss G. Robinson, Miss K. Winears, Miss McCormick, Mr. W. J. Pettican, Mr. H. D. Lombard, Mrs. H. D. Lombard, Mr. G. Kellogg-Claston, Mr. A. Ferrier, Mrs. A. Ferrier and Mr. S. F. Smith. For Honolulu:—Mr. R. A. Frost, Mr. Lan Chung Wah and Mr. Lee Chu. For San Francisco:—Mr. G. B. Cooley, Lieut. Velkoff, Mr. M. S. Perry, Major Mark, Mrs. Mark and maid, Mr. F. Gunnell, Mrs. F. Kellogg, Miss M. T. Matthews, Mr. M. Dussaix, Mr. C. H. Hilbert, Mr. A. L. Heckler, Rev. D. McGilvary, Mr. S. Erlanger, Mrs. S. Erlanger, Mr. L. C. Bishop, Mr. W. L. Abbott, Mr. H. A. Mattock, Mrs. Bohler, Mr. J. G. Cumming, Mr. W. R. Gourlay and Mr. Jiu Pao Vung in cabin.

Per Japanese steamer Hakuai Maru, from Shanghai via ports:—Mr. M. Tsutsumi, Mrs. Tsutsumi and 2 children and Mr. Yamamoto in cabin; Mr. K. Kobayashi, and 6 Chinese in second class; 110 in steerage.

Per American steamer Minnesota, from Seattle via ports:—Mr. A. Ahman, Mr. F. Furuya, Mr. E. L. Grondahl, Mr. S. Yamakawa, Mr. O. B. Huett, Mr. J. R. Hopkins, Mr. R. Yamanaka, Mrs. E. L. Grondahl, Mr. K. Kawai, Mr. M. T. Ishijima, Mr. Matsuki and Mr. M. Hiraishi. For Kobe:—Mr. H. F. Meserve, Mrs. H. F. Meserve, Miss Marie Dulurento. For Shanghai:—Mr. T. Hansen, Mrs. T. Hansen, Dr. Lucy H. Hoague, Mr. K. Kinsen and Mr. S. K. Palmer. For Hongkong:—Mrs. Sarah E. Abt, Mr. W. B. Allen, Mr. Clay Anderson, Mr. E. C. Alexander, Mr. B. H. Baldwin, Mr. E. J. Beard, Mr. Bennett, Mr. E. W. Brammatt, Mr. Charlie Bennett, Miss Mabel Cooper, Mr. Fred Churchill, Mr. John C. Endoba, Mr. John C. Coli, Mr. C. L. Cassidy, Mr. R. L. Cooper, Mr. D. A. Calhoun, Mr. Hing Ming Ghuen, Mr. Walter Dennis, Mr. John C. Early, Mr. R. M. Elder, Mr. T. C. Edminster, Mr. Harry N. Ferris, Mr. Gerard Foster, Mrs. Mabel Foster, Mr. C. H. Farnham, Mr. W. E. Ford, Mr. M. J. Gordin, Mrs. L. C. Gilman, Miss Mary A. Gillman, Mr. Wm. R. Giberson, Mr. Herman Gard, Mrs. Jennie Hasbrook, Miss Nellie Hasbrook, Miss Lee M. Hargus, Mr. Roscoe Hall, Mr. H. C. Hill, Mr. T. A. Hatch, Mr. H. F. Howe, Mr. C. J. Hogue, Mr. A. W. Hipp, Mr. B. B. Harris, Mr. H. A. Hull, Mr. A. V. Hilton, Mr. L. E. Hill, Mr. John Holt, Mr. C. D. Hayne, Mr. W. I. Jenkins, Mr. Martin Jones, Mr. L. E. Jacks, Mr. G. A. Jamison, wife and children, Mr. L. H. Johnson, Mr. George J. Judson, Mrs. Laura S. Knight, Mrs. H. J. Kennard, Mr. C. J. Kalfbell, Mr. J. W. Krueger, Mr. B. G. Kieruff, Mr. F. Lineham, Mr. John F. Miner, Mr. William E. Mack, Mr. Arthur J. Mitchell, Mr. Claude Miller, Mr. Bing F. Miller, Mr. M. B. Moore, Mr. J. C. Mulden, Mr. W. P. Miller, Mr. M. Mitkiericz, Mr. E. W. Mitchell, Mr. C. G. McLean, Mr. E. O. Nickerson, Miss Irene Norton, Mr. F. D. Nash, Mr. L. M. Newton, Mr. A. L. Oliver, Miss Joyce Price, Mr. John W. Philbrook, Mr. Curbias E. Parish, Mr. J. A. Prenatt, Mr. T. M. Poyter, Mr. H. L. Pringle, Mr. R. F. Risker, Mr. W. A. Regan, Mr. J. M. Robinson, Mr. A. D. Stribe, Mr. Thur. Smith, Mr. Richard U. Strong, Mrs. Gary Stark and 2 children, Mr. Billy P. Six, Dr. S. G. Simms, Mr. C. C. Stiles, Mr. C. B. Sawyer, Miss M. F. Trigg, Mr. W. H. Tidwell, Mr. T. W. Tieghen, Mr. G. W. Todd, Mr. F. J. Tranbarger, Miss Sarah Wygant, Mrs. F. A. Williams, Mr. J. B. Woodruff, Mr. F. E. Woodruff, Mr. Luke E. Wright, Mrs. Luke E. Wright, Miss K. Wright, Mr. F. S. Weston, Mr. J. P. Worthington, Mr. K. Yoshizawa and Mrs. Yoshizawa in cabin; 48 in steerage.

Per British steamer Empress of China, from Vancouver B.C.:—Mr. K. Hoefner, Mr. W. J. Bayles, Mr. Matsuoaka, Mrs. Moore Graham, Rev. E. Ryerson and wife, Mr. Y. Takahashi, Major R. Carleton, Mr. N. T. Saunders and wife, Mr. J. E. Frame, Mr. D. H. McDermid, Mrs. P. C. M. Thibault, Mr. A. S. Newberry, Mr. J. C. Ward, Mr. R. C. Scott, Capt. E. D. Palmer, Mr. Takagi, Mrs. Dunham, Mr. F. W. Grant, Mr. C. G. Barton, Baron Schnurbein, and Mr. M. Schnurbein. For Kobe:—Mr. C. G. Town and wife, Mr. C. Duviour, Mr. N. J. Geary and wife. For Nagasaki:—Mr. G. C. Hodge. For Shanghai:—Mr. J. Helbling Mr. and Mrs. Pilsworth and 2 children, Mr. Fa Hai Lee, Lt. Col. P. Holland and wife, Mr. E. D. Jackson, Mr. Mrs. Miss and Master Edgar, Mr. H. Keswick, and Mr. H. Schmidt. For Hongkong:—Mr. C. N. Ferrier, Capt. W. S. Scott, Mr. C. D. Carey and Mr. R. T. Brayn in cabin; 7 intermediate; 148 in steerage.

Per British steamer Eastern, from Sydney via ports:—Mr. C. E. Jeffries, Mr. W. F. Evans, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Higgins, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Lee, Mrs. Foreman, Mrs. McKay, Mr. and Mrs. C. Bridge, Major-General Buckle, Mrs. Blomfield, Miss Blomfield, Mr. N. J. Blake, Miss Campbell, Mr. T. J. Edwards, and Miss M. A. E. Douglas, in cabin.

Per American steamer Dakota, from Hongkong via ports:—Mr. W. E. Craven, Mrs. W. E. Craven and child, Mrs. H. J. Moore, Mr. C. E. Lee, Mrs. C. S. Lee, infant and native servant, Mr. Barclay, and Mrs. Barclay, in cabin; Mr. W. de Julian, in second class; 1 Chinese, in steerage.

Per American steamer Mongolia, from San Francisco:—Miss M. Ball, Miss P. Curran, Mrs. M. B. Crook, Rev. P. A. Davy, Mrs. Davy, Mr. W. Triebmann, Rev. Clark Garman, Mrs. Garman, Mr. O. Howes, Miss Grace Howes, Mrs. W. B. Hamilton, Master A. Hamilton, Mr. B. K. Martland, Mr. J. Strauss, Mrs. Strauss, Master J. S. Strauss, and amah, Mr. W. Scott Sims, Mr. Jos. Thebaud, and Mr. Anne G. Warn, in cabin. For Kobe:—Mrs. H. De Celess, in cabin. For Hongkong:—Mrs. J. E. Corby, Mrs. A. G. Kellogg, Mr. A. G. Kellogg, Mr. F. A. Molitor, Mrs. Molitor, Mrs. M. Steer, and Mr. A. B. Zerns, in cabin.

Per German steamer Willehad, from Sydney via ports:—Mr. and Mrs. Ainsworth, Mr. R. Snowden, Mr. and Mrs. Emms, Mr. and Mrs. Wedge, Mr. and Mrs. Williamson, Mr. A. Powell, Mr. H. Edwards, Mr. Pow Kit Shun, Mr. Jones, Mr. Smith, Mr. Lo Yum, Mr. Ryder, Mr. Poshan, Mr. Nagata, Mr. Ah Chin, Mr. K. Bastard, Mr. J. Nai, and Mr. C. Casademunt, in cabin.

Per British steamer Empress of Japan, from Hongkong via ports:—Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Richards, Mr. and Mrs. Hancock, Miss Hancock, Mr. H. M. Haywood, Mr. E. Hug, Dr. and Mrs. Laying and child, Mrs. C. W. Dickson, 3 children and maid, Mr. C. H. Thompson, Capt. Ord, Mr. V. Carlowitz, Mr. G. Marshall, Mr. G. B. Hodges, Dr. D. J. Reid, Miss Wadman, Mr. H. P. Wadman, Mr. J. N. Hatch, Mr. and Mrs. A. Michie and child, Mr. D. B. Bruce, Mr. and Mrs. G. Brockelbank, Miss Brockelbank, Mrs. A. McCallum, Lieut. L. V. F. R. Dugmore, Mr. J. T. Disselduff, Mr. J. L. Jones, Mr. N. Calvert, Mrs. J. L. Seymour, Rev. and Mrs. J. F. Fitch and 3 children, Mr. and Mrs. R. Lemke and child, Miss Beondt, Miss Ferguson, Mr. H. S. Wilkinson, Mr. G. Fenerbach, Mrs. R. T. Irvin, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Armitage, Mr. W. Cowan, Mr. J. C. Ward, Mr. C. Eadie, Mr. A. M. Tomlinson, Lieut.-Col. and Mrs. G. J. Scott, Mr. J. L. Justman Jacob, Mr. Brenner, Mr. N. Palm, Mr. T. E. Barto, Mr. R. Warfield, Mr. and Mrs. D. R. Kilpatrick, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Harris, Mr. and Mrs. Warkim, Miss C. Lindes, Mr. Chun Goe Jung, Miss Toy Hai, Mr. Tam Ho, Mrs. Mrs. Chan Shee, Mr. Wang Tam Jung, Mr. Wang Kwang To, Mr. Wang Kwang Chun, Mr. Wang Kwang Yan, Mrs. Kwang Jay, Mrs. Ng She, Miss Lee Suey hin, Mr. Emile Ray, Miss Jack, and Mr. J. P. Cates, in cabin; 333 Chinese, 23 Indians, and 66 Japanese, in steerage.

DEPARTED.

Per American steamer Korea, for San Francisco, via Honolulu:—Mr. W. L. Abbott, Mr. A. W. Allen, Mr. M. Alsborg, Mr. I. Amory, Count de'Arboe, Miss Alfreda Arnold, Mr. D. Barry, Mr. F. H. Beebe, Mr. C. P. Beebe, Miss Christine A. Biddle, Mrs. A. M. Birnie, Miss E. Birnie, Mr. L. C. Bishop, Mr. R. R. Blacker, Mrs. R. R. Blacker, Miss Annie Blacker, Miss Mary Blacker, Mrs. Bohler, Miss C. Booth, Mr. J. P. Bowäitch, Mr. A. H. Briggs, Mrs. A. H. Briggs, Mr. A. A. Brimo, Miss Brock, Miss H. Bryant, Mr. T. Carl, Baron Von Carstanjen, Baroness Von Carstanjen, Mr. A. J. Chalhoub, Mr. G. K. Claxton, Miss Coleman and Maid, Major S. Comfort, Mrs. S. Comfort, Mr. Geo. B. Cooley, Mrs. H. A. Crane, Miss M. E. Crossley, Mr. J. G. Cumming, Mrs. M. C. Dey, Mr. R. Derby, Mrs. L. G. Deimar, Mr. S. Dolliver, Mrs. S. Dolliver, Mrs. N. W. Dornie, Miss C. I. Draper, Mr. M. Dussaix, Mr. S. Erlanger, Mrs. S. Erlanger, Mr. T. M. Fairbanks, Miss A. E. Ferguson, Miss A. P. Ferguson, Mr. A. Ferrier, Mrs. A. Ferrier, Mr. L. Friedlaender, Mr. R. A. Frost, Lt. Col. Albert Fryhold, Mr. Albert Fryhold, Count de Ganay, Miss Clara Gere, Rev. James I. Good, Mr. W. R. Gourlay, Mr. A. M. Graves, Mrs. A. M. Graves, Mr. H. Green, Mrs. H. Green, Miss M. Gummel, Mr. F. Gummel, Mr. J. Low Harriman, Mrs. J. Low Harriman and maid, Mr. A. L. Heckler, Mr. G. H. Hilbert, Mr. E. L. Hospes, Mrs. J. L. Hunsicker, Mrs. H. E. Huntington, Miss P. M. Huntington, Mr. C. Jenkins, Mrs. C. Jenkins, Mr. W. F. Johnson, Mr. Jui Pao Vung, Mrs. F. Kellogg, Mrs. S. Kistler, Mrs. S. Kistler, Miss H. Kloger, Mr. H. D. Lombard, Mrs. H. D. Lombard, Mr. Lan Chung Wah, Mr. Lee'Chu, Mr. F. H. Lovell, Mrs. F. H. Lovell, Lieut. Wilhelm Malashowski, Mr. W. H. Male, Mrs. W. H. Male, Major Mink, Mrs. Mink and maid, Miss M. T. Matthews, Mr. Chas. Matteson, Mrs. Chas. Matteson, Miss Matteson, Mr. H. A. Mattock, Rev. D. McGilvary, Mr. G. Frederick Metcalf, Mr. J. Minchin and servant, Mrs. J. Minchin, Mr. W. A. Morling, Mrs. W. A. Morling, Mr. K. Mizukuchi, Mr. H. Mitsui, Mr. E. Morita, Mrs. E. Morita, Mr. E. G. J. Moyna, Mr. B. Muller, Mrs. L. Nathanson, Mrs. F. A. Newell, Miss Newell, Mr. J. B. Orgill, Mr. C. W. Pardee, Mrs. C. W. Pardee, Mr. Geo. W. Parker, Mrs. Geo. W. Parker, Miss L. Parker, Mrs. L. L. Parks, Miss O. Parks, Mrs. Emily Paul, Mr. M. S. Perry, Mr. Joseph Phelps, Mrs. Joseph Phelps, Miss Phelps, Mr. A. M. Rantoul, Miss Rantoul, Mr. E. N. Raynor, Mrs. E. N. Raynor, Mr. Edward K. Ream, Mr. Robert C. Ream, Mr. B. Richardson, Mrs. B. Richardson, Miss Richardson, Mr. C. Ristler, Mr. G. Saito, Mr. V. Scharer, Mr. G. Stewart Seaton, Mr. Arthur Smith, Mr. H. C. Smith, Mr. G. B. Smith, Mrs. G. B. Smith, Mr. S. F. Smith, Mr. Geo. Fred. Stoddart, Miss Stoddart, Mrs. C. J. Train, Miss Train, Lieut. Velkoff, Mr. C. M. Washington, Mrs. A. A. Waterhouse, Mrs. H. K. Williamson, Miss E. Wright, Miss H. Wright, Miss I. I. Wrightson and Miss P. M. Wrightson, in cabin.

Per British steamer Monteagle, for Vancouver, B. C.:—Col. Barrett, Mrs. Barrett, Mr. J. Berington, Miss Bgorgum, Mrs. Carmichael, Mr. F. E. Clark, Mr. Connors, Mr. T. A. Crooks, Mr. G. A. Curry, Mrs. G. A. Curry, Le Marquis D'Aigneux, Mr. Dickie, Mr. Donaldson, Mrs. Donaldson, Dr. W. F. Dunlop, Mrs. W. F. Dunlop, Miss Dunlop, Miss C. Mr. M. Esternaux, Mr. J. Harold Evans, Mr. M. H. Evans, Mr. Falls, Mrs. Falls, Mr. R. Ferguson, Mr. H. W. Foster, Mr. Geyer, Miss Gibson, Mr. A. Haimon, Mrs. Hastings, Miss Harbaugh, Rev. J. R. Harcourt, Miss J. R. Harcourt, Mr. W. B. Haughwout, Mr. J. A. Higgins, Mr. J. R. Hodgson, Capt. Hogg, Commander L. Hohnel, Mr. W. T. Hoskins, Miss Hulohd, Mrs. P. N. H. Jones, Mr. Jopp, Mr. Joseph, Mr. R. Julian, Mr. R. Emmott Large, Mrs. R. Emmott Large, Miss A. B. Leewan, The Earl of Letrim, The Countess of Letrim, Miss P. D. Long, Mr. C. C. Macaulay, Mrs. Macken, Miss Macken, Mr. M. A. Merten, Mr. Finlay Miller, Mrs. Finlay Miller, Mr. W. Moore, Mrs. Neal, Mr. C. A. Peterson, Miss Peterson, Mr. H. W. Raphael, Mr. J. Reidie, Miss G. Rees, Mr. Rogers, Mrs. Rogers, Mr. Ed. Roosen, Mr. S. M. Mrs. S. M. Russell, Mrs. Stetson, Miss Stewart, Mr. R. Stewart, Rev. Dr. Stout, Mr. R. Saunders, Mr. Hugo Schuchard, Mr. G. F. Taylor, Mr. H. E. Thurston, Miss Alice, True and two children, Mr. T. Waite, Mrs. A. Waite and child, Capt. Whitaker, Mrs. Whitaker, Mr. A. J. Wilson, Mrs. W. H. Wilson, Miss Wilson, Miss F. Wilson, Mr. Wylie and Mrs. Wylie, in cabin.

Per German steamer Drus Heinrich, for Europe via ports:—Mr. and Mrs. J. H. M. Peres and Guterres, child and amah, Mr. Weinstein, Mr. Hickox, Mr. G. C. Alexander, Mr. H. J. Marshall, Mr. Boden, Mr. Brenner, Mrs. Jacques, Miss Jacques, Mrs. Warren, Mr. and Mrs. Favre Brandt, Mr. von Bruning, and servant, Mr. Jacques, Mr. Redelsperger, Mr. Schaumann, Mr. P. E. Heermann, Mr. R. Thiel, Mr. Bunean Varilla, Lieut. E. N. Harding, R. A. M. C., Mr. N. Redcliffe, Mr. C. E. Miller, Mr. de Man, Mr. A. Butenhoff, Mr. W. Rusaw, Mr. Mamoli, Mr. and Mrs. Retzlaff, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Nicholson, Miss Allen, Mr. and Mrs. Jensen, Mr. Weber, Dr. Karl Horak, Mr. Henry Jug, Miss Evans, Miss Cumberland, 10 Chinese, Mr. Chang and Mr. A. Mackie, in cabin.

Per British steamer Empress of China, for Hongkong via ports:—Mr. Gillfill, Mr. C. M. Bartlett, Mr. Potts, Mrs. Potts, Mr. Geo. Gibbs, Mr. Carmichael, Miss Parker, Mr. Miller, Mrs. Miller, Mr. Nolte, and Mr. J. C. Ward, in cabin; 4, in steerage.

Per American steamer Dakota, for Seattle, Wash.:—Capt. and Mrs. E. J. Liddle and infant, Mr. E. F. Tatum, Mrs. E. F. Tatum, Miss A. Parker, Mr. A. G. Wyman, Mr. C. A. Galquist, Masters Galquist (2), Masters Cartwright (2), Mr. E. W. McGinnis, Mr. and Mrs. M. Wells and child, Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Eubank and 4 children, Mr. H. Kinniff, Mr. Lippy, Mr. H. Wright, Mr. C. R. Y. Lincoln, Mr. Lincoln and child, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Turner, Mrs. J. R. Edie, Mr. P. A. Herckel, Mrs. Stewart, Miss H. Stewart, Master Stewart, Mr. Stockton, Mrs. I. D. Peters, Mrs. H. E. Noble, Mr. I. I. Giffis, Mr. F. B. Smith, Mrs. F. B. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Parlin, Miss Parlin, Mr. J. A. Ball, Mrs. M. B. Martin, Mr. E. T. Laffin, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Case, Miss H. M. Conrick, Mr. A. G. Foster, Mr. M. Johnson, Mr. Hermlen, Mr. J. H. O. Hare, Mrs. B. F. Johnston, Mrs. J. H. O. Hare, Mr. J. W. Brewster, Mr. E. C. McCabe, Mrs. I. G. Braden and child, Mrs. Wolfson, Mrs. James, Mr. L. Loomis, Mr. H. E. Walker, Mrs. Van Buskirk, Mr. C. E. Curries, Mr. W. T. Vaughn, Mr. C. S. Winchell, Mr. P. J. Willet, Mr. and Mrs. Miller and infant, Mrs. T. Reed, Mr. J. H. M. Butler, Mr. J. Warren, Mr. W. I. Chapman, Mr. T. Beiler, Mr. Gearhart, Mr. C. A. Hull, Mr. M. E. Williamson, Mrs. S. E. Green, Dr. M. Herzog, Mr. Van Hoose, Mr. L. S. Briggs, Miss M. Kirkland, Mrs. Butler, Mr. Butler, Mr. U. S. Vincent, Mr. W. E. Wickman, Mr. W. J. Odon, Mrs. L. Cunningham, Mrs. Winchell, Madame Winchell, Mr. A. H. Pullman, Mr. J. A. Shell, Mr. J. W. Beardsler, Miss Garner, Mrs. Phillips, Mr. Keishiro Matsui, Dr. J. H. Pyke, Dr. and Mrs. H. H. Lorry, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Reid, Mrs. P. E. Dudley, Miss Elma O. Ferrall, Mr. C. W. Babcock, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Mackay, Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Baldwin, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Russell, Miss Jessie L. Russell, Mrs. Carrie J. Brown, Mr. Thomas Fuich, Mr. Anne Coye, Mr. J. Takekoshi, Mr. J. M. Pavitt, Mr. H. Sawatari, Mrs. Helen J. Horton, Mr. F. E. Woodruff, Mrs. E. A. Gibbens, Dr. O. Asano, Mr. Moritz, Mr. H. C. Thomas, Mrs. A. C. Nicolini, Mr. and Mrs. Hopwood, Mr. Heichi Tanaka, Mr. Ishola Watt Ponde, Mr. W. M. Vories, Mr. Edward Lake, Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Clarke, Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Wood, Master Wood, Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Wood, Miss Wood, Mr. Newman, Mrs. Newman, Mr. Manoel, and Mrs. Manoel and child, in cabin.

Per Japanese steamer Samuki Mann, for London via ports:—Lieut.-Col. S. Ozawa, Masters Ozawa, Major Y. Shiina, Mrs. B. Gibbs, Mrs. Ralph Platt, Mrs. and Miss Inglis, Mr. Soma Matajiro, Dr. Ainger, Inspector Surgeon Saigo, Miss Ainger, Mr. S. Haseba, M.P., Mr. T. Mochizuki, Capt. A. H. S. Synnot, Capt. R. W. Flannagan, and Mr. Nickels and family, in cabin; Lieut.-Col. and Mrs. Ishimaru, Mr. A. Haseba, Miss H. Hunt, Mr. Y. Yamashita, Mrs. S. E. Unite and 4 children, Mr. Y. Numano, Mr. and Mrs. T. Honda, Mr. T. Sashida, add Mr. G. Wia, in second class.

Per Japanese steamer Mongolia for Hongkong via ports:—Mrs. B. De Celess, Mr. J. E. Corby, Mr. A. G. Kellogg, Mrs. A. G. Kellogg, Mr. F. A. Molitor, Mrs. F. A. Molitor, Mrs. M. Steel, Mr. A. B. Zerns, Mr. E. A. Andrews, Miss Blunt and servant, Mrs. Carroll, Mr. K. Clark, Capt. A. E. Gove, Mr. G. J. Low, Mrs. A. E. Peck, Mrs. W. H. Smith, Mrs. A. H. Tomssett and infant, Mr. W. A. Turnell and Mr. Wang Chang Fai in cabin.

Per Japanese steamer Kanagawa Maru, for Seattle via Victoria B.C.:—Mr. M. Kato, Capt. J. M. James, Mr. F. J. Gunn, Mr. Fitz Herbert, Miss C. Moraes, Miss Gil, Miss A. B. Bodfosa, Mr. Y. Takayanagi, Mr. F. Suda, Mr. W. A. Main, Master Main, Mr. T. Da Costa de Moraes, Miss Anita de Moraes, Mrs. Main and 2 children, Mr. A. L. J. Dewette, Mrs. A. L. J. Dewette, Mr. T. Yasui, Rev. E. R. Woodman, Mr. T. Shibata, Mr. Y. Sugimura, Mr. Spencer, and Mr. Smith, in cabin; Mr. M. Yoshida, Mr. T. Okada, Mr. S. Tateishi, Mr. K. Nakagaki, Mr. S. Nakai, Mr. Kasforft, Mr. A. Ahman, Mr. K. Kubota, Mr. Rolandi, Mr. Gaslali, Mr. Iola, Mr. M. Tszuzuki, Mr. Radolphus, Mr. I. Nakajio, Mr. S. Miwa, Mrs. Kishigami, Mr. T. Yorodzu, Mr. K. Osawa, Mr. H. Yamashita, Mr. J. Nakagawa, and Mr. K. Sannohe, in second class; 114 in steerage.

Per German steamer Willehad, for Sydney via ports:—Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Charsley, Capt. C. Ward-Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. Pearce, Mr. Fred. H. Kempthorne, and Mr. J. Buneau Varilla, in cabin.

EXPECTED.

Per German steamer Roon, from Europe via ports:—Mr. and Mrs. S. Akabane, Mr. Heine Koehler, Mr. Julius Koch, Mr. and Mrs. R. Hayashi, Baron von Riepenhausen, Mr. Carl Albers, Miss Lina Lamcke, Mr. Sh. Harn, Mr. L. F. Braga, Mr. A. Onorato, Mr. L. Bade and Mr. P. Homann, in cabin.

CARGO.

Per British steamer Monteagle, for Vancouver:—

From.	To.					Total.
	Canada & West.	Chicago & New York.	Pacific Coast.	Other Cities.	Pack-ages.
Hongkong.	—	—	349	—	—	349
Kobe.	—	36	—	—	—	69
Yokohama.	204	71	302	—	—	577
Total.	204	104	338	349	—	995

From.	To.				Total.
	New York.	Eastern Pa.	Philadelp.	South Man'ter.	Mon. real. Rates.
H'kong & Canton.	131	—	—	—	131
Shanghai.	311	—	—	—	311
Yokohama.	299	—	—	—	299
Total.	741	—	—	—	741

SILK SHIPPERS.

Raw & Waste silk shipped per steamer Drus Heinrich—

Boyer, Mayet Guil- lee.....	RAW.				WASTE.
	Genoa, Option.	Lyon.	Marseilles.	Milan.	Genoa.	Marseilles.	Trieste.	Milan.
Jard ne, Matheson & Co.....	7	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
Sieber & Co.....	20	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
Sulzer Rudolph & Co.....	24	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
Siber Wolf & Co.....	30	15	—	—	—	—	27	—
Nabholz & Co.....	30	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
Carlowitz & Co.....	—	2	—	—	—	—	—	—
Kaitzu Gomei Kai- sha.....	78	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
H. Bernardin & Co.....	5	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
Otto Streuli & Co.....	40	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
Dell'Oro & Co.....	—	—	—	—	—	12	22	—
Ulysses Pila & Co.....	71	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
Total.....	266	211	—	—	—	12	39	—

Silk shippers by steamer Tremont, for Tacoma, Wash., 9th May:—

	Bales.
Cornes & Co.....	20
Silk shippers by steamer Korea , for San Francisco, 12th May:—
Siber, Wolff & Co. ....	111
F. Strabler & Co. ....	18
Mitsui Bussan Kaisha .....	135
Kitto Gomei Kaisha.....	53
Doshin Kaisha .....	36

Total ..... 353
Silk shippers per steamer Monteagle, for Vancouver, B.C., 12th May:—

	Bales.
Jewett & Bent .....	44
Boyer, Mazet, Guillee & Co. ....	43
Herbert Dent & Co. ....	38
China and Japan Trading Co. ....	11
Kitto Gomei Kaisha.....	106
Mitsui Bussan Kaisha .....	57
Total .....	299

VESSELS ON THE BERTH.

For KRELUING, via Moji (from Kobe), 3rd, and 18th every month, at Noon, the "SAIKIO MARU."—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

For KRELUING, via Moji (from Kobe), 10th and 25th every month, at Noon, the "KOSHUN MAUR."—Osaka Shosen Kaisha.

For TRIESTE, via Kobe, Hongkong, Singapore, Penang, Colombo, Bombay, Karachi, Aden, Suez, Port Said, and Fiume, about June —, the "NIPPON."—Heller Bros.

For SHANGHAI, via Kobe, Moji, and Nagasaki, May 19th, at 4 p.m., the "ANHUI."—Butterfield & Swire.

For MARSKILLES, London, and Antwerp, via Kobe, Shanghai, Hongkong, Straits, Colombo, and Port Said, May 16th, at Daylight, the "PALERMO."—P. & O. S.N. Co.

For SEATTLE, Wash., via Victoria, B.C., May 17th, at 2 p.m., the "KANAGAWA MARU."—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

For MARSEILLES, via ports, and Shanghai, May 19th, at 7 a.m., the "CALEDONIAN."—M.M. S.S. Co.

For LONDON, Amsterdam and Antwerp, May 22nd, at Daylight, the "JASON."—Butterfield & Swire.

For HONGKONG via Kobe, Moji, Nagasaki and Shanghai, May 22nd, the "ARAGONIA."—P. & A. S.S. & Co.

For SAN FRANCISCO, via Honolulu, May 22nd, the "COPTIC."—O. & O. S.S. Co.

For BOMBAY, via Kobe, Moji, Hongkong, Singapore, and Colombo, May 22nd, at 2 p.m., the "KAGOSHIMA MARU."—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

For BATAVIA, Cheribon, Samarang, Soerabaya, and Macassar, about May 22nd, the "TJILATJAP."—Ed. L. van Nierop & Co.

For HONGKONG, via Kobe, (Inland Sea), Nagasaki, and Shanghai, about May 23rd, the "CHINA."—P. M. S.S. Co.

For HAVRE, Hamburg and Bremen via ports, May 24th, at Daylight, the "ANDALUSIA."—C. Illies & Co.

For SHANGHAI, via Kobe, Moji, and Nagasaki, May 24th, at 10 a.m., the "KASUGA MARU."—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

For BREMEN and Hamburg, via ports, May 26th, at 9 a.m., the "ROON."—H. Ahrens & Co., Nachf.

For VICTORIA, B.C., and Tacoma, Wash., May 28th, the "HYADES."—Dodwell & Co., Ltd.

For HONGKONG, via Kobe, (Inland Sea), Nagasaki, and Shanghai, about May 29th, the "NIPPON MARU."—Toyo Kisen Kaisha.

For SAN FRANCISCO, via Honolulu, May 29th, at 3 p.m., the "SIBERIA."—P. M. S.S. Co.

For MARSEILLES, London, and Antwerp, via Kobe, Moji, Hongkong, Singapore, Penang, Colombo, and Port Said, May 30th, at Noon, the "TAMBA MARU."—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

For VICTORIA, Seattle, Tacoma, Wash., May 30th, the "TYDEUS."—Butterfield & Swire.

For HONGKONG, via Kobe, Inland Sea, Nagasaki, and Shanghai, about June 2nd, the "ATHENIAN."—Canadian Pacific Railway Co.

For SYDNEY, and Melbourne, via Kobe, Moji, Nagasaki, Hongkong, Thursday Island, Townsville, and Brisbane, June 2nd, at Noon, the "NIKKO MARU."—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

For HONGKONG, via Kobe, Moji and Shanghai, June 3rd, at 2 p.m., the "SHINANO MARU."—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

For HONGKONG, via Kobe, Moji and Manila, about June 3rd, the "LYRA."—Dodwell & Co., Ltd.

For HONGKONG, via Kobe, (Inland Sea), Nagasaki, and Manila, about June 5th, the "DORIC."—O. & O. S.S. Co.

LATEST COMMERCIAL.

[SPECIALLY COMPILED FOR THE "JAPAN MAIL."]

IMPORTS.

Yokohama, May 18.

The dullness in this market continues.

COTTON PIECE GOODS.

	PER YARD.
White Shirting—{ 40 yds. 36 in. } ..	0.10 to 0.16
Grey Shirting—8½ lb. 38½ yds. 36 inches V.	4.00 to 4.50
Grey Shirting—9 lb. 38½ yds. 45 inches	4.50 to 5.25
Prints—Assorted, 24 yards, 30 inches...	2.85 to 4.05
Cotton Italians and Satteens.....	0.20 to 0.40

WOOLLENS.

	PER YARD.
Flannels .....	V. 0.50 to 0.65
Italian Cloth, 32 in.....	0.35 to 0.50
Mousseline de Laine,—Crape, 21 yards, 30 inches.....	0.16 to 0.32
Cloths—Pilots, 54 to 56 inches .....	0.50 to 1.00
Cloths—Presidents, 51 to 65 inches .....	0.90 to 1.00
Cloths—Union, 54 to 56 inches .....	0.50 to 1.00
Blankets—Assorted 3 in 5 lb per lb .....	0.60 to 0.80
Velvets—Black, 35 yards, 22 inches .....	9.20 to 12.50
Victoria Lawns, 12 yards, 42-3 inches.....	0.90 to 1.80
Turkey Reds—2.8 to 3.0 lb 24-25 yards, 30 inches.....	1.90 to 2.25
Turkey Reds—3.8 to 5 lb, 24-25 yards, 32 inches .....	2.50 to 3.65

COTTON YARN.

	PER BALL.
Nos. 2/60, Gassed .....	V. 290.00 to 300.00
Nos. 2/80, Gassed .....	365.00 to 375.00
Nos. 2/100, Gassed .....	455.00 to 465.00
American Middling.....	33.50 to 34.00
Indian Broach.....	33.00 to —
Chinese .....	25.00 to 28.00

RAW COTTONS.

	PER BALL.
Galvanised Iron Sheets No. 30 G.....	13.0 to 12.50
Wire Nails, Ordinary assortments.....	7.00 to 10.00
Tin Plates, golbs. I.C.W.....	7.40 to 7.65
Pig Iron, No. 3 "Redcar" .....	2.30

KEROSENE.

	PER GALLON.
The market is quiet.
American .....	$3.27 to 3.47
Russian .....	3.34
Langkat .....	2.35

SUGAR.

	PER CENT.
The market is weak. No enquiries for Hongkong Refined.
Brown Takao .....	V. 7.60 to 7.80
Brown Manila.....	8.70 to 9.70
Brown China .....	7.30 to 12.00
White Java and Penang.....	12.60 to 13.60
White Refined.....	14.50 to 16.75

INDIGO.

	PER CEN.
Still nothing doing.
Java, Medium to best.....	Nom. 250.00 to 300.00
Calcutta, Medium to best .....	Nom. 180.00 to 200.00
Madras ( Kurpah ), Medium to best Nom.	130.00 to 160.00
Madras (Dry Leaf), Medium to best ..	—

EXPORTS.

RAW SILK.

At the season is now drawing to a close sellers are willing to make concessions in order to make a clearance of old stocks. This disposition has been availed of both by buyers for the United States and Europe, and a fair business has been done for the time of the year.

The weather is now all that can be desired for the new silk crop, and whatever deficit may result from frost in the Oshiu districts is likely to be made up by good crops in other districts.

QUOTATIONS.

Filatures—Extra Best, Coarse .....	1,050 to 1,060
Filatures—Extra, Fine .....	1,080 to 1,090
Filatures—Extra, Coarse .....	1,040 to 1,050
Filatures—No. 1, Fine .....	—
Filatures—No. 1, Coarse .....	990 to 1,010
Filatures—No. 1½, Fine .....	—
Filatures—No. 1½, Coarse .....	—
Filatures—No. 2, Fine .....	—
Filatures—No. 2, Coarse .....	970 to 980
Common—Coarse .....	—
Re-reels—Extra .....	—
Re-reels—No. 1 .....	—
Re-reels—No. 1½ .....	—
Re-reels—No. 2 .....	—
Kakedas—Gold Cup Chop Extra .....	—
Kakedas—Veiled Woman Chop No. 1 .....	—
Kakedas—One Horsehead Chop No. 1½ .....	—
Kakedas—No. 2 .....	—
Kakedas—No. 2½ .....	—

WASTE SILK.

Only slight alterations in prices and very little doing owing to small stocks and poor selection offering.

QUOTATIONS.

Noshi—Filatures, Best .....	—
Noshi—Filatures, Good .....	—
Noshi—Oshiu, Best .....	—
Noshi—Oshiu, Good .....	—
Noshi—Oshiu, Medium .....	—
Noshi—Shinshiu, Best .....	—
Noshi—Shinshiu, Good .....	—
Noshi—Bushiin, Best .....	—
Noshi—Bushiin, Good .....	—
Noshi—Bushiin, Medium .....	—
Noshi—Joshiu, Best .....	—
Noshi—Joshiu, Good .....	80 to 90
Kibiso—Filatures, Extra .....	—
Kibiso—Filatures, Best .....	110 to 120
Kibiso—Filatures, Second .....	90 to 100
Kibiso—Joshiu, Good .....	40 to 60
Kibiso—Bushiin, Fair .....	—

TEA.

Teas are now to hand at prices ranging as low as sen 30. Increasing stocks during the last few days have led to a considerable decline of prices but these are still above those quoted on the American markets.

Up to the evening of May 16th, 2,321,200 kin had changed hands in the Yokohama market since the first appearance of the new crop.

QUOTATIONS.

	Y. 60 and upwards.
Choicest .....	50 to 60
Choice .....	40 to 50
Finest .....	30 to 40
Fine .....	—
Good Medium .....	—
Medium .....	—
Good Common .....	—
Common .....	—

HABUTAE.

Some enquiry from foreign exporters during the week and prices are steady. Generally speaking, the market is still stationary and this state is expected to continue over the coming week.

A Kanazawa telegram says that owing to scarcity of stocks, prices went up about five sen on the average about May 16th. The Kawamata market also advanced about sen 15. On the contrary the Fukui market is very dull and consequently some of the weaving factories have stopped work.

KANAZAWA.

Inches.	4½ me.	5 me.	5½ me.
Yen.	Yen.	Yen.	Yen.
19½ .....	10.00	9.70	9.65
22½ .....	9.80	9.50	9.45
27 .....	9.70	9.20	8.95
36 .....	9.35	9.10	8.75

"PINE-LEAVES" MARK.

Inches.	6 me.	6½ me.	7 me.	7½ me.	8 me.
Yen.	Yen.	Yen.	Yen.	Yen.	Yen.
22½ .....	9.20	9.00	9.10	9.10	9.10
27 .....	9.00	8.90	8.90	8.70	8.70
36 .....	8.70	8.70	8.60	8.60	8.60

"GOLD" MARK.

Inches.	4½ me.	5 me.	5½ me.	6 me.
Yen.	Yen.	Yen.	Yen.	Yen.
19½ .....	10.00	9.80	9.60	—
22½ .....	9.50	9.10	9.00	—
27 .....	9.40	9.00	8.90	—
36 .....	9.30	8.90	8.80	—

RICE.

There was no special change throughout the week. The market, however, shows an upward tendency.

	koku.
Domestic rice in Fukagawa.....	1,364,254
Foreign rice in Fukagawa .....	237,137
Closing Price.	Yen.

	Yen.
Delivery.....	—
May .....	—
June .....	—
July .....	15.29

RICE AT WHOLESALE: STANDARD PRICE.

	(Tokyo.)	per koku.
Superior .....	Yen 14.71	—
Medium .....	14.09	—
Common .....	13.51	—
Average.....	14.10	—

koku, 4,0629 bushels. (Osaka.) (Kobe.)

	May	June	July
May .....	14.37	13.92	—
June .....	14.46	14.10	—
July .....	14.7675	14.44	—

NEW COCOONS.

On May 15th, about forty kwanme of new cocoons were brought from the district of Matsuzaki, Idu peninsula. The nominal prices were yen 5.50 and 5.90. The quotation, of course, can not be regarded as making a market in new cocoons and is high compared with that of last year, yen 4.50.

STOCK EXCHANGE.

The continued dullness of the money market and the fall in the rate of interest seem to have induced an active feeling in the stock market. Since last report, the market has been brisk. During the week, several reports of an exciting kind were circulated on the market, one of which was that Marquis Saionji had projected several industrial enterprises in Korea and Manchuria during his recent visit there; another that Mr. Jacob H. Schiff has consented to invest two hundred million yen in the construction of a railway in Manchuria, and in developing the Fushun Coal Mine; a third that Baron Kaneko, who is generally believed to be a competent financier, will probably occupy a seat in the Cabinet; and finally that several cotton spinning companies of Osaka and other western cities intend to amalgamate in order to enlarge their business. A telegram from London reports that on May 15th the prospectus of the Anglo-Japanese Bank, which was recently organized by Baron Shibusawa and other Japanese capitalists, in company with some leading British bankers, was issued. It was at once fully subscribed. The new bank aims at doing business in Japan, Korea and Manchuria.

EXCHANGE.

Yokohama, May 17

London silver 1/2 higher, but no change in sterling quotations from China, and local rates are unaltered, closing for the mail per steamer Empress of Japan as under.

London—Bank T/T	103 1/2 @ 1/2
— Bills on demand	101 1/2 @ 1/2
— 4 months' sight	101 1/4
— Private 4 months' sight	101 1/4
— 6 months' sight	101 1/4
Paris & Lyons—Bank sight	256
— Private 4 months' sight	260 1/2
— 6 months' sight	262
Hongkong—Bank sight	per $100 103 1/2 *
— Private 10 days' sight	do 101 1/4 *
Shanghai—Bank sight	69 1/4 *
— Private 10 days' sight	71 1/4 *
India—Bank sight	151 1/4
— Private 30 days' sight	153 1/4
America—Bank sight	49 1/2 @ 1/2
— Private 30 days' sight	50
— Private 4 months' sight	50 1/4
Germany—Bank sight	208 1/2
— Private 4 months' sight	213
Bar Silver (London)	30 1/4

* Nominal.

JAPANESE SHARE.

Yokohama, May 18, a.m.

Mean prices for Cash Delivery of Bonds and Shares, which may be held by Foreigners in their own names.

	Div'd.	Paid up.	1 year.	Q'tion.	Yen.	per cent.	Yen.
Exchequer Bonds 1st Issue	100	5	97.50
Exchequer Bonds 2nd Issue	100	5	94.00
Exchequer Bonds 3rd Issue	100	5	94.00
Exchequer Bonds 4th Issue	100	6	101.80
Exchequer Bonds 5th Issue	100	6	100.50
Consolidated Bonds (Seiri)	100	5	92.50
War Bonds (Gunji)	100	5	92.50
5% Imperial Bonds (Goburi)	100	5	90.10
Imperial 5 per cent. Bonds
(Issued 1906)	100	5	91.30
Navy Bonds (Kaigun)	100	5	87.00
Tokyo City Public Loan Bonds	100	6	100.00
Y'hama Water-works Bonds	100	6	98.50
Y'hama City Public Loan Bonds	100	6	97.00
Osaka Harbour Bonds	100	6	98.80
Sanyo Railway Debentures 2nd	100	6	99.00
Sanyo Railway	50	10	85.70
Kansai Railway	50	5.2	46.70
Kyushu Railway	50	8.5	74.20
Hokkaido Colliery Railway	50	12.5	105.00
Sobu Railway	50	10	82.00
Tokyo Electric Car (Densha)	50	10	89.30
Tokyo Street Railway (Shigai)	50	8	76.50
Tokyo Street Railway new	25	8	44.60
Tokyo Electric Railway (Denki)	50	2.5	53.50
Tokyo Electric Railway, new	40	2.5	42.80
Yokohama Electric Railway	50	3.5	68.50
Odawara Electric Car	50	3	32.50
Keihin Electric Railway	50	8	104.30
Keihin Electric Railway, new	25	8	74.50
Tokyo Marine Insurance	12.50	15	40.00
Yokohama Fire Insurance	12.50	10	22.30
Tokyo Fire Insurance	12.50	12	28.00
Kanagafuchi Spinning	50	16	114.00
Fuji Cotton Spinning	50	20	101.50
Tokyo G'sian Cotton Spinning	50	20	129.00
Yokohama Dock	33	12	58.50
Yokohama Electric Light	50	15	97.50
Yokohama Electric Light, new	12.50	15	37.50
Tokyo Electric Light	50	12	92.00

* Ex div.

WILD WITH ECZEMA

And Other Itching, Burning,
Scaly Eruptions with Loss of Hair.

Speedy Cure Treatment.

Bathe the affected parts with Hot Water and Cuticura Soap, to cleanse the surface of crusts and scales, and soften the thickened cuticle. Dry, without hard rubbing, and apply Cuticura Ointment freely, to allay itching, irritation, and inflammation, and soothe and heal, and lastly take Cuticura Resolvent Pills, to cool and cleanse the blood. A single set is often sufficient to cure the most torturing, disfiguring, itching, burning, scaly, pimply humours, eczemas, rashes, irritations, and chafings, with loss of hair, when all else fails.

The agonizing itching and burning of the skin, as in eczema; the frightful scaling, as in psoriasis; the loss of hair and crusting of the scalp, as in scalded head; the facial disfigurement, as in pimples and ringworm; the awful suffering of infants and the anxiety of worn-out parents, as in milk crust, tetter, and salt rheum, — all demand a remedy of almost superhuman virtues to successfully cope with them. Such are the CUTICURA remedies, the purest, sweetest, most speedy and economical curatives for the skin, scalp, and blood ever compounded. Mothers are their warmest friends.

Millions of Women Use Cuticura Soap

Assisted by CUTICURA OINTMENT for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, for cleansing the scalp of crusts, scales, and dandruff, and the stopping of falling hair, for softening, whitening, and soothing red, rough, and sore hands, for baby rashes and chafings, in the form of baths for annoying irritations and inflammations of women, or too free or offensive perspiration, in the form of washes for ulcerative weaknesses, and many sanative, antiseptic purposes which readily suggest themselves, as well as for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery.

CUTICURA RESOLVENT PILLS (Chocolate Coated) are a new, tasteless, odourless, economical substitute for the celebrated liquid CUTICURA RESOLVENT, as well as for all other blood purifiers and humour cures. Put up in screw-cap pocket vials, containing 60 doses.

CUTICURA REMEDIES are sold throughout the world. Australian Depot: R. Towns & Co., Sydney. British Depot: 27-28, Charterhouse Sq., London. French Depot: 2 Rue de la Paix, Paris. For Sale: DAWD AND CHAM. Sole Prop., Boston, U. S. A.

SHARE REPORT.

Yokohama, May 17, 1906

LOCAL STOCKS.—The market has ruled quiet during the past week and the business done has not altered rates to any extent. Kirin Breweries are on offer at yen 130. Club Hotels are enquired for. Engine and Iron Works, sellers at yen 120. Helms, buyers at yen 82.50. Oriental Hotels, Kobe, buyers of ordinary shares at yen 75. A few Tansan shares are on offer at par. Y. U. C. debentures, buyers at yen 108. Raub Mines, buyers at $3.

CHINA STOCKS.—According to latest telegraphic advices—Hongkong and Shanghai Banks, $850 sellers. Indo-Chinas Tls. 66 sellers. China Traders, $96 buyers. Hongkong and Kowloon Wharfs $104 sales. Hongkong Lands, $119 buyers. Humphrey's Estates, $11 1/2 sellers. Green Island Cements, $29 1/2 sales. Shanghai Dock and Engineering Co. Tls. 118 sellers. Shanghai Lands, Tls. 119 sales.

STOCKS.	Capital.	No. of Shares.	Issue Value.	Amount Paid Up.	Reserve Fund.	At Working Ant or Carried Forward.	Date.	Last Dividend.	For Term.	Closing Quotations.
	Y.	Y.	Y.	Y.
Brett & Co. Ltd.....	28,000	2800	10	10			30.6.03	6%	for 1	6.50 N.
Club Hotel, Ltd.....	185,000	1850	100	100			31.3.04	7%	" 1	80 N.
Grand Hotel, Ltd.....	250,000	2500	100	100		Y.	6.179.25	10%	" 1/2	225 Sa.
Helm Bros., Ltd.....	186,000	3720	50	50	20,000	Y.	6.235.70	31.12.05	17 1/2%	" 1	82 1/2 B.
Langfeldt & Co. Ltd.....	150,000	1500	100	100		Dr.	28.875.52	31.12.05	" 1/2	45 S.
C. Nickel & Co. Ltd.....	500,000	20000	25	25			5.106.41	31.10.05	12%	" 1	34 Sa.
Japan Brewery Co. Ltd.....	450,000	9000	50	50	200,000		8.702.28	31.12.05	20%	" 1	130 Sa.
Y. E. & Iron Works.....	130,000	2600	50	50	20,000	Y.	20.149.17	30.11.05	10%	" 1/2	120 S.
Hirano M. W. Co. Ltd. ...	125,000	5000	25	25				1st y.r.	" 1	25 S.
Oriental H.L. old ord.		1490	50	50				31.8.05	12%	" 1	75 B.
" " new	251,000	1510	50	50
" " old pref.		750	50	50	60,542.50				8%		63 Sa.
" " new		1250	50	25
" " Founders		80	12 1/2	12 1/2					Y.37		500 Sa.
Oriental Consolidated	G.	G.	G.	G.
Mining Co., Ltd. ....	$5,000,000	500,000	$10	$10	None	G.	$672,093	31.12.04	$1	" 1905	G. $18 S.
Raub Australian Gold	£150,000	£1	18.10	£1	£4.873	Dr.	£8,745	31.3.05	48 cents.	" 1901	$3 B.
Mining Co., Ltd.....	200,000	50,000	£1	£1

Debenture Loans.	Amount of Loan.	Face Value of Debentures.	Rate of Interest.	Interest Payable.	Closing Quotation.
Japan Brewery Company, Ltd.	200,000.00	100.00	7 per cent.	1 April and 1 Oct.	108 Sa.
Brett and Company, Ltd.	11,500.00	100.00	7 per cent.	1 June and 1 Dec.	85 S.
Yokohama United Club	250,000.00	100.00	7 per cent.	30 June and 31 Dec.	108 Sa.
C. Nickel and Company, Ltd.	50,000.00	100.00	8 per cent.	1 May and 1 Nov.	110 S.

A. C. HUTTON POTTS,
Share and General Broker.

Lea and Perrins' Sauce.

By Royal Warrant
to
His Majesty the King.

THE ORIGINAL AND GENUINE WORCESTERSHIRE.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS

Cure Indigestion,
Bile, Sick Headache, Giddiness,
Palpitation,
and all Internal Disorders.

THESE PILLS
ARE PURELY VEGETABLE;
they contain no deleterious
matter, and may be taken by the most delicate.

Manufactured only at 78, New Oxford St. (late 533, Oxford St.)
London. Sold by all Chemists and Medicine Vendors.

ON SALE

AT

THE "JAPAN MAIL" OFFICE,

55, MAIN STREET, YOKOHAMA.

Telephone, No. 144. Shimbashi, No. 176.

THIRD AND REVISED EDITION.

THE JAPANESE RAILWAY MORTGAGE LAW,

TO WHICH HAS BEEN ADDED

REGULATIONS FOR THE ENFORCEMENT

OF THE

RAILWAY MORTGAGE LAW.

WITH FORMS COMPLETE.

Translated by J. E. de BECKER.

Price, 1 yen 50 sen.

"THE KOROPOK-GURU" OR PIT-DWELLERS OF NORTH JAPAN,

BY

Rev. J. BATCHELOR, F.R.G.S.

Price, 50 Sen.

THE REVENUE AND TAXATION LAWS OF JAPAN.

LEASE FORMS.

POWER-OF-ATTORNEY FORMS.

Telegraphic Address, "Mail," Yokohama.

NOW READY.

NEW & REVISED EDITION OF THE MINING LAW OF JAPAN,

TOGETHER WITH REGULATIONS FOR THE ENFORCEMENT OF THE SAME,
POLICE REGULATIONS IN RELATION TO MINING,
WITH THE JAPANESE FORMS
ALL COMPLETE,

Translated by J. E. de BECKER.

ON SALE AT THE
"JAPAN MAIL" OFFICE,
55, YOKOHAMA.

TELEPHONE, No. 144.

Price . . . Yen 1.50.

VESSELS TO ARRIVE.

STEAMERS.

NAME.	FROM.	REPORTED.
Aberlour	London	Left S'pore	May 8
Acilia	Hamburg	Left Rotterdam	April 5
Ajax	Liverpool	Leaves	April 22
Artemesia	Hamburg	Leaves	Mar. 20
Andalusia	Hamburg	At H'kong	May 11
Benlomond	London	Passed Canal	April 17
China	San F'cisco	Left	May 5
City of Delhi	London	Left	May 5
Dakota	Hongkong	Leaves	April 23
Deucalion	Liverpool	Left H'kong	May 3
Dongola	London	At Moji	May 13
Glaucus	Liverpool	Left S'pore	May 5
Glenloch	London	Left H'kong	May 15
Glenesk	London	Leaves	April 6
Hector	Liverpool	Left S'pore	April 15
Hyson	Liverpool	Left S'pore	May 5
Indrasambha	New York	Left Moji	May 9
Iyo Maru	London	Left	April 19
Idomenius	Liverpool	Passed Canal	April 26
Indrani	New York	Left	April 1
Kish	London	Left Colombo	May 9
Japan	London	Left	April 28
Jason	Liverpool	Left H'kong	May 1
Jesuit	New York	Left	April 25
Laos	Marseilles	Left Colombo	April 18
Lothian	New York	Left	April 22
Lugano	Hamburg	Leaves	Mar. 20
Monteagle	Hongkong	Leaves	May 2
Malacca	London	Leaves	April 21
Nippon Maru	San F'cisco	Left	April 10
Nippon	Trieste	Passed Canal	April 13
Numantia	Hongkong	Left	April 16
Oceanian	Marseilles	Passed Canal	April 17
Rhenania	Hamburg	Left	April 21
Roon	Hamburg	Left H'kong	May 14
Palawan	London	At Kobe	May 14
Peshawar	London	Left S'pore	May 10
Preussen	Hamburg	Passed Canal	May 1
Satsuma	New York	Left S'pore	Mar. 25
Salazie	Marseilles	Left H'kong	May 15
Sardinia	London	Leaves	May 12
Spithead	London	Leaves	May 19
Schuykill	New York	Passed Canal	April 17
St. Egbert	New York	At Manila	May 10
St. Bede	New York	Left	Mar. 14
Telesfora	London	Left	April 29
Thea	Hamburg	Left	Mar. 19
Tonkin	Marseilles	Leaves	May 17
Tourane	Marseilles	Leaves	April 29
Tydeus	Liverpool	Left H'kong	May 12
Willehad	Sydney	Left H'kong	May 9
Wray Castle	New York	Left S'pore	April 8
Zieten	Hamburg	Left	April 26

(毎土曜日一發行)

編輯人 エー・ブリックリー
發行兼印刷人 エー・ビー・アラゴン
洋行所 横濱市山下町五十五番
シヤシヤンメル新聞社

The Japan Weekly Mail

毎土曜日 A REVIEW OF JAPANESE COMMERCE, POLITICS, LITERATURE, AND ART. 一回刊行

No. 21.

REGISTERED AT THE G.P.O.
AS A NEWSPAPER.

YOKOHAMA, MAY 26TH, 1906.

明治三十五年三月廿日
第三千八百四十四號

VOL. XLV.

CONTENTS.

Summary of News	53
China's S. H. Assembling Fever	534
The British Ambassador	534
The Welcome Society	535
Viscount Hayashi	535
The Anglo-Russian Understanding	535
Saghalien	535
China	535
The San Francisco Earthquake as Observed in Tokyo	537
Important Council in Tokyo	537
The New Tariff	538
Korea	538
China's Foreign Trade During 1905	539
General Spoils	539
Miss Norris' Pictures	539
The Tetsudo Kokuyu Jumbi-Kyoku	539
The Five Thousand-mills Celebration	540
Foreign Languages in Japan	540
Obituary	540
Notes on Current Events	541
Yachting	541
Leading Articles	541
Hokkaido and Saghalien	543
The Japanese Army	543
The Wealth of Japan and Taxation	544
Japanese Railways	545
Why Not?	545
Wedding at St. Andrews' Church, Tokyo	546
Death of Mr. F. C. Owen	546
The Fisherman's Soul	546
The Bookshelf	547
Forthcoming Lecture by Mrs. Hugh Fraser	548
Yokohama Foreign Board of Trade	549
Indian Students in Tokyo	549
Presentation to Mr. H. S. Playfair	549
St. Joseph's Athletic Club	549
At B. Cabin D.	550
Shipping Casualties	550
Customs Appeal	550
Prevention of Cruelty to Animals	551
Lawn Tennis	551
The Law Courts	552
Fires	553
News of the Week	553
The Missionary Problem	554
Correspondence	554
A Traveller's Notes	554
Telegrams	555
Latest Shipping	557
Latest Commercial	558

"FAIS CE QUE DOIS: ADVIENNE QUÉ POURRA!"

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

No notice will be taken of anonymous correspondence. What is intended for insertion in the "JAPAN WEEKLY MAIL," must be authenticated by the name and address of the writer, not for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

It is particularly requested that all letters on business be addressed to the MANAGER, and Cheques be made payable to same; and that literary contributions be addressed to the EDITOR.

YOKOHAMA: SATURDAY, MAY 26TH, 1906.

BIRTH.

To the Rev. and Mrs. JOHN E. HALL, at No. 19 Kawaguchi, Osaka, on May 9th, a daughter.

MARRIED.

At 223 Bluff, Yokohama, May 22nd, by the Rev. H. Loomis, JEAN HERRING, youngest daughter of the officiating clergyman, to Rev. Professor JAMES EVERETT FRAME of New York City, U. S. A.

DEATHS.

On May 21st, at Akasaka Hospital, Tokyo, THOMAS C. COWEN, journalist, aged 36 years.

At his Kamakura villa, at 10 p.m. on the 20th inst., H. ARAI, No. 250, Yamashita-cho.

SUMMARY OF NEWS.

His Holiness the Pope is ill with gout.

A Russian mine was washed ashore at Sado Island on May 22nd.

A case of plague was reported at Chofu near Shimonoseki on May 22nd.

The death is announced of Mr. Sugimura Japanese Minister in Brazil.

ADMIRAL BARON YAMAMOTO, who has paid a visit to Port Arthur, returned to Tokyo on May 21st.

A Vladivostok report to the Jiji says that the Russian Government has decided to pay 7,500,000 roubles to the Chinese who were residing in Vladivostok during the disturbances after the war.

It is officially reported that plague is prevalent at Swatow in China, and several fatal cases occur every day.

THE German mail steamer Roon has been docked at Nagasaki to repair the damage done by running ashore at Okinoshima.

THE death is announced of Lieut.-General Asai. He was decorated on May 19th with the Grand Cordon of the Rising Sun.

ON May 18th, a case of plague was reported at Fukuoka. One case appeared on May 17th in Hyogo and another in Shimonoseki.

MR. WADDEKY, editor of the Russian newspaper Volia, at Nagasaki, has resigned. On May 19th he left for Yokohama on his way to America.

A rather severe shock of earthquake was felt in Yokohama at 4 p.m. on Monday, May 21st. Several minor shocks were felt during the week.

CHINA has returned the sale money for the land in Manchuria acquired for American Consulates and offices, and will only allow thirty year leases.

A SOCIETY for the prevention of cruelty to animals has been started by the foreign community of Yokohama in conjunction with several prominent Japanese.

ON the morning of May 22nd, Sapporo and the surrounding districts in Hokkaido were visited by snow. This is an extraordinary occurrence for the time of year.

A case of cholera was reported on May 18th in Nara near Osaka. The patient died the following day. On May 20th, a case of small pox appeared in Matsue.

THE death is announced on May 20th of Engineer-Admiral Fukami. The funeral took place on Wednesday at the Buddhist temple Ryusen-ji, Yotsuzo, Tokyo.

BARON MUMM von Schwarzenstein, German Ambassador, was received by the Emperor in audience at 10.30 a.m., on May 22nd. His Excellency presented his credentials.

ON May 21st a man, about 40 years old, committed suicide by laying himself on the railway in the enclosure of the Yokohama Station when a train from Shimbashi arrived there.

LEADING Koreans in Seoul intend to establish a Red Cross Society of which Prince Wi-hwa, now in Japan, will be elected president. The promoters will adopt the Japanese system.

ACCORDING to the captain of the steamer Tankai Maru, which arrived on May 22nd at Naoetsu, a mine was observed on May 19th 26 nautical miles off Honjo, Ugo province. It was floating towards Tsugaru Strait.

It is reported by the Hochi that the convicts in a jail in Russian Saghalien have broken out and are plundering and murdering. A number of soldiers was sent from Alexandrofska to the scene to quell the trouble.

MR. M. KUGA, the editor and proprietor of the Nippon, owing to untavourable health, has retired from the journalistic profession. He has sold the concern to Mr. T. Yamamoto, formerly president of the Bank of Japan.

LIEUT. GENERAL Tsuchiya, Commander of the Fourteenth Division at Tielien, arrived at Antung on May 18th. He will proceed to his post via Yong-ampho and Fenfanching. The Italian Consul-General at Newchwang has arrived at Mukden to make preparations for establishing a consulate there.

THE Japanese Consul at Honolulu telegraphed on May 19th to the Foreign Office that recently seven cases of plague were reported there. Disinfecting measures are being carried out on vessels to America via Honolulu.

A report from Fakumen, on the frontier between Manchuria and Mongolia, says that on April 6th, four Japanese officials were shot by natives of inner Mongolia while engaged on a certain mission—apparently surveying the district.

MR. KAWAKAMI, Japanese Commercial Agent, arrived at Vladivostok on May 18th. The business which had been under the control of the American Consul there since the outbreak of the war will shortly be resumed by the Japanese official.

THE Bandmann Opera Company has been playing to crowded houses this week at the Public Hall, Yokohama. They have presented "Lady Madcap," "The Earl and the Girl," the "Spring Chicken," "A Chinese Honeymoon": "The Orchid" and "Sergeant Brue."

ON the night of May 21st two men armed with swords broke into the villa of Count Yanagisawa, Shinagawa. They inflicted severe injuries on an old female servant and stole some articles. The intruders were arrested the following day by the Shinagawa police.

ON May 23rd, thirty-seven persons were arrested in Tokyo on a charge of having published and sold pictures injurious to social order. The pictures—some eight thousand altogether—were confiscated. A teacher in a primary school is included among the accused.

EARLY on the morning of May 21st, the steamer Tokuyama Maru II, collided with the steamer Kwanon Maru VII, in the neighbourhood of Tateyama, Awa peninsula, with the result that the former having sustained severe damage sank. The crew and passengers were all saved. The cause of the accident was dense fog.

M. POLIANOWSKY, ex-Russian Consul at Chemulpo before the war, and who served on the staff of Major-General Dessino in Shanghai during the war, has been appointed Consul at Nagasaki. The Nichi Nichi says that recently he arrived at his post in company with two employees—one Russian and another a Japanese—from Shanghai.

As already reported, an American steamer with samples and specimens of various American products for exhibition at leading ports of the world will leave New York in May. She will visit Great Britain, Germany and France and thence proceed to India, China and Japan. The vessel is expected to arrive at a port of Japan in November.

THE money remitted by the Christian Herald, New York, for the relief of distress in the famine districts amounts to half a million yen. Recently Marquis Saionji, Premier, informed the Emperor of these American donations and His Majesty sent a letter to President Roosevelt, thanking him for the sympathy and practical help of the American public.

ON the evening of May 20th, a young woman, apparently a student, committed suicide by laying herself on the railway near the village of Kami-Osaki, Shinagawa, where she was run over by a freight train. She had in her possession a letter praying that Heaven would lead one who was in a pitiful state with merciful hands to Paradise. She has not been identified.

CHINA'S SELF-ASSERTING FEVER.

Saturday, May 19.

Telegrams to the Jiji Shimpō from Peking indicate that in diplomatic articles the Chinese Government is suspected of seeking to conceal its real purpose with regard to the Customs questions. The British Chargé d'Affaires' inquiry elicited from the Waiwupu an extremely vague reply in the sense that no change was contemplated beyond the transfer of the control from the Foreign Office to the Treasury. Dissatisfied with this reply, Mr. Carnegie is said to have addressed to the Department a request for a clearer explanation. Great Britain is represented as resolutely determined that there shall be no change in the organization of the Customs. The United States Minister also is reported to have received from Mr. Tang Shao-i a message to the effect that the measure adopted by the Chinese Government was purely one of convenience. Customs affairs had much closer connexion with the Treasury than with the Foreign Office, and the chain of responsibility would be more clearly defined if the control were placed in the former's hands. On the other hand, in view of the large number of foreign employees, the Treasury had considered it advisable to appoint Tieh Liang and himself (Tang) as high-commissioners. The German Minister, too, is stated to be interesting himself actively in the matter. It is thought in Peking that in view of the attitude of Great Britain and the United States, and in view of the terms of the loans made to China by English and German banks in 1896, the appointment of the two high commissioners is destined to prove an empty formality. This news is confirmed, broadly speaking, by the Asahi Shimbun's telegrams, from which we obtain the additional intelligence that the Italian Representative has sent a circular note to his colleagues and that a meeting of all the Ministers is likely to be held for the purpose of discussing the matter.

In the Asahi Shimbun's Peking telegrams we read that the China-for-the-Chinese fever is raging with greater force than ever. Not only do the Chinese aim at recovering all concessions made to foreigners in the matter of mines, railways and so forth, but they also desire to get rid of every alien employed in assisting the progress of administration and education. The correspondent adds that inquiries made among the Chinese have convinced him that the recent appointment of two high Commissioners of Customs was intended to be a step in this policy, a policy, we may remark en passant, which the wonderful capacity of the Chinese language enables the Japanese to express by the short paraphrase chuka-shugi (the policy of middle flowers; i.e. of the flowery Middle Kingdom). Not many people will consent to be persuaded, we think, that the explanations offered by the Chinese Authorities in this matter are quite sincere. It is true that the explanations are excellently applicable to the facts. Mr. Tieh, of the Finance Department, and Mr. Tang, of the Foreign Department, having been nominated, Peking adroitly demonstrates that the former is chosen because the Customs' revenue is an important factor in the national finance and the latter because the Customs' staff includes many foreigners. But we do not gather that Peking has attempted to demonstrate the existence of any administrative inconvenience which called for this novel step. Neither do we gather, that Sir Robert Hart was consulted. It is plain, however, that Sir Robert is not to be disturbed for the present, and unless—as seems probable—the Powers exact some new engagement from China in connexion with this disquieting departure, the Peking Government will have achieved its aim, for, in the unquestionable exercise of its rights, it will have created machinery whose potentialities can be developed when, in the natural course of events, Sir Robert retires a few years hence.

Meanwhile, as might perhaps have been expected, news comes from Peking that this Customs problem has differentiated the Powers, Germany and Russia occupying one camp and England, America and Japan the other. It is even stated that the procedure of the German and Russian Ministers has incensed their British and American colleagues and that the two latter are contemplating combined action. On the other side of this account must be set a telegram published by the German Japan Post to the effect that Germany is a supporter of England in this matter. We must await developments to discriminate between the stories.

Sunday, May 20.

The latest news from Peking is that on the 18th instant the Japanese Representative, Mr. Uchida, conveyed to the Waiwupu an emphatic protest against any transfer of the control of the Customs from foreign hands. He explained that such a measure would certainly provoke much umbrage among foreigners of all nationalities and must result in China's serious disadvantage. The Waiwupu, speaking through Mr. Na Tung, replied that no such intention was entertained. The appointment of the two high commissioners had no object other than to improve the system of control on the Chinese side. Japan's friendly purpose in giving this advice was, his Excellency said, fully appreciated.

Japanese action in this matter appears to have been somewhat tardy but it was nevertheless timely. For we gather that reports—attributed to Russian sources—had become current to the effect that the Tokyo Government had instigated China to issue the Imperial Decree of the 9th instant. The motive attributed to Japan was one of revenge. It was alleged that at the Peking Conference Baron Komura had expressed a wish that the higher customs officials in Manchuria should consist entirely of Japanese subjects, but when this matter was conveyed to Sir Robert Hart, he had objected strenuously. Hence the Tokyo Government, by way of retaliation, had prompted the appointment of the two high commissioners. The Jiji Shimpō's telegraphic correspondence, from which we take these details, says that an English paper published in Tientsin lent its columns to the circulation of this injurious report which is now effectually silenced by the action of the Japanese Representative. In connexion with this subject the Asahi's correspondent says that at the meeting of foreign Representatives in the Italian Legation on the 19th instant, the reply given by China to the protest of the British and American Ministers was pronounced insufficient, but the meeting decided not to take any concerted measure pending the issue of a further protest which had been submitted by the British Legation.

Tuesday, May 22.

It was decided (Jiji Shimpō's telegrams) at the meeting of foreign Representatives in Peking on the 19th instant, that in the event of the Chinese Government's reply to the British Legation's last despatch proving unsatisfactory, the Representatives should, each on his own account and in his own manner, take action to correct the situation. It was not expected, however, that this contingency would arise, the general belief being that the Chinese Government would afford a satisfactory explanation. Meanwhile in the Customs itself no perceptible change has taken place in consequence of the appointment of the two Chinese commissioners. All is going on just as before, Sir Robert Hart receiving all official communications from the hands of the Waiwupu, not from the new commissioners, and himself remaining as undisturbed as ever. The Times, according to a telegram to the Nichi Nichi Shimbun, says that China is beginning her reforms from the wrong end. Instead of taking earnest example from Japan who has built solid stone foundations for her superstructure of change, China is seeking to erect an edifice on a card-board basis.

Thursday, May 24.

The news is confirmed that on the 18th instant Mr. Uchida, being on the verge of departure from Peking, made a strong representation to the Chinese Government as to the unwisdom of any radical change in the administration of the Customs. He pointed out that so long as the customs revenue continues to be hypothecated as security for foreign loans, China would only create international uneasiness by such a course. The Waiwupu replied acknowledging the kind intention of the Japanese protest, and explaining that nothing was contemplated beyond removing the customs from the purview of the Foreign Office and placing them under that of the Board of Finance. A later telegram says that in view of the strong opposition evinced by the Powers and of the disapproval of several influential Chinese statesmen, the appointment of Messrs. Tien and Tang is not unlikely to be cancelled.

THE BRITISH AMBASSADOR.

On inquiry we find that we have assisted to circulate an error in saying that the recent reception of Sir Claude and Lady Macdonald by the Emperor and Empress and the subsequent luncheon in the Palace prelude their Excellencies' departure for England on leave. The Ambassador and Lady Macdonald do contemplate a six months' trip to Europe but their departure will not take place until the end of September or the beginning of October. The reception and lunch at the Palace were intended as an expression of their Majesties' thanks for the part taken by Sir Claude and Lady Macdonald in connexion with the Garter Mission. It was in October, just five years ago, that Sir Claude returned to the East from his last visit to England, and he is well entitled to a short spell of rest now. Perhaps it may be advisable to take this opportunity of correcting another somewhat widely spread rumour, namely, that Sir Claude leaves Japan to fill another post and that he will be succeeded in Tokyo by Lord Redesdale. Diplomatic appointments are for five years, and it is permissible to hope that Sir Claude will remain for his full ambassadorial term in Japan where he has undoubtedly made a great success. At all events we are glad to say that there is not at present the slightest foundation for the rumour here alluded to.

THE WELCOME SOCIETY.

An extraordinary assault is made upon the Welcome Society by a correspondent of the Shanghai Mercury. He calls it "a colossal fraud;" declares that "no one has been able to find out just what the Society is, who are the proprietors, and who derives pecuniary or other benefit from the considerable fees paid by so-called contributing members;" affirms that "there is unfortunate indifference on the part of the officers to the conduct of those who really conduct the affairs of the Society," and alleges in the most unequivocal terms that the Society lends its influence and support to the very worst class of guides as well as to extortionate tradesmen and hotel-keepers. It is quite plain that this correspondent did not make the slightest attempt to acquaint himself as to the actual facts before he publicly set out to libel the Welcome Society. We happen to know a great deal about the Welcome Society, for the editor of this journal was one of the earliest promoters and is a life-member as well as one of the standing committee. We affirm deliberately and with full knowledge that the charges preferred by the Shanghai Mercury's correspondent are absolutely false so far as they are intended to arraign the Welcome Society. The truth is that the Society was organized more than 20 years ago by a number of the leading men in Tokyo, solely for the purpose of providing facilities for foreign tourists travelling in Japan. The promoters all contributed a certain sum to defray expenses and they supplemented this contribution on subsequent occasions when need arose. There never was the remotest idea of making profit out of the enterprise, and during all these years not one sen has ever accrued to the Japanese promoters and members. On the contrary, they are considerably and willingly out of pocket, for their unique aim has been to render Japan a popular place of resort, not for one instant to derive pecuniary benefit themselves. The committee meets regularly and examines the accounts carefully. Plans are constantly canvassed to promote the object of the association, and the working staff is subjected to close scrutiny. The fees charged barely suffice to meet the expenses inseparable from an organization of the kind, and thus the sum of the matter is that a number of honorable gentlemen give their services gratis in the interests of tourists and give their money also, for all which patriotic and hospitable effort their reward is to be foully slandered by an anonymous newspaper correspondent. We do not pretend to say that the Welcome Society has ever succeeded in metamorphosing the guides. Again and again plans have been discussed for obtaining control of these generally unscrupulous persons and for weeding out of their ranks the worst offenders against honesty. But no really effective plan has ever been devised, and very grateful the Society would be to anyone who suggested such a plan. It is possible, indeed there have been reasons to think, that some of the greatest rascals among the guides have deliberately represented themselves as special nominees of the Society, and have thus obtained large opportunities of swindling. The Welcome Society can not effectually prevent such dishonesty any more than it can convert the whole body of guides to a different creed of business morality. What it can do it does assiduously, namely, to select with the greatest care the guides it recommends and to exact from them a pledge that they will treat tourists honestly. Moreover, it has sought to enlist the cooperation of store-keepers and hotel-proprietors so that the tourist may have access to certain inns and certain shops where he ought to be able to reckon on finding integrity and fairness. Briefly speaking, such was the original raison d'être of the Society, such has been its method of working, and such is the disinterested nature of the services rendered by its promoters and honorary officers. Could anything be more unjust or more unwarrantable than that an association having this origin and swayed uniquely by these motives should be held up to public opprobrium by a stranger who has not attempted to investigate the facts before distorting them in the grossest manner?

The Welcome Society has issued to its members a circular saying that a number of guides have been discovered to have fraudulently made use of the Society's name, representing themselves as engaged by it and in some cases actually printing the falsehood on their cards. There is good reason to think that men resorting to this fraud would not hesitate to exploit tourists unmercifully. Several instances have been brought to the notice of the Society and the Committee are now deliberating on some course to check the abuse, but the matter is one of no little difficulty. Meanwhile tourists are recommended to send in the names of the guides to the Society should the guides profess to be endorsed by the latter.

VISCOUNT HAYASHI.

Viscount Hayashi was duly invested by the Emperor on the 19th instant with the portfolio of Foreign Affairs. It is confidently expected that Baron Komura will proceed as Ambassador to England, Mr. Hayashi (G.) as Minister to China, Mr. Chinda to the Legation in Vienna, and that Mr. Uchida will become Vice-Minister of Foreign Affairs, but none of these appointments is yet announced.

The Tokyo press welcomes with evident sincerity the appointment of Viscount Hayashi to be Minister of State for Foreign Affairs. His Excellency's career has been intimately connected during the past twenty-five years with the Department over which he is now called to preside. He served as Vice-Minister under Viscount Enomoto and Count Matsu, and his ability in that capacity had received wide recognition when he went abroad to represent his country at the Court of St. James. There he distinguished himself signally, and there is every reason to hope that his success in his new office will be not less thorough. He assumes the portfolio of Foreign Affairs at a moment when many problems of cardinal importance have to be dealt with, and the country has entire confidence in his ability to deal with them. The Japanese nation, in short, welcomes him to this high office as heartily as Japan's ally will certainly welcome him. The Chuo refers also to Baron Komura's appointment as most appropriate. These two diplomatists, Baron Komura and Viscount Hayashi, were of one mind about the Anglo-Japanese alliance and by their united efforts contrived its completion. Great Britain, while regretting to lose Viscount Hayashi, will be gratified to have Baron Komura as his successor. Even the Yorozu Choho is persuaded that this appointment of Viscount Hayashi greatly strengthens the Saionji Cabinet, and that it has the universal approval of the nation.

THE ANGLO-RUSSIAN UNDERSTANDING.

Tokyo newspapers publish telegrams from Peking saying that the news received from China's Representatives in London and St. Petersburg to the effect that an understanding has been arrived at by England and Russia causes great perturbation in the Chinese capital. It is assumed there that the outcome of such an understanding must be to give England a free hand in Tibet and to make Mongolia and Sinkiang an arena for Russian aggression. But a telegram to the Nichi Nichi Shinbun from London states that it is as yet premature to regard the entente as a fait accompli, though pourparlers have undoubtedly taken place. Commenting on the latter telegram the Nichi Nichi reaches the conclusion that such an understanding should be heartily welcomed by Japan. The traditional attitudes assumed by England and Russia towards each other in Asia are a case of the proverbial itsubo no arasoi (the dispute between the clam and the snipe which ended in the capture of both by the fisherman). The Nichi Nichi, we need scarcely say, indicates Germany as the party who would profit by Anglo-Russian quarrels. Not that Germany is to be regarded as wantonly aggressive or as a would be disturber of the peace, but merely that her imperial ambitions point eastward, and that her plans would find opportunity for fulfillment in the pre-occupation or mutual weakening of her rivals. Japan, on the other hand, has nothing to gain and much to lose by a serious quarrel between Great Britain and Russia. She desires peace above all things, and she has never doubted that the two great Asiatic rivals might easily find a modus vivendi if they applied themselves seriously to the task. We too echo the Nichi Nichi's views. Such an entente would have the approval of all moderate men, and is probably an object of earnest desire to King Edward. Moreover, it seems to follow as a natural sequel of the Anglo-French entente. There is something glaringly incongruous in the idea that two Powers which have a common ally should be mutually hostile; or, if that expression be too strong, should stand beside the lists as potential enemies. At the same time, we can not pretend to think that an arrangement between England and Russia in East Asia would be entirely without suggestions of uneasiness to nations situated as China is. The basis of the entente must be delimitation of spheres of interest, and every country situated within such spheres might well find its sleep disturbed. But if China has cold fits of apprehension, the remedy lies with herself; a remedy so patent and so often pointed out that we need not discuss it again.

SAGHALIEN.

Reports from Saghalien show that there is a recrudescence of convict disturbance in the Russian section of the island. A number of prisoners have managed to break out of jail and have committed various acts of robbery and violence. The Governor at Alexandrofsky has sent out a military force to deal with the rioters.

The Kokumin Shinbun alleges that the delimitation commission will engage about a hundred employees to assist in the work of surveying, and that the commission's headquarters will be at Onero. Professor Shiga has stated that Onero will probably be one of the principal points on the boundary line as it lies some 5 miles north of the fiftieth parallel of latitude.

CHINA.

Saturday, May 19.

The fragmentary rumours received of late from time to time about Mohammedan risings in China are much amplified by the latest news. We are now told that the disturbance extends to parts of Honan, Hunan, Chehkiang, Fuhkien and Kiangsi, which signifies a very wide area. The Peking Authorities are said to be greatly alarmed, as well they may be when they recall the history of previous Mohammedan insurrections in China. Urgent orders have been issued for dealing drastically with the rising in its early stages, and it has been announced that Viceroy and Governors will be held to have incurred the heaviest possible responsibility if they fail to restore quiet. This last measure is characteristic. Its invariable outcome has been not to effect the purpose in view, but to keep the Throne in ignorance of the real state of affairs. No Viceroy or Governor is likely to frankly report to Peking the discomfiture of his own troops or the failure of his own efforts when he knows that upon his own head alone the consequences will fall.

Monday, May 21.

It is stated that a high Chinese official is to be appointed to administer the Chinese Posts, and that as Occidental employees would be very expensive, Japanese will be employed as far as possible. This, if it be true, means another blow aimed at Sir Robert Hart, for the posts are now under his administrative control and he is understood to have recently declared his intention of resigning the work altogether if a Chinese official were appointed over his head.

Interesting statements continue to be circulated about this line. Some time ago the story was that the Russians were busily constructing it, this tale having been preceded by a statement that M. Pokotiloff was pressing the Peking Government to grant the concession to his country. These accounts were obviously incredible. But now comes a rumour (Fiji Shimpō's correspondence) which fits in with previous accounts. It is that the Governor of Kirin had projected the railway prior to the war, and was about to construct it with capital obtained locally under a guarantee of interest from the Imperial Treasury. The war interrupted the undertaking, but on the restoration of peace the Governor resumed his activity. Sleepers were purchased and locomotives ordered abroad. Suddenly, however, the Peking authorities interfered on the ground that such an enterprise would be opposed to the terms of the Portsmouth Convention. This account is consistent with the previous one in so far as concerns actual work of construction, but there have been such conflicting rumours that credence will not readily be given now to a fresh story.

A telegram to the Fiji Shimpō from its Shanghai correspondent says that an addition has been made to the Tibetan Treaty in the sense that if any third Power sends troops into Ili or Sinkiang, Great Britain shall have the right to adopt the same course in Tibet. It is not easy to believe that such a significant clause has been added without anything having been previously heard of it, and above all we do not see how a convention already ratified can be amplified or extended. Perhaps the mystery may be referred to the fact that Shanghai is the origin of the news.

These negotiations appear not to be making any progress whatever. They are blocked, it is said, by two causes. One is that Russia is preferring demands much larger than China's generosity, and the Peking Government consequently thinks it wise to appeal to the softening effects of time; the other, that as many other problems press for solution in Peking at present, the Chinese do not find leisure to treat with M. Pokotiloff. The latter explanation seems inconsequential, for if the Chinese Plenipotentiaries, Chu Funki and Tang Shaoi, specially appointed to conduct the negotiations with the Russian Representative, are too much engrossed by other affairs to discharge this duty, why was Mr. Tang nominated to the additional post of high Commissioner of Customs? The most credible hypothesis is that outsiders know very little about the progress or details of the Russo-Chinese negotiations, and that the items of news periodically circulated on the subject are mostly conjectural.

News from Peking to the Kokumin Shimbun says that Viceroy Yuan's system for dealing with the opium problem is now in process of printing and will very soon be promulgated. The gist of the new regulations is that China will apply to her wide dominions the same system as that pursued by Japan in Formosa. One year hence, every user of opium will be required to take out a licence, and any violation of this rule will be severely punished. Doubtless if this system be efficiently enforced it will lead to a steady diminution in the use of the drug and it will also produce a large though decreasing revenue.

Viceroy Chang telegraphs to Peking (Kokumin Shimbun) that the floods in Hunan have seriously injured the rice-producing regions and that the price of this staple has largely appreciated. The Viceroy has consequently issued instructions forbidding all exports of rice. We do not understand this intelligence, for the export of rice is already illegal in China.

Wednesday, May 23.

Shanghai telegraphs to the Asahi Shimbun that the Fushun coal-mine has fallen within the purview of China's new policy. The Board of Agriculture and Commerce in Peking has instructed the Governor of Mukden to take immediate steps for recovering the mines from Japanese hands. Our Tokyo contemporary declares itself altogether sceptical about the truth of this story but adds that it gives publicity to it as the news is commonly circulated in Shanghai. Our readers will probably be indisposed to attach paramount importance to this last reason in view of the fact that Japan has as indisputable a title to the mines as Russia ever had, and that China could not recover them, except by purchase. There is not, we imagine, the remotest chance of her putting her hand into her pocket to that extent even if Japan could be induced to name a price.

A few days ago the intelligence from Peking pointed to a speedy settlement of this wearisome complication. But the telegrams now state that it is as far as ever from arrangement. The Waiwupu is willing to make such concessions as will satisfy France, but the Cabinet and the leading statesmen are strenuously opposed to any policy of yielding. A basis of settlement has been again and again proposed to them with the result only that they withhold their consent at the eleventh hour. Mr. Wu Ting-fang advises that an exact statement of the whole case shall be prepared and published, so that the world may pass judgment on the rights and wrongs of the case.

Thursday, May 24.

A telegram from London says that the present British Cabinet has no intention of giving up Wei-hai-wei. Other reports, however, explicitly attribute that intention to her. They quote verbatim a convention of four articles said to have been concluded between the British Representative in Peking and Mr. Na Tung. The gist of the document is that, as a token of sincere friendship towards China, Great Britain restores Wei-hai-wei in order that China may make it a naval station; that a part of the expenses incurred by England there are to be indemnified by China; that for the protection of foreign subjects and citizens a force of Chinese troops shall be stationed there; and that the place shall never be made over to a third Power without England's consent.

It is stated (Hochi's telegrams) that in his negotiations with the Chinese Plenipotentiaries, Mr. Pokotiloff has demanded concessions for four railways with mining privileges along their routes. The lines are that from Kirin province to Changchun, that from Kulung to Changchiakow, that from Kashgar to Ili and Sinkiang, and that from Tsitsihar to Aikun. Mr. Tang Shaoi is reported to have replied that China intends to build these lines herself, but Mr. Pokotiloff declined to accept that answer, inasmuch as he doubted China's capacity to do anything of the kind. The report adds that this railway question is the crux of the negotiations. We may point out the apparently intentional vagueness of the expression "the line from Kirin province to Changchun." Were the "Kirin-Changchun line" mentioned the whole report would be discredited at once. Indeed as the story stands, it seems apocryphal.

Friday, May 25.

The business of selecting a site for the settlement at Mukden is going on. The Japanese Consul-General Mr. Hagiwara, the American Consul-General and the Chinese Commissioner, Mr. Yang, met on the 21st instant, when Mr. Yang submitted a project. We do not hear anything of Great Britain in this matter, but it may be assumed that the Legation in Peking has taken due measures.

The Chinese Government is said to be much perturbed by the attitude of the Powers towards the Customs' question. Mr. Tang Shaoi, one of the newly appointed High Commissioners, has been sent to Tientsin to confer with Viceroy Yuan, and rumour alleges that the latter will maintain a firm front as to his country's right to take the step objected to by the Powers. It will be remembered that the Viceroy was supposed to have been the original instigator of the measure. The Waiwupu will not make its final answer to the British Representative until Mr. Tang returns to Peking.

Telegrams to the Asahi allege that in return for restoring Wei-hai-wei to China Great Britain is asking for confirmation of the concession of the Tientsin-Chinking railway, and has approached Governor Yang of Shantung on the subject. Learning of this project the literati of Shantung and Kiangsu have begun to agitate in a opposite sense. Unless we are mistaken, the concession for this railway has already been granted to an Anglo-German syndicate, and it is therefore somewhat perplexing to learn that the matter is again under discussion.

Mr. Wu Tingfang left Peking on the morning of the 23rd, nominally to visit the tombs of his ancestors but really, it is said, with the intention of quitting office altogether. Only a very small number of people assembled at the station to bid him farewell. The reason of his resolve is alleged to be that he finds himself relegated to a position of complete powerlessness in the capital, though he presides over the Board of Legislation. He is one of the most enlightened men in China and his knowledge of foreigners and foreign countries is almost unique, but like many another erudite, experienced and progressive Chinaman, he finds that he can not hasten the unendurably slow movement of the times. His counsels fall on deaf ears, and rather than occupy a high office in a government whose policy he disapproves, he has decided to retire. Mr. Wu was once a member of the Hongkong Legislative Council, and thereafter he served under the great Viceroy Li, who fully appreciated his abilities. But the star of Li's protégés is not now in the ascendant. The well known Mr. Sheng Ihwai, once a name of power in the land, has similarly sunk into insignificance, and the whole authority in the State is wielded by Viceroy Yuan and Mr. Tang Shao-i. It is difficult to believe therefore, that Tang's recent nomination as High Commissioner of Customs is a comparatively simple formality as the Chinese Government are now understood to plead.

It is stated that the date for the examination of candidates for official positions in Peking is likely to be changed to August, in order to suit the convenience of students who have been educated in Japan. Japanese graduation ceremonies generally take place in June, so by fixing the Peking examination in the eighth month students from Japan would have ample time to reach Peking.

X Mysterious placards have appeared all over Peking bearing four characters which cannot be read into any clear meaning but contain some vague allusions to "West," "Soldiers," "Swords," and similar words in an apparently meaningless jumble. The Peking and Tientsin Times says: "Those of our readers who were here six years ago will recognise the old tactics."

A telegram from North Chinchou, outside Shanhaikuan, dated the 13th instant, received by the local mandarin, states that Ching, district magistrate of Huaijénshien, in that vicinity, has reported that on receipt of information of an intended revolutionary movement in his district he made a raid upon the headquarters of the revolutionary society and succeeded in arresting amongst others a Japanese named Sung sen-tai san-lang, and a native named Kuo Tien-ming, who are alleged to be the reputed chiefs of the revolutionary society in question. Among the proofs captured at the time were a large revolutionary document printed on red and white silk, six similar documents printed on white cotton cloth; 365 tickets of membership, also printed on white cotton cloth, and 3 o sheets containing Buddhist charms drawn on them for use by members as a "protection against bullets."

The Hongkong Daily Press understands that the unofficial members of the Legislative Council and the Sanitary Board have been appointed to sit as a commission to inquire into the subject of complaints under the Building Ordinance, and into other matters affecting the working of the staffs of the Public Works Department and the Sanitary Authority. This is doubtless the result of the complaints by influential Chinese of the hardship inflicted by the regulation at present in force when plague is suspected. It was reported some little time ago that over 50,000 Chinese had left the Colony because of these regulations.

The Nanfangpao of Shanghai says:—The Waiwupu addressed the Diplomatic corps in Peking on the 11th instant, stating that owing to the infirmity of Sir Robert Hart the time for his retirement had arrived, and the Government could not appoint another man in his place without fearing complications. Hence the appointment of the two Chinese Commissioners.

A considerable amount of discussion is taking place in Hongkong with regard to cheaper housing for Europeans, and sanitary dwellings for the Chinese. Quite a large number of undesirable Chinese dwellings have been demolished.

THE SAN FRANCISCO EARTHQUAKE AS OBSERVED IN TOKYO.

Our readers are aware that, as soon as possible after receipt of the terrible intelligence of this catastrophe, Profs. Omori and Nakamura were despatched from Tokyo to the scene of the disaster, by the Imperial Earthquake Investigation Committee. Before leaving, Prof. Omori prepared a statement containing several points of much interest, and by the courtesy of Dr. Mano, the President of the above mentioned Committee, we are able to give the information contained therein in our columns.

The instrument responsible for the most complete results is a pair of Omori Horizontal Pendulums, forming one of the appliances of the Seismological Institute, and placed in their Observatory at the Science College of the Imperial University, Hongo, Tokyo. The two pendulums deal with the N.-S. component, and the E.-W. component of the earth's movement, separately; the details of the latter pendulum involve a heavy mass of weight  $16\frac{1}{2}$  kilograms (about  $36\frac{1}{2}$  lbs.); vertical height between point of suspension and point of support 1 metre (about 39 ins.); natural period of oscillation  $41\frac{1}{2}$  secs.; ratio by which indications are magnified 30.1.

The observations showed the following record as to the times at which various interesting features occurred:—

	Japan Time.	Western States Time.
1. Commencement in Tokyo of "1st preliminary tremors"	10.24.35 p.m.	5.24.35 a.m.
2. End of 1st and beginning of "2nd preliminary tremors"	10.34.24 p.m.	5.33.24 a.m.
3. Commencement of vibrations arriving after having traversed the earth through the antipodes of Tokyo.....	19th April. 12.31.10 a.m.	18th April. 7.31.10 a.m.
Interval between 1 and 2:	m.s. 9.49 = 589 sec.
" 1 and 3:	2.6.35

By a formula, determined by a great number of earthquakes observed at Tokyo, the following relation is given:—

Approximate distance in kilometres of the earthquake source, measured along the earth's surface .....  $17.1 \times 589 = 1360 = 8700$  (about 5400 miles.)

where 589 is the time interval between 1 and 2 as above; and 17.1 and 1360 are quantities derived from the previous observations.

By another formula, the time of occurrence at the source of the actual earthquake =  $1.165 \times 589$  secs. (= 11m. 30s.) earlier than the commencement of observations here (589 again is the time interval between 1 and 2 and 1.165 is derived from previous observations). This makes the time at the source 5hr. 13m. 5s. (Western States time).

The time interval (2hrs. 6m. 35s.) between the commencement of observations in Tokyo and the arrival of vibrations after having traversed the antipodes of Tokyo is smaller than what might have been expected. A large number of results from previous earthquakes points to 3hrs. 20m. 46s. as the time required to make the complete circuit of the earth, the speed needed to do this being the speed of such vibrations only as seem capable of so long a journey. The distance of Tokyo from the source of the earthquake at present under consideration, through the antipodes, may be taken at  $40,000 - 8,700 = 31,100$  kil; so that the time of transit would be reduced to 3hrs. 20m. 46s.  $\times \frac{31,100}{40,000} = 2$ hrs. 37m. 6s., and the arrival in Tokyo might therefore be expected at 7hrs. 50m. 11s., or nearly 19 minutes later than the actual arrival. Doubtless Prof. Omori will have something to say upon this subject after his return.

The actual maximum movement of the instrument in Tokyo (and therefore of the ground upon which it is placed) was more than  $\frac{1}{4}$  inch. To the lay mind it is remarkable that such a large movement can occur without being felt; but the explanation is that the vibrations transmitted through so great a distance are slow in period, and on this account are not perceived by our senses.

IMPORTANT COUNCIL IN TOKYO.

At 2 p.m. on the 22nd instant the Elder Statesmen and the Cabinet met in Tokyo at the residence of the Premier and held a consultation which lasted until 5 p.m. General Baron Kodama also was present, as were Messrs. Chinda, Wakatsuki, Ishiwata, Yamaza and Horiuchi. It is believed that the subject of discussion was the post-bellum programme in Manchuria and Korea.

It is confidently asserted that the council of statesmen on the 22nd instant arrived at a definite conclusion as to the policy of post-bellum enterprise in Korea and Manchuria. The Council, as any one examining its composition must appreciate, comprised virtually all the representatives of authority in posse or in esse, and consequently its decisions are secured against opposition from any influential quarter, except the Progressist Party. The Fiji Shimpō says that the Cabinet may now proceed to give effect to these decisions with absolute confidence. The Government are open to the criticism of having shown some dilatoriness in this important matter, but better late than never. In the Asahi Shimbun a vague and unsatisfactory reference is made—on the authority of the Choya News Agency—to the programme which is to be adopted in Manchuria. We learn nothing from it except that the railways in Manchuria are to be joint enterprises, partly official and partly non-official, and that the Fushun and Yentai coal mines are to be worked by the same company. The former plan is said to be based on the fact that work on State railways is subject to legal conditions which greatly impede its progress, but if that objection be valid in Manchuria, why should it not hold in Japan also?

It is very regrettable that the name of Count Okuma should never appear on the list of the Genro when they come together to discuss these vital problems of State policy. That the Count merits a place, and even a prominent place, at such councils is indisputable, and his exclusion practically forces the Shimpō to into opposition.

A case of bubonic plague was reported on May 17th in the district of Toyo-ura near Shimotsuki,

THE NEW TARIFF.

All the Japanese journals of Tokyo publish a San Francisco telegram to the effect that the United States Consul-General in Yokohama has reported to Washington that the purpose of Japan's new tariff is to drive out of all markets on the Pacific the productions and manufactures of foreign countries and that consequently the matter has great importance from the American point of view. We think it extremely doubtful whether any such report has been made from the Consulate for the obvious reason that Japan's tariff can not affect the trade between the West and any Pacific ports except her own, and for the further obvious reason that she is not in a position to exclude foreign goods from her own markets since many of the imports are essential to her and can not be manufactured at home. Her new tariff is purely a revenue-earning arrangement, we believe. Be that as it may, however, complaints would not sound well in the mouths of American citizens who themselves have pursued for many years an unvarying policy of protection.

The United States Consul-General in Yokohama has evoked much attention by his report on the new tariff. The document has not yet been published in the East and the only detailed knowledge we have of its contents is furnished by a more or less hypothetical resumé in the columns of the Kokumin Shinbun and the Shogyo Shimpo. According to these authorities the Consul-General's view is that Japan seeks to make herself a great manufacturing nation and to be the source of supply for Oriental countries. She judges that her geographical position eminently fits her for that rôle, and she is rapidly developing her mercantile marine with the object of distributing her products. In one respect the new tariff is to be commended; namely, in so far as it substitutes specific duties for ad valorem. But in some other important respects it is distinctly protective. At the same time, in raising the duty upon flour, the Japanese Government does not seek to deter the consumption of that staple by its nationals. What it desires to do is to substitute Manchuria for America as the granary of the Far East. The idea is that the flour produced in Manchuria may be transported by Japanese railways to Dalny and then carried cheaply by Japanese ships to Chinese and Japanese ports? So, too, in the matter of cotton, Japan—here, it should be noted, the Consul-General speaks not of accomplished facts but of measures predicted by himself as likely to be taken by Japan when she recovers her tariff autonomy in 1910—Japan will admit raw cotton duty free, but will place upon cotton manufactures such imposts as to reserve the home markets entirely for domestic goods. In a word, her policy is to be the warehouse of the Far East, and since that consummation would not conduce to the commercial interests of Western States, it is to be watched and, if possible, opposed. Referring to this epitome of the Consul-General's report, which must be a very interesting and suggestive document, the Kokumin insists that the changes made by the new tariff are almost wholly for purposes of revenue, and that Japan has not adopted the policy of protection. It considers that were Japan such a country and so situated as the United States, with virtually self-supplying potentialities, she might perhaps adopt the policy of exclusion (kinatsu seisaku) but being as she is a small country dependent upon foreign nations for many of the necessities of life, she has to cut her coat according to her cloth. The Chuo Shimpo is a little less reserved. It does not deny that the policy of protection is altogether invisible in the new tariff but it claims that Japan has merely followed the example of western nations. America herself may be said to practise the principle of excluding the products of the whole world from her markets, and the same may be said of Germany, Russia and France, whereas the utmost of which they can accuse Japan is that she seeks to stand first in Pacific markets. In fact, the United States Consul-General has forgotten to cast the beam out of his own eye. For example, if Japan levies a duty of 64 sen per picul on rice, America's corresponding figures are 5.30 yen for cleaned rice and 3.30 yen for unhulled; Japan's impost of 45 sen per picul of wheat becomes 1.67 yen in the United States' tariff; Japan's 20 per cent. on locomotives is 35 per cent. in America's case, and Japan's 20 per cent. on railway carriages is met by America's 45 per cent. The Chuo frankly says that when this country recovers her tariff autonomy four years hence, she is not unlikely to adopt the policy of protecting herself against those that protect themselves against her, but for the present she can only make slight adjustments, as has been done in the new statutory tariff.

KOREA.

We learn from Tokyo contemporaries that the Residency General is about to publish a body of regulations for the control of immigration into Korea. The gist of the new rules is that immigration agents will have to be duly accredited and that each must give security to the extent of ten thousand yen. They will not be allowed to exact anything beyond their fees, and altogether their scope of operations will be limited. It is provided that these agents need not be Korean subjects.

The Wi Pyong insurgents in Chhunchhyong-do appear to be very active. They have seized the local office at Nampho and are levying contributions of arms and money. At Poryong they required the magistrate to furnish ten thousand yen and some men and horses, but the magistrate fled without complying. It is reported that four Japanese subjects have fallen into their hands.

It has been decided that in future if the Korean Household Department purposes entertaining any distinguished foreigner, as was done in the case of Mr. Schiff, due intimation must be made previously to the Residency General and the latter's consent must be obtained.

Mr. Mikami, an engineer sent by the Residency General to inspect the gold mine at Nantadong in Hamyong-do, appears to have encountered much opposition. The idea of the Korean officials was that investigation might deprive them of a source of profit, and it is thought that they instigated a violent demonstration made by the country folk. No injuries were suffered by either side. The report adds that some foreigners were found collecting gold-dust.

Our readers are aware that there was formed in Seoul last year, under the auspices of the Department of Agriculture and Commerce in Tokyo, an association calling itself Menka Saibai-kyokai (cotton-cultivation society), which had for object the growing of cotton from foreign seed in Korea. Reasons existed for thinking that such an enterprise might be successfully developed, and we need scarcely point out the signal advantages that would accrue to the cotton-spinning industry of Japan. At first the Koreans looked askance at the scheme, but by degrees they became convinced of its sincerity as well as of its prospects, and many leading officials joined the association. Moreover, a sum of 100,000 yen was appropriated by the Seoul Government to be expended in three years on the promotion of the undertaking. Recently the three managers, Messrs. Tsunoda, Ogino and Aochi—all members of the Diet—gave an entertainment at a Japanese restaurant in Seoul and availed themselves of the opportunity to speak at some length to newspaper reporters. We thus learn that the enterprise has been transferred from the Japanese Department of Agriculture and Commerce to the Kwangyo Mohan-jo (model station for the promotion of industry) in the Residency General which has a fund of 170,000 yen. We also learn that Mokpho was the place chosen for experimental growth, and that about 150 acres were planted by the Association, an area which has now been extended to 250 acres owing to the coöperation of private individuals. The Managers state that in spite of the inclement weather last year the cotton grew excellently, and that American seed was found most suitable. They appear to think that there can be no doubt of ultimate success. The initial expenditure was naturally heavy: 40,000 yen was drawn from the Korean Government's fund. As to how it was spent no particulars are given in the report from which these facts are taken—a telegram to the Asahi Shinbun.

The insurgents in Kyongsando are apparently very active. They have attacked Andong and are thus threatening Pongjiong. They have made their appearance at Ponghwa also, and raided a gold-dust station where five Japanese were at work. One of these Japanese was cut to pieces. In Chhunchhyong-do too there is much disturbance. A Japanese gendarme has been wounded and it has been found necessary to send out a special force of police.

Reports from Korea state that the insurgents at Kongju in Chhunchhyong-do have entrenched themselves so strongly as to defy attack without artillery. The Japanese gendarmes and police have withdrawn and a vessel has been sent to Yesan to draw off the fugitives. The Jiji Shimpo explains that there are two centres of disturbance. One is at Andong and Ponghwa in Kyongsong. This is not very formidable, the insurgents numbering only about 60. The other is at Hongju and Kongju. Collating the accounts, it appears that about 300 insurgents attacked the walled town of Hongju on the 19th inst. The Japanese gendarmes and police defended the approaches, but being short of ammunition, they were ultimately obliged to retire to Toksan, whither they were accompanied by the post office staff. By evening of that day the force of the rebels had increased to 500. The Korean troops are said to have retreated incontinently, and a Japanese force was to have proceeded to the scene on the 24th instant.

There is a disturbance near Mokpho also, where the native Christians have come into collision with the people of the district. In this matter the Japanese are not directly concerned, but they are taking steps to restore order.

CHINA'S FOREIGN TRADE DURING 1905.

The gross figures of China's foreign trade in 1905 were:—

	Hk. Pts.
Imports .....	447,100,791
Exports .....	227,888,197

Total Trade..... 674,988,988

Excess of Imports ..... 219,212,594

Compared with 1904 the results were:—

	Hk. Pts.
Increase of Imports in 1905 .....	103,040,183
Decrease of Exports .....	11,598,486
Net Increase of total trade .....	91,441,697

Mr. H. B. Morse, in his very exhaustive summary of the trade returns, says that the increase in imports was due, approximately, one half to cotton manufactures, one fourth to metals and one fourth to sundries. Opium imports show a falling off of 5 per cent. in quantity. It is Mr. Morse's opinion that the place of Indian opium is being taken by its Chinese rival, and that this process will be continuous. "For Chinese opium," he says, "a new generation is coming on which is not wedded to any other flavour and which finds its flavour (i.e. that of Chinese opium) not unattractive and its cost decidedly attractive, and it is likely to tend more and more to replace Indian opium."

Cotton manufactures have a very abnormal record for the year. They stand for a value of 181,452,953 taels, a figure 31½ per cent. greater than that for the preceding year. This extraordinary state of affairs is attributed to the fact that large hopes of trade revival on the restoration of peace, depleted stocks of cotton goods in the local market and cheapness of raw cotton during the early months of 1905, led to the laying in of great quantities, which, however, did not find more than the usual demand, and consequently a large surplus was lying in the importers' warehouses at the beginning of 1906. It is noticeable that whereas England supplied 49 per cent., and America 45 per cent. of the plain cotton fabrics imported in 1905, Japan sent only 3 per cent. and India 2 per cent. One of Japan's earnest efforts will be to acquire a larger place in this market, and she will thus be directly competing with England and America. In cotton yarns the provenance of imports is different. Out of a total of 2,553,797 piculs, India sent 1,846,846 and Japan 681,442. Japan's sales to China are thus little more than one-third of India's though they exceed one-fourth of the total trade.

On the side of exports the two staples which showed most marked diminution were tea and silk. An inclement season had something to do with the fate of tea, but the great and continuously operative cause is the competition of Indian and Ceylon teas. A striking illustration of this fact is furnished by the trade returns of Great Britain, where the total consumption of tea in 1905 was 1,943,165 piculs, in which total only 49,942 piculs (2½ per cent.) were Chinese. What a wholesale change from the days of the factory at Canton, the clipper races and the Flowery Kingdom's unchallenged monopoly! Tea was responsible for 5 million taels (roughly) of the reduced export trade and silk for 8 millions. It would appear that the adverse factors responsible in the case of silk were a raw, inclement spring and continued disease among the silk-worms. Japan's exports of silk were similarly affected by evil climatic conditions, but Japan, for several years past, has beaten China as a silk-exporter. That result was long ago predicted in these columns. The figures are as follow:—

EXPORTS OF ALL KINDS OF SILK AND ITS PRODUCTS.

	1905. Hk. Tls.	1904. Hk. Tls.	1905. Hk. Tls.
China .....	74,289,703	78,255,412	70,393,833
Japan .....	88,800,000	95,300,000	77,180,000

In Mr. Morse's summary of China's trade attention is directed to the important question of the copper cent. These coins, equal nominally to 10 cash (mill), have depreciated seriously. It is calculated that not more than 10 million dollars worth have been issued by the provincial mints, which represents 25 cents a head of the Chinese nation (400 millions). That proportion of retail currency cannot be called excessive, and as for the quality and appearance of the coins, there is no valid cause of complaint. But in the middle of 1905, owing to some unexplained cause, reports of depreciation began to be heard from the interior, and thereafter an important governmental factory refused to receive the cents except at a discount of 10 per cent. The subsequent course of events was that the dollar, previously worth 880 cash (mill) and exchanging for 88 cents, suddenly became exchangeable for 96 cents, and ultimately sold for 110 cents, so that within 12 months the cent coin had depreciated 22 per cent. Naturally these depreciated coins are driving out the cash, and Mr. Morse writes:—"In my last report I foreshadowed that if, not from choice but from necessity, the people must carry cents in their pockets and not mills, their little comforts will be cut off and the men who now support a family in comfort on six pence a day will find themselves reduced to the level of a bare subsistence." This is now coming to pass. The silver price of rice is increasing, and, even at the same price, people have to pay to-day an amount nearly a third greater than one year ago in the coins which constitute their currency. * * * * The Chinese Government will now find itself confronted with a nation suffering in a way which they will not be able to understand all the evils of unaccustomed poverty. One remedial measure has been adopted in the form of a rescript (24th April, 1906) placing all the mints under the Imperial Board of Revenue. The next step should be the Government's acceptance at par of all the previous issues of the mints.

X GENERAL STOESEL.

The Hochi Shimbun, whose telegraphic information from St. Petersburg conveyed the first news of the death sentence having been passed on Stoessel and Nebogatoff, now publishes a statement attributed to a high Japanese officer who was present at the siege. This officer declares that Stoessel did everything which could have been expected of a brave and skilful commander, but that he failed in one important respect, he did not send away his wife. It was scarcely to be expected that at the supreme moment she would take her own life to free her husband's hands, as was formerly the custom of Japanese ladies, but had Stoessel sent her in good time to a secure position beyond the Tiger's Tail Forts, his decision concerning surrender might have been different. He certainly had the means to hold out for at least another month and at the last he could have made a sortie at the head of twenty thousand men. Such a sortie would have been a stupendous undertaking, but this officer thinks that Stoessel could have found twenty thousand of the garrison to make the venture, and that although he would have encountered fierce opposition at the hands of the besieging army, he might have carried a large remnant of his force as far as Haicheng, thus creating a formidable obstacle to the prosecution of the Japanese plans. But he could not have taken with him his wife and the other women of the garrison. They it was that hampered him, and his error must be pronounced to have been failure to dispose of this impediment earlier in the siege. He might have taken advantage of General Nogi's original offer of safe conduct, but probably at that time he did not believe in the ultimate necessity of surrender. The Hochi Shimbun alleges that the chief counts of the accusation against him were three; namely, that he surrendered sixty days too soon; that the council of 17 officers who were summoned by him 4 days prior to the siege, voted against surrender by 13 to 4; and that the document conveying his resolve to surrender was not in proper form. We suspect this explanation to be in the main conjectural. What is certain, however, is that Stoessel's surrender had an immense effect on the course of the war, for every day he held out involved a day's delay in the Japanese attack on Mukden. It is not to be supposed that whatever be, or has been, the court martial's decision, either Stoessel or Nebogatoff will be put to death, but the anger of their countrymen against them is easy to understand.

MISS NORRIS' PICTURES.

Miss Marie de Jarnet Norris is now exhibiting in the Imperial Hotel, Tokyo, a few of her remarkable pictures. Portraits are evidently her forte, though a landscape of great breadth, force and delicacy is among the exhibits. Two portraits are especially striking. One, "The Spring-time of Life," is evidently intended to illustrate the theory that a portrait should be, not a mere likeness, but a picture dominated by the spirit of the sitter. It shows us a young girl who seems the very incarnation of such breezy youthful energy that it infuses every fold of her garments and permeates the entire canvas. The face is eminently lovable, but, not yet touched by the softening passion, it breathes only intense eagerness of life and unconscious expectation. This is a full-size figure, the pose in excellent harmony with the motive and the technique very clever. Another portrait is on a much smaller scale: the head of an old man, who, though he has passed into the late autumn of life, yet recalls something of its young sunshine by the bright alertness of his look. Both of these paintings proclaim themselves faithful portraits even to one unacquainted with the originals, but it is as pictures that they appeal to us rather than as portraits. They introduce an artist who loves to depict the spirit of a man rather than to reproduce his features alone, and for whom everything in nature has an esoteric aspect. It is perhaps sacrilegious to speak of frames in such a context, but for the sake of these fine pictures we must be allowed to protest against the ordeal to which their dreadful frames and incongruous surroundings condemn them. Miss Norris is at present engaged painting the portrait of Count Katsura. We trust that she will do the public the grace of exhibiting it when completed.

THE IETSUDO KOKUYU JUMBI-KYOKU.

A bureau of preparations for the State ownership of railways has been formed. It consists of 114 officials and has for chief the Vice-Minister of Communications.

THE FIVE THOUSAND-MILES CELEBRATION.

Nagoya on the 20th inst. celebrated the completion of 5,000 miles of railway in Japan. In connexion with this subject the Nichi Nichi Shimbun notes that railway building commenced in Japan in 1869 and that the opening of the first line, that between Yokohama and Tokyo, took place in September 1872. Thereafter the progress was thus:—

Number of miles open in 1884 .....	262
Number of miles open in 1889 .....	1,100
Number of miles open in 1891 .....	2,100
Number of miles open in 1902 .....	3,700
Number of miles open in 1906 .....	5,042

This last figure is thus made up, namely:—

Government Lines.....	1,535 miles.
Private Lines .....	3,257 miles.
Formosa Lines .....	250 miles.

Total ..... 5,042 miles.

The Shogyo Shimpō, however, justly remarks that there is no reason why the railways owned by Japan in Korea and Manchuria should be excluded from the account. The total should be increased by 600 miles for Korea and 665 miles from Manchuria, and the celebration should have been on account of the completion of six thousand not five thousand miles. Japan may congratulate herself, but she is still far behind other countries in this matter, as the following figures, quoted by the Nichi Nichi show:—

Mileage of American Railways .....	200,000
do German do .....	33,000
do French do .....	24,000
do English do .....	22,000
do Austro-Hungarian Railways .....	23,000
do Italian Railways .....	10,000
do British Indian Railways .....	25,000
do Mexican Railways .....	10,000

Tokyo journals publish copies of a very clever picture drawn by Mr. Smedley showing the opening of the Tokyo-Yokohama railway by the Emperor. They also quote His Majesty's address on that occasion, an address concluding with an earnest expression of desire that the railways thus inaugurated should be speedily extended to every part of the country.

The celebration at Nagoya in honour of the completion of five thousand miles of Japanese railways commenced with a ceremony of reverence at the Hongwan Temple to the spirits of the men who contributed most materially to railway enterprise in Japan, principal among them being Prince Iwakura, General Viscount Kawakami, Mr. Matsumoto Soichiro, Mr. Watanabe Koki, Mr. Mori Jusuke, Mr. Nakamigawa, and Mr. Minami Kyoshi. In the afternoon the congratulatory fete took place in the hall of the Prefectural Assembly of Aichi. The most prominent among these present were General Viscount Kodama, Mr. Yamagata, Minister of Agriculture and Commerce, Lt.-General Ishimoto, Lt.-General Matsunaga, etc. Mr. Hirai, chief of the Railway Bureau, read the congratulatory address. It dwelt on the signal changes that have taken place in Japan since 1872 in the realm of railway building, thanks chiefly to the exertions of statesmen like Prince Iwakura; but while noting these satisfactory results their insufficiency from a national point of view was strongly insisted on. Three other documents were then read aloud. They were addresses of thanks and appreciation to Marquis Ito, Count Okuma and Viscount Inouye, who have acted such a great part in promoting the growth of railways. It need hardly be said that these documents were highly complimentary as they well deserved to be. They spoke of the wonderful foresight and resolution of the men to whom they were addressed and extolled them as the fathers of railway enterprise in this country. Count Okuma—then plain Mr. Okuma—was Vice-Minister of Finance and Mr. (now Marquis) Ito was his immediate junior in that Department at the time when it was decided to borrow £50,000 in England, through the agency of Mr. Horatio Nelson Lay, for the purpose of building the Tokyo-Yokohama line. Mr. Lay, fresh from the experiences of the Lay-Osborne flotilla, was scarcely an eminently well fitted person for such work, and that first financial transaction between Japan and foreign countries—a loan at 9 per cent.—was not concluded without complications. Viscount Inouye then held the post of Director of Railways and for many years his association with this kind of enterprise was so strenuous and so intimate that he received the name of "Tetsudo Inouye" and is still known by it. Mr. Yamagata, Minister of Agriculture and Commerce, also read a short address, and this was followed by speeches from General Viscount Kodama, Governor Fukano, Mr. Okuda, Master of the Ceremonies, and Mr. Nakabashii, President of the Osaka Shosen Kaisha. A stand-up banquet followed and the assembly broke up at 5 p.m. after drinking the Emperor's health enthusiastically.

FOREIGN LANGUAGES IN JAPAN.

Public attention has been again drawn to the question of the linguistic deficiency shown by a great majority of the students who enter the Universities from the high schools. The youths are fairly well able to understand books in a Western language, but to write that language or to speak it with any degree of accuracy or fluency is quite beyond their capacity. The present Minister of Education, Mr. Makino, who seems to be a most competent and energetic man, has been speaking to the principals of high schools now assembled in Tokyo. His Excellency asks them to devise measures for improving this defect, and suggests that, whenever such a course is possible, readers compiled in a foreign language should be employed. This is a matter which has been frequently discussed in the past, and it is possible to assert with confidence that all foreign experts have shown unanimity of opinion as to the fault lying in the inferior quality of the teachers of language who direct the education of youths in the various schools. Among these teachers a few, a very few, possess quite a remarkable knowledge of English, or, it may be, French or German; but the vast majority can scarcely be credited with even moderate ability to speak or write any one of the three languages. How, indeed, could it be otherwise so long as the salaries paid to school teachers are not higher than the earnings of a stone-mason or a carpenter? The wonder to us is, not that this deficiency should exist, but that it should not be even more palpable. Evidently when teachers labour under these limitations, they have no choice except to shape their methods of instruction accordingly, and the outcome is the hensoku system which trains youths to interpret the meaning of foreign books without paying much attention to idiomatic construction, to pronunciation or to speaking. The Japanese teacher with his own defective opportunities—in 99 cases out of every hundred he himself has never associated with native speakers of the language he has to teach nor has ever visited the country where it is indigenous—, his scanty emoluments and his rustication to districts where from year's end to year's end he finds no opportunity of improving his knowledge, is an object of pity and sympathy. It has been suggested that a language college should be organized with an ample and competent staff of foreign instructors in language, and that it should train Japanese school-teachers before appointment as well as provide facilities for them to renew their studies there from time to time after appointment. Perhaps that is the best available remedy short of making to the present number of foreign teachers an addition which would be too costly to contemplate. Meanwhile we are bound to say that we detect steady and even striking progress in linguistic proficiency among Japanese youths. There seems to be continuous advance. Just as the men who studied in a period 25 or 30 years remote are conspicuously inferior in knowledge of foreign languages to those educated 15 years ago, so these latter in turn must yield the palm to their juniors. A higher standard is perpetually reached. Thus though the present system is very far indeed from being ideal, it would be a mistake to suppose that the nation is not advancing steadily in acquaintance with foreign tongues.

OBITUARY.

We announce with much regret the death of Mr. Sugimura, Japanese Representative in Brazil. The cause was apoplexy and the end is said to have been very sudden. On the 21st instant His Majesty the Emperor was pleased to raise Mr. Sugimura to the First Class of the Fourth Grade and to confer on him the Second Class Order of the Sacred Treasure. According to a Foreign Office telegram the funeral was to take place on the 23rd instant, and the Brazilian Government had ordered that a guard of honour corresponding to that for a Lieut.-General should accompany the cortege. Mr. Sugimura served for some time as chief of the Commercial Bureau in the Tokyo Foreign Office. He was a man of much ability and industry, gifted with great charm of manner. His wife and two daughters were with him in Brazil at the time of his death.

The death of Mr. Sugimura, Japan's Representative in Brazil, recalls that dark time when a Japanese Minister lay under imputation of having connived at the cruel murder of the Queen of the country to which he was accredited. Viscount Miura, though it could not be proved that he had any hand, act or part in the death of the Queen of Korea, and though he was consequently acquitted by a duly constituted tribunal, did not obtain from the world an unequivocal verdict of not guilty. It was held that at any rate a sin of omission lay at his door and that by great vigilance he might have averted the calamity. The Japanese Government showed its appreciation of this distinction by never employing him again. His administrative career and his political future, both seemingly brilliant at the time, were effectually marred and he passed at once into obscurity. Mr. Sugimura had been Secretary of the Legation over which Viscount Miura presided, but in his case the public discriminated and he continued to fill administrative posts. Never again, however, was it considered expedient to employ him in Korea. He possessed an almost unique knowledge of that country's affairs and his services might have been utilized there to the best advantage, but the Government in Tokyo wisely decided that the thing was impossible, and thus the whole complexion of his career was changed.

The career of the great artist Kubota Beisen was blighted some years ago by a visitation of blindness and now his death has to be announced. He endured his terrible affliction of darkness with the greatest fortitude and cheerfulness, and thenceforth utilized his exceptional learning to deliver lectures and dictate valuable theses on the old customs and costumes of Japan. Some time ago he was attacked by cancer of the stomach. This painful disease does not appear to have broken his spirit. Shortly before losing consciousness he drank a farewell cup with his friends and relatives, and composed two death stanzas, one signifying that he had gathered interest on his natural span of 50 years, since he had lived to be 55. He expired on the 18th instant at 1.50 a.m. As an artist he was one of the most renowned in modern Japan, and the beautiful pictures exhibited by him in former years must be fresh in the memory of many of our readers.

NOTES ON CURRENT EVENTS.

It will be remembered that the Government asked the Diet last session to sanction the organization of a committee comprising both civilian and official members, for the purpose of investigating problems of taxation, the idea being that such a subject ought to be considered from the point of view of those outside the Administration as well as from that of those inside. The Diet, however, declined to endorse the project. In the Lower House it was approved, but the Peers held that these duties of investigation devolved upon the Government, and that as the latter possessed all the necessary machinery for the work, there was no occasion to enlist outside assistance. The Government accordingly organized a committee called Zeicho Shinsa-in-kai. It held its first meeting in the Treasury on the 17th instant, some delay having been caused by the absence of Mr. Wakatsuki in Manchuria. The Minister of State for Finance addressed the Committee. He explained that the extra taxes imposed on account of the war had necessarily been devised without minute investigation, and that, in view of their continuance, they demanded fuller examination. For that purpose the Committee had been formed, and in consideration of the great importance of the task devolving on them, they should spare no means of obtaining information, and should not hesitate to seek it by summoning any persons from whom it seemed likely to be obtainable.

Count Okuma has raised his powerful voice in favour of hotel enterprise. He wisely says that the Japanese will be committing a grave mistake if they themselves attempt to organize and manage hotels. That kind of work can be done properly by foreigners only, especially by the Swiss and the French. We have often insisted on this point and have more than once emphasized it by observing that the Japanese would deservedly ridicule any foreigner who essayed to run a Japanese tea-house or inn on Japanese lines in Japan without Japanese assistance. The two things are quite analogous, except that the advantage would be on the side of the foreigner since he has many Japanese models before his eyes in this country. But though it is possible to heartily endorse Count Okuma's observations on this point, we do not find it so easy to agree with him when he maintains that special facilities should be given to hotel-keepers, as for example, that land should be found for them on easy terms; that import duties should be remitted on the articles used by them, and that, under certain circumstances, the interest on their capital should be guaranteed by the State. It is difficult to appreciate such a position. If there be a real demand for hotels, a corresponding supply will be forthcoming without any official nursing. Foreigners in Yokohama have organized and are running excellent hotels, on whose account no state aid whatever has been sought.

The first ship of the Japanese Volunteer Fleet has been ordered from the Mitsu Bishi Dockyard in Nagasaki. She is to displace 3,000 tons, to have a speed of 21 knots, and to carry an armament of two 6-inch quick-firers and six 12-lb. guns.

It is stated that a very large number of Russian vessels of war and steamers remain to be sold and will soon be put up for public tender. They are all at the bottom of the sea and in the case of the war-ships the armaments have been removed. A list is given by the Asahi as follows:—

Description.	Name.	Material.	Tonnage.	Place of sinking.
Gun-boat	Bebre	Steel	950	In Port Arthur.
do	Giljak	do	960	do
do	Tsimok	do	706	do
do	Zabiaka	Iron	1,234	do
do	Dijidit	do	1,456	do
Destroyer	Veevoi	do	370	do
do	Kusaresti	do	240	do
do	Stravai	do	350	do
do	Bilferint	do	350	do
Gun-boat	Oleazni	do	1,500	Outside Port Arthur.
Blocking S.S.	Tenshin Maru	do	2,942	do
East-China Railway	S. S. Nanny	do	2,460	do
Torpedo-boat No. 48.		do	83	Tayaokau.
Despatch-boat	Miyako	do	1,800	do
Torpedo-laying ship	Enisei	do	2,500	Talien Bay.
Cruiser	Bayan	do	3,200	S. Sanshan Is.
Destroyer	Lieut.	do	276	Hsiensang Pro.
Destroyer	Unusitelni	do	312	Pigeon Bay.
do	Unimateini	do	312	Kinchow Bay.

There are also 2 dredgers. This list, combined with previous returns of casualties, conveys a vivid idea of the Port Arthur death-trap.

Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Davis left Yokohama on Friday for a richly-earned holiday trip to England. Both have deserved well of the community for their musical and histrionic talents have ever been at the ready disposal of their fellow-residents and many are the pleasant recollections they leave behind of concerts and A.D.C. performances in which they took leading parts. Of Mr. Davis' commercial career it behooves us not to speak. That it was strikingly successful was seen in his election as Chairman of the Board of Trade, a post which he filled with eminent satisfaction to all concerned. His work on other committees is also too well known and appreciated to require adulation at our hands. We hope to see Mr. and Mrs. Davis back in our midst very shortly.

In the ceremonies hitherto held at Kudan on account of fatal casualties in the war, only those who had been killed in battle or who had died of wounds were included. Officers and soldiers who perished from sickness did not find a place in the rites. It is to be understood, of course, that this distinction does not imply any invidious classification, but merely that the returns of deaths from disease are not available so readily as those of deaths on the field or from wounds. The men that died of sickness contracted on service are to be independently honoured at Kudan, but the present expectation is that information sufficiently accurate for the purpose will not have been collected by the time of the usual autumn ceremonial in September, and that it will be necessary to wait until next spring. The deaths from sickness are stated by the press to have reached about 25,500 or 25,600, but our readers are aware that the number stated by the Army Medical staff and noted in these columns some time ago is 27,158.

We are glad to see that Mr. Kamada Eikichi, President of the Keio Gijuku, has been nominated by the Emperor to a seat in the House of Peers.

Telegrams to the Nichi Nichi Shimbun from London say that the Japan Society's annual banquet took place on the 18th instant and was attended by 275 persons, all more or less distinguished. Lord Redesdale was in the chair. Warm allusions were made to the brilliant reception given to the Garter Mission in Japan, and Count Mutsu, the Japanese Chargé d'Affaires, expressed great gratitude for the generous aid furnished by England to the famine-stricken people of north eastern Japan.

Another criminal calumny is going the round of the local newspapers in the Far East that are conspicuous for anti-Japanese writing. On this occasion a Yokohama journal, edited by a German subject, is the originator of the mischievous falsehood and the inveterate though contemptible enemy of Japan in Seoul has copied it. The calumny is that Japan is deliberately preparing for another war with China, the sole, or at any rate the main, object being to collect from her neighbour the money which she expected but failed to obtain from Russia. "There will be no question whatever," writes the Yokohama inventor of the wretched lie, "about the rights or wrongs of the case. Japan must have money, much money, many hundred millions of money, and a war with China, that would not only pay for itself, but which would also pay off the present crushing war debt and make all China the treasury of Japan, would be popular from one end of the country to the other." No one has yet succeeded in discovering whether venomous insects like mosquitoes have a useful place in nature's scheme. It is equally perplexing to discover any justification for the existence of newspapers which devote themselves to inventing and circulating calumnies like the above. There is not the faintest warrant for imagining that these libellers suppose themselves to be speaking the truth. They must be as fully cognizant of their own falsehoods as they are indifferent to the international distrust and ill-will which the state of affairs they depict is likely to generate. None the less they go on, slandering, lying, defaming and inciting, as though to create dissension and sow the seeds of discord were an admirable metier for journalists. To enhance the wonder, these men, who to-day devote themselves to the business of criminal mendacity, will to-morrow be found denouncing Oriental duplicity. It is a curious study in modern morality.

On the 18th instant a farewell banquet to Mr. and Mrs. Wilson was given at the Metropole Hotel by Count Terashima, Private Secretary to the Minister of State for Foreign Affairs. The celebration is reported to have been very brilliant, and the number of guests large. They included the Chinese Minister and representatives of several of the Legations.

The Official Gazette announces the following names as those of Commissioners appointed to delimit the Russo-Japanese frontier in Saghalien:—

Colonel Oshima of the Imperial Artillery.
Major Watanabe do do
Captain Hata of the Infantry.
Captain Wada of the Imperial Navy.
Military Surveyor Yajima.

An interesting statement is made in the columns of the Kokumin Shimbun with regard to the numbers of officers and men disinfected at the five medical inspection stations during the war. The figures are:—Inspected while the war was going on, 138,193; inspected while the troops were returning after the restoration of peace, 671,573; total, 809,766. Another column of the document shows that 595,134 packages were disinfected during the same interval. It must not be supposed, however, that these numbers give any definite clue as to the dimensions of the force sent by Japan to Manchuria. In the first place, the officers and men disinfected while the war was in progress, were invalids sent home for treatment; in the second, those inspected while the armies were returning did not include all the troops that had gone to the field, for there remained in Manchuria the bulk of two divisions and in Korea one division, neither did every body of men on their way back from the war pass through the hands of the disinfecting officials. What we may confidently assert, however, is that at least, 671,573 officers and men—including non-combatants—were at the front when peace was concluded.

The Government has promulgated the law passed by the Diet last session for reducing the size of the 50-sen and 20-sen silver pieces. The reductions will not be very large, but they will greatly facilitate the use of these essential coins. The 50-sen piece will thus become a little larger than the English shilling and the 20-sen piece will be about the size of six-pence. As to design, the dragon hitherto borne on the reverse will be replaced by a multiple-rayed sun, surrounded by a chain of cherry-blossoms, the motive being the old saying of the bushi, Asahi ni nio yamazakura. The annulus outside the cherry-chain will bear an inscription showing the date and value of the coin.

It is a quaint and decidedly sacrilegious act on the part of a furniture-dealing firm to call itself Gongen Shokai. An upholstering store which dubbed itself "incarnation house," or "holy ghost company" would furnish an English parallel. We are not prepared to infer any special lack of the reverential faculty in Japanese minds, but to find a firm whose specialty is the sale of carved Nikko furniture advertizing under the name of Gogen Shokai is certainly a suggestive fact.

The Kaiser, according to a telegram from London to the Nichi Nichi Shimbun, gave significant advice to the Chinese travelling commissioners when he received them in audience. He counselled China not to copy the system of any other country but to devote her strength to organizing and training a really powerful army. This utterance of His Majesty is said to have been interpreted in Europe as directed against either the employment of Japanese experts or the adoption of Japanese models. We can not see that it bears any other significance. Nor can we see that such advice comes with entire propriety from the Emperor of Germany who would doubtless claim, as so many Germans are disposed to claim, and as they have certainly some right to claim, that Japan modelled her military system on that of Germany. In fact, the demeanour of several prominent Germans during the war and subsequently to it, was that in Japan's triumphs the world should recognise a reflection of Germany's military competence. When then the Kaiser suggests that China should refrain from adopting Japanese systems—if indeed he truly made such a suggestion—does he not indirectly throw discredit on German systems? It seems to us that he does. At all events it is a pity that the Kaiser's utterances, real or attributed, should so frequently prove either equivocal, or offensive. His Majesty seems scarcely to appreciate the responsibility attaching to the splendid position he occupies in the world, a position largely of his own making.

We have received an authorized translation of the new Customs Tariff Law. Local newspapers have already published translations made by their own staff, but they are more or less erroneous, and doubtless this authorized version will be welcomed by importers. We presume that copies are obtainable at the Custom House; or if not procurable, information can at any rate be sought there as to where the book may be purchased.

Mr. Uchida left Peking for Japan on the 19th instant. He is reported to have had a great send-off, the most prominent Chinese officials and the foreign Representatives all assembling at the station to bid him farewell. Over fifty of his own countrymen accompanied him to Tongku. His four and a half years' service in the Chinese capital were an eventful period, and it appears to be the general verdict that he acquitted himself with signal ability.

A very brilliant function took place on the 20th instant in the Shinjuku Park, where the spacious pavilion recently erected for entertaining the officers on the occasion of the Review, was placed at the disposal of the Ladies Patriotic League. Princess Iwakura presided, and was supported by the Managers of the League, Princesses Tokugawa, Konoye and Mori, with Marchionesses Oyama, Nabeshima, and Yamaguchi. Their Imperial Highnesses Princess Kanin, President of the League, Princess Arisugawa, Princess Higashi-Fushimi and Princess Fushimi were present, and altogether the ladies are said to have numbered some 30,000. The Empress arrived at 2 p.m. and in very brief and simple terms expressed satisfaction at the success hitherto attending the League and hopes for its future welfare. Princess Kanin replied, and thereafter tea was served and the beauties of the park were enjoyed. It is noted that in spite of the great crowd not the smallest approach to confusion could be observed from first to last.

It appears to be settled that an official lottery will be established in Formosa, for the purpose of promoting development of public works. The authorities are prompted to resort to this course because the Chinese residents of Formosa have learned to regard the purchase of lottery tickets as a kind of normal investment, and thus large sums of money are sent every year from the island to China. There is no apparent possibility of checking this habit. Consequently the Formosa Administration has decided to divert it into a useful channel. The law bureau is at present considering the matter. In the Nichi Nichi Shimbun we read that the plan adopted will be to start lotteries for such amounts as shall suffice in the first place to pay expenses, in the second to provide a substantial sum for public-works purposes, and in the third to leave enough for attractive prizes. It seems to us regrettable that such methods of finance should be resorted to.

The destroyer Hatsuharu was successfully launched at the Kawasaki dock-yard on the afternoon of the 21st instant. There now remain only five or six destroyers to be added to the Fleet in order to complete the second post-bellum programme, namely, 48 destroyers in all.

The German Ambassador proceeded to the Palace on the 22nd instant to present his credentials. A company of the Imperial Guards constituted the guard of honour, and Imperial Chamberlain Viscount Matsudaira accompanied his Excellency in a carriage sent from the Household Department. In the ante-room of the Phoenix Hall the Ambassador was received by Grand Chamberlain Marquis Tokudaiji, Viscount Tanaka, Minister of the Imperial Household, Viscount Hayashi, Minister of State for Foreign Affairs, and Viscount Kagawa, Lord in Waiting to the Empress. Conducted by Imperial Chamberlain Mr. Ito, the Ambassador proceeded to the Phoenix Hall, where he presented his credentials to the Throne, and subsequently, under the guidance of Viscount Kagawa, his Excellency passed to the Paulownia Hall where the Empress received him. The members of the Embassy staff had audience at the same time. On the 24th instant the Ambassador and the Baroness are to lunch at the Palace.

A telegram to the Foreign Office says that the Training Squadron reached Sydney on the 21st instant. The squadron consists of the Itsukushima, the Matsushima and the Hashidate. All the ships in port and the light-house were illuminated and the squadron received a splendid welcome.

An Imperial Decree authorizes the appointment of full Generals to the command of Divisions. Hitherto this post has been held by a Lieut.-General. We presume that the change now announced is due to the number of promotions made in connexion with the war, and that the object is to find employment for several full Generals who would otherwise have to be placed on the Retired List.

YACHTING.

The 21-raters of the Yokohama Yacht Club raced on Saturday afternoon over the Lightship-Widow Buoy course. There was a fine southerly breeze and Aimee held the lead all round the course finishing easily first. Times:—

	h.m.s.	h.m.s.
Pele .....	2.15.18	4.35.36
Winsome .....	2.15.36	4.30.43
Edna .....	2.15.21	4.24.28
Sunbeam .....	2.15.54	4.34.24
Aimee .....	2.15.26	4.21.29

Four Larks went out with the following result:

	h.m.s.	h.m.s.
11 .....	2.30.16	4.22.42
13 .....	2.30.29	4.39.52
14 .....	2.30.46	—
15 .....	2.30.35	4.39.58

HOKKAIDO AND SAGHALIEN.

SOME interesting facts relating to Hokkaido and Saghalien have just been collected by the Keizai Zasshi from Mr. MIYAJIMA, one of those engaged in fishing enterprise in northern seas. Japanese attention began to be directed to Saghalien as a fishing ground in the year 1895, the reason being that the Hokkaido fisheries had begun to show a marked falling off. Prices had steadily appreciated yet the yearly yield of the fisheries remained always in the neighbourhood of 10 millions of yen, the increased values being counterbalanced by the decreased production. One great obstacle to prosperity in Hokkaido is that the fishermen and the capitalists have no sound system of co-operation. As soon as ever a fisherman makes a little money, he turns capitalist, gladly abandoning the precarious occupation of fishing. The capitalists have two methods of working. In one case they undertake the sale of the fish in consideration of a commission of from 3 to 5 per cent., and having entered into this agreement they lend the fishermen a certain sum for which they charge from 1 to 3 per cent. monthly. This is called the busage method. In the other case the fisherman sells his catch in advance and thus obtains capital. It is called the avata-hō, because it resembles a sale of vegetables when they only are at the stage of sprouting. There is, of course, an element of gambling in such an arrangement. For example, if a man expects to make a catch which will be worth 1,200 yen, he sells it beforehand for 800 yen, and he then stands pledged to hand over 1,200 yen worth of fish either this season or next. If he be unfortunate one year he must be unusually successful the next in order to make up the deficiency. The result is that the Hokkaido fishermen are usually very poor, the major part of their gains going into the pockets of the capitalists. This state of affairs, combined with a steady diminution in the yearly take of fish induced men to turn their eyes to Saghalien in 1895, and at first they found the fisheries there very profitable. But the China-Japan war directed Russia's attention to Saghalien, and having come to the conclusion that foreign influence must not be suffered to establish itself there, she began to adopt measures against the Japanese, chiefly under pretext of protecting the fisheries, which was probably a just plea. The story of Japanese enterprise in the waters of the island may be learned from the following table:—

	Number of Fisheries.	Number of Companies.	Number of Employees.	Quantity taken in koku .
1899 .....	222	52	4,424	77,602
1900 .....	126	38	2,917	57,357
1901 .....	117	37	3,487	68,669
1902 .....	107	35	3,704	84,585
1903 .....	99	30	3,931	113,639
		Value in yen .	Total Profit to Fishermen in koku .
1899.....		1,079,313	218,000
1900.....		769,184	210,000
1901.....		801,929	210,000
1902.....		846,139	162,000
1903.....		1,192,404	370,000

The steady diminution of fisheries and companies is shown plainly, and if there is a considerable increase in the nett profits as well as in the take, it is because of improved methods and apparatus. Evidently had the number of fisheries and companies undergone no diminution from 1899, the enterprise would have assumed very large dimensions. In the year 1901 the Governor General of the Amur region forbade any fishing permits to be thereafter given to aliens and provided that those already granted might remain valid pending some further special legislation. Of course under such circumstances Japanese fishermen could not feel any security.

There is a marked difference between the richness of the Saghalien waters and that of the Hokkaido waters. In 1903, an altogether exceptional season, the Hokkaido take reached 1,073,493 koku, but in 1904 the figure was only 700,697 koku. The normal catch may be put at 800,000 koku having a value of 10 millions of yen, and as 200,000 men are employed, the average per head is about 50 yen. But in Saghalien in 1903 the total take (Russian and Japanese) aggregated 226,568 koku, and the value was 2,717,916 yen, the number of hands employed being 7,182. Hence the take per man was 31.55 koku, worth 328 yen, which is 7½ times greater than the Hokkaido figure.

Undoubtedly a cardinal reason for the decreasing richness of the Hokkaido waters is that no really effective system of preservation is in operation. The Russians managed Saghalien much better, and unless greater attention is paid to the Hokkaido seas they must become comparatively barren.

After southern Saghalien had fallen into Japanese possession, the Government decided that Japanese subjects already having fisheries there should be regarded as possessing prior claims, and that the other fisheries should be put up at public auction. The results are shown in the following table:—

	Fisheries.	Rent in yen .	Average rent per fishery in yen .	Companies.
Having priority of right .....	108	62,289	576.75	32
Permits obtained at auction .....	112	480,046	4,295.94	57
Reserved Fisheries .....	30	—	—	—

Looking at the comparatively great price paid for the fisheries put up to auction, it seems inevitable that these waters will have to be exploited very vigorously if any profit is to be made.

Referring to the question of confirming any leases granted to Russian subjects by their Government in Saghalien waters prior to the peace, it has been alleged that the fisheries in question are of much less value than those worked by Japanese. That is apparently a false estimate, as the following table shows:—

	Persons employed.	Catch in yen .
Japanese Fisheries in Saghalien—
1903 .....	3,931	1,192,404
Russian Fisheries in Saghalien—
1903 .....	3,251	1,200,000

There is reason to think that the Japanese Government has decided not to recognise the leases granted by the Russian Authorities prior to the Portsmouth peace, but the evidence on which this inference is based is still obscure.

We find it stated by other vernacular journals that the sum estimated as the revenue to be officially derived from the Saghalien fisheries is 540,000 yen annually, and that 270,000 yen was collected by last October. The other moiety was expected to be paid in by the end of May, but only 180,000 has actually been collected thus far. The sum looked for by next October is put at 150,000 yen, but evidently these figures do not tally. The main point is, however, that the total revenue for the current year—including rent of land and business tax—is put at 480,000 yen, to which 400,000 yen voted by the Diet has to be added. Thus the civil administration will have 880,000 yen to spend. This takes no account of agriculture, mining, or timber-felling, but there is great doubt as to whether these resources can be made profitable for the present at all events.

THE JAPANESE ARMY.

WE constantly hear of Western nations taking advantage of the teaching of the Russo-Japanese war to introduce changes into their military and naval systems. The Japanese themselves, we may be very sure, who know more about the lessons of the war than any outsiders know, are not failing to profit by what they have learned. From time to time references appear in Tokyo journals to this or that improvement effected or contemplated, the general inference suggested being that there is no little activity in responsible quarters. A cardinal fact demonstrated by the war is that Japan must have a more powerful type of field-artillery and better horses to drag the guns. To re-arm the artillery of a great army, however, is no light task either on account of the time it demands or because of the expense it involves, and the provision of a higher type of horses is, in Japan's case, a scarcely less formidable undertaking for she has to go abroad to get them. More pressing still is the restoration of the former armament to its old efficiency, for that must be undertaken in the first place unless—which is improbable—the ordnance and small-arm experts are prepared to supply new types of weapons as quickly as they could manufacture the old. Then again changes of establishment are deemed not less essential than changes of armament. They take the form of improvements in existing units or creation of new ones. To the second category belong the organization of a body—probably a regiment—of siege artillery and one of heavy artillery; to the first belong increases of the telegraph and telephone corps and the raising of the cavalry to the strength of a division. All this is said to be going on, and it is further stated that from the commencement of next year the three-years' system of service with the colours will be changed to two years. This last alteration should not be placed strictly in the sequel of the war. It had been long on the tapis. Yet we can not forget that prominent military officers who, prior to the war, opposed any such change, now openly advocate it, and from rumours which have obtained publicity it is understood that men who had received only two years' training or even less proved themselves thoroughly effective on campaign, thus dispelling all the doubts of the advocates of long service with the colours. An obvious effect of this reform is to increase the potential war-strength of the army. For whereas, under the old system, only one-third of a division's complement had to be drafted into the ranks each year, one-half will have to be drafted under the new arrangement, and thus for every thirty-three men that passed into the reserves when the three-years' rule was in force, fifty will pass when the two-years' plan is adopted. Hence, unless some reduction be effected in the period of the various reserves' liability for service, it is plain that there will be a proportionately greater number of men to call on in the event of any national emergency. At present, however, we do not hear anything of such a reduction.

Everything points, therefore, to a larger and better equipped army than ever, and though that result follows naturally, nay even as a matter of necessity, it will doubtless be adduced by some critics as evidence of aggressive designs on this Empire's part. Nothing is further from the truth, in our opinion. We should hesitate to allege that the Japanese are entirely free from apprehensions as to a war of revenge undertaken by Russia. At all events the probability is that some of those in high places deem it their imperative duty to be prepared for such a contingency. A war of revenge, however, is not easily conceivable among the events of the near future. The more it is considered the less probability does it present. So many great preliminaries are necessary. There is first the question of transport. The trans-Asian railway would have to be doubled, a costly and tedious work. Then huge depôts would have to be formed at Harbin and in its vicinity, and immense bodies of troops would have to be gradually massed there. Finally, a fleet would be needed to keep Vladivostock open. How many years would all this occupy and what possibility would there be of Russia hiding her hand throughout the prosecution of such a programme? History, too, does not indicate that wars of revenge are common sequels of wars of defeat. The passions calling for vengeance cool as the years elapse that preparations to exact it occupy, and thus happily an automatic preventive is applied. Nevertheless it would be most unwise on Japan's part to invite reprisals by conspicuous lack of preparations to avert them. Further there is the call of the alliance. To that Japan must always be in a position to respond. If war broke out under the conditions defined in the document, she would surely have a weighty task to undertake and she must make herself ready to undertake it at a moment's notice. Thus considered, the care she is devoting to her army assumes a perfectly explicable aspect and need not excite any alarmist conjectures. No prudent Power would do less under the circumstances.

THE WEALTH OF JAPAN AND TAXATION.

THE Keizai Zasshi says that employing materials collected between 1902 and 1904, a certain statistician has made the following calculation of the wealth of Japan:

	Yen.
Lands .....	6,023,771,000
Buildings .....	1,961,363,000
Furniture .....	976,300,000
Railways .....	283,127,000
Merchandise .....	289,855,000
Bullion .....	58,578,000
Miscellaneous .....	3,426,810,000
	13,020,807,000

This shows a wealth of 290 yen per head of population. It will be observed that the calculation is in broad outline. We are not told how each separate item is assessed or what items are included under "miscellaneous." Without this knowledge it is impossible to form any idea of the justice of the figures. Our own calculation is that, on the very lowest bases, the values of the rice-fields, the farm lands and the building grounds aggregate 5,661,591,000 yen, and on that hypothesis the Keizai's figure allows only 362,180,000 yen as the value of all the remaining territory, an evidently inadequate estimate. As to buildings again, there are approximately 9,707,000 residences in Japan (allowing one to every 5 units of population). These the Keizai's statistician has valued at 200 yen per building. But surely that is too little? We should be disposed to substitute 350 yen, considering that only a hovel can be erected with that sum. But at 350 yen the value of buildings becomes 3,397,450,000 yen, instead of 1,962,363,000 yen as given by our contemporary. House-furniture is estimated at 100 yen per building on the average, and the 5,000 miles of railway owned by the nation are set down at little more than one half of their cost price. As for "bullion," if it includes gold, silver and copper coins, it should be 235 million yen instead of 58½ millions.

The Keizai then gives a comparative table showing the wealth of the various countries of the world:—

Country.	Total Wealth in yen .	Population.	Wealth per head in yen .
Japan.....	13,560,807,000	48,534,000	290
England .....	105,440,400,000	39,830,000	2,647
France .....	86,890,700,000	38,520,000	2,255
Germany .....	73,222,500,000	52,480,000	1,395
Russia .....	56,624,400,000	106,190,000	533
America.....	125,161,660,000	62,600,000	1,999
Austria .....	41,004,600,000	43,460,000	943
Italy .....	28,312,700,000	31,290,000	904
Spain .....	24,407,500,000	17,970,000	1,358
Portugal.....	3,905,200,000	5,050,000	773
Switzerland ..	5,369,650,000	4,960,000	1,082
Sweden and Norway .....	1,952,600,000	2,050,000	952
Belgium.....	10,153,520,000	6,500,000	1,562
Greece .....	2,343,120,000	2,430,000	964

Japan, according to this reckoning, occupies far the lowest place. Even Russia, proverbially a poor country, has a population nearly twice as wealthy.

Passing to the question of taxation, our contemporary notes that while the wealth of the country aggregates 13,000 million yen approximately, the total taxes levied by the Central Government and the communes are 278,436,813 yen, so that the taxes amount to 2.3 per cent. of the wealth. If, then, we assume that the nation's income is 5 per cent. of its accumulated wealth, we find that it pays very nearly one-half of its whole income in taxes. Moreover, the taxes here set down are those of 1904 with regard to the Treasury's levies, and those of 1902 with regard to local burdens. But in 1905 there was a still further increase of the former class of taxes because of the war. The Keizai says that another 100 millions should be added on that account, in which case the taxes would aggregate 398½ million yen, being considerably more than one-half of the total revenue.

The Keizai Zasshi does not in any way vouch for the above estimate of national wealth, but it justly refers to the importance of the subject and urges that it demands close investigation. We confess to some surprise, however, at the looseness of the methods employed. For example, in calculating the people's fiscal burdens, no distinction is made between direct and indirect imposts, nor yet between taxes and state revenue. The direct taxes in 1905 aggregated 182 million yen in round numbers, and if to these the local taxes (51 millions) be added, the figure for the national burden becomes 233 millions, instead of 298½. But without going into details, is it not quite obvious that there must be some gross mistake in a calculation which represents the people as paying nearly one-half of their income to the tax-collector? Is that confirmed by the experience of any one of us, and would it not be much nearer the truth to say that we pay one-twentieth of our incomes at the outside? Observe the arithmetical result of the Keizai's conclusions. They indicate that a man with an income of 5,000 yen yearly pays at least 2,000 yen in taxes. He does nothing of the kind; nothing at all approximating to that. Even a payment of 250 yen, or one-twentieth of his income, would be above the average. If that be true of the upper classes, and it certainly is true, our estimate of the sums contributed to the Treasury by the lower classes must be still smaller, for in point of fact labourers, mechanics, small farmers and petty tradesmen escape with very petty disbursements. At all events we shall be quite on the safe side if we assume that the direct taxes paid by the nation at present represent at most one-twentieth of its income. Let us see then how that works out, taking the figures for 1905:—

DIRECT TAXES.		Million yen .
Land Tax .....		82½
Income Tax .....		18½
Business Tax.....		18
Local Taxes .....		51
Total .....		169½

We omit such taxes as the customs dues, the impost on sake, the fees for postage and telegraphs, the tobacco monopoly, and the State's revenue from railways. All these, so far as the people are concerned, can not be properly classed as taxes, and we exclude them in order to obtain a minimum figure for the national wealth. We have then this result, namely, that 170 million yen (omitting fractions) represents one-twentieth of the nation's income. Hence that income is 3,400 millions of yen, and if we assume this to be 5 per cent. of the nation's accumulated wealth, we arrive at the result that the latter is 68,000 millions, instead of 13,560 millions as calculated by the Keizai Zasshi's statistician. We do not for a moment pretend that our calculation is quite accurate, but we do claim that it is much nearer the truth than the calculation of the Keizai Zasshi's statistician. Obviously no thoughtful person can for one moment accept an estimate which represents the people of a country as paying nearly one-half of their income in the form of taxes, when we know as a matter of fact that they are not paying anything of the kind, and when we know also as a matter of fact that they are not at all inconvenienced by the weight of taxation. We need scarcely point out that there is one defective element in our calculation, namely, the taxes paid out of wages and salaries which should not be counted as part of the nation's income-producing resources. Into this point we do not enter as we are dealing with approximations only.

JAPANESE RAILWAYS.

LOOKING at the detailed items of the Budget we find that the Government intends to spend 11,678,607 yen upon the improvement of existing railways in Japan proper during the course of the next four years, and 79,014,105 on construction during the ten-year-period from 1906 to 1915. The details as to the improvement fund are these:—

	Yen.
Total originally voted for improvements.	42,289,740
Expended up to the close of 1905.....	30,611,133
To be still expended .....	11,678,607
This last sum is to be paid out as follows:—
Fiscal year.	Yen.
1906-7 .....	3,000,000
1907-8 .....	3,500,000
1908-9 .....	3,500,000
1909-10 .....	1,678,607

With regard to the construction fund the facts are:—

	Yen.
Total construction fund for Japan proper as fixed in the post-bellum programme of 1896 .....	139,549,296
Supplementary Appropriation .....	26,332,680
	165,881,976

Expended up to the close of 1905 ...	94,401,900
To be still expended .....	71,480,076

The details of the construction outlays during the ten year period, ending in 1906 are these:—

	Yen.
Outlays in 1906-7 .....	5,032,883
do 1907-8 .....	9,500,000
do 1908-9 .....	9,500,000
do 1909-10 .....	9,500,000
do 1910-11 .....	9,489,795

	Yen.
Outlays in 1911-12 .....	9,490,794
do 1912-13 .....	9,350,000
do 1913-14 .....	4,844,763
do 1914-15 .....	3,500,000
do 1915-16 .....	1,271,841

The railways to be constructed and the total outlays for each are:—

	Yen.
Fukushima-Awamori line, to be finished in 1911.....	5,200,641
Hachioji-Nagoya line, to be finished in 1916 .....	17,783,750
Yatsushiro-Kagoshima line, to be finished in 1911 .....	7,109,298
Fukuchiyama-Sakai-Imaichi line, to be finished in 1914 .....	21,359,377
Fukuchiyama-Sonobe-Maizuru line, to be finished in 1911 .....	5,650,454
Toyama-Naoetsu line, to be finished in 1914 .....	14,376,556
Total .....	71,480,076

The above, it will be perceived, relates to the railway system in the main island and Kyushu only. There are also expenditures in the northern island, Hokkaido, namely:—

	Yen.
Appropriation for Hokkaido, post-bellum programme of 1896 .....	18,562,050
Expended out of the above up to close of 1904 .....	11,028,021
Still remaining to be spent .....	7,234,029

The detailed manner of expending this last figure is:—

	Yen.
To be spent on First Period Railways which will be completed by 1911 .....	7,530,197
To be spent on surveys for Second Period Lines .....	3,832
Total .....	7,534,029

These figures show that the Treasury will expend a total sum of 79,014,105 yen on railway construction in the whole Empire, apart from Formosa, and apart also from Manchuria and Korea, during the next ten years, together with 11,678,607 yen on improvements, making a total of 90,692,712 yen, which sum, according to the programme, is to be obtained by floating public-works bonds. This average of over 9 million yen yearly is probably as much as the Treasury can conveniently appropriate on account of improvement and construction of State lines. It represents an addition of from 70 to 80 miles annually to the present system, or from 700 to 800 miles in ten years. On the other hand, if that were to be the limit of railway progress in Japan, the outlook would not be very bright. Hitherto the work of construction has been carried on by the Government and the people in the ratio of 1 to 4½ approximately, and the interesting question now is, what will be the ratio during the next decade. It is here that the operation of the State-purchase Law creates some uneasiness. The Government has announced its determination not to grant charters in future for any private lines other than those intended to meet purely local requirements; that is to say, small branch roads. The formation of new companies for railway-construction enterprise is therefore unlikely to be at all considerable. On the other hand; the existing private companies will refrain from undertaking any extensions in the face of pending nationalization. If then the Government, adhering to the leisurely programme suggested by the Peers' amendments of the Railway Bill, devotes ten years to the task of buying up the roads, a task which will probably absorb all its energy in the direction of railways, the net result will be that instead of an addition of 180 miles annually, as has been the average during the past 21 years,—that is to say, since private capitalists began to embark seriously in this kind of work—the figure will be reduced to some 70 miles. From that point of view it is obviously desirable that no time should be lost by the State in completing the purchase, so that the work of extension may be carried on vigorously. Here, however, another consideration suggests itself. What quantity of railway bonds can be conveniently floated every year? Speaking in round numbers, the sums that will have to be floated to carry out the above programme will be as follow:—

In the fiscal year 1906-7 .....	8½ millions.
" " 1907-8 .....	14½ "
" " 1908-9 .....	14½ "
" " 1909-10 .....	14½ "
" " 1910-11 .....	12½ "
" " 1911-12 .....	9½ "
" " 1912-13 .....	9½ "
" " 1913-14 .....	5 "
" " 1914-15 .....	3½ "
" " 1915-16 .....	1½ "

In order merely to maintain the rate of progress recorded while private enterprise was unchecked, the Government must construct 170 or 180 miles of road yearly instead of limiting itself to the official figure of 70 or 80 miles, and that would mean the floating of 11 or 12 million yen worth of bonds annually in addition to the figures tabulated above. There is no question, of course, as to the wisdom or advantage of vigorously pushing this enterprise, but though private capitalists have been willing enough to subscribe to the funds of companies formed by themselves, it may be doubted whether they will sink 20 or 25 million yen yearly in railway bonds carrying only a comparatively low rate of interest. It would seem then that one of two courses dictates itself to the Government, namely, either to reconcile themselves to a great diminution of railway enterprise or to go to the foreign market for money. The latter plan will present no difficulties if the railways be offered as securities.

WHY NOT?

SOMETIMES the Japanese astonish us by a display of sentiment which is unreasonable. At a meeting held in the house of the Premier last Tuesday there were present Marquis ITO, Marquis YAMAGATA, Marquis OYAMA, Count INOUE, Count KATSURA, Baron YAMAMOTO, Viscount KODAMA, and all the Ministers of State, together with two Vice-Ministers and three other officials. It will be seen that in addition to the men actually engaged in carrying on the administration, the meeting was attended by the five Genro—for Marquis OYAMA is now assigned to that category—and by three members of the last Cabinet, including its Premier. The composition of this assemblage has evoked some hostile criticism in the columns of the Tokyo press. "Here are the Genro again," say the critics, "and apparently two others have been added to their ranks, namely, Count KATSURA and Baron YAMAMOTO." Why not? Why on earth should any objection be raised to such an arrangement? Evidently the answer is that the judgement of some Japanese publicists is weakened by the habit of imitation. They take their models of administrative organization from foreign countries, and such docile copyists are they that any departure from the original revolts them as improper and indefensible. In Western methods of government there is not to be found any instance—at least none occurs to our memory—of a Ministry in office inviting its predecessors to unite with it in discussing and elaborating plans for the progressive development of the country. An Englishman, for example, would be astonished and even outraged were he asked to witness the spectacle of Messrs. CHAMBERLAIN and BALFOUR, with other prominent men among the "outs," being invited to join a conference of the BANNERMAN Ministry for the purpose of shaping Great Britain's policy in the presence of any great national occasion. A precedent, then, being undiscoverable in Occidental archives, these Japanese cavillers are disposed to denounce such a practice as altogether incongruous. Nevertheless if the question were plainly put to these publicists whether they hold that Japan must abstain from everything good should it happen to be novel, they would ridicule the idea. Yet that is the logical issue of their contention. Any one who quietly reflects on the composition of last Tuesday's meeting of statesmen in Tokyo, can not choose but congratulate Japan on furnishing another practical proof of her people's devotion to country in comparison with their love of self. Would it not be an enormous improvement on the present methods of English administration if the lines of party cleavage could be completely obliterated in seasons of great national importance, so that all available ability should be enlisted in the service of the State? How greatly such a system would be superior to that which imposes the responsibility on one group of statesmen alone, and incidentally drives the others to dissent and even obstruction. It would not be well, of course, that Opposition should be paralysed for general purposes, but in special crises where party is nothing and patriotism everything, the system now pursued in Japan and not unlikely to become permanent here, is unquestionably excellent. Yet because it happens to be an innovation unsanctioned by Western usage, it provokes condemnation. Japan's achievements entitle us to be surprised at these displays of unintelligent conservatism, and to expect that whatever form constitutional government may have taken in other lands, she will be wise enough to welcome any developments resulting from her own political atmosphere. No one among her people is shocked by the idea that Christianity may have to be modified before it suits Japanese nature, yet among her publicists we find men so slavishly wedded to Western administrative models that they condemn every deviation from them, however admirable its results. History will assuredly say that this Meiji habit of combining all the Empire's available statecraft on great occasions deserves unstinted applause, and will permanently ridicule the men who opposed it because, forsooth, of its novelty from an alien point of view. Japan has borrowed constitutional government from the West, but she has not pledged herself to eschew all improvement of the original.

WEDDING AT ST. ANDREWS' CHURCH, TOKYO.

The wedding took place on Tuesday last in St. Andrew's Church, Tokyo, of Mr. James Stewart Cartwright, eldest son of Mr. James Strachan Cartwright, K.C., of Toronto, and of Miss Hildegard Marie, eldest daughter of the late Mr. Otto von Fallot-Gmeiner and step-daughter of Rev. Arthur Lloyd, M.A. The church had been beautifully decorated by Mrs. Warton with white azaleas, arum lilies, iris, roses and white carnations, varied with greenery, particularly maple, in compliment to the bride-groom as a native of Canada. The ceremony was performed by the Rt. Rev. Bishop Awdry, D.D., assisted by Rev. C. H. Shortt, M.A. The bride was given away by her step-father, the Rev. A. Lloyd. The bridesmaids were the three sisters of the bride, the best man was Mr. Fletcher, and the groomsmen were Messrs. H. A. Poole, and C. von Fallot, and Commander Sasaki, I.J.N.

The bride wore a dress of white satin, princess style, embroidered in gold, with trimmings of chiffon and orange blossom. The bridesmaids were attired in white muslin with insertions of embroidery, and blue chiffon hats with forget-me-nots.

Immediately after the ceremony a reception was held at the residence of the bride's parents, at which some 150 guests, including many Japanese, were present. At 4.30 p.m. the newly-married couple left for Hayama to pass the honeymoon. Some forty of the younger guests remained for the evening and dancing was kept up till 10 p.m.

DEATH OF MR. T. C. COWEN.

We announce with regret the death of Mr. Thomas C. Cowen, who spent the last sixteen years of his life on newspaper work in the Far East. Mr. Cowen, who was a native of Newcastle, began his career on the Newcastle Chronicle and came out in 1890 to one of the Straits papers. Two years later he joined the Hongkong Telegraph and when the late Mr. Fraser-Smith, the then proprietor and editor, went on a prolonged visit to Australia, he was left in charge of that journal. On the outbreak of war between China and Japan in 1894 he went to the front as representative of the Telegraph and a syndicate of Australian papers, and later he was appointed war correspondent of The Times and was present when Weihaiwei and Port Arthur fell into the hands of the victorious islanders. After the war he was engaged for some time on the Kobe Chronicle and later he again joined the Hongkong Telegraph, under the proprietorship of Mr. Francis. When the Hispano-American war broke out the spirit of adventure was reawakened and immediately after the Battle of Manila Bay he was again on the move, this time bound for Manila as Reuter's war correspondent. He saw the rest of the fighting there and at its close founded the Manila Times. This he sold out of when it was fairly established and turned his steps towards new fields. He started a newspaper in Shanghai but did not stay long in the model settlement. He next went through the Russo-Japanese war as a correspondent; assisted Mr. E. T. Bethell to establish the Korea Daily News, re-visited China and finally returned to Japan. He was for a time on the staff of the Japan Gazette and later joined the Japan Times, being on the staff of our Tokyo contemporary at his death. Mr. Cowen was never well after his return from the war; his eyesight began to grow gradually worse and at length his brain was so affected that he had to go to the Akasaka Hospital. It was known in Yokohama that he was seriously ill but so suddenly fatal an ending will come as a shock to the many who had met him and known him. The deceased gentleman had barely attained his thirty-sixth year. A brother is in Tientsin and with him deep sympathy will be felt by all who knew and admired the marked gifts of the late Mr. Cowen.

The funeral of the late Mr. Thomas C. Cowen took place in Aoyama Cemetery, Tokyo, on Thursday afternoon. The cortege left the Akasaka hospital about 2.30 and proceeded to St. Andrew's Church, Shiba, where the service was conducted by Rev. L. B. Cholmondely, M.A., who also officiated impressively at the grave side after the funeral reached the Aoyama Cemetery. There was a fairly large attendance of friends to pay a last tribute of respect to the memory of the deceased, several journeying from Yokohama for the purpose.

The pall-bearers were Messrs. S. Komor, S. H. Somerton, H. O. Palmer, J. Macbeth, S. E. Unite, and among those present were Drs. Whitney and McCloy and some members of the Japan Times staff as well as Mr. Zumoto, the ex-editor of that publication.

There were numerous floral tributes, including wreaths from the Japan Gazette, Japan Mail, Japan Herald, Japan Daily Advertiser, Japan Chronicle, Eastern World, Weekly Box of Curios, Japan Times, etc.

THE FISHERMAN'S SONG.

(Written by UNKICHI KAWAI for the "Japan Mail.")

I.
Gaily the fisherman
Out on the sea,
Sings as he swings to his oar;
Stout is his heart
And strong is his voice,
And he sings as the wild waves roar.
With a yasshoi-ho!
And a yasshoi-ho!
Oh, hear the wild waves roar.

II.
Only a fisherman
Out on the sea,
With death and danger near:
Only a plank
Twixt him and the grave,
Yet his stout heart knows no fear.
With a yasshoi-ho!
And a yasshoi-ho!
He sings with danger near.

III.
Only a fisherman
Out on the sea,
With thoughts of home in his heart,
Of his wee blind lass,
Of his lad who's lame,
Yet he acts his daily part,
With a yasshoi-ho!
And a yasshoi-ho!
Oh, there's joy in the fisherman's heart.

IV.
Only a fisherman
Out on the sea,
With a heart that's gay and free,
For his work's his life
And he loves his wife,
And he steers for the open sea.
With a yasshoi-ho!
And a yasshoi-ho!
Oh, the fisherman's life for me.

Odawara, May 19th, 1906.

THE BOOKSHELF.

Western Culture in Eastern Lands (a Comparison of the Methods adopted by England and Russia in the Middle East) by ARMINIUS VAMBÉRY, London, John Murray. Price 12s. net.

A WORK by Professor Vambéry is always worth one's undivided attention. Long years ago he won his spurs as an Orientalist, when he wandered in disguise through the lands where the religion of Islam is paramount. Those were the days when Bokhara, Khiva, Samarkand and Yarkand were indeed sealed cities, before Russia had set out on her last great impulse of expansion in the direction of the Pamirs; before men had yet finished speaking of the Crimean War as an event of yesterday. And Vambéry has continued to be an observant critic of happenings in those regions ever since. The Hungarian traveller, author and publicist has ever been a friend of England and in his new volume he is at no pains to disguise his feelings. But this predilection does not render him blind to the merits of the other great nation whom he discusses in his thoughtful pages. He freely acknowledges all the good that Russia has accomplished in Central Asia in the way of reducing to comparative law-abiding order the nations she has conquered, but the path of her peace is hard to tread. No one has a profounder confidence in the greatness of his destiny than the Russian, and holding the belief that to him alone belongs the future he endeavours to make all that come within the pale of his dominion entertain the same sublime faith. With this end in view he accordingly does his best to absorb every nation and people whom he subdues, wiping out their nationality and making them very Russians as well as subjects of the Great White Czar of Muscovy. In South Russia, after many centuries, this policy has been fairly successful in accomplishing the national object, but in Asia it has proved otherwise. Russia has succeeded in planting her law, but she has not succeeded in changing the Turkistan peoples into Russians. Her failures are apparent to every traveller, but to herself this knowledge is denied, as perhaps is only natural. Fiercely the nations and remnants of nations who have come beneath the shadow of Russia's mighty empire during the past eighty years cling to their own individual national characteristics and religion, resisting all attempts to alter them by education, by religious propaganda, or by sheer compulsion. So though Russian law prevails, and one may travel nowadays in safety and at ease through lands where a few years ago one might not go unless under powerful protection and prepared to suffer hardships indescribable, seething discontent prevails. But Russia is not tired of the struggle by any means, and Professor Vambéry is of opinion that in time she may accomplish her object, wear down the opposition by force of sheer ponderosity and tenacity of purpose and make the native of central Asia as characteristically Russian as the dweller in St. Petersburg and Moscow. Two things Professor Vambéry notices with sorrow, and as a change for the worse since first he wandered through these lands, and that is the spread of prostitution and drinking, the twin curses which inevitably follow in the wake of Russia's armies,—as residents in the Farther East enlightened by the experiences of the past few years know only too well. Fifty years ago, says our author, these things were almost unknown in Central Asia, now they lie like a plague upon the land. Prof. Vambéry thinks that Russia has come to the end of her expansion in Central Asia and that henceforth she will devote herself to consolidating her powers and to the Russification of the conquered peoples, giving up the dream of invading India, and avoiding the absorption of Afghanistan and southern Persia. Time alone can prove whether his forecast is correct.

Very sympathetic, yet shrewdly critical withal, is that portion of the volume devoted to an examination of the cultural influence of England upon her vast dependency of India. He points out the increase in the well-being of whole myriads of people since the consolidation of British rule in the peninsula, but admits that some of the methods adopted have been faulty.

He thinks too great a liberty has been allowed to the native press; that, in fact, uncontrolled liberty has given place to license both with the pen and with the tongue: that England's methods (in contrast to Russia's) of jealously guarding the immemorial rights of the natives in matters of religion, law and custom has led to the development of a fierce spirit of nationality among the different races, a spirit hitherto unknown. Herein England, he thinks, is manufacturing a rod for her own back. At the same time he holds that the English method is more humane than the Russian and perhaps time will furnish its justification. One hears more of the discontent among the proletariat of India because it has been provided with a thousand channels of expression by its own rulers; in the lands governed by Russia public opinion has not the faintest chance of being heard; it is a forbidden thing.

A good third of the volume is devoted to a discussion of the Turkish problem and the influence exercised by Constantinople on the rest of the Islamic world. Prof. Vambéry has associated with the leaders of the party known as the Young Turks has helped them in their propaganda, but has come at last to acknowledge that they have accomplished very little. Still a new life is stirring in Mohammedan lands and no nation is more responsible for this awakening than England. What will be the result of her reforms in India and Egypt? Will the new wine which she is introducing burst asunder the old bottles to the undoing of herself and Europe? Does a Renaissance await the followers of the Prophet, leading to a second over-running of all the lands which they once held in thrall? Does there exist a possibility of Europe seeing another field of Tours and Vienna trembling again at the approach of the cavalry of Islam? Our author is not prepared to answer the question definitely, though he scouts the idea of a "Yellow Peril" from the still more remote East deluging the lands of Christendom.

In the Days of the Dandies, by LORD LAMINGTON. London, Eveleigh Nash; price 3/6.

ABOUT the year 1890 appeared a series of papers in Blackwood's Magazine which attracted a good deal of attention by reason of their charm. For awhile curiosity was aroused as to their author, as they appeared anonymously, but now the secret is out, and in the beautifully printed book in which Mr. Eveleigh Nash has collected them we read the name of the writer. Lord Lamington was a distinguished essayist and politician in his day, a member of the Young England party, a friend of Sir Robert Peel, an intimate of the houses of the English and Scottish nobility when Disraeli was still a young man. Such a personage undoubtedly had a good storehouse of recollections to draw upon in his declining years, and the pity is that he turned his hand to writing his autobiography when death was so near at hand. But we are very grateful for the brief portion that he has left behind. As a reviewer in the Times writes, this is gossip of the best. It has made us long so much to have been the publisher who asked the questions which led to Lord Lamington's entertaining replies; he should not have escaped us so soon; we would have been importunate; we would have drawn him on a thousand more subjects; a new name should have been ready the instant his memory seemed approaching exhaustion on the last. For years and years Lord Lamington ought to have been encouraged to write like this. What could be more charming than his reminiscences of Lady Jersey, Count D'Orsay, Urquhart of Watford; Lord Eglinton (of tournament fame), the Dukes of Hamilton and Atholl, Sir Robert Peel and the men who played so prominent a part in the parliaments of the mid Victorian era. Lord Lamington tells in the course of his gossip the story of the romantic career of a Yorkshireman, a groom named Ward, who obtained a title of nobility, and achieved European celebrity, about the middle of last century. This man owed his rise to the patronage of the Duke of Parma, to whose stables he had come with some horses from England. A remark, which the Duke overheard him make, proved his introduction to royal favour, and being a man of amazing ability, he so improved his chances that within a short time he was the chief subject in the State of Parma, and was looked upon as one of the cleverest diplomatists, financiers, and ministers of the day. The close of Baron Ward's life was not so successful as its opening. To quote Lord Lamington:—

When the reigning prince—the same who was at Eglinton—was assassinated in the gardens of the Palace at Parma in 1854, his widow, the Grand Duchess of Parma (Mademoiselle), imagined that Ward intended to seize the sovereignty. There was really no reason to suppose that he even meditated such treachery, although his popularity was so great that had the attempt been made there is little question but it would have been attended with success. The Duchess did not give him the chance; for no sooner had the news of the Prince's death arrived, than Ward's house was surrounded with Austrian troops and all intercourse with the town refused him. Subsequently he was banished the territory, and had to claim the protection of Austria, where he was made most welcome. I forget whether he ever had any office under the Austrian Government, but his opinion was very highly valued, and he was treated with the greatest consideration. But the change was too great, from the wide authority he had exercised at Parma. He was another proof of the proverb, "When the house is rooled in, then the grave opens," for he fell into a state of dejection, and did not long survive his exile.

A portrait of Count D'Orsay accompanies the volume, which is further enriched with a sketch of Lord Lamington written by his daughter which gives a delightful picture of the closing years of a Scottish nobleman's life.

Pigafetta's Narrative of Magellan's Famous Voyage.

AFTER Columbus had rent the veil that shut out the Western world from the sight of Europe, exploration along the east coasts of the two continents, North America and South America, across the narrow part which we call "Central America," and up and down the west coasts of the new hemisphere, went on rapidly, until it soon became known that there was another broad ocean to cross before reaching the Indies by sailing west from Europe: how that might be accomplished was ere long indicated by the knowledge gained of the shape of South America, and of an almost certain entrance into the "South Seas" around the point of that continent. Among the accounts of these explorations, there are innumerable instances of daring, as well as of recklessness, all of them are absorbingly interesting, but, unquestionably, the greatest of them was the performance of Ferdinand Magellan (Fernao Magalhaes), perhaps the greatest navigator of the modern age, (giving to that phrase rather a wide meaning,) on the expedition that disclosed secrets which had been so long hidden from all but those who lived in those strange lands and on those remote, lonely islands in seas that had, until then, been peopled, (in the imaginations of all Europeans,) by beings not human, sometimes less than man, often more than human. Magellan's expedition is correctly spoken of as the first circumnavigation of the globe, for so it was, but it must be remembered that he himself was not permitted to complete the voyage, for he was murdered on one of the East India islands. Yet he had himself encompassed the globe, for he had previously, under Portuguese auspices, rounded the Cape of Good Hope and gone east as far as the point which he subsequently reached by going west from Europe, through the strait which has since borne his name.

It is literally correct to call the voyage of the Victoria, that was the name of Magellan's flagship, the first voyage around the world, and that is the way Antonio Pigafetta, who accompanied Magellan, entitles his account, as historiographer of the expedition. Pigafetta's account is not only the most valuable and authentic of the few contemporary and early narratives of the famous voyage, but it is also the only source of information for many details of that voyage. Probably no other historical document is more universally accepted by students as the final authority regarding the actual events with which it deals. It is passing strange that this journal has never, until just now, been published in full, and the world owes a good deal to the Arthur H. Clark Company, Cleveland, Ohio, U.S.A., for its enterprise in giving it to the public, with an unexpurgated English translation. The relation appears in volumes 55 and 54 of "The Philippine Islands," a collection of translations of original documents relating to the archipelago from 1493 to 1898, which that same firm is now publishing, but it was felt that such a large work, it will contain fifty-four volumes, would naturally be taken by public libraries and a few individual subscribers, and would be hidden away, more or less, from those private individuals who feel an interest in the subject. Consequently, in order to make this interesting narrative accessible to others, a separate edition, limited to 350 copies, of the narrative alone has been prepared. The original text of the Ambrosian manuscript is given with an English translation on opposite pages, annotated and with complete biography and a separate index, together with portraits, and facsimiles of the original maps and plates, three-volumes, small octavo.

The value and interest of the relation are evident by the various manuscript versions, and they were recognised by its publication in condensed form in both French and Italian during the first quarter-century after the return of the Victoria to Spain, and in English as early as 1555. These publications, however, are very unsatisfactory, for much of great value to the modern historical student has been hurriedly slurred over, or entirely omitted. At the dawn of the nineteenth century, Dr. Carlo Amoretti, prefect of the Biblioteca Ambrosiana, Milan, recognising to a slight degree the value of the original manuscript which he discovered among the treasures entrusted to his care, published the relation in both Italian and French, but he committed the crime of editing the precious document, almost beyond recognition in places. In the latter half of the same century, Lord Stanley of Alderley, translated and edited the relation for the Hakluyt Society but, unfortunately, in his translation he omitted passages of importance to ethnologists, and in addition, relied for his text, not upon the original Italian, but in part on the older of the two French manuscripts of the Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris, and in part on Amoretti's garbled publication; consequently, Stanley's edition, as well as Amoretti's, is unsatisfactory to students who prize accuracy. The text of the Italian manuscript, edited by Andrea da Mosto (part V., volume III. of Raccolta di Documente e Studi, published by the Italian government, Rome, 1894, in honour of the Fourth Centenary of the discovery of America) has proved, all things considered, the most useful edition of Pigafetta's narrative hitherto given to the public. Its usefulness is limited, however, as it is available to Italian readers only. Mosto's transcript, although in general tolerably truthful, contains a few errors and some blemishes from the standpoint of historical accuracy, such as the spelling out of all abbreviations, the rendering of the frequently occurring Spanish abbreviation "q" (for "que") by the Italian "che," and the arbitrary insertion of punctuation not in the original.

The present edition, that published by The Arthur H. Clark Company, first gives the English reader access to a translation of the true text of Pigafetta, edited and extensively annotated. This, together with the original Italian text of Pigafetta, places before the student abundant material, both for a study of the relation itself and of the wonderful voyage. The transcript of the Italian manuscript (the oldest and most complete of those made in the earliest days) which is preserved in the Biblioteca Ambrosiana, Milan, was personally made by the editor, Mr. James Alexander Robertson. In the printing, great care has been taken to reproduce correctly the many peculiar characters and abbreviations occurring in the old Italian, and for this purpose many special characters have been designed and unusual type especially made.

The story, as told by Pigafetta, is absorbingly interesting and is singularly easy to read even in the Italian of the sixteenth century, while the English translation preserves with remarkable force the strength and idiom of the original, so that anyone who reads English and has only a slight acquaintance with either Latin or Italian, will get a perfect idea of the original author's precise meaning: this may be considered warm praise, but it is entirely deserved. The work is not one that can unhesitatingly be put into the hands of young ladies, for the narrative, at times, deals in the plainest possible way with subjects that are properly taboo in the ordinary classroom, particularly where there is commingling of sexes. But it is that very exact calling a spade a spade that gives to this reproduction and translation their peculiar value to those who wish to read for precise information. Any student of history or ethnology whose mind has been properly trained and who reads, not for erotic gratification but for scientific research, wishes to have the observation of travellers told to him exactly, and Pigafetta does this most thoroughly. Nevertheless, if there are a good many passages which should be expunged from textbooks, it can never be charged to this historiographer that he dragged them in merely for the purpose of iniquitous excitement: he was commanded by his honoured lord and renowned master, Philippo de Villers Lisleadam, renowned master of Rhodes, Pigafetta himself being a patrician of Venice and a knight of Rhodes, to tell fully and completely all that he saw and heard. He complied strictly with his instructions, from the time of joining Magellan at Seville until the return of the flagship, Victoria, to the port: that is, from August 1519 till September, 1522. While Magellan, realising that his plunging into unknown seas and undertaking a voyage of absolutely indeterminable length and incidents, carefully kept from his men exact information as to what he was doing, their position, the probable character of the peoples they met, etc., he seems to have taken Pigafetta more freely into his confidence: and yet that sturdy adventurer was appalled by the long stretch of bare sea, without islands, without anything to break the horrible monotony, that lay between the southern end of America, and the first of the Indies that the ships made. The Southern Seas (Pacific Ocean) was something so utterly indefinite that even Magellan did not possess the ability to forecast what lay before his fleet.

Pigafetta's story of the peoples and countries they visited near the Strait of Magellan, both on the Atlantic and the Pacific coasts, is an entertaining bit of old-fashioned science; he tried to make a study of the languages and his success cannot be sneered at even to-day. After reaching the East Indian Islands, these ethnological and philological studies were prosecuted with the same earnestness, and the story is one that bears on its face the stamp of truth. The account given of Magellan's death, on the island of Matan, is most circumstantial, and causes us to regret once more that such a commander should have permitted himself to take part in the squabbles of the petty kings of the islands. Had Magellan not consented to give assistance to one who professed, with much apparent sincerity, allegiance to the King of Spain, by trying to bring into the same subjection another petty ruler who had quarreled with the first, he might have been spared to bring his voyage to an absolute conclusion as literally, Magellan's voyage of Discovery, the First Circumnavigation of the Globe.

FORTHCOMING LECTURE BY MRS. HUGH FRASER.

We understand that, yielding to the solicitation of friends, Mrs. Hugh Fraser (who will be leaving Japan at the end of next month), has consented to deliver a public lecture at Van Schaick Hall on Wednesday evening, June 6th, and will take for her subject, "Mr. Marion Crawford, his Roman Life and Work." Mrs. Fraser's pre-eminent abilities as a public speaker are well known in this community, for she lectured during the winter before the Yokohama Literary Society in a most charming manner; but in addition to her lecture she is arranging a short musical programme in which it is hoped some new singers and players will appear as well as some old favourites. The price of admission to the lecture is fixed at yen 2 and yen 1, and tickets can be obtained of Messrs. Thwaites & Co.

YOKOHAMA FOREIGN BOARD OF TRADE.

At a recent meeting of the Committee of this Board, some questions came up, a résumé of which may be of public interest:—

NEW ZEALAND MAILS.

The mails from Japan to New Zealand are sent via Honolulu, while the cargo—carried in Australian liners—generally arrives before the documents. Unless very close connection is made, this cannot be avoided, and the consequence of the cargo arriving before the documents is that storage and other charges are incurred. This matter having been laid before the local authorities, has been referred by them to the consideration of the Department of Communications.

TELEGRAMS TO EUROPE.

Complaints of the mutilation and delay in delivery of telegraphic messages to Europe having been received, representations were made to the Director of Telegraphs, who stated that the Japanese service extended only to Nagasaki, and that no delay on this side took place, as messages were usually despatched from Yokohama within an hour of their receipt, and very little longer even when there was a great pressure of business. It was also stated that in tracing mutilations these had generally been found to have occurred beyond the point at which Japanese responsibility ceased, namely, after the telegrams were handed to the Great Northern Company. This company, on being applied to for an explanation, has reported the matter to Shanghai, from whence the Board is now awaiting a reply.

TRADE MARKS.

The Board having been applied to by the Patent Office, Tokyo, for an opinion as to the use of letters in certain cases in trade marks an official from Tokyo came down and propounded the following questions:—(1) Whether letters (i.e., alphabetical characters), used to denote quality, should be registered; (2) Whether initials should be accepted for registration. This matter was carefully considered by the Committee, and the opinion delivered was as follows:—(1) That letters indicating quality should not be allowed registration; (2) Initials should be accepted for registration only when in combination with a distinguishing design.

TOKYO EXHIBITION—1907.

His Excellency the Governor of Kanagawa Prefecture has requested the Board to ascertain from the foreign merchants of Yokohama, intending exhibitors at the Exhibition to be held next year in Ueno Park, Tokyo, what amount of ground space they will require, and in order to accomplish this the Board will immediately issue a circular letter to members calling a meeting which will hold at the Board's Office, No. 14, on Wednesday next, the 23rd inst. at four o'clock.

NEW ZEALAND MAILS.

With reference to the complaints which recently came before the Committee of this Board, that mails for New Zealand, through being sent via Honolulu, arrived later than the cargo carried by Australian liners, thus involving storage and other charges until the arrival of the documents, the following information has been received by the Board from the Department of Communications:—

With reference to your letter dated the 2nd instant and addressed to the Director of Posts, Yokohama, regarding the mode of despatch of correspondence destined for New Zealand from Japan, I have the honour to inform you that the mode of despatch of the correspondence in question shall be fixed, after having consulted with the Postal Administration concerned, as the present mode was adopted in deference to the proposal of that Administration. However, I may add that, pending the settlement, such correspondence will be provisionally despatched by the two routes of Honolulu and Australia—the correspondence on which the mail steamer or mail route is designated, to be forwarded by the steamer or route so designated; which have no designation of the steamer or route, to be forwarded by the first mail steamer which leaves the port of despatch. Our exchange post offices concerned have been duly instructed accordingly.

INDIAN STUDENTS IN TOKYO.

(COMMUNICATED.)

Some eight years ago, two Indian students sailed from Bombay to Japan, to learn soap-making and mining. They were the first pioneer students from India and one of them was commissioned by the native state of Gwalior to go to Japan and study. A year later came some students from Bengal; the province of the Punjab sending its first batch of students in the year 1900. The number began to swell quickly, the Indian students in Japan in November, 1903, being about 15 and at the present time, 52. Some 25 Indian students, after finishing their training in Japan, have already gone back to their homeland to give her the benefit of their sojourn in the land of the Rising Sun. Another half-a-dozen after completing their course here have gone to the United States, Germany and England to gain a more intimate knowledge of the arts and industries they studied in this country and to broaden their views by American and continental travel, and out of those who are here at the present moment there are some five who are planning to go to the different technical schools and agricultural colleges of the United States to learn and take back to their mother-country the Yankee ways of making things and finding markets for them.

The number of Indian students in Japan does not compare well with that of Chinese students here but the presence of over fifty Indian young men shows the homage which India pays to her sister of the Far East. These young men are the cream of the Indian youths who will be the men of to-morrow and who will take a leading share in the doings and deliberations of their nation, and for a home-loving and conservative people like the Indians to have sent these young men to this far end of the East, thousands of miles away across the ocean, indicates the great trust India reposes in Japan and her good people. Without entering into any prophesy of the future, it is easy to realize that these young men on their return to their homeland are going to exercise a great influence on their people and prove potent factors for promoting the well-being and material and moral prosperity of their people. They come here from almost all the different provinces of India, from the East and West, North and South, representing all the three presidencies of Bengal, Bombay and Madras, the provinces of Agra and Oudh and the Punjab and the native states of Hyderabad (Deccan) Baroda and Coorg. They have taken up various arts and industries such as pharmacy, applied chemistry, weaving, knitting, dyeing, engineering, mechanical, electrical, mining, ceramics, agriculture, sericulture, tanning, Pencil, Soap, Match and Paper-making, painting, etc., etc. These young men are sure to contribute largely towards the industrial development of India, this being the reason of their being sent to Japan.

Nine out of every ten Indian students in Japan are in Tokyo. Some of them are studying Sciences and Arts in the Imperial University and the Higher Polytechnical school; others are learning practical work in the various factories in Tokyo. Those living outside Tokyo are in Sapporo (North Japan), Kyoto and Osaka, the number at each of these places being two.

A few of the Indian students in Japan come from the middle classes of India and support themselves with the money sent them from home by their parents and relations. There are some who are supported by rich zemindars (land owners). There are others in receipt of scholarships from the native states, while recently some young men have been sent by the Calcutta Industrial Association. There is one amongst the Indian students here who pays his way by doing stenographic work. Some are middle-aged men and graduates from the Indian Universities. Others are in the prime of youth, full of vigour and reckless of the difficulties and trials that dog their footsteps. Many of them have had sound training in their own vernaculars and know English pretty well. They are not slouchy, lazy fellows clad in dhoties but look clean and smart in their tight-fitting European clothes and Panama hats.

The Indian students, few as they are in Japan, profess many different religions and shades of thought prevalent in India. Here are Hindus, Mohamedans, Sikhs and Brahmins. Education and travel have done their work and these young men though still professing the creeds of their ancestors have parted (for ever, left us hope) with religious exclusiveness and intolerance, caste and racial prejudices. Unlike India you don't find them grouped in small groups according to their religions and castes. So far as they are concerned here caste has lost hold upon them: they live and dine with each other without any distinction of caste, creed, or color. In Tokyo, thirty-nine of the Indian students live in Nishi Sugacho, Hongo, in four houses, five of them in Asakusa, in one house and two lodge and board with a Japanese family near their factory in Honjo. Thus these young men from India have learnt to despise the horrible and silly caste and religious prejudices and have sunk them in extinction. That they may carry this lesson with them to India and may not be deterred by opposition and pressure of their kith and kin in translating into action their wishes to break away with these prejudices is the earnest prayer of the writer of these lines.

Clubbing and messing together as the Indian students in Tokyo do, they not only have the advantage of each other's help and sympathy but their social life is very pleasant and cheerful. They have musical evening concerts and pic-nics, and the majority of them, living as they do within a radius of a few yards, have the opportunity of coming in very frequent contact and enjoying social chats with each other. The Oriental Students Association and the Indo-Japanese Association serve to bring the Indian students in Tokyo in more or less close contact with the Japanese, Chinese and Siamese students and others in Tokyo. The Indo-Japanese Association was started early in 1904, being built upon the then tottering Indo-Japanese Club, which was founded in 1903, largely due to the efforts of Messrs G. Sakurai (a Japanese journalist, who takes a keen interest in and helps the Indian students to a very considerable extent) and Puran (a bright young man from the Punjab). Mr. Sakurai continues to be the Japanese Secretary of the Indo-Japanese Association and has an able associate in Mr. G. N. Potdar, B.A. (of Hyderabad, Deccan). The association lately suffered a great loss in the death of its President Viscount Mariyoshi Nagaoka, F.R.G.S., Barrister-at-Law. Almost all the Indian students in Japan as well as about 30 Indian merchants in Kobe and Yokohama are members of the Association, the Japanese membership being about 30. This association is of invaluable assistance especially to newcomers from India and its secretaries do their best to put them in the way of learning the arts and industries for which these young men come to Japan.

The Indian National Congress has been in existence for nearly a quarter of a century; newspapers in English and the Indian vernaculars entirely managed and conducted by Indians have been in existence for scores of years, western civilization and thought has been slowly but steadily conquering the silly superstitions and pernicious customs for more than a century and these and other influences too numerous to write here have made the Indians feel their wants, at least to a partial extent. India has had a glorious past, its industries, manufactures, civilization, philosophy and religion in the days of yore were of the very best the world then had, but the Indian of to-day is not content in glorying over a brilliant past. His ambition is to rank politically, socially, morally and materially on a level with the most enlightened people of the present time. Let us hope that the Indian young men now in Japan and other foreign countries on their return home may not only render invaluable service to the Indian arts and industries, but also add their mite in the true political, social and moral advancement of their people.

T. N. SING.

X The prisoners from Russia belonging to the Tenth Division (Hiroshima) were all acquitted on May 23rd on the ground that they were seized by the Russians while lying on the field wounded.

PRESENTATION TO MR. H. S. PLAYFAIR.

On Tuesday afternoon a number of representative Chinese merchants of Yokohama assembled at the office of the Commercial Union Assurance Co., Ltd., No. 72, Main Street, to present to Mr. H. Sanderson Playfair, the Company's manager for Japan, a farewell address and token of their esteem on his approaching departure for home on a well earned holiday. The gift took the form of a beautiful Chinese silk embroidered banner, in crimson and gold, with an inscription in black letters in the following words:—

To Mr. Hugh Sanderson Playfair,—We the undersigned Chinese Merchants of Yokohama, Japan, on the eve of your departure, on leave of absence, beg your acceptance of this Testimonial as a mark of our warm personal regard for yourself, and our hearty appreciation of the kindly methods and tactful manner in which you have dealt with us in all our business relations.

We are quite aware that you need no tangible assurance that you will always carry with you the best of our wishes, but it will give us pleasure to think that you will have something before you to remind you of your Chinese friends who appreciate you as one of the very few Foreigners who understand their manners and customs.

We wish you, Mrs. Playfair and Miss Playfair a Bon Voyage to your Home-Land and sincerely hope you may long be spared to each other, and speedily return to Japan.

Kwong Man Tai & Co., Man On Sung & Co., Kong On Kai & Co., Tong Shun Lee & Co., Kwong Fuk Yuen & Co., Fook Sung Tai & Co., Cheuk So Kai, Hop Tai Wo & Co., Sam Kong, Wong Wai Chi, Chin Chi Pun, Cheuk King Po, Leung Wan Chuen, Chan Shun Shu, Ng Sin Tao, Yeung Fang Soon, Lai Yuk Wun, Van Tai, Chan Pin Ki, Cheung Tai & Co., etc.

The presentation was made by Mr. Lam Kong, who read the address as follows:—

MR. PLAYFAIR,

The Chinese Merchants of Yokohama, of whom the undersigned is the representative, ask your acceptance of this Banner as a slight mark of their esteem for yourself. It is the joint contribution of a number of the Chinese Merchants of Yokohama, but owing to the limited space on the Banner all their names do not appear. It is intended as an ever present reminder to you of the pleasant business relations we have had together, and we venture to hope that the recollection of these may ever remain with you and that whenever you look upon this Banner it will remind you of your Chinese clients in Yokohama, who look upon you as a friend.

(Signed) LAM KONG.

Yokohama, 22nd May, 1906.

Mr. Playfair in a few well chosen words, thanked the Chinese merchants who had subscribed to the address on his own and his wife and daughter's behalf and added that during his thirty-eight years' residence in the Far East—China, the Straits, Formosa and Japan—he had made many Chinese friends and had enjoyed most cordial business relations with Chinese merchants. When he left Formosa some years ago, he had been the recipient of a similar token of esteem from his Chinese friends, but it had unfortunately been burnt in a fire and they would appreciate that he was all the more gratified at having it replaced by his Yokohama Chinese constituents.

Capt. C. Olsen, the Surveyor of the Commercial Union Assurance Co., who was among those present, joined in wishing bon voyage and a happy return to Mr. Playfair and his family and after their healths had been toasted in sparkling fizz, the party took their leave.

ST. JOSEPH'S ATHLETIC CLUB.

The St. Joseph's Athletic Club held their usual Spring Sports last Wednesday, May 23rd, the Race Course having been courteously lent for the occasion by the Committee of the N. R. C.

In spite of the state of the weather, and the fact that there were but few visitors, the competitors were very numerous and the different events were carried through with much enthusiasm.

Among the most notable records were:—Putting the Shot (12 lbs.) H. Jubin, 32 ft. 6 in.; High Jump, M. Luther, 4 ft. 9 in.; Long Jump, M. Luther, 17 ft. 4 in.; Half Mile, P. C. Holm, 2 min. 24 secs.; Pole Jump, M. Luther, 9 ft. 2 in.

AT DE CABIN DO.

Doan' I tol' yo' ob young Missy
Fairer dan de fus' narcissy.
Sweetah dan de sweetus' blossom
On de pinkus' peach dat blow?
Nebbah min' de day how chilly,
Wid her cheeks all rose an' lily
Usetah come to tell me "Howdy,
Uncle" at de cabin do'.

Well I 'membah, late or early,
Ef my ha't was feelin' surly
Wid de agur an' rheumatics,
Eb'ry bone a-achin' so'.
Bettah dan de drug an' doctor
W'en ol' Mammy's han's had frocked her,
Was her sunny, smilin' "Howdy,
Uncle?" at de cabin do'.

But she's gone beyon' de mornin'
Whar de baby days is bo'nin',
Furder off dan eber Heben
Usetah seem to me befo'.
'Fess I feel to gredge dem headen
Dat bright smile her face was wreadin'
W'en she came to tell me "Howdy,
Uncle?" at de cabin do'.

Now de nights an' da'k an' dreary,
An' de days an' wan an' weary,
Seems I hear de crik a-sobbin'
An' de reeds along de sho'.
An' ol' Remus ha't am achin'
For de sunshine she was makin'
W'en she came to tell me "Howdy,
Uncle?" at de cabin do'.

'Twar a pretty sight dat eben,
'Bout a month 'fo' dey was leabin',
W'en I says, "De tall young Massa
Set a heap by yo', I'm sho'."
An' she tol' me, "Yo' be hushin'!"—
Red an' red her roses blushin',—
"Or we'll not come tell you 'Howdy,
Uncle?" at de cabin do'."

Honey, all in vain I wait yo'
Sayin', "What hab done belate yo'?"
Dat de sunshine ob yo' shadow
Nebbah falls across de flo'.
Rainy days an' days ob shinin'
I'm a-peakin' an' a-pinin'
Fo' de time yo' tol' me "Howdy,
Uncle?" at de cabin do'.

W'en my co'ncob pipe I'm smokin';
Arter ebenin' prayer am spoken
An' Aunt Chloe am a-bus' lin' roun'
A-doin' up de cho',
My ol' ha't it gits to dreamin'
Till it's kin' o' sort o' seemin'
Dat yo's come to tell me "Howdy,
Uncle?" at de cabin do'.

Eb'ry day to Massa Jesus,
For I knows He hears an' sees us,
Seben times my prayer I'm makin'
Dat He bring yo' home once mo'.
W'en de tea-pot sings a-bilin'
In de steam I see yo' smilin',
Come again to tell me "Howdy,
Uncle?" at de cabin do'.

In dat lan' beyon' de ocean,
Furder dan de lan' ob Goshen,
'Spec' de Lawd make shif' to keep yo',
For He set by yo' a sto',
An' His a'm am mighty reachin'
Eldah Jones says in de preachin';
But I'm lonesome for yo' "Howdy,
Uncle?" at de cabin do'.

W'en de honeysuckle's clingin',
W'en de mockin'-bird am singin',
An' de darkies and a-huskin'
As in happy days ob yo'.
Wid a empty ha't an' weary
I'm a-mo'nin' for yo', Dearie,
Till yo' come to tell me "Howdy,
Uncle?" at de cabin do'.

S. L. L. YENDYS.

Yokohama.

SHIPPING CASUALTIES.

The German Mail steamer Roon, which left Nagasaki on the morning of May 16th for Yokohama via Kobe, went ashore owing to dense fog on the following day off Okinoshima, Chikuzen province. Damage was sustained for a distance of about fifteen feet on the bottom. At 4 p.m. (May 17th), the steamer Kyobi Maru spoke the Roon and tried to assist the German ship to refloat. The effort, however, was futile. Finally the Japanese vessel took off all the passengers and a number of the crew, about 150 in all, from the Roon and arrived at Moji the same evening. Mr. Akabane, Japanese Minister to Spain, and Baron Bieler Hawlen, Secretary of the German Embassy in Tokyo, were among the passengers. They left Shimonoseki by train for Tokyo.

Further reports appear in the Tokyo papers with regard to the accident to the German Mail steamer Roon. A Shimonoseki telegram to the Fiji says that she left Nagasaki at 9 a.m. on May 16th for Yokohama via Kobe. She encountered a dense fog, which for some time delayed her. At 10.45 p.m. the ship was found to be close to Oki-no-shima, when the engines were immediately stopped, too late, however, to prevent the steamer from stranding. The night was dark and it was raining heavily. The crew attended to the lowering of the boats with the view of saving the passengers. While engaged in lowering the boats, two sailors fell into the sea and one of them was drowned and another is missing. The Ryuh Maru (formerly the M. S. Dollar) which had left Nagasaki before the Roon, but had later been passed by the latter, arrived on the scene about 4 hours after the accident and immediately responded to the signals of distress, but some time elapsed before she could get close enough to render assistance. Immediately on this being accomplished, however, the work of transshipping the passengers began. Eighty-eight passengers and about fifty of the crew were taken on to the Ryuh Maru, after several unsuccessful attempts to tow the Roon off, and the Ryuh left for Moji, where she arrived on the evening of the 17th. The news of the accident had been carried to Nagasaki, where assistance was immediately organised. The Oura Maru, the salvage steamer of the Mitsu Bishi Kaisha, left Nagasaki on the morning of May 18th for the scene of the disaster. It is reported that Mr. Geise, the representative at Nagasaki of Messrs. Ahrens & Co., the Agents of the line, has proceeded to the disaster on board the German cruiser Hansa. The Milke Maru, with three steam launches, also left Moji for the scene on May 18th and later the Fukushima Maru was also sent.

A later telegram says that all the mail bags have been landed at Shimonoseki.

The German Mail steamer Roon has been floated. A Moji telegram to the Asahi reports that on May 19th, all the cargo in the second hold were transferred to another ship or jettisoned. Measures for refloating her were then carried out, as the result of which she came off at 6 p.m. The bottom of the first hold is damaged to the extent of twelve or fifteen feet. A Nagasaki telegram reports that on May 20th, the Roon arrived there under her own steam and going nine knots, being escorted by the German cruiser Hansa and the steamer Oura Maru. According to the chief engineer of the Oura Maru, says the Asahi's Nagasaki correspondent, the German ship stranded west of Okinoshima. The Hansa at first tried to tow her off. The hawser, however, was broken at once. On May 19th, all the cargo in the forward part was removed and the after holds were filled with water. Consequently, she lay at a slope when the Hansa and Tatsuta essayed to get her off. At 6 p.m. when it was high-tide, she came off under her own steam.

The Mitsui Bussan Kaisha's steamer Ukushima Maru (200 tons) with some police and thirty nurses left Nagasaki to attend the passengers and crew of the German steamer Roon when she stranded at Okinoshima. On the evening of the 19th the little vessel encountered some heavy seas, and as she was towing three boats with many workmen on board, much anxiety was entertained. As she was drifting in the direction of Tsushima, the cruiser Kasuga came up and rescued the steamer and the men, taking them on the following morning to Mutsure Island.

The Agents, Messrs. H. Ahrens & Co., Nachf., inform us that they received a telegram on Sunday at noon to the effect that the N. D. L. steamer Roon got afloat at 6 p.m. on Saturday and arrived safely in Nagasaki under her own steam on Sunday at 11 a.m., accompanied by the German cruiser Hansa.

Messrs. Ahrens & Co. heard from Moji on Monday morning that all the passengers' luggage on the Roon has been sent forward by train.

It is estimated that the repairs to the vessel will take about a month, although no definite opinion can be formed yet.

On May 16th, the steamer Sokaku Maru (285 tons) went ashore off Korsakoff, Saghalien, sustaining severe damage from which she sank in a few minutes. Her cargo consisted of sake, rice, and sundry other goods. The hull was insured with the Tokyo Marine Insurance Co., for thirty thousand yen.

In connexion with the steamer Akashi Maru, which was recently reported to have sustained damage from having stranded in the neighbourhood of Shanghai, a telegram was received on May 17th in Osaka to the effect that she has arrived at Anoy. A portion of the cargo was found to be damaged. After temporary repairs, she will go to Shanghai.

Decision has been given by the Tokyo Marine Court in the case of the Kinjo Maru, which has been under investigation for some time. It may be remembered that at 10 p.m. on August 22nd last, the transport Kinjo Maru, with about a hundred and fifty officers and men returning from the front, collided with the steamer Barralong off Himejima, in the Inland Sea, with the result that the Japanese ship having sustained severe damage amidstships sank and all the passengers and a portion of the crew were drowned. Mr. G. Sora, the pilot of the Barralong, and captain S. Mase, of the Kinjo Maru, were tried for their share in the calamity. The essential points of the judgment now given by the Court are: (1) The Kinjo Maru displayed a white light on one of her masts enjoining caution, nevertheless the pilot of the Barralong neglected to give attention to the warning. (2) The Barralong was showing a blue light on one of her masts, and this was clearly observed from the Kinjo Maru. The captain of the Japanese ship did not take steps to get out of the way by proceeding in the right direction or by stopping his ship to prevent collision. The Japanese ship's master, however, was not present on the bridge.

The pilot was punished with suspension of his certificate for six months, and the captain was acquitted.

CUSTOMS APPEAL.

Mr. Y. Sakatani, Minister for Finance, delivered a decision on May 21st, in an appeal filed by Messrs. Findlay, Richardson & Co., No. 6, Yokohama against a judgment given by the Yokohama Customs. The purport of the appeal was that the firm imported fine printing paper from England with certificate of origin, believing that the material should be dealt with under No. 46-B of the Japan-German Conventional Tariff. The Yokohama Customs imposed 10 per cent. ad val. duty in accordance with No. 293 of the general tariff, taking the goods as ivory card-board. The importers presented a protest against the imposition of this duty. The protest was dismissed. On the other hand, the contention of the director of the Yokohama Customs was that with regard to quality, finish, and nature, the merchandise must be classified as card-board, and is different from fine printing paper, the weight of the former being about fifty-five pounds heavier than the latter per ream.

The appeal was dismissed on the ground that the goods in dispute could not be taken as printing paper.

PREVENTION OF CRUELTY TO ANIMALS.

A public meeting with the object of forming a Society in Yokohama for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals was held at the Masonic Hall, No. 78, Main Street on Thursday, the 24th inst., at 5.30 p.m.

Mr. W. F. MITCHELL was in the chair and among those present were Messrs J. de Cuers de Cogolin, C. K. M. Martin, M. Viloudaki, van den Berch van Heemstede, S. Isaacs, A. J. Easton, Spencer Smith, James Walter, Dr. Moore Graham, Messrs. M. Russell, A. G. Morey Weale, B. C. Howard, B. C. T. Gray, F. L. Elliott, A. C. Hutton Potts, H. J. Sharp, E. F. Crowe, H. C. Gulland, J. Archer, O. White, L. J. Healing, etc. Among the ladies present were:—Mrs. C. K. Martin, Mrs. Frazer, Mrs. Merriman, Mrs. Potts, Mrs. Suzor, Mrs. Healing, Mrs. Payne, Miss Thomas, Miss Mendelson, Mrs. James, Mrs. Dinsdale, Mrs. Beart, Mrs. W. D. S. Edwards, Mrs. Scidmore and Mrs. Neville.

Mr. MITCHELL opened the proceedings by reading the notice calling the meeting. He then said: It is with some diffidence that I have responded to the request that I should take the chair at this meeting called for the purpose of establishing a branch of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals in Yokohama, as my knowledge of dealing with the subject is limited. Yet one can say without hesitation that it is a matter in which any right feeling person should take a lively interest. This was undoubtedly Mrs. Marshall Martin's view when she threw the whole of her personal influence into the subject, and determined that for the sake of the dumb animals that she so often sees maltreated in our streets, she would enlist the sympathies of others, and it is due to her indefatigable efforts that this meeting has been called. I am glad to see that this feeling is shared so extensively, that the residents are showing their appreciation by attending this meeting, while many have sent in their names as prospective members. We all remember the story of Balaam and his ass. Well I am sure that if some of the beasts of burden on our streets could speak, they too, would ask "why do you overload me and strike me unmercifully; I am doing my best for you," and there would soon be an Animals Rights Association. I have heard it said that the foreign community can do no good in such a movement, and that it is the Japanese that should take it up. But is this not a narrow way of looking at it? So much can be done by personal effort and individual interest. At the same time Mrs. Martin has been most successful in enlisting the sympathy of prominent Japanese gentlemen, some of whom represent the executive powers who will unquestionably see that the law is put into motion, if they find it necessary to do so. That the effort of such a society is desirable is evidenced by the existence of large organizations in the United States, United Kingdom and elsewhere where this is a work where Japanese and Foreigner alike can seek the amelioration of the lot of abused and defenceless animals. We are glad that the ladies are taking an interest in the proposed Society, as although termed the weaker sex, they generally show a firm resolve with regard to any question affecting the alleviation of suffering, for there are none so tender hearted; and I strongly recommend that as many ladies as possible be enrolled as members. As to the Japanese gentlemen who have signified their intention of joining the movement I should like to say how pleased we are that the interest should be cosmopolitan; moreover without Japanese co-operation we can do but little. As far as this country is concerned, it is but a revival of the protection of dumb animals, that was enforced by one of the Shoguns some decades past, and I am confident that most Japanese will hail with delight any fair measures that are taken to put a stop to the thoughtless treatment to which animals are sometimes subjected. This is not intended as a sweeping condemnation, what we want is that the majority who do beat their animals kindly should see that the minority who do not, are forced to do so. A branch of the Society has already been formed in Tokio, and I will now call upon Dr. Hiroi, the Hon. Secretary, who has kindly attended, to give us some information regarding the work done there.

Dr. HIROI said he was in hospital when he heard that Mrs. C. K. Martin had been the means of having a meeting called for the formation of a society for the prevention of cruelty to animals. He had prepared an address in Japanese but he preferred instead to say a few words in English—though his command of that language had been impaired by his illness. He had been deeply impressed some ten years ago by reading the annual report of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals but it was not till five years ago that the present Tokyo society was formed. They had no authority at present and must have a law to further their work. That would come in the future. It was necessary first to get the people interested in the society. To his mind the Japanese people were not cruel: on the contrary they were kind hearted, but, to put it shortly they did not know how to treat animals. It should not be difficult to convince them however. The Tokyo society had now a membership, he thought, of over 5,000 members and had a branch at Utsunomiya and another at Chiba. He expressed his thanks to Mrs. Martin and the other promoters of this meeting and his best wishes for the future of the society.

The Chairman, commenting on Dr. Hiroi's remarks said the absence of laws and regulations which might be enforced, in the course of their work made matters more difficult. But he was perfectly certain that Japan would not be behind other countries in seconding the efforts of such societies. Meantime he was sure the efforts of Dr. Hiroi and his fellow-workers would be seconded by this society when formed. He mentioned a case in which Mrs. Martin had had called to her attention cruel treatment of monkeys and had by application to the authorities secured an improvement. It was suggested that the society in Yokohama should appoint an inspector who would first call the owner's attention to a case of cruelty and if this was unheeded would ask for the assistance of the authorities (applause).

Mr. MITCHELL then proposed that a society be formed in Yokohama to be called the Yokohama branch of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and that at this meeting the election of a President, Chairman, Honorary Secretaries, Honorary Treasurer and Committee should take place.

Mr. T. TANIGUCHI, Secretary of the Kencho, seconded and the proposal was passed unanimously.

On the motion of the CHAIRMAN, seconded by Mr. V. Caesar Hawkins, it was resolved to ask His Excellency the Governor, Mr. K. Sufu, to act as President.

Mr. A. G. MOREY WEALE proposed the election of Mr. Mitchell as Chairman, saying that while the instincts of humanity were doubtless strong in all, still the good work the society could do must depend on its organization and its executive head, and he thought that in Mr. Mitchell they had the right man in the right place (applause.)

Mr. FRAZER seconded and the motion was passed unanimously.

The CHAIRMAN briefly acknowledged.

On the motion of Mr. BEART, seconded by Mr. Martin, Mr. Cyril Allen was elected foreign and Mr. Okada Kotaro Japanese Honorary Secretary, and Mr. Spencer Smith Hon. Treasurer.

On the motion of the Chairman, seconded by Mr. Isaacs, the following Committee of foreigners was elected with power to add Japanese gentlemen to their number: Messrs. von Syburg, Hobart Hampden, T. Taniguchi, E. C. Davis, Otani Kahel, de Cuers de Cogolin, K. Mori, C. Illies, B. C. Howard, L. J. Healing, J. W. Copmann, A. G. M. Weale, Y. Mogi, L. Barmont, M. Beart, B. Runge, V. Caesar Hawkins, F. S. James, E. Mendelson, James Walter and C. K. Marshall Martin.

The CHAIRMAN spoke of ways and means, and it was decided that the subscription should be 3 yen yearly. He then read the proposed rules and in reply to Mr. Beart said it had been hoped that Mr. Masujima would be present and that he or some other legal enthusiast would give them assistance in approaching the authorities.

He stated also that Mrs. Martin had had intimation of 200 probable members.

A hearty vote of thanks was, on the motion of the Chairman, passed to Mrs. Martin for the very active interest she had taken in the matter; and another was, on the motion of Mr. Taniguchi, accorded to the Chairman, who replied in a sentence.

The proceedings then closed.

LAWN TENNIS.

YOKOHAMA V. TOKYO.

The first half of the second annual lawn-tennis matches between the above cities was played at the Bluff Gardens on Saturday, when the local team completely reversed the results of last year.

There was a large and fashionable attendance, and the band of the U.S. F.S. Ohio played several selections during the course of the afternoon.

The conditions of the competition are that five contestants from each town play the best of five sets each of "singles" on one date, and at later date five doubles try conclusions. Last year the doubles were played in Yokohama, so that this year the visitors journeyed to Yokohama for the singles and we understand that the doubles will be played in Tokyo on the 9th June.

The local quintette was the more fancied, as not only have the Tokyo team lost three of their last year's players, but their first string of 1905, Mr. T. J. Chapman, played for the southern team on Saturday.

Following the time-honoured custom of most interport contests, the teams were photographed together before the match, and the five games started almost simultaneously, the order of the players from the tea-table end being:—

- |                           |                        |
|---------------------------|------------------------|
| (2) Mr. Yamasaki          | v. Mr. J. M. Mollison  |
| (1) Mr. H. T. Rice        | v. Mr. T. J. Chapman   |
| (5) Mr. A. F. White       | v. Mr. H. W. Kilby     |
| (3) Mr. Azabuki           | v. Mr. K. van R. Smith |
| (4) Mr. Huntingdon Wilson | v. Mr. W. F. Page      |

the figures in brackets shewing the order in which the players were chosen for their respective sides, and the first-named being the Tokyo team.

By way of parenthesis, it might be suggested that score-boards be erected for future matches, or at least a blackboard be provided so that the results of each game might be written thereon, as there was considerable confusion as to which of the players had won their matches.

The first game to be finished was won by Kilby, who appeared to have a fairly easy task with his opponent, who did not seem to be at all at home on the grass court, all the courts in Tokyo being of gravel; and Yokohama also won the second finished game by Chapman's victory, although the games were more evenly contested than the score, 3 sets to love, would indicate. The other games were not finished so early, but Page put the issue beyond doubt by vanquishing his "vis-a-vis" by 3 sets to 1. Azabuki won the only match for Tokyo, being successful by 3 sets to 2, and finally after a hard tussle of two sets all, Mollison won the third by 6 games to 4, thus leaving the local team victors by 4 games to 1, the exact scores by which Tokyo, on their own ground, won last year.

We regret that we are unable to give the exact score of the games, as no official results were issued, and we append the results of the sets only:—

- |                        |                                |   |
|------------------------|--------------------------------|---|
| Mr. T. J. Chapman (Y)  | 3 v. Mr. H. T. Rice (T)...     | 0 |
| Mr. J. M. Mollison (Y) | 3 v. Mr. Yamasaki (T)...       | 3 |
| Mr. Azabuki (T).....   | 3 v. Mr. K. van R. Smith (Y)   | 2 |
| Mr. W. F. Page (Y) ... | 3 v. Mr. Huntingdon Wilson (T) | 1 |
| Mr. H. W. Kilby (Y)... | 3 v. Mr. A. F. White (T)       | 0 |

Mr. Uchida, Japanese Consul-General in New York, telegraphed on May 23rd to the Foreign Office that prices for raw silk were so much lower that there were no offers. Conditions as to new cocoons being indefinite, all weaving factories are hesitating to purchase material. Owing to the favourable weather, the cotton crop this year is generally expected to be prolific, and prices have been lowered. The stocks throughout the country are estimated at about 820,000 bales.

THE LAW COURTS.

CLAIM FOR SHORT DELIVERY.

The hearing of a case filed by Messrs Mendelson Bros. against Messrs Butterfield and Swire claiming twelve hundred yen for short delivery of cargo was resumed on May 18th in the Yokohama District Court before Judge Nakanishi.

T. Kaiita, hardware merchant, was examined as an expert witness. He deposed that the retail price of tin-plates in July, August, and September last was yen 14.40 for goods of small size and yen 14.10 to yen 14.30 for the large sizes. He did not know the original cost of the tin-plates.

At the conclusion of the examination of this witness, the Court decided to summon a competent metal goods trader as an expert to ascertain the original cost of tin-plates, and adjourned the case till May 21st.

CHARGE OF ASSAULT.

The trial of a sailor named Jacque Martinelli Philippe (19) of the French steamer Louqsor, who is charged with having assaulted two Japanese on board that ship and inflicted injuries, took place on May 21st in the Yokohama District Court before Judge Satomi and Public Procurator Miki.

Mr. Y. Inouye, a lawyer of Yokohama, was employed for the defence. Mr. N. Ogata, of the Court, attended as interpreter.

The Public Procurator stated at the outset of the trial that the French ship arrived at Yokohama on April 11th from Marseilles. The following day a dispute took place on board the steamer between a number of coolies and some of the crew. During the trouble, the accused assaulted with a bar of iron a Japanese barber named Hamaguchi, living at Okina-cho and also hit a coolie named Hoshinaka, residing at Yamamoto-cho, with a hammer. They having been injured on their heads, Hamaguchi was preventing from working for fifteen days and Hoshinaka for twenty days.

Being examined, the accused stated that the dispute between the Japanese and the French sailors arose through two iron hawsers being taken from the ship. One party insisted that one of the hawsers belonged to Messrs. Helm Bros., and the other denied this. At length the parties began to fight. When the fighting broke out the accused was taking a rest near the third hold of the ship. He was attired in a black cap and red cotton shirt and he held a wooden stick in his hand. He, however, did not participate in the trouble. As the quarrel became hotter, the accused went to the bridge to escape from getting hurt in the mêlée. When the conflict was over, the accused came down from the bridge and saw two Japanese injured. The accused did not know at that time who injured the Japanese. Later he saw Quentic, one of his fellow sailors, when he learned that Quentic had assaulted the Japanese. On board the Louqsor four or five young men like himself were employed, but the others were all older than him.

The Court referred to the statements of two Japanese, K. Miyake and Shimidzu, given at the preliminary examination. The witnesses, said the Court, agreed in saying that the accused took a high-handed course against the Japanese who were injured. In reply, the accused stated that he never intervened in the fighting and that consequently he had no responsibility for the wounds sustained by the two Japanese.

Examined by the Public Procurator, the accused said that Quentic had a moustache and beard. After the fight, he shaved off his beard. On the day when the trouble occurred, the accused was resting up to 11 a.m. At that time he was at his place waiting for cargo to be shipped, as he was a tallyman. After the trouble, the accused went to the French Consulate-General together with Capt. Casanova, the master of the ship. They did not see the French Consul-General as he was ill. At the request of the captain, an arrangement was made at the Consulate-General that the accused should be temporarily released from the service. Quentic did not go to the Consulate in company with the accused and the ship's master.

When parting with the Captain, he gave five yen to accused.

At this stage, Counsel in defence said that some of the crew on board the Louqsor were examined at the French Consulate in Shanghai when the ship arrived there on her way home. The official copies of their statements were given. Counsel produced several documents and said that the first was a statement by Moreau, one of the crew. According to this witness, the accused was on the bridge at the time when the fighting took place. The second deposition was that of Max Alfred. This witness said that Quentic had been surrounded by a number of Japanese. In self-defence, Quentic struck blows at one or two of his besiegers and inflicted injuries on them with an iron stick. The accused did not assault the Japanese. The third deposition was a statement by Quentic. He said that he struck a Japanese barber as the latter was about to attack witness with a razor. The fourth deposition was a statement by the ship's master. According to this letter, there was no doubt that Quentic injured the Japanese. The remaining letters were communications between the Captain and the French Consul in Shanghai, etc. Counsel asked, through the Court interpreter, if M. Roux the Yokohama agent of the Messageries Maritimes, who was present in the Court, knew where Quentic was residing. Counsel asked the Court for leave to summon Quentic as a witness and added that he might be summoned to Yokohama if a telegram was sent to the Marseilles Office of the M. M. Company.

The Public Procurator remarked that several letters were produced through Counsel which documents seemed to be favourable to accused. Some explanation of the charge against Martinelli consequently should be given. After the assault committed by the accused, the Harbour police and the Preliminary Examination Judge proceeded to the steamer and asked the captain to hand over the accused. The captain, however, refused to allow the arrest of accused on the ground that he was quite ignorant of Japanese Laws. Several explanations were given by the Japanese officials to the ship's master who at last understood the position. If the crime was committed by Quentic, the question arose why did not the captain say so. In compliance with the request of the Japanese authorities, the Captain made an arrangement at the French Consul-General for the temporary release of the accused, thus allowing of his arrest. Even the accused did not say anything about Quentic when he was examined by the Preliminary Examination Judge. It was not till after the Louqsor left Yokohama, accused said that the crime was committed by Quentic. Quentic was accordingly summoned at Kobe when the steamer arrived there. His statement, however, did not bear out the statement made by Counsel in defence. The Public Procurator concluded by saying that the depositions made at the French consulate in Shanghai must be regarded as tsukuri-goto, or false statements planned to save the accused. He asked the Court to examine K. Miyake, K. Shimidzu, Hamaguchi and Hoshinaka as witnesses.

The Court decided to summon the three first named men only and rejected the request as to Quentic.

The trial was adjourned till May 23rd.

THE NOGUCHI MURDER CASE.

Public Procurator Shimidzu, of the Tokyo District Court, on May 21st, lodged an appeal in the Tokyo Appeal Court against the sentence of death which was delivered on May 16th in the Noguchi murder case by Judge Imamura. The principal points of the appeal were based on the allegation as to the murders of Noguchi Neisai, the poet, and Kawai Sosuke, a youth, on which charges, Takebayashi Osaburo was not punished because of the evidence being insufficient. The accused, it may be remembered, was sentenced to capital punishment for the murder of Tsudzuki Tomigoro, an apothecary, to which crime he confessed.

The appeal by the Public Procurator was intimated to Noguchi Osaburo on May 21st by Mr. Saito, one of three lawyers employed for the defence. The accused later also filed an appeal. The Hochi says that when Messrs. Saito and Hara paid a visit to the accused after sentence was passed on May 16th, he told them that the confession with regard to the murder of the chemist was not correct.

CHARGE OF ASSAULT.

The trial of Martinelli Philippe, a sailor on the French steamer Louqsor, who is charged with having inflicted injuries on two Japanese working on board the ship, was resumed on May 23rd in the Yokohama District Court.

M. Hamaguchi deposed that he was the headman of the Japanese coolies employed by Messrs Helm Bros., on the Louqsor on April 12th. About 3 p.m., that day, a dispute arose between the coolies and the crew. T. Uchida, one of the coolies, was attacked by a French sailor, receiving injury on his face, which was stained with blood. Witness appeared on the scene to pacify the parties and subsequently attended the injured men. Witness was surrounded by the sailors, who were all armed with revolvers, iron bars, wooden sticks, etc., and they were about to attack witness. At length accused struck witness a blow with a bar of iron. The accused came from the left side of witness and struck him on the arm causing a severe injury which threw him out of work for fourteen days. That day witness was dressed in three woollen shirts and a woollen coat. When the trouble began, accused was working as a tally-man at the second hold. On the ship there were four or five men quite similar to accused in age and uniform. Witness, however, was absolutely certain he could identify the accused. During the quarrel, a Japanese barber was also injured by accused. The witness did not know who attended to the barber after he was injured on the head.

K. Miyake, a coolie, stated that he was working at one of the winches on the Louqsor on April 12th when the quarrel took place. The accused was about to attack him with a hammer while witness was attending to the winch. Witness therefore left at once, running toward the saloon. On his way he passed the barber, Hoshinaka, who was sitting on a chair quite ignorant of the trouble. Witness concealed himself at the side of a large winch near where the barber was sitting. As soon as the accused reached the barber, the former beat the man with a hammer causing a severe injury on the head. He then ran away. Witness should have received this blow instead of the barber, but he ducked in time. Taking an apron from the barber witness tried to staunch the blood running from his head. The chief-steward of the ship gave a cup of water to the barber and proposed to remove him to the surgery of the ship's doctor. Witness, however, insisted that the barber should remain in the same place until the police appeared. The barber was taken to the doctor's room after the arrival of the Harbour police. Referring to the statement given by a coolie named Shimidzu at the preliminary examination, witness said that the barber's injury was properly dressed with bandages after he was removed to the doctor's room. The witness did not see any other men similar to accused in age or uniform. During the quarrel, accused wore a red cap. Examined by the Public Procurator, witness said that at the place where the trouble occurred were several carpenter's tools, including a hammer. The hammer with which accused assaulted the barber was not sharpened.

K. Shimidzu deposed that he was employed by Messrs Helm Bros., as a tallyman. On April 12th, he was attending at the first hold on the Louqsor and the accused at the second hold. Witness did not know whether there were other men present similar to him in age and uniform. The witness did not see the fight. After the trouble was over, witness passed the place where the parties fought. He was searching for the chief mate of the ship in order to obtain a receipt for the shipping orders as the cargo was all on board. The barber was lying by the side of the winch, with a severe injury on his head. When the witness passed a ship's cook was treating him, giving him a cup of water. The witness, however, did not know anything about the details of the fight.

At the conclusion of the examination the essential points of the witnesses' statements were translated. Martinelli Philippe said that the statements made that day were all incorrect. He further went on to say that his statements had not varied all through the examinations at the police office, the preliminary examination, and at the present trial. Quentic assaulted the Japanese, inflicting the injuries. The accused did not wear a red cap during that afternoon, and he denied the statements of the witnesses in toto.

The public procurator, in the course of a lengthy speech, said that the quarrel took place in the day time and consequently anybody could identify the face of the man who committed the grave assault. The statements of the witnesses agreed that the accused wore a red cap and that he had a hammer in his hand. Collating all the statements made by witnesses and the reports of the Harbour Police, it was quite obvious that the accused attacked Hamaguchi, chief of the coolies, and Hoshinaka, a barber, and inflicted on them severe injuries. The public procurator added that the countenance and age of the accused was far different from those of Quentic, consequently nobody could fail to distinguish between them. Concluding his speech, the public procurator said that the accused should be dealt with under Art. 301 of the Penal Code—"If the violence has produced only an illness as an incapacity for labour for the space of twenty days or upwards, the penalty shall be imprisonment for a period of from one year to three years with hard labour."

An outline of this speech was translated by the Court interpreter. The accused in reply said that the statements of the witnesses were all wrong. As a matter of fact, accused was not present at the scene of the trouble because he was in the room of the ship's master attending to work and he did not even know what happened between the first and second holds.

Counsel for the defence, summarizing several statements made in evidence, said that the assault was not committed by the accused but by Quentic, and he asked the Court to acquit his client.

The accused said that the Japanese witnesses planned to entrap him with incorrect statements and that he was in a pitiful position being in a foreign country where he had no acquaintances among the natives. He asked the Court to acquit him at once.

The Court decided to render judgment on May 25th.

CLAIM FOR SHORT DELIVERY.

In the Yokohama District Court, a case in which Messrs. Siber, Wolff and Co. claim yen 1,541 80 from Messrs. Butterfield and Swire came up again on May 23rd.

The Court dismissed the plaintiffs' claim with costs.

THE TOKYO DISTURBANCES.

The public trial of S. Uno, an oil seller, and a hundred and three others charged with having created disturbances in Tokyo on September 5th, and with setting fire to the official residence of the Minister of State for Home Affairs, several police stations, boxes, etc., took place on May 23rd in the Tokyo District Court before Judge Imamura and Public Procurators Sugimoto and Asumi.

After a speech by one of the public procurators five only of the accused were examined, the trial being adjourned till May 23rd. The Court declared that the examination is to take place every Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

THE NOGUCHI MURDER CASE.

The trial of the appeal in the Noguchi murder case will take place on May 31st the Tokyo Appeal Court.

Mr. Jacob H. Schiff, the prominent banker of New York, who has been in Japan for several weeks past, left Yokohama on May 18th by the Empress of Japan for home. Many leading Japanese merchants of Tokyo and Yokohama, and many Americans saw him off at the English Hatoba,

FIRES.

Fire broke out on May 20th in the district of Momofu near Sendai destroying thirty-two houses.

About midnight on May 22nd, fire broke out in a small tea-house, the Miyakogawa-ter, Sumiyoshi-cho, Ichome, Yokohama, destroying the building. Negligence is reported to be the cause.

Fire broke out about 8.40 a.m. on May 24th in Miyakawa-cho, Yokohama. The outbreak originated in the tea-firing godown of the Nippon Seicha Kaisha and the flames spread through to the adjoining building, which was occupied by the Ito-ya, sugar merchants. Both buildings were entirely destroyed. As to the cause, it is reported by the Tobe Police that a portion of the ceiling of the godown collapsed on the tea-firing furnaces, which were all filled with burning charcoal, just as work was about to commence. The fallen ceiling could not be removed immediately and the lighted charcoal set fire to the wooden material. Three persons were injured and at once removed to the Yokohama Hospital. The godown and the tea-firing plant were insured with the Tokyo Fire Insurance Co. for fifty thousand yen, and the tea contained in the building and the adjoining shed, for about a similar amount. The building and merchandise of the sugar merchants were also insured with the Nippon Fire Insurance Co., for twenty thousand yen.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Frost was experienced in Fukushima prefecture on the morning of May 23rd.

Mr. K. Uchida, Japanese Minister to Peking, arrived at Nagasaki on May 23rd on his way to Tokyo.

A quantity of new cocoons was put on the Toyohashi market on May 22nd, the price being yen 5 90 per kucamm.

A Nagasaki telegram says that the Minnesota arrived there and entered dock for repairs. All the saloon passengers were temporarily removed to an hotel.

Mr. H. Arai, a coal merchant, living at No. 250, Yamashita-cho, Yokohama, died on May 20th. He had been suffering from consumption for some time past. Mr. Arai was well known in the Australian trade, apart from his coal business.

Prince Nakonchaisi, now in Seoul, paid a visit to Chemulpo on May 21st in company with Major Adzuma, and Mr. Furuya, a secretary of the Residency-General. On the following day, he left Seoul for Manchuria via Pyong-yang, by train.

General Viscount Sakuma, Governor of Formosa, arrived at Kelung on May 23rd by the Saikyo Maru, where he was welcomed by Baron Goto, Chief of the Administrative Department, and other high officials. The Governor left for Taipei by the noon train.

On May 24th, the wedding of Mr. Yoichi Katsura (25), eldest son of Count Katsura, and Miss Tei (20), second daughter of Baron T. Nitta, a member of the Upper House, took place at the villa of the Count, in Mita, Shiba, Tokyo. The bride is the niece of Countess Inouye.

Some persons, who are probably of the beach-combing kind, appear to have gained entrance to the Boat Club on Friday, appropriated a dingy and visited the yachting fleet. From one of the yachts a quantity of stores, including champagne, was stolen and one of the Larks was taken from her moorings. She was found next morning on the beach half way to Honmoku.

In connexion with the proposed improvement of Yokohama harbour, the members of the City Assembly met on May 17th and decided to issue bonds amounting to three million yen, yen 2,700,000 being the portion to be borne by Yokohama city according to the estimate made by the Finance Department, and yen 300,000 being the expense so far estimated of the reclamation of the foreshore along the Customs front. The interest of the loan will be at the rate of 6 per cent per annum, and the bonds will be issued at yen 95 or over against the face value of a hundred yen. The loan will be redeemed within fifty years. The foregoing proposal will be shortly submitted to an extraordinary meeting of the City Assembly.

On May 22nd, the Japan-Russian Society held a meeting at the Doki Club, Tokyo. Viscount Enomoto and many other notables were present. The society elected M. Bakhmetieff, Russian Minister, honorary president, and decided to entertain him in the near future. The Society also decided to present an address to M. Iswolsky, the new Russian Minister for Foreign Affairs, congratulating him on his appointment.

According to latest investigations, says the Noroe Tsenya, the casualties among Russian officers during the war were:—

	Manchuria.	Port Arthur.
Killed .....	709	139
Wounded severely .....	3,325	179
Wounded slightly .....	758	—
Missing .....	251	13
Captured .....	304	322
Died from disease .....	47	17
Died from wounds .....	155	52

On the evening of May 16th, five Chinamen, being part of the crew of the Osaka Shosen Kaisha's chartered steamer Kowloon, hired a sampan at the English Hatoba manned by three sendo. On the way to the ship, the sendo demanded that the Chinese should pay double the fare of yen 2.50 which the parties had agreed on previous to leaving the hatoba. When the passengers refused, the sendo manaced them with a large fish-knife and with other weapons and stole yen 30 from one of the Chinamen, yen 1.20 from another, and yen 50 each from two others. Having put the passengers on board the Kowloon, the boatmen escaped. The matter was reported to the Harbour Police Office the following morning by the Chinamen and at 2 p.m. on Thursday, three sendo were arrested at the Kinsei-ro, Magane-cho, Yokohama.

The N.Y.K.'s Australian liner, Nikko Maru, says the Kobe Herald, brought an exceptionally large complement of passengers. Her skipper, Captain E. Wilson Haswell, one of the oldest commanders in the Eastern service, has a reputation for his kind attention to the comfort and welfare of his passengers, and this doubtless accounts in some degree for the popularity of the Nikko Maru as testified by her well-filled list of cabin occupants. We understand, in fact, although the modesty of Captain Haswell did not permit us to obtain confirmation from him, that during the voyage which has just been completed the passengers united to present him with a flattering address and mementoes in the form of silver cigar cases as tokens of gratitude for the attentions which they had received. Many of Captain Haswell's friends will doubtless be glad to learn of this proof of his popularity with the clients of the N.Y.K.

A Vladivostock report to the Jiji says that General Altamonoff, commander of the fortress has been released, being succeeded by Major-General Ilmann. The new commander arrived at his post on May 12th. This officer was one of the staff of General Stoessel at Port Arthur during the investment and was afterwards detained at Nagoya as a prisoner. It is added by the correspondent that the Russian military authorities have appointed him specially with a view to remodelling the defences on the experience obtained at Port Arthur. The same report says that public traffic on the Siberian Railway has been re-opened, the fares being as follows:—

FROM VLADIVOSTOCK.

	First Class.	Second Class.
	Roubles.	Roubles.
To Irkutsk .....	137.03	87.16
„ Moscow .....	257.58	168.76
„ St. Petersburg .....	268.78	175.96

The fares are generally lower than before the war.

THE MISSIONARY PROBLEM.

(Delivered before the Evangelical Alliance meeting, Tokyo, May 31, 1906.)

By J. H. DeForest.

It was a great pleasure to receive your President's kind invitation to speak on this occasion, because I felt, in common with you all, that these meetings would mark a turning point in the history of Christianity in Japan. And already, by the decision you have unanimously reached to merge the Evangelical Alliance into a Federation of Japanese Churches, and by your vote to appoint a committee of twenty-five Japanese to hasten if possible the corporate union of the various churches, this new departure is now virtually an accomplished fact. I heartily congratulate you on this great forward step that promises new life and power to the churches of Japan.

But, as you know, this new purpose to form an independent Japanese Church, one that shall be wholly self-directing and self-governing, concerns very deeply the future of us missionaries from abroad. Indeed, for the last ten or fifteen years "The Missionary Problem" has been more or less discussed by you Japanese brethren, and you have in your papers and magazines offered us much public advice, while all these years we missionaries have kept silence. It seems to me now that we ought not to let you have the monopoly of the discussion of this problem that so vitally concerns us, but that we also should open our mouths and hearts and frankly say what we think of our own position and of our future. In what I shall say, please remember that I am not the official representative of the missionary body, but speak simply my own views and convictions.

First of all, you should sympathetically bear in mind that we missionaries are children of Western Christianity, of sectarian Christianity. We are not to blame for being born in Western lands, under Western forms of our religion. We are children of our religious traditions and environment, and inherit the glorious fruits of a great religious evolution. Whatever of evils there are in our sectarian Christianity, there are far greater blessings. In working out the problem of religious liberty our ancestors did the best they knew, and for their age and limitations they did the best possible work. They may have been narrow in their knowledge of the world and in their interpretation of Christian truth, but on the whole they had the Christ-spirit of self-sacrifice and His intense love of righteousness and His belief in the exalted worth of every individual. Whatever mistakes they made in developing sectarian churches must be largely laid to their age and environment. The founders of these various churches were truly great men and they wrought nobly in the solution of problems that often involved intense sufferings and even death.

And when, in the early part of the nineteenth century, they awoke to hear Christ's ever new command, "Go and teach all nations," they sent out their missionaries, believing in the universality of Christ's teachings and of His redemption. They saw at once the weakness of sectarian missions, and actually formed union mission boards. I may say that our American Board has always been ready to adopt any well qualified persons as missionaries regardless of their denominations, and even here in Japan at first our mission had a Baptist, a Methodist, an Episcopalian, and a Presbyterian.

But sectarian zeal prevailed widely, with the inevitable result that as soon as the work took on form and organization, it had to be some form of sectarian Christianity. We all have the same Bible and accept the same risen Saviour and profoundly believe in the one Father of all men. Yet of necessity we had to give you the religious forms and creeds of the churches that sent us, forms and creeds that grew up in the West under entirely different conditions. We therefore had to be anxious that our respective denominations should each become the most successful, and we had to be religious rivals trying to pull all the water possible into our own paddy field so as to increase our own denominational influence.

We came also with the theologies of our ancestors, in which the peoples of the East were all lumped as "heathen" and "idolaters," all under the darkness and superstitions of religions that we called "false." Believing that your millions were all in the broad road to hell, one great motive of mission work was pity, which was naturally linked with the feeling of superiority towards inferiors. Our missionary hymns and prayers had much of the "heathen" in them, and our most stirring sermons were on such subjects as, "The Guilt of the Pagan."

In short, the missionary work of the nineteenth century may well be called extraterritorial Christianity. Though less rough and rasping than political extraterritoriality, it was essentially an attempt to establish in the East our Western denominational churches and our Western creeds, with governing boards in the West legislating for the Christians of the East, and bodies of foreign missionaries here holding their secret sessions in which to decide the policy and methods of native Christians and the places and salaries of native evangelists. It is this extraterritorial system that, in my judgment, is responsible for the larger part of the misunderstandings and friction between you and us.

But right here, let me say that this was the only large way in which foreign missions could work in the last century. Political extraterritoriality, though you bitterly resented it and hated us for it, was the only large and safe way in which the West could begin friendly relations with the East. So long as you held to trial by torture, we who had won a higher place in civilization, could never consent to come under Japan's old laws. And you yourselves allow that our course was just and right, for you who now have put into full practice the open courts and equal laws of the West, carry on precisely the same extraterritoriality in Korea and China, where they still have trials by torture.

So in the imperfect knowledge and intercourse between the East and West of the nineteenth century, the only successful and enthusiastic missionary work possible was this extraterritorial Christianity—an attempt to transplant Western creeds and sects into Eastern soil. But all the while the larger heart of Christendom was becoming dissatisfied with the workings of this divided Christianity both at home and abroad. For many decades the voices of the Christian West have been growing louder and louder for Christian unity of some real kind, until now the actual accomplishment of various union movements is bringing joy and hope to the church universal, and is a sign of a larger and possibly all-embracing union of Christian forces.

While I am speaking only for myself, I truly believe that many missionaries of many denominations are coming to see the comparative fruitlessness of strictly denominational evangelism in such a land as yours, and are praying for the larger successes that must result from such a federation as you have just made. We believe that in the evolution of foreign missions a new era is dawning, based on a far better mutual knowledge of the East and West, and upon wider visions of God's plan for all his children. We believe that with the growing faith and resources of the Japanese Christians, the time has come for you to make an independent Japanese Christianity that shall embody the spirit of righteousness and self-sacrifice as seen so prominently in your own history—a Christianity that shall have vital relations to Japanese society, and that shall, unfettered by any Western forms and creeds, go forward in the great work of making Japan a Christian nation.

I have just witnessed two purely Japanese Christian movements that filled me with joy and hope and thanksgiving, because they were a series of revival meetings planned wholly by Japanese, carried on for three weeks entirely by Japanese, and paid for by Japanese Christians. The results were far greater than any similar movement on the part of missionaries could have produced. It seems to me that the time has come when you must take, as rapidly as possible, the full direction of all forms of Christian work in the empire, for the responsibility is now yours rather than ours, and God's voice plainly calling you to do the great and unique work of Christianizing your nation is audible even to us. You have no longer to consider whether Western denominationalism and Western interpretations of religious truth are fitting for Japan. Yours is now the blessed privilege of making a living victorious Japanese Christianity that shall be as vitally related to Japan as English Christianity is to England, or American Christianity is to America, or Roman Catholicism is to Italy and Spain.

The scenic beauty of your Island Empire is indeed glorious, and lovers of the glories of nature are pouring into Japan in rapidly increasing numbers to gaze upon your peerless mountains, your crater lakes, and inland seas. But the beauty of our New England scenery also has its splendours, with its granite mountains and innumerable lakes, its grassy meadows and sheltered harbours. Thus we have two great types of scenic beauty widely differing, one the result of your Jitani volcanoes and earthquakes, the other resulting from the glaciers that planed off our mountains, leaving thousands of lakes and lakelets between the rounded hills. Both sceneries are wonderfully beautiful; both are based on the same essentials, land and water; and this earth of ours is all the richer in glory for having two scenic types, one the child of fire, the other born of ice.

In the same way there is divine room for the evolution of Eastern Christian forms and faiths that shall constitute a different variety from those of the West, and which will make Christianity all the richer in its manifestations as the universal religion. You have the right and privilege and duty of evolving, under the leading and inspiration of the Holy Spirit of God, your own Christian Church or churches, in such ways as shall best take hold of the social and national life of your beloved Japan.

What then will become of us missionaries? For myself, I have no hesitation in saying that if you can make a powerful Church of Japan, one that shall be a light to the nation at home and to the great nation beyond, as I believe you can, I am ready to go home with joy and thanksgiving, and spend my remaining years in telling there what God hath wrought here. That at last the churches of Japan have arrived at this great desire and purpose is a solid proof that, however faulty our work as missionaries has been, it is a success, nay, the greatest success possible under existing conditions, and we may well be content to plan to withdraw from Japan.

On the other hand, if you want such help as we can render, I for one am glad to remain, and in deepest sympathy as a friend and brother do whatever I can to aid in this great work which is only begun, and which will require heroic efforts and sufferings and long sacrifices before the final victory. We missionaries have markedly changed and have abandoned the nineteenth century missionary motive of pity, which was intensified by our ignorance of world conditions. We have learned the lesson that Dr. Hiraiwa kindly gave us at our Conference of 1900, when he said:—"The motive for missionary work should not be that of pity or anything of the kind, but should be that which is higher and grander, based on the respect and true sympathy for the material progress and educational development made in our country." We Christians of the West are trying to rise above our denominational spirit, and we shall rejoice to see a new branch of the Church of Christ arise here that shall be truly Christ's and truly yours.

The satisfactory solution of the missionary problem lies, in my judgment, in the doing away with extraterritorial methods and in a return to the basal principle of the first great missionary, Paul. Like him we would not have dominion over your faith, your churches, your creeds, your forms of worship, but in all things we would be simply helpers of your joy.

CORRESPONDENCE.

A TRAVELLER'S PROTEST.

(TO THE EDITOR OF THE "JAPAN MAIL.")

SIR,—I wish to communicate certain facts which will interest the travelling public, so largely represented in the Far East. I purchased in Hongkong a through ticket to Paris from the Toyo Kisen Kaisha and commenced my voyage on the 27th April by steamer Hongkong Maru, intending to go as far as Yokohama in that vessel. Having many friends in Shanghai, I naturally enquired from all the foreign officers of the ship how long she would remain at Shanghai. I was told that the Company's launch would reach that port about 11 a.m. and leave at 2 p.m., affording barely 2 hours ashore. I was also told that the steamer herself would only leave Woosung late at night. As there is a railway between Shanghai and Woosung I discussed the possibility of joining the steamer by rail at Woosung and thence by the launch (always ready) of the Hotel. No objections were made to this plan, and in a conversation with the captain he told me the steamer would leave about 11 p.m. on the 30th April.

On the morning of our arrival at Woosung I made further enquiries and was told that to remain at Shanghai and rejoin at Woosung I must consult the Medical Officer of the U.S. Consulate General at Shanghai, Dr. Ranson, and obtain his permission, as he had to inspect the passengers on the Company's launch prior to their leaving Shanghai.

About half an hour before reaching Shanghai, I noticed on the launch the Purser and Pilot, and I asked the former to enquire from the latter when the Hongkong Maru would leave, and he answered 11 p.m.

As soon as I was ashore I proceeded to the residence (I found out the address at the Consulate General) of Dr. Ranson, who very kindly dispensed me from the medical inspection at 2 p.m. on the Company's launch.

Having complied with all the directions given to me on board, I visited some of my friends in Shanghai and about 5 p.m., in company with 2 of them, proceeded by rail to Woosung, which we reached before 6 p.m. I asked the hotel proprietor for his launch to take me over to the Hongkong Maru, but as soon as he heard the name of the steamer, he told me she had left at 4.30 p.m. We did not believe him, but further enquiries brought the same answer. An officer of the Imperial Maritime Customs, however, told us that when he had been on board they had told him that the steamer would leave after 8 p.m.

Next day I went to see the Agent of the Company at Shanghai, Mr. Tilden, who very kindly sent a wire to Nagasaki informing that I was rejoining the steamer at Yokohama. He reassured me about my baggage, saying that my cabin would be locked up as was usual in such cases.

My friends in Shanghai had been surprised how I had been misinformed about the departure of the steamer and thus misled into losing my passage, but at Yokohama further unpleasant surprises awaited me.

I came up by S. S. Trieste and though I left 36 hours after the Hongkong Maru I arrived at Yokohama only about two hours after her. I proceeded at once to the Hongkong Maru, and found to my great astonishment that another passenger had been put into my cabin and my baggage had been removed into the luggage room—all the articles I had left about in the cabin had been roughly bundled up in the dirty shirts.

I protested indignantly with the local Manager of the Toyo Kisen Kaisha, but as he has declined to offer any reparation and make befitting apologies, he has assumed the whole responsibility for the actions of his subordinates.

I have shown that I had informed every foreign officer on the ship that I intended to come down by rail and they had offered no objections. I had complied with all the directions they gave me. I only lost my passage because the captain suddenly changed the hour of departure.

But even if I had lost my passage through my own fault, it was the duty of the steamer people to respect my cabin and only use it and tamper with my baggage under the strongest necessity. There was however none: there were few passengers from Hongkong and everybody that I know of had a separate cabin. Most of the passengers got off at Shanghai, and though some were taken on, they were less than those landed. There was therefore absolutely no necessity to use my cabin. Besides it is the invariable custom of passenger steamers to give separate cabins whenever they are sufficient, so that if I had continued my voyage from Shanghai on the same steamer they would certainly have given me a separate cabin, but as I was not there, they simply disregarded my rights and bundled my things into the luggage room.

I send for publication these indefensible and outrageous proceedings to pillory the persons concerned and thus to prevent any repetition on other passengers.

Yours, etc.

Z. VOLPICELLI.

(TO THE EDITOR OF THE "JAPAN MAIL.")

SIR,—In last Saturday's issue of your journal, a communication headed "A Traveller's Protest," appeared in your Correspondence column. May we ask you to kindly print our reply to same?

Mr. Volpicelli, under the date of May 7th, wrote us from the Club Hotel of this city, making practically the same complaint as that appearing in the Japan Mail on the 19th inst.

We immediately took the subject up with Captain Bent, Commander of the Hongkong Maru, and were informed by that gentleman that not once, during the voyage referred to, had he had the pleasure of conversing directly with Mr. Volpicelli. Captain Bent also informed us that a notice of the time of departure of the launch from Shanghai had been posted in the Hongkong Maru and that it is always understood that passengers should return by the launch or be on board the steamer by the time of the launch's return to the same, as it is impossible to tell precisely when the steamer can leave Woosung, the sailing—as every one who has been at Woosung knows—depending on the condition of the weather and the tide.

(This explanation was furnished Mr. Volpicelli in our letter of May 9th, to that gentleman.)

Mr. Volpicelli, in his communication, notes, "Next day I went to see the Agent of the Company at Shanghai, Mr. Tilden, who very kindly sent a wire to Nagasaki informing them that I was rejoining the steamer at Yokohama."

We quote the translation of the cable referred to, by Mr. Tilden for Mr. Volpicelli: "Please communicate Purser Chapman, steamer Hongkong Maru, Mr. Volpicelli sails steamer Trieste Yokohama direct if late land baggage Yokohama." Mr. Chapman, knowing the uncertainty of Mr. Volpicelli's arrival at Yokohama before the sailing of the Hongkong Maru for San Francisco, instructed Mr. Richards, Chief Steward of the steamer, to personally supervise the removal of the gentleman's baggage. In our office we have the letter received by Purser Chapman from Mr. Richards stating that he, personally, had delivered the baggage to Mr. Volpicelli and that the only complaint made by that gentleman on receiving same was to the effect that his soft felt hat had been damaged by having been folded up. Mr. Richards further states that he had carefully supervised the removal of the baggage to see that everything should be properly cared for.

Mr. Volpicelli states: "It was the duty of the steamer people to respect my cabin and only use it and tamper with my baggage under the strongest necessity." The gentleman evidently overlooked the first part of his communication where he has stated, "I commenced my voyage on the 27th April, by steamer Hongkong Maru intending to go as far as Yokohama in that vessel." He has also apparently overlooked the cable instructions (sent with his full knowledge by Mr. Tilden, the agent at Shanghai) noting, "if late land baggage at Yokohama." Naturally, under these instructions, the steward prepared the baggage for landing.

Concerning the latter portion of Mr. Volpicelli's communication where he writes, "There was therefore absolutely no necessity to use my cabin," etc., we beg to say that the gentleman was evidently in ignorance of the passenger list of the Hongkong Maru from Yokohama. As a matter of fact, there were available on this steamer thirty-eight cabins only and when the steamer left Yokohama, there were eighty-two cabin passengers, not including two children, clearly proving that each cabin had two occupants at least and some of them more.

Those who have favoured our line are well aware that we have always endeavored to do our utmost to make the travelling public as comfortable as possible while on our steamers. We regret exceedingly the misunderstanding on the part of Mr. Volpicelli, but, at the same time, we feel it our duty to place the matter before the public in the proper light.

Thanking you for kindly giving to the above space in your columns, we remain,

Yours faithfully,

T. ISAKA,

Manager, T. K. K., Yokohama Office.

Yokohama, May 21st, 1906.

(TO THE EDITOR OF THE "JAPAN MAIL.")

SIR,—Before leaving I can spare a few minutes to answer Mr. Isaka's letter: he has made my task easy.

When I wrote I was convinced that all who knew me, and I have been 25 years in the Far East, would not hesitate to prefer my trained unbiased judgment to that of the young captain of the Hongkong Maru, more especially as my version fits in with the facts. But Mr. Isaka assists me considerably by stating that the Captain declares never to have spoken to Mr. Volpicelli. Like the Bourgeois Gentilhomme who had spoken prose all his life without knowing it, so the Captain had spoken with me without knowing that I was Mr. Volpicelli. Of course I do not carry my card attached to my sleeve, but the captain had a broad band and three small ones of gold lace which would make him an admiral in any Navy of the world. Mr. Isaka will not get anybody in his senses to believe, that I, naturally ignorant of the special regulations of the United States, should have proceeded with great trouble and some loss of precious time to Dr. Ransom to find out if I need not come to the Company's launch, leaving Shanghai at 2 p.m. All this information could only have been furnished by the foreign officers of the Hongkong Maru to assist me joining the steamer at Woosung in the evening.

Mr. Isaka shows that he has a hopeless case when he mentions that the Hongkong Maru was full up from Yokohama to San Francisco. He might as well have stated that exports of coal from Moji were steady, quality good. I did not want my cabin from Yokohama to San Francisco but from Shanghai to Yokohama, as I had paid for it, and there were very few passengers on board and as I had been negligently left ashore at Shanghai it was their absolute duty as well as common politeness and decency to respect my cabin for a few days.

If I had to remain in this delightful country, I would bring Mr. Isaka into court, where very soon he would find his mistake. The cui bono argument would appeal at once to the judges. I had every inducement to be careful, and was so, as I proceeded at once to Dr. Ransom. Unfortunately the matter seems to have been of no importance to those on board and Mr. Isaka seems very pleased with the whole business. Of course I paid for my passage from Shanghai to Yokohama; I had no food and my things were taken out of my cabin, so he may consider that it has been a very remunerative business on a small scale.

As further evidence, if any were required, to show the difference between my carefulness and the confusion on the Hongkong Maru, I may mention that after all the trouble I had had, and the investigation held by Mr. Isaka the steamer left without leaving a stop-over ticket for me, so when I applied for my berth on the steamer Coptic the Agent told me that I must write to Mr. Isaka to get the matter arranged. Still Mr. Isaka accepts the garbled version of the captain and officers of the Hongkong Maru and does not accept mine—I sincerely pity him. The whole matter is incomprehensible to me. I have always found the Japanese the politest and kindest of people. Mr. Matsuda, the Agent of the Toyo Kisen Kaisha at Hongkong, was very kind to me, and perhaps the greatest surprise of all this disagreeable business has been to find Mr. Isaka so different.

Yours, etc.

Z. VOLPICELLI.

TELEGRAMS.

(REUTER'S SPECIAL SERVICE.)

THE COLONIAL MARRIAGES BILL.

London, May 17.

The Colonial Marriages Bill has been unanimously read a second time in the House of Lords. It legalises in England colonial marriages with a deceased wife's sister.

THE DUMA BEARDS THE TSAR.

The Duma's address to the Tsar is couched throughout in the most uncompromising terms, and it concludes with the declaration that the nation is thirsting for a full political amnesty, which can not be denied or delayed.

THE ANGLO-JAPANESE BANK.

The prospectus has been issued of the new Anglo-Japanese Bank with a capital of two millions sterling, of which only half will be called up.

OXFORD AND THE CHINESE COMMISSIONERS.

On Friday Oxford confers honorary degrees on the Chinese Commissioners.

JAPAN SOCIETY'S DINNER.

London, May 18.

Lord Redesdale presided at the Japan Society's dinner. He dwelt on the Mikado's gracious reception of the Garter Mission and said that Japan was in many things a century ahead of the times.

Count Mutsu, Duke Tsaitse and many other Japanese and Chinese of distinction were present at the dinner.

THE DUMA.

Later.

The debate in the Duma dealt minutely with the clauses of the Address to the Throne. The speeches were limited to five minutes. Many extravagant proposals were made.

ROOSEVELT AND RAILWAY RATES.

The Washington Senate is angrily debating President Roosevelt's attitude toward the Railway Rates Bill. The Democrats are accusing him of duplicity in siding with the Republicans after making advances towards the Democrats.

THE CHINESE CUSTOMS.

Sir Edward Grey, speaking in the House of Commons, said that the Chinese Government maintain that the appointment of an Administrator-General of Customs is a matter of internal government and that they are within their rights in appointing a Chinese to the control of the Customs. They disclaim any intention to disregard the loan agreements of 1896 and 1898 providing that the administration of the Customs should remain unchanged during their currency.

ANGLO-GERMAN REUNION.

London, May 19.

The "Eighty" Club has banquetted the German burgomasters now visiting England. Lord Tweedmouth and Mr. Winston Churchill made speeches which were most cordial in their sentiments. The latter declared that the British had a real affection for the great German people, and he paid tribute to the Kaiser as the faithful servant of peace.

LABOUR BILL REJECTED.

The British House of Lords has rejected the Labour Bill, prohibiting aliens entering Great Britain in reference to strikes, which the House of Commons had passed without discussion.

The Labourites are in a state of the utmost indignation, and have raised a question in the House of Commons, asking how long a House totally irresponsible to the country is to be tolerated.

NAVAL DISASTER AT PORT SAID.

Later.

Torpedo-boat No. 56 capsized at Port Said and seven men were drowned.

COUNT WITTE ON AMNESTY.

Count Witte, in the course of a strong reactionary speech before the Council of the Empire, declared that amnesty would be the prelude to a revolution whereat civilization would stand aghast.

GERMAN BURGOMASTERS IN ENGLAND.

King Edward received the German burgomasters at Buckingham Palace.

The Lord Mayor entertained the visiting burgomasters to lunch at the Mansion House.

The Kaiser telegraphed his sincere thanks for London's reception of the burgomasters.

PANAMA CANAL.

Influenced largely by the San Francisco disaster, the Senate at Washington has reported in favour of a sea-level canal at Panama.

CHANNEL FLEET TO VISIT KRONSTADT.

London, May 20.

The Daily Telegraph states that the Channel Fleet is to visit Kronstadt at the end of July.

AN ANGLO-RUSSIAN UNDERSTANDING.

The Standard says that negotiations for an Anglo-Russian understanding, relating to Turkey, Persia, Afghanistan and Tibet, have reached an advanced stage, and will be completed when the new Russian Constitution is in working order.

THE AMERICAN RAILWAY RATE BILL.

Later.

The Senate have passed the Railway Rate Bill with amendments chiefly providing for the ratification of decisions of the Interstate Commerce Commission by the law courts, against which President Roosevelt has long fought. The measure now goes to a conference of Committees of both Houses.

THE SECOND PEACE CONFERENCE.

London, May 21.

It is practically settled that the second Peace Conference will not meet before May, 1907.

THE ZULU RISING.

The Zulu rebel chief Messenter has informed the British officials that Sigunanga and other important chiefs are anxious to surrender, being much impressed by the British military operations. Native women who surrendered say that the Zulu plans were upset by the British energy.

THE U.S. NAVY.

London, May 22.

Rear-Admiral Mason, Chief of American Naval Ordnance, declares that, owing to the parsimony of Congress, the American Navy possesses no reserve guns and ammunition. Its ammunition, he says, is not sufficient to last the whole Navy three hours, and war would mean disaster.

THE POPE ILL.

Later.

The Pope is reported to be in bed sick. He is suffering from a complicated heart affection. All audiences are suspended.

THE TSAR AND THE DUMA.

The Tsar has informed the Duma that he is unable to receive addresses except through the Court Ministers. The Zemstvo are irritated but have decided not to make the refusal the ground of a conflict.

THE FRENCH ELECTIONS.

The present French Government has a net gain of 58 seats in the whole elections whereof the Socialist groups have gained 45. The Nationalists are the heaviest losers.

THE KING AND PRINCE ARTHUR.

The King has invested Prince Arthur of Connaught with the Victorian Chain in recognition of his mission to Japan.

THE JAPANESE TRAINING SQUADRON.

The Japanese training squadron has received a magnificent reception at Sydney.

BARON KOMURA'S APPOINTMENT.

London, May 22.

The appointment of Baron Komura as Japanese Ambassador to England is hailed with satisfaction, and he is regarded as a worthy successor to Viscount Hayashi.

OPERATIONS IN ZULULAND.

London, May 23.

General Stephenson has arrived at Pietermaritzburg en route for Zululand, to study the existing situation. This is highly significant and points to the probable near dispatch of Imperial troops.

THE GERMAN EMPEROR AND PRINCE BUELOW.

The German Emperor has written a personal letter to Prince Von Buelow warmly expressing his gratitude for his past services and hoping that they will be long retained for the benefit of the German nation.

THE POPE'S HEALTH.

Later.

The Pope is improving. He has received several of the cardinals.

OPERATIONS IN NATAL.

The columns in Natal are making huge hauls of cattle, but the rebels are successfully avoiding encounters.

THE DUMA.

The Duma received the President's notification of the Tsar's decision, and firmly agreed that the substance of the address, not the manner of its delivery, is important.

THE RUSSIAN AMBASSADOR IN TOKYO.

London, May 22.

The report by the Slovo that the new Russian Ambassador to Japan was to be recalled owing to his discourtesy to the British Ambassador, has been semi-officially denied in St. Petersburg.

GREAT BRITAIN RETAINS WEIHAIWEI.

It has been officially stated in Parliament that Great Britain has no intention of giving back Weihaiwei to China.

THE GERMAN NAVY LEAGUE.

The German Navy League is still in a state of agitation and is increasing in members, which now number over a million.

SYDNEY'S WELCOME.

The Lord Mayor of Sydney gave a banquet to the Japanese naval officers and there were also present Sir Stafford Northcote and Admiral Rawson. The speeches were most cordial.

SCENE IN THE BRITISH PARLIAMENT.

A scene occurred in the British House of Commons arising from a passage-at-arms between Mr. Chamberlain and Dr. Macnamara on the Education Bill. Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman intervened and asked Mr. Chamberlain if he doubted Dr. Macnamara's veracity. Mr. Chamberlain refused to be lectured by the Premier, and described the latter's interference as impertinent. General uproar ensued, but the Chairman refused to rule Mr. Chamberlain out of order.

GERMANY'S INTERNATIONAL STANDPOINT.

London, May 24.

The German Minister of Foreign Affairs, speaking in the Reichstag, said that there are strong grounds for assuming that German interests will not be affected by any eventual Anglo-Russian understanding with reference to Asia. Referring to the Triple Alliance, he said that the three Governments stand as firm as ever on the basis of the union. He also stated that he had recently received the most explicit assurances from Italy to the same effect. It was equally silly to talk of any weakening of the Austro-German relations. The Kaiser's visit to the Emperor Francis Joseph had not been in any wise a demonstration against Italy or Great Britain. There was no cause for any such demonstration. The warm speeches delivered by British statesmen during the visit of the burgomasters to London were heartily reciprocated by the German Government and by wide circles of the people.

(RECEIVED AT THE FOREIGN OFFICE.) THE "KATORI" LEAVES.

The transfer of the new battleship Katori into the hands of our men has been completed, and on the 20th instant she left England for Japan.

FISHERY ARRANGEMENTS.

It was recently reported that the Governor General of the Amur had issued new regulations for the coastwise fisheries. What were issued, however, were not regulations but tables with appendices showing the marks delimiting fishery stations. The number of such stations is 19 in the south-west, 8 in Saghalien and 54 in Kamchatka and Okotsk. These stations are to be let for a term of 6 years and a tax of from 200 to 400 roubles will be levied from each to pay the cost of inspection. Competitive tenders are to be handed in at Ihabarofsk by the 2nd of June. The privilege of renting stations to foreigners or of employing foreign fishermen continues to be withheld.

At the same time a table with appendix was issued showing the fishing stations in the lower waters of the Amur. The Russian stations are to be let for 6 years, the others for one year. Tenders for the former are to be handed in at the same place and time as the tenders for the coastwise fisheries mentioned above and tenders for the short-period licences are to be given in at Nicolaiisk by the 6th of June.

(RECEIVED AT THE NAVAL DEPARTMENT.) THE "KASHIMA."

The battle-ship Kashima, built at Newcastle in England, was handed over to the Japanese crew on the 23rd instant. The date of her departure is not yet fixed.

[SPECIAL TO THE JAPAN MAIL.]

THE STRANDING OF THE "ROON."

Kobe, May 18.

The N. D. L. mail steamer Roon, on her way north from Nagasaki, ran ashore on Kotsushima on the night of the 16th in heavy fog. The steamer Stanley Dollar tried to tow her off yesterday but failed.

The O. & O. steamer Coptic has not yet passed Moji and it is thought that she is rendering assistance to the stranded steamer.

(BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT WITH THE "TOKYO ASAHI SHIMBUN.")

THE DUMA.

A telegram from St. Petersburg says the Duma has reported the Tsar's refusal to accept its address from the President, and has adopted resolutions stating that the importance of the address consist in the substance, not in the methods of transmission. It has requested Stolykin to explain the alleged financial scandal in the Ministry of the Interior.

THE REPORTED ANGLO-RUSSIAN NEGOTIATIONS.

London, May 24.

The reports stating that Anglo-Russian negotiations are proceeding are entirely premature. It is believed that they emanate from Berlin with the object of creating a current of hostile Russian opinion. French politicians are convinced that Germany does not desire an Anglo-Russian entente.

AMNESTY.

The St. Petersburg Government's programme expressly reserves the question of full amnesty.

(FROM THE "HOCHI SHIMBUN.")

STOESSEL AND NEBOGATOFF.

It is reported from St. Petersburg that General Stoessel and Nebogatoff were sentenced to death on the 22nd.

MAIL STEAMERS.

NEXT MAIL IS DUE

From	Line	Steamer	Date
America.....	T. K. K.	Nippon Maru 1	Su. May 27
Hongkong.....	P. M.	Siberia	Su. May 27
Seattle.....	N. Y. K.	Shinano Maru 2	Tu. May 31
Hongkong.....	C. P. R.	Tartar 3	F. June 1
Vancouver.....	C. P. R.	Athenian 5	Sa. June 2
Europe.....	N. L. D.	Preussen	Sa. June 2
Hongkong.....	B. T.	Hyades	Sa. June 2
America.....	O. & O.	Doric	Su. June 3
Hongkong.....	T. K. K.	America Maru	Su. June 3
Vancouver.....	C. P. R.	Em. of India 5	M. June 4
Tacoma.....	B. T.	Lyra	M. June 4
Europe.....	M. M.	Oceanien	W. June 6
Hongkong.....	C. P. R.	Em. of China	Th. June 7
America.....	P. M.	Manchuria	M. June 11
Hongkong.....	G. N.	Minnesota	Sa. June 23
Seattle.....	G. N.	Dakota	Sa. June 23

- 1 Left San Francisco on the 10th inst.
- 2 Left Seattle on the 15th inst.
- 3 Left Hongkong on the 23rd inst.
- 4 Left Vancouver on the 14th inst.
- 5 Left Vancouver on the 21st inst.

NEXT MAIL LEAVES

For	Line	Steamer	Date
Hongkong.....	T. Y. K.	Nippon Maru	Tu. May 29
America.....	P. M.	Siberia	Tu. May 29
Europe.....	N. Y. K.	Tamba Maru	W. May 30
Shanghai.....	N. Y. K.	Kosai Maru	Th. May 31
Hongkong.....	P. & A.	Nicomedia	F. June 1
Europe.....	M. M.	Salazie	Sa. June 2
Australia.....	N. Y. K.	Nikko Maru	Sa. June 2
Vancouver.....	C. P. R.	Tartar	Sa. June 2
Hongkong.....	C. P. R.	Athenian	Sa. June 2
Europe.....	P. & O.	Dongola	Su. June 3
Tacoma.....	B. T.	Hyades	Su. June 3
Hongkong.....	C. P. R.	Em. of India	M. June 4
Hongkong.....	O. & O.	Doric	Tu. June 5
America.....	T. K. K.	America Maru	Tu. June 5
Seattle.....	N. Y. K.	Riojun Maru	Tu. June 5
Portland.....	P. & A.	Arabia	Tu. June 5
Hongkong.....	B. T.	Lyra	Tu. June 5
Vancouver.....	C. P. R.	Em. of China	F. June 8
Europe.....	N. D. L.	Preussen	Sa. June 9
Hongkong.....	P. M.	Manchuria	W. June 13
Seattle.....	G. N.	Minnesota	M. June 23
Hongkong.....	G. N.	Dakota	Th. June 23

LATEST SHIPPING.

ARRIVALS.

Jason, British steamer, 4,880, Steeves, 18th May.—Liverpool via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.
Scotsman, Japanese steamer, 1,065, 18th May.—Yokosuka, Ballast.—Japanese.
Kasuga Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,214, K. Kohri, 18th May.—Shanghai via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Hiroshima Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,035, S. Wada, 18th May.—Hakodate, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Rosetta Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,216, K. Hayashi, 18th May.—Kobe, General.—Toyo Kisen Kaisha.
Pulawan, British steamer, 4,995, A. E. Street, 18th May.—London via ports, General.—P. & O. S.N. Co.
Manchu Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,284, T. Ohta, 19th May.—Rangoon, Rice.—Toyo Kisen Kaisha.
Matsuyama Maru, Japanese, 1,959, Y. Kishi, 19th May.—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Yechigo Maru, Japanese steamer, 712, A. Yamashita, 19th May.—Yokkaichi, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Coptic, British steamer, 2,744, Wm. Finch, 20th May.—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—O. & O. S.S. Co.
Dencaion, British steamer, 4,476, M. H. F. Jackson, 20th May.—Liverpool via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.
Victorious, British steamer, 2,232, Pickthorn, 20th May.—London via ports, General.—Dodwell & Co., Ltd.
Mike Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,060, I. Shimizu, 21st May.—Otaru via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Forwards, German steamer, 1,027, C. Ulderup, 21st May.—Chefoo via Nagasaki, General.—Smith Baker & Co.
Dongola, British steamer, 4,723, G. Philipps, 21st May.—Bombay, Mails and Mails.—P. & O. S.N. Co.
Kumamoto Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,237, T. Suka, 21st May.—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
China, American steamer, 3,186, D. E. Friele, 22nd May.—San Francisco via Honolulu, Mails and General.—P. M. S.S. Co.
Kisakata Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,470, K. Yoshihira, 22nd May.—Takao via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Salazie, French steamer, 2,089, Aillard, 23rd May.—Marseilles via ports, Mails and General.—M. M. S.S. Co.
Tjilatjap, Dutch steamer, 2,475, H. Kooops, 23rd May.—Java via ports, General.—Ed. van Nierop & Co.
Higo Maru, Japanese steamer, 882, N. Nielsen, 23rd May.—Bonin Islands, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Indrasanika, British steamer, 3,367, Wilker, 23rd May.—New York via ports and Suez, General.—Jardine, Matheson & Co.
Toyo Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,584, K. Munekata, 23rd May.—Kuchinotsu, General.—Ogino.
Seiun Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,396, T. Matsushita, 23rd May.—Tinko, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Chinima, British steamer, 1,349, Harris, 24th May.—Shanghai via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.
Nikko Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,434, E. W. Haswell, 24th May.—Melbourne and Sydney via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Kokura Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,591, R. Yamanoichi, 25th May.—Hakodate, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Yechigo Maru, Japanese steamer, 712, A. Yamashita, 24th May.—Yokkaichi, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Kumamoto Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,237, T. Suka, 24th May.—Yokkaichi, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

DEPARTURES.

Sado Maru, Japanese steamer, 3,856, G. S. Lapraik, 18th May.—Otaru via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Empress of Japan, British steamer, 3,003, H. Pybus, 18th May.—Vancouver, B.C., Mails and General.—C. P. R. Co.
Manica, British steamer, 2,657, R. Leslie, 18th May.—Moji, Ballast.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Caledonien, French steamer, 2,100, C. Gregory, 19th May.—Marseilles via ports, Mails and General.—M. M. S.S. Co.
Eastern, British steamer, 2,272, S. H. Powell, 19th May.—Australia and New Zealand via ports, Mails and General.—Cornes & Co.
Pocasset, British steamer, 1,726, W. N. James, 19th May.—Kobe, Ballast.—Samuel Samuel & Co.
Anhui, British steamer, 1,350, A. H. Harris, 19th May.—Shanghai via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.

Kooloon, German steamer, 1,487, Keer, 20th May.—Kobe, General.—Osaka Shosen Kaisha.
Hiroshima Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,035, S. Wada, 20th May.—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Matsuyama Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,959, Y. Kishi, 20th May.—Newchwang, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Benmohr, British steamer, 1,935, Alex. Webster, 20th May.—London via ports, General.—Cornes & Co.
Yechigo Maru, Japanese steamer, 712, A. Yamashita, 21st May.—Yokkaichi, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Matsuyama Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,959, Y. Kishi, 21st May.—Otaru via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Coptic, British steamer, 2,744, Wm. Finch, 22nd May.—San Francisco via Honolulu, Mails and General.—O. & O. S.S. Co.
Kagoshima Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,716, T. Tibbals, 22nd May.—Bombay via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Kumamoto Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,237, T. Suka, 22nd May.—Yokkaichi, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Mike Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,060, I. Shimizu, 22nd May.—Kobe, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Jason, British steamer, 4,880, G. T. Steeves, 22nd May.—London and Antwerp via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.
Zoroaster, British steamer, 2,384, John Ewan, 22nd May.—Moji, Ballast.—Cornes & Co.
China, American steamer, 3,186, D. E. Friele, 23rd May.—Hongkong via ports, Mails and General.—P. M. S.S. Co.
Forwards, German steamer, 1,027, C. Uderup, 23rd May.—Petrovavloski, General.—Smith, Baker & Co.
Kasuga Maru, Japanese steamer, 2,214, K. Kohri, 24th May.—Shanghai via ports, Mails and General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Higo Maru, Japanese steamer, 882, N. Nielsen, 24th May.—Yokkaichi, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.
Choko Maru, Japanese steamer, 1,216, C. Misaki, 24th May.—Takau via ports, General.—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

PASSENGERS.

ARRIVED.

Per British steamer Coptic, from Hongkong via ports:—Mr. C. D. Edwards, Capt. W. C. T. Jones, Mr. C. H. Hanchett, Mrs. C. H. Hanchett, Mrs. Pretzell, Miss Pretzell, Mr. H. C. Breeden, Mrs. H. C. Breeden, Mr. G. Lupton, Mr. A. Lupton, Mr. H. Wilson, and Mr. J. S. Clark, in cabin. For San Francisco:—Mr. W. H. Dodds, Mr. A. R. Tufts, Mr. J. M. Hoover, Mr. W. D. Lyon, Mr. M. Gravel, Mrs. M. Perreault, Miss Perreault, Mr. G. V. Wille, Mrs. Woodsum, Mr. Ames Howlett, Mr. T. C. Cuvelier, Mr. W. L. Bernard, Mr. W. W. Watson, Mr. E. J. Tatten, Mr. J. J. Sullivan, Dr. Duentzen, Master Kraemer, Mr. F. B. Lonen, Miss Dr. Woerner, Mr. H. C. Anderson, Mr. W. C. Barrett, Mr. W. P. Williams, Mr. F. Trunkett, Mrs. F. Trunkett, Mr. G. V. Benest, Mr. R. Barker, Mr. M. Coudereau, Miss M. A. Rockhill, Miss L. Robinson, Mrs. Thos. Haskins, Capt. N. Pratt, Miss F. A. Straffer, Mr. Stanley J. Edwards, Rev. V. H. Forsythe, and Mr. G. V. Bennett in cabin.

Per American steamer China, from San Francisco via Honolulu:—Miss Helen A. Alexander, Mr. Victor Bovo, Miss J. Brownlee, Miss C. J. Brownlee, Mr. C. M. Guenther, Mrs. M. E. Hamilton, Mr. S. Hori, Mr. Edw. Holth, Mr. K. Ogura, Mrs. A. B. Mackay, Mr. J. L. Sardy, and Mrs. J. L. Sardy, in cabin. For Kobe:—Mr. M. M. Stern, in cabin. For Nagasaki:—Miss Z. Robinson, in cabin. For Manila:—Mr. J. K. Arnold, Mrs. E. M. Brinton, Mr. R. D. Bennett, Mr. H. M. Caloir, Miss A. M. Donaldson, Mr. S. L. Davis, Mr. E. B. Elder, Mr. W. W. Francis, Mr. B. M. Little, Mr. G. B. Mitchell, Mr. J. C. Nichols, Miss M. R. Overton, Mr. W. M. Pickell, Mr. J. C. Parker, Miss G. V. Rhodes, Mr. Rutledge, Mr. L. H. Selwartz, Mr. M. M. Thompson, and Mrs. A. B. Ward, in cabin. For Hongkong:—Mrs. E. Gordon, Mr. F. J. Halton, Mr. A. Mair, and Mr. A. Thaler, in cabin; Miss A. M. Green, in steerage.

Per French steamer Salazie, from Marseilles via ports:—Miss Lamargnette, Mr. Sazangaparny, Lieut. Gillies Dord, Mr. Quah Bee Chuon, Mr. Jules Filbert, Mr. Kagho Rani, Mr. Knochtin, Mrs. Bauman Rouff, Mr. Pedro Feuchais, Mr. E. Gutierrez Daird, Mr. Ah Sung, Mr. Dretnig, Mr. Chon Wan Sang, Mr. Schwyer, 43 Chinese students, Mr. Mattoni, Mr. Hargy, Mr. Chai Yui Dec, Mr. Chai Fat Ping, Mr. Wong, Mr. and Mrs. Maigrot, Mrs. Hellyer, Mr. Krohn and 2 children, and Mr. Ferrari, in cabin.

Per Japanese steamer Nikko Maru, from Melbourne via ports:—Mr. and Mrs. Hudson, Miss Hudson, Miss Salter, Mr. A. Godfree, Mr. G. Godfree, Mr. Dwyer, Miss Jones, and Mrs. Dwyer, Mr. Laurensen, Mr. L. Mareden, Miss Mareden,

Miss Taylor, Miss K. Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Taylor, Hon. and Mrs. Vansittart, Rev. McCarthy, Rev. Martin, Mr. and Mrs. J. Mackay, Mr. W. Mackay, Mr. Sheppard, Mr. B. Christy, Mr. Staughton, Mr. and Mrs. T. Stuart, Mr. A. Rudman, Mr. and Mrs. Gladstone, Mr. A. Fitzgerald, Miss Peace, Rev. and Mrs. M. Madden and 4 children, Mr. Nikolochin, Mr. G. Thomas, Mr. Matsuda, Mr. Yuwara, and Mr. Terajima, in cabin; Mr. P. Laird, and 12 Japanese, in second class; 26, in steerage.

The following passengers left Nagasaki in the German steamer Roon on the 16th May for Kobe and Yokohama:—Mr. G. Katsuda, Mr. Kawasaki, Mr. K. Sakamoto, Mr. K. Sewa, Mrs. Kuhn, child, infant and servant, Mr. H. Clement, Mrs. H. Clement, infant and servant, Mr. and Mrs. Greenwood, Mr. Morgan, Mr. S. Hara, Miss Lina Lamcke, Mr. and Mrs. R. Hayashi, Mr. A. Rasmussen, Mr. Julius Koch, Mr. Heinrich Kohler, His Ex. and Mrs. Shiro Akabane, Baron Riepenhausen, Mr. O. V. Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. Boyle, Mr. H. G. White, Mrs. Orr, Mr. Krieg, Mr. K. Ishikawa, Mrs. Petersen, Mr. and Mrs. Lagrange, Mr. Shigetomi, Miss Velvin, Mr. and Mrs. Ludwig Bade, Mr. Sophie Meyer, Mr. H. Landes, Mr. Mary Landes, Mr. Rud Landes, Mrs. H. Rasmussen and infant, Mr. Ivan Dvornischenko, Mr. Paul Homann, Dr. M. Sakurai, Mr. Gregire Sarolidis, Mr. Kengo Murakawa, Mr. F. Harada, Mr. D. Lovosky, Mr. S. Motoda, Mr. F. Harada, Mr. H. G. Ponting, Mr. F. J. H. Stone, Mrs. Ung Ki, Mrs. A. Ung Ki, Mrs. M. Ung Ki, Mr. Minami, Mr. Tsujinichi, Mrs. Kami, Mr. Tan Wood Whatt, Mr. Ng. Chun Yue, Mr. Ah Wong, Mr. L. Wong, Mr. Ah Ning, Mr. Ah Ding, Mr. Ah Son, Mr. Won-taiyow, Mr. K. No, Mr. Joh, Mrs. Tei Tabei and infant, Mr. Tsing Jung Hin, Mr. Cosiro, Mr. Tsu Je, Mr. Ren Je and infant, Mr. S. Shan San, Mr. Sun, and Mr. S. Perlmann, 16 Chinese and 2 children, in cabin.

DEPARTED.

Per British steamer Empress of Japan, for Vancouver:—Miss M. E. Altimus, Mr. C. T. Anstey, Count Armin and servant, Mrs. H. Ogden Armour, Mr. P. Ashton, Mrs. Ashton, Mr. E. C. Atkinson, Mr. Beaumont, Mrs. Beaumont, Miss Boddington, Count Bismarck Bohlen, Mr. J. W. Bridges, Dr. Harold Brown, Mrs. Harold Brown, Misses Harold Brown, Mr. D. Bruce, Mr. Henry Budge, Mrs. Henry Budge, Capt. L. Buxton, The Rev. Dr. Carman, Miss M. Child, Mr. D. R. Clark, Miss A. R. Coward, General Craigie, Mrs. Craigie, Miss Cronshaw, Mr. E. C. Davis, Mrs. E. C. Davis and maid, Mr. J. T. Disselduff, Mr. H. R. Dixon, Mrs. Dixon, Lt. Col. Downman, Lieut. E. N. F. R. Dugmore, Mr. P. Eadie, Miss H. Ferguson, Mr. Geo. Flett, Miss Gamble, Mr. L. Gibbs, Mrs. Gibbs, Mrs. W. B. Goodwin, Miss A. Gore, Mr. W. H. Graham, Mr. Gysin, Mr. A. Hancock, Mrs. Hancock, Miss Hancock, Mr. J. R. Harris, Mr. J. N. Hatch, Mr. Haywood, Mr. Hedges, Mr. C. Hiltnerman, Mr. H. Hollinghurst, Mr. R. E. Horsburgh, Mr. E. Hug, Capt. T. Jackson, Mrs. Keysworth, Miss Keysworth, Mr. Kilpatrick, Mrs. Kilpatrick, Mr. R. E. Lambert, Dr. H. Laying, Mrs. Laying and child, Mr. R. Lemka, Mrs. Lemka child and nurse, Mr. W. S. Livingstone, Mr. C. Lyall, Mrs. MacGregor and maid, Mrs. D. B. Martin, Master Martin, Mrs. A. McCallum, Miss McConnell, Mr. A. Michie, Mrs. Michie and child, Miss Moat, Mr. A. Nash, Mr. S. Neustadt, Mrs. Neustadt and Mr. Quay, Dr. Parkes, Mrs. Parkes, Miss A. M. Payson, Mr. Nore Phillips, Mrs. Nore Phillips, Mrs. F. H. Platt, Sir Robert Pullar, Mr. B. Reid, Mrs. C. Richards, Mrs. Richards, Mrs. S. A. Rieff, Miss Rigby, Dr. Roe, Mrs. Roe, Miss Ross, Mr. F. Jacob H. Schiff and valet, Mrs. Schiff and maid, Mr. E. H. Schiff, Lieut. Col. G. J. Scott, Mrs. Scott and maid, Miss Sharpe, Mr. F. Shaughnessy, Miss W. Smith, Mr. A. T. E. Smith, Mr. Ford Smith, Mrs. Ford Smith, Mr. Smitton, Rev. Dr. Sutherland, Miss W. Takahashi and maid, Mr. H. G. Turner, Lady Frances Turner and maid, Mrs. E. F. Tyson, Mr. H. P. Wadman, Miss Wadman, Mrs. C. H. Warham, Mr. C. A. Webber, Dr. R. Wharry, Mrs. Wharry, Miss Wharry, Mr. D. White, Miss Williams and maid, Mr. H. P. Wilkinson, in cabin.

Per French steamer Caledonien, for Marseilles via ports:—Mr. H. A. Scheuten, Mr. J. A. Bennett, Mr. D. H. McDemid, Mr. R. Masujima, Mr. Loewenfeld, Capt. T. M. Archdale, Mr. J. E. Yates, Mr. Loewenfeld, Mr. Lagier, Mr. F. Bonnet, Mr. Positano, Mr. Loong Chee Son, Mr. Chang Man Chee, Mr. Tang Sun Cheong, Mr. Poliakoff, Mr. K. Tsuji, Mr. Raoul Hengy, Mr. Chon Gok, Mr. K. Nakayama, and Mr. Okawa in cabin.

Per British steamer Coptic, for San Francisco via Honolulu:—Mr. H. C. Anderson, Mr. R. Barker, Mr. W. C. Barrett, Mr. H. Benest, Mr. G. V. Bennett, Mr. W. L. Bernard, Mrs. Kate Besore, child and amah, Mr. C. Ceresa, Mr. S. A. Coudrau, Miss Mary Cromelin, Mr. T. C. Cuvelier, Mr. Max. Dauchendey, Mr. W. H. Dodds, Dr. Duentzen, Mr. G. D. Edward, Mr. S. J. Edward, Mr. G. F. Feneback, Rev. V. H. Forsythe, Mr. C. Joy French, Miss D.

Graham, Miss E. M. Graham, Mr. M. Gravel, Mrs. Thos. Haskins, Mr. E. M. Heathcote, Mr. E. R. Holmes, Mr. J. M. Hoover, Mrs. J. M. Hoover, Mr. Ames, Howlett, Mr. Hans Just, Mrs. Mary S. Kirk, Master Kraemer, Mr. P. H. Kremnitz, Mr. S. Lawton, Mrs. S. Lawton, Mr. F. B. Loren, Mr. A. Lupton, Mr. E. Lupton, Mr. W. D. Lyon, Mrs. C. McArthur, Miss M. E. McCormick, Mr. C. J. W. Menck, Mr. H. A. Norton, Mrs. A. O. Norton, Miss Norton, Mr. C. G. Nix, Mrs. O. G. Nix and maid, Mr. C. B. Owen, Mrs. M. Perrault, Miss Perrault, Capt. N. Pratt, Major Von Rantenberg, Lieut. Regnault, Mr. Rud. Rieck, Mr. C. W. Roberts, Mrs. Robinson, Miss L. Robinson, Miss M. A. Rockhill, Miss F. Rica, Straeffler, Mr. J. J. Sullivan, Mr. E. J. Tatten, Mr. F. Trunkett, Mrs. F. Trunkett, Mr. A. R. Tufts, Mr. Z. Volpicelli, Mr. W. W. Watson, Mr. K. A. Weiler, Mr. G. V. Wills, Mr. W. P. Williams, Miss Effie Williamson, Miss Dr. Woerner, and Mrs. Woodsum.

Per American steamer China, for Hongkong via ports:—Mr. J. K. Arnold, Mrs. E. M. Brinton, Mr. R. D. Bennett, Mr. H. M. Calori, Miss A. M. Donaldson, Mr. S. L. Davis, Mr. E. B. Elder, Mr. W. Francis, Mrs. E. Gordon, Mr. F. J. Halton, Mr. B. M. Little, Mr. A. Mair, Mr. G. B. Mitchell, Mr. J. C. Nichols, Miss M. R. Overton, Mr. W. M. Pickell, Mr. C. J. Parker, Miss G. V. Rhodes, Miss Z. Robinson, Mr. W. E. Rutledge, Mr. L. H. Schwartz, Mr. M. M. Stern, Mr. A. Thaler, Mr. M. M. Thompson, Mrs. A. B. Ward, Miss Bertha Barin, Mr. F. E. Barto, Mrs. R. D. Carter, Miss Helen Carter, Mr. R. Colver, Mrs. B. F. Durphy, Rev. D. C. Greens, Mrs. D. C. Greens, Mr. Wm. Harris, Mr. J. L. J. Jacob, Mr. J. K. Jones and servant, Mr. A. G. Kellogg, Mr. T. J. McQuaide, Miss C. T. Robbins, Mr. G. Schultz, Mr. A. W. Stanford, Mr. F. A. Stinespring, Mr. Jos. Thebaud, and Mr. A. C. Warn, in cabin.

EXPECTED.

Per German steamer Preussen, from Europe via ports:—Mr. Richard Kalisch, Miss Edith Carrodus, Mr. Tamaki Nakajima, Mr. H. Toda, Mr. Harold Heath, Mr. Walter Osterman, Mr. Fried. Sandstedt, and Mr. Otto Ohlrichs, in cabin.

CARGO.

Per British steamer Empress of Japan, for Vancouver:—

From.	TEA.				Total.
	Chicago.	New York.	Pacific.	Other.
Hongkong.	947	—	—	202	1,149
Kobe.	—	394	393	—	694
Yokohama.	205	311	—	—	516
Total.	1,152	615	390	202	2,359

From.	SILK.				Total.
	New York.	Eastern.	Philas.	South.
H'kong & Canton.	25	—	—	—	25
Shanghai.	130	—	—	—	130
Yokohama.	191	—	—	—	191
Total.	346	—	—	—	346

SILK SHIPPERS.

Per British steamer Palermo, for London via ports:—Raw Silk for Europe, 42 bales; Waste Silk for Europe, 85 bales.

Shippers of silk per steamer Dakota, for Seattle, Wash., 16th May:—

	Bales.
Kiito Gomei Kaisha.	40
F. Strahler & Co.	5
Total.	45

	Bales.
Vivanti Bros.	23
Kiito Gomei Kaisha.	90
Mitsui Bussan Kaisha.	16
Doshin Kaisha.	15
Total.	144

Raw and Waste Silk shipped per steamer

Caledonien:—	RAW.			WASTE.
	Marseilles.	Lyons.	Milan.	Marseilles.	Italy.	Milan.
Otto Stireuli & Co.	173	—	—	—	—	—
H. Bernardin & Co.	14	—	—	—	—	—
Jewett, Bent & Co.	29	—	—	51	—	—
Ulysse Pila & Co.	23	—	—	—	—	—
Carlowitz & Co.	10	—	—	—	—	—
Silber Wolf & Co.	22	49	—	—	—	—
Siebler & Co.	20	—	—	—	—	—
F. Strahler & Co.	51	—	—	30	—	—
Bavler & Co.	91	—	—	—	—	—
Jardine, Matheson & Co.	38	—	—	20	—	—
C. Eymard.	—	—	—	40	—	—
P. Dourille.	—	—	—	3	—	—
Total.	222	207	—	144	—	—

SHIPPING IN YOKOHAMA.

STEAMERS.

Deception, British steamer, 4,476, M. H. F. Jackson, 20th May.—Liverpool via ports, General.—Butterfield & Swire.
Dongola, British steamer, 4,723, G. Philipps, 21st May.—Bombay, Mails and General.—P. & O. S.N. Co.
Indrasamha, British steamer, 3,367, Wilker, 23rd May.—New York via ports and Suez, General.—Jardine, Matheson & Co.
Iola, British steamer, 3,362, F. Alton, 26th March.—Rangoon, Rice.—Samuel Samuel & Co.
Mmtara, America steamer, 1,695, Hall, 11th May.—Yokosuka, Ballast.—Samuel Samuel & Co.
Palawan, British steamer, 4,996, A. E. Street, 18th May.—London via ports, General.—P. & O. S.N. Co.
Sikh, British steamer, 3,216, Atkinson, 6th May.—Liverpool via ports, General.—Dodwell & Co., Ltd.
Salacie, French steamer, 2,089, Aillard, 23rd May.—Marseilles via ports, Mails and General.—M. M. S.S. Co.
Tjilatjap, Dutch steamer, 2,475, H. Koops, 23rd May.—Java via ports, General.—Ed. van Nierop & Co.
Victorias, British steamer, 2,232, Pickthorn, 20th May.—London via ports, General.—Dodwell & Co., Ltd.

SAILING VESSELS.

Agenor, American ship, 1,413, H. C. Killman, 9th Jan.—Alaska, Salt Salmon.—Sale & Frazar Ltd.

LATEST COMMERCIAL.

[SPECIALLY COMPILED FOR THE "JAPAN MAIL."]
IMPORTS.

Yokohama, May 25.

The market continues dull with nothing special to chronicle.

COTTON PIECE GOODS.

	PER YARD.
White Shirting—{ 40 yds. 36 in. } ...	0.10 to 0.16
{ 50 yds. 36 in. } ...	0.10 to 0.16
Grey Shirting—8½ lb. 38½ yds. 36 inches V	4.00 to 4.50
Grey Shirting—9 lb. 38½ yds. 45 inches	4.50 to 5.25
Prints—Assorted, 24 yards, 30 inches.	2.85 to 4.65
Cotton Italians and Satteens.	0.20 to 0.40
WOOLLENS.
Flannels ...	0.50 to 0.65
Italian Cloth, 32 in.	0.35 to 0.50
Mousseline de laine, Crapes, 24 yards, 30 inches.	0.16 to 0.32
Cloths—Pilots, 54 to 56 inches	0.50 to 1.00
Cloths—Presidents, 51 to 65 inches	0.90 to 1.00
Cloths—Union, 54 to 56 inches	0.50 to 1.00
Blankets—Assorted 3 to 5 lb per lb	0.50 to 0.80
PER FUR.
Velvets—Black, 35 yards, 22 inches	9.20 to 12.50
Victoria Lawns, 12 yards, 42½ inches.	0.90 to 1.80
Turkey Reds—2.8 to 3.0 lb 24-25 yards, 30 inches.	1.90 to 2.25
Turkey Reds—3.8 to 5 lb, 24-25 yards, 32 inches	2.50 to 3.65

COTTON YARN.

	PER BALL.
Nos. 2/60, Gassed	Y. 290.00 to 300.00
Nos. 2/80, Gassed	365.00 to 374.00
Nos. 2/100, Gassed	455.00 to 465.00

RAW COTTONS.

American Middling	33.50 to 34.00
Indian Broach	33.00 to
Chinese	25.00 to 28.00

METALS.

Business is on a small scale and we leave prices unaltered.

	PER POUND.
Iron or Mild Steel, Bar, flat, round and square	4.20 to 4.40
Iron or Mild Steel, Plate	4.35 to 4.65
do Sheet	4.70 to 6.00
do Hoop (¾" to 1½")	5.00 to 5.50
Galvanised Iron Sheets No. 30 G.	113.00 to 12.50
Wire Nails, Ordinary assortments	7.00 to 10.00
Tin Plates, galls. I.C.W.	7.40 to 7.65
Pig Iron, No. 3 "Redcar"	2.30

KEROSENE.

No change.
American	$3.27 to 3.47
Russian	3.34
Langkat	2.35

SUGAR.

Market very dull.
Brown Takao	7.60 to 7.80
Brown Manila	8.70 to 9.70
Brown China	7.30 to 12.00
White Java and Penang	12.60 to 13.60
White Refined	14.50 to 16.75

INDIGO.

Still nothing doing.
Java, Medium to best	Nom. 250.00 to 300.00
Calcutta, Medium to best	Nom. 180.00 to 200.00
Madras (Karyak), Medium to best	Nom. 130.00 to 160.00
Madras (Dry Leaf), Medium to best

EXPORTS.
RAW SILK.

There exists a fair demand from all quarters but light stocks do not permit of any extended business. Prices stand unaltered.

QUOTATIONS.

Filatures—Extra Best, Coarse	1,050 to 1,060
Filatures—Extra, Fine	1,080 to 1,090
Filatures—Extra, Coarse	1,040 to 1,050
Filatures—No. 1, Fine	—
Filatures—No. 1, Coarse	990 to 1,010
Filatures—No. 1½, Fine	—
Filatures—No. 1½, Coarse	—
Filatures—No. 2, Fine	—
Filatures—No. 2, Coarse	970 to 980
Common—Coarse	—
Re-reels—Extra	—
Re-reels—No. 1	—
Re-reels—No. 1½	—
Re-reels—No. 2	—
Kakedas—Gold Cup Chop Extra	—
Kakedas—Veiled Woman Chop No. 1	—
Kakedas—One Horsehead Chop No. 1½	—
Kakedas—No. 2	—
Kakedas—No. 2½	—

WASTE SILK.

There is hardly any business to report. Prices remain nominally the same.

QUOTATIONS.

Noshi—Filatures, Best	—
Noshi—Filatures, Good	—
Noshi—Oshiu, Best	—
Noshi—Oshiu, Good	55
Noshi—Oshiu, Medium	—
Noshi—Shinshiu, Best	—
Noshi—Shinshiu, Good	—
Noshi—Bushi, Best	—
Noshi—Bushi, Good	—
Noshi—Bushi, Medium	—
Noshi—Joshi, Best	—
Noshi—Joshi, Good	80 to 90
Kibiso—Filatures, Extra	—
Kibiso—Filatures, Best	110 to 120
Kibiso—Filatures, Good	90 to 100
Kibiso—Joshi, Good	40 to 60
Kibiso—Bushi, Fair	—

LEAF

The market is steady with a moderate business passing. Prices are maintained as above. Up to the evening of May 23rd, 4,920,600 lbs. had changed hands in the Yokohama market since the first appearance of the new crop.

QUOTATIONS.

Choicest	Y. 60 and upwards.
Choice	50 to 60
Finest	40 to 50
Fine	30 to 40
Good Medium	—
Medium	—
Good Common	—
Common	—

HABUTAE.

Enquiries for superior quality have been repeated from America and some from Europe; the market was therefore steady throughout the week. No special change in prices.

KANAZAWA.

Inches.	4½ me.	5 me.	5½ me.
19½	10.00	9.70	—
22½	9.80	9.50	—
27	9.70	9.20	—
36	9.35	9.10	—

"PINE-LEAVES" MARK.

Inches.	6 me.	6½ me.	7 me.	7½ me.	8 me.
22½	9.30	9.20	9.15	8.95	8.75
27	9.20	9.10	9.10	8.80	8.75
36	8.85	8.95	8.95	8.60	8.60

"GOLD" MARK.

Inches.	4½ me.	5 me.	5½ me.	6 me.
19½	10.40	10.00	9.60	9.40
22½	9.85	9.50	9.10	9.50
27	9.80	9.30	9.10	9.00
36	9.40	9.00	9.00	8.80

RICE.

Tokyo, Osaka and Kobe markets show no notable change although slight fluctuations have been experienced.

Domestic rice in Fukagawa	1,410,081
Foreign rice in Fukagawa	242,800

Delivery. Closing Price. Yen.

May	—
June	14.88
July	15.26

RICE AT WHOLESALE: STANDARD PRICE. (Tokyo.) per koku.

Superior	Yen 15.15
Medium	14.49
Common	13.89
Average	14.51

koku, 4,9629 bushels.

(Osaka.)	(Kobe.)
May ..... 14.345	May ..... 13.86
June ..... 14.4575	June ..... 14.05
July ..... 14.75	July ..... 14.41

STOCK EXCHANGE.
The market is still brisk although a slight falling off was experienced at the beginning of the week.

EXCHANGE.

London silver ¼ higher and Shanghai sterling quotations ¼ higher Hongkong being a holiday; local rates on China are lower accordingly, but other rates are unaltered.

London—Bank T.T.	1/0 3/4 @ 1/2
— Bills on demand	1/0 3/4 @ 1/2
— 4 months' sight	1/0 1/4
— Private 4 months' sight	1/0 3/4
— 6 months' sight	1/1
Paris & Lyons—Bank sight	156
— Private 4 months' sight	160 1/2
— 6 months' sight	162
Hongkong—Bank sight	per $100 105 1/2
— Private 10 days, sight	do 103 1/2
Shanghai—Bank sight	68 1/2
— Private 10 days' sight	70 1/2
India—Bank sight	151 1/2
— Private 30 days' sight	153 1/2
America—Bank sight	49 1/2 @ 1/2
— Private 30 days' sight	50
— Private 4 months' sight	50 1/2
Germany—Bank sight	108 1/2
— Private 4 months' sight	113
Bar Silver (London)	31 1/2

JAPANESE SHARE.

Yokohama, May 25, a.m.
Mean prices for Cash Delivery of Bonds and Shares, which may be held by Foreigners in their own names.

	Paid up.	1 year.	Q'tion.
	Yen.	per cent.	Yen.
Exchequer Bonds 1st Issue	100	5	98.50
Exchequer Bonds 2nd Issue	100	5	94.50
Exchequer Bonds 3rd Issue	100	5	94.50
Exchequer Bonds 4th Issue	100	6	102.00
Exchequer Bonds 5th Issue	100	6	101.20
Consolidated Bonds (Sei)	100	5	94.00

SHARE REPORT.

Yokohama, May 25, 1906.

LOCAL STOCKS.—There has been a slightly better feeling in the market during the past week although the volume of business transacted has not been considerable. Helms changed hands at yen 85. Grand Hotels can be placed at yen 225. Kiin Breweries, sellers at yen 130. Engine and Iron Works, sellers at yen 120. Club Hotels are obtainable at yen 80. Langfeldts remain at yen 45 sellers, with nothing doing. Oriental Hotels, Kobe, buyers of ordinary shares at yen 75. A few Tansan shares are on offer at par. Raub Mines, buyers at $3.

Japanese Stocks have been dealt in to a fair extent, chiefly in Tokyo City Loan Bonds, Osaka Harbour Bonds, and Yokohama Docks.

CHINA STOCKS.—According to latest telegraphic advices—Hongkong and Shanghai Banks, $850 sellers. Indo-Chinas Tls. 64 sales. China Traders, $96 buyers. Hongkong and Kowloon Wharfs $103 sellers. Hongkong Lands, $119 buyers. Humphreys' Estates, $11½ sellers. Green Island Cements, $29 sales. Shanghai Dock and Engineering Co. Tls. 115 buyers. Shanghai Lands, Tls. 119 sales.

STOCKS.	Capital.	No. of Shares.	Issue Value.	Amount Paid Up.	Reserve Fund.	At Working A'nt or Carried Forward.	Date.	Last Dividend.	For Term.	Closing Quotations.
Brett & Co. Ltd.	28,000	2800	10	10	—	—	30.6.03	6%	Year.	6.50 N.
Club Hotel, Ltd.	185,000	1850	100	100	—	—	31.3.04	7%	for 1	80 S.
Grand Hotel, Ltd.	250,000	2500	100	100	—	—	30.6.05	10%	1/2	225 Sa.
Helm Bros., Ltd.	186,000	3720	50	50	20,000	Y. 6.235.70	31.12.05	17 1/2%	1	85 Sa.
Langfeldt & Co. Ltd.	150,000	1500	100	100	—	Dr. 28,875.52	31.12.05	—	1/2	45 S.
C. Nickel & Co. Ltd.	500,000	20000	25	25	—	5,106.41	31.10.05	12%	1	34 Sa.
Japan Brewery Co. Ltd.	450,000	9000	50	50	200,000	8,702.28	31.12.05	20%	1	130 Sa.
Y. E. & Iron Works	130,000	2600	50	50	20,000	Y. 20,149.17	30.11.05	10%	1/2	120 S.
Hirano M. W. Co. Ltd.	125,000	5000	25	25	—	—	—	1st yr.	—	25 S.
Oriental H. L. old ord.	1490	50	50	50	—	—	31.8.05	12%	1	75 B.
" " new	1510	50	25	25	—	—	—	—	—	—
" " old pref.	251,000	1510	50	50	60,542.50	—	—	8%	—	63 Sa.
" " new	1250	50	25	25	—	—	—	—	—	—
" " Founders	80	12 1/2	12 1/2	12 1/2	—	—	—	—	—	—
Oriental Consolidated	G.	G.	G.	G.	—	—	—	Y.37	—	500 Sa.
Mining Co., Ltd.	$5,000,000	500,000	$10	$10	—	G. $672,093	31.12.04	$1	1905	G. $18 S.
Raub Australian Gold	£150,000	150,000	£1	£1	—	Dr. £8,745	31.3.05	48 cents.	1901	$3 B.
Mining Co., Ltd.	200,000	200,000	£1	£1	—	—	—	—	—	—

Debenture Loans.	Amount of Loan.	Face Value of Debentures.	Rate of Interest.	Interest Payable.	Closing Quotation.
Japan Brewery Company, Ltd.	200,000.00	100.00	7 per cent.	1 April and 1 Oct.	108 Sa.
Brett and Company, Ltd.	11,500.00	100.00	7 per cent.	1 June and 1 Dec.	85 S.
Yokohama United Club	250,000.00	100.00	7 per cent.	30 June and 31 Dec.	108 Sa.
C. Nickel and Company, Ltd.	50,000.00	100.00	8 per cent.	1 May and 1 Nov.	110 S.

A. C. HUTTON POTTS.
Share and General Broker.

FOR BABY'S SKIN SCALP AND HAIR

Something for Mothers to Think About

EVERY CHILD born into the world with an inherited or early developed tendency to distressing, disfiguring humours of the skin, scalp, and blood, becomes an object of the most tender solicitude, not only because of its suffering but because of the dreadful fear that the disfiguration is to be lifelong and mar its future happiness and prosperity. Hence it becomes the duty of mothers of such afflicted children to acquaint themselves with the best, the purest, and most effective treatment available, viz., THE CUTICURA TREATMENT.

Warm baths with CUTICURA SOAP, to cleanse the skin of crusts and scales and soften the thickened cuticle, gentle anointings with CUTICURA OINTMENT, to instantly allay itching, irritation, and inflammation, and soothe and heal, to be followed in the severer cases by mild doses of CUTICURA RESOLVENT PILLS (see below), to cool and cleanse the blood, are all that can be desired for the alleviation of the suffering of skin-tortured infants and children and the comfort of worn-out, worried mothers. A single set is often sufficient to cure when the best physicians fail.

Millions of Women Use Cuticura Soap

Assisted by CUTICURA OINTMENT, for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, for cleansing the scalp of crusts, scales, and dandruff, and the stopping of falling hair, for softening, whitening, and soothing red, rough, and sore hands, for baby rashes, itchings, and chafings, in the form of baths for annoying irritations and inflammations, or too free or offensive perspiration, in the form of washes for ulcerative weaknesses, and for many sensitive, antiseptic purposes which readily suggest themselves to women, especially mothers, and for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery.

CUTICURA RESOLVENT PILLS (Chocolate Coated) are prepared to meet the wants of delicate women, and sensitive children, and are pure, sweet, and tasteless. They are beyond question the most successful blood purifiers and humour cures yet compounded.

CUTICURA REMEDIES are sold throughout the world. Australian Depot: E. TOWNS & Co., Sydney. British Depot: 27-28, Charterhouse Sq., London. French Depot: 2 Rue de la Paix, Paris. FORRENS DROG and Chem. Co., Sole Props., Boston, U. S. A. "All about the Skin," free.

Lea and Perrins' Sauce.

By Royal Warrant
to
His Majesty the King.

THE ORIGINAL AND GENUINE WORCESTERSHIRE.

Taking

BOVRIL

means fortifying yourself against disease.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT

IS A HOUSEHOLD NECESSITY

It cures Rheumatism, Sclatica,
Stiff Joints,

Glandular Swellings,
Sore Throat, Quinsy, Mumps,
Burns, Piles, Fistulas, &c,

AND EVERY
FORM OF SKIN DISEASE.

Mentioned in the 1st, 2nd, 3rd, 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th, 8th, 9th, 10th, 11th, 12th, 13th, 14th, 15th, 16th, 17th, 18th, 19th, 20th, 21st, 22nd, 23rd, 24th, 25th, 26th, 27th, 28th, 29th, 30th, 31st, 32nd, 33rd, 34th, 35th, 36th, 37th, 38th, 39th, 40th, 41st, 42nd, 43rd, 44th, 45th, 46th, 47th, 48th, 49th, 50th, 51st, 52nd, 53rd, 54th, 55th, 56th, 57th, 58th, 59th, 60th, 61st, 62nd, 63rd, 64th, 65th, 66th, 67th, 68th, 69th, 70th, 71st, 72nd, 73rd, 74th, 75th, 76th, 77th, 78th, 79th, 80th, 81st, 82nd, 83rd, 84th, 85th, 86th, 87th, 88th, 89th, 90th, 91st, 92nd, 93rd, 94th, 95th, 96th, 97th, 98th, 99th, 100th.

VESSELS ON THE BERTH.

For KEELUNG, via Moji (from Kobe), 3rd, and 18th every month, at Noon, the "SAIKO MARU."—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

For KEELUNG, via Moji (from Kobe), 10th and 25th every month, at Noon, the "KOSHIUN MARU."—Osaka Shosen Kaisha.

For TRIESTE, via Kobe, Hongkong, Singapore, Penang, Colombo, Bombay, Karachi, Aden, Suez, Port Said, and Fiume, about June —, the "NIPPON."—Heller Bros.

For BOMBAY, via Kobe, Moji, Hongkong, Singapore, and Colombo, May 22nd, at 2 p.m., the "KAGO SHIMA MARU."—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

For SHANGHAI, via Kobe, Moji, and Nagasaki, May 26th, at 4 p.m., the "CHINWA."—Butterfield & Swire.

For HONGKONG, via Kobe, (Inland Sea), Nagasaki, and Shanghai, about May 29th, the "NIPPON MARU."—Toyo Kisen Kaisha.

For SAN FRANCISCO, via Honolulu, May 29th, at 3 p.m., the "SIBERIA."—P. M. S. S. Co.

For MARSEILLES, London, and Antwerp, via Kobe, Moji, Hongkong, Singapore, Penang, Colombo, and Port Said, May 30th, at Noon, the "TAMBA MARU."—Nippon Yusen Kaisha.

(毎土曜日一發行)
總發行人 エフ・ブリントナー
發行兼印刷人 エー・ビー・ブロン
発行所 横濱市山下町五十五番
ウチヤメンメーブル新聞社

The Japan Weekly Mail.

毎土曜日 A REVIEW OF JAPANESE COMMERCE, POLITICS, LITERATURE, AND ART. 一回刊行

No. 22.

REGISTERED AT THE G.P.O.
AS A NEWSPAPER.

YOKOHAMA, JUNE 2ND, 1906.

明治廿五年三月廿日
第三種郵便物認可

VOL. XLV.

CONTENTS.

Summary of News .....	264
China .....	264
Viscount Hayashi on Newspapers .....	264
The Russian Fisheries .....	264
Sir Ernest Sartorius's Reception in Japan .....	264
The Welcome Society .....	264
Korea .....	264
Death of Mr. Pitt. Peacock, M.V.O. ....	264
Russia .....	264
Official Interference in Trade .....	264
The Army .....	264
Mr. Huntington Wilson .....	264
The Japanese Railway Company .....	264
The Russian Consul-General in Korea .....	264
The Ryomansha .....	264
Saghalien .....	264
A Batti Anniversary .....	264
The Goseni Keiga Kinen .....	264
The German Embassy .....	264
Notes on Current Events .....	264
Fires .....	264
Leading Articles:—	264
Foreign Capital .....	264
The German and the Foreign Loans .....	264
The Bookshelf .....	264
Baseball .....	264
Monthly Summary of the Japanese Religious Press .....	264
Baptist Mission Conference .....	264
Public Farewell to Mr. and Mrs. Huntington Wilson .....	264
The Study of Mars .....	264
Presentation to Mr. H. S. Playfair .....	264
Plague .....	264
The Asiatic Society of Japan .....	264
Memorial Day .....	264
Customs Appeals .....	264
Athletic Sports in Yokohama .....	264
Boys' Brigade Sports .....	264
The Nippon Yusen Kaisha .....	264
Yachting .....	264
The Law Courts .....	264
Railways in China .....	264
The Monumental Charities of a Religious Newspaper .....	264
The Strawberry Tree .....	264
American Football .....	264
News of the Week .....	264
Y. M. C. A. Army Work .....	264
Correspondence:—The Finance Committee .....	264
Telegrams .....	264
Latest Shipping .....	264
Latest Commercial .....	264

"FAITS DE QUE DOIT-ADVENIR QUE POURRA!"

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

No notice will be taken of anonymous correspondence. What is intended for insertion in the "JAPAN WEEKLY MAIL," must be authenticated by the name and address of the writer, not for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

It is particularly requested that all letters on business be addressed to the MANAGER, and Cheques be made payable to same; and that literary contributions be addressed to the EDITOR.

YOKOHAMA: SATURDAY, JUNE 2ND, 1906.

BIRTH.

MR & MME G. ABLY ont l'honneur de faire part à leurs amis et connaissances de la naissance de leur fille

GABRIELLE.

Kobe 28 Mai.

MARRIAGES.

MAHER-CAMPBELL. — On Wednesday, 16th May, at the Church of the Sacred Heart, Yokohama, by the Rev. Pere Lemarchal, DANIEL, T., eldest son of the late James Maher, Rockhampton, Q., to KATHERINE, J., eldest daughter of the late John Campbell, Toowong, Brisbane, Q.

At London, on the 22nd inst, OSCAR POLLAK to Mabel, daughter of M. Makower, Esq., of London. (By cable).

DEATH.

At Shimonoseki, May 25th, N. B. HOYT, of Oakland, Cal., aged 76.

At the time of his death Mr. Hoyt, with his wife, was visiting his daughter Mrs. G. W. Hill.

The remains were cremated and will be sent to California for interment.

SUMMARY OF NEWS.

Work on the Peking-Kalgan railway is being pushed with great rapidity.

The sale of new 3 sen and 1½ sen postage stamps commenced on May 27th.

An official telegram from Lyons says that unfavourable weather is being experienced in France and Italy. Sericultural operations, however, are in a favourable state.

The new destroyer Mikazuki (New Moon) was launched on May 26th at Saseho.

A MINE was washed ashore on May 29th at the village of Yobetsu, Shakotan, Hokkaido.

The Italian Government has decided to raise the Legation in Tokyo to the rank of Embassy.

The training squadron under Rear-Admiral Shimamura left Sydney on May 28th for Thursday island.

The Nippon Red Cross Society will hold a general meeting on June 12th at Ueyo. The Empress will be present.

ACCORDING to the Hochi, the well-known Kegon waterfall at Nikko has dried up. There is no statement as to the cause.

PRINCE NAKONCHAI arrived at Mukden on the evening of May 26th from Antung. His Highness stayed at the Japan-China Club.

A SECTION of the crew on a Russian steamer now in Nagasaki has struck. Fourteen of the strikers were sent to Vladivostok on May 29th.

THE Boyeki of Yokohama says that Count Witte has been appointed Ambassador to Washington replacing Baron Rosen. He will shortly leave St. Petersburg for his new post.

At 5.30 p.m. on May 29th, T. Oshima (45) a coolie who was engaged on the Tokyo-Yokohama Electric Railway, at a point near Kanagawa, was run over by a carriage. He was killed, his head being crushed.

A LAUNDRYMAN named S. Yamazaki (55) living at Kitagata, Yokohama, committed suicide on the night of May 28th by cutting his throat with a sword. Temporary insanity seems to have been the cause.

THE Shanghai Mercury notes that typhoid fever is making rapid strides among the community there. In addition to a number of private citizens being down with it three members of the police force are stricken.

It is understood that the date of the Spanish Royal wedding was altered so as to enable the Prince and Princess of Wales, who will attend, to reach Christiania in time for King Haakon's coronation on June 3rd.

ACCORDING to the Nanfangpao a memorial has been presented to the Throne by the Chinese Board of Education, recommending the sending to Japan of all the newly appointed Superintendents of Education.

The General Commercial Guild of Changsha propose that as soon as 1,000,000 Tls. have been subscribed they will begin to build the section of the Canton-Hankow railway from Changsha to Siangtan, a distance of 90 li.

A FARMER named M. Ozawa in South Senju, Tokyo, murdered his mother by strangling her with a cord and then committed suicide by hanging himself in a plantation near by. The cause is reported to have been poverty.

THE Government has decided to remove the Saghalien Government, office from Korsakoff to Vlaimirafka. Various materials to build the office are being carried thither. The building will be completed before winter.

CAPTAIN KABURAKI has been promoted to the rank of Rear-Admiral and appointed Superintendent of the Kure Harbour Office, in place of Rear-Admiral Shikano transferred to Yokosuka. Capt. Miyaoka also has been promoted to the rank of Rear-Admiral. Vice-Admiral Kimotsuki and Rear-Admiral T. Inouye have been put on the reserve list.

A HUNDRED and eighty-eight French officers and men, have arrived at Kobe by the Salazie from home. They take the place of others on the cruiser Montcalm now at Kobe. The latter—16 officers and 172 men have left for home.

THE Fiji says that Mr. Yangshui, Chinese Minister in Tokyo, will return home in November, his official term having expired. Mr. Ma-ting Liang, formerly councillor of the Legation, and now Consul-General in Korea, will probably succeed him.

BISHOP BICKERSTETH, who held the See of Exeter from 1885 to 1900, is dead of the age of 81. He was the father of the saintly Bishop Bickersteth of South Tokyo and the compiler of the well known Hymnal Companion. He visited Japan some 15 years ago.

BARON REDESDALE has been created a K.C.B. Sir Claude Macdonald, Admiral Seymour and General Kelly-Kenny have been made Knights of the Grand Cross of the Royal Victorian Order. Colonel Arthur Davidson has been made a Knight Commander of the same Order.

CAPTAIN JAMES SEDDON, master of the British steamer Woodford, has been granted the medal with scarlet cord. On Jan. 30th, he saved sixteen fishermen who were in distress owing to a gale, of Shioya point, Fukushima prefecture, on his way from Otaiu to Yokkaichi.

THE K. R. and A. C. Regatta, held at Mirume last Saturday was favoured with the same boisterous weather as that which prevailed in Yokohama. The last few races were sadly hampered by rough water and in the senior double sculls one boat sank beneath the waves half way down the course.

ON May 29th, J. Iso, an employé of the Yaita Office, Shioya district in Tochigi prefecture, was arrested on a charge of having stolen a parcel containing several government bonds valued at twenty-five hundred yen which was sent from Tokyo to the office to be delivered to a merchant living in the district.

NEWS came by the English mail of the death of Mr. John Petrie Bisset, ex-Provost of Banchory, and founder of the firm of Messrs. J. P. Bisset & Co., who died on April 17th at his residence, Wyndun, Banchory, N.B., after a long illness. Mr. Bisset came out to Shanghai in 1867 and returned home in 1877.

THE Chu-tai, the first of six Chinese gunboats was launched at 9 a.m. on May 29th at the Kawasaki Shipbuilding Yard, Kobe. The Chinese Consul in Kobe and many foreign and Japanese were present. It is added that the Chu-tung, another vessel of the same type, will shortly be launched. The equipment of the two ships is expected to be completed before the end of this year.

On the afternoon of May 30th, the cruiser Manshu (formerly the Manshu Maru, which now belongs to the Yokosuka Naval Station) left Yokohama for Port Arthur via Korea and Talien, carrying Field-Marshal Count Nodzu, Admiral of the Fleet Viscount Ito, Barons T. Nishi and Kiyoura, members of the Privy Council, Admiral Togo, Chief of the Naval Staff Office, Vice-Admiral Kamimura, Commander of the Yokosuka Naval Station, and other high military and naval officers. They will visit various places in Manchuria. Their visit is reported to be in pursuance of the proposed post bellum undertakings in Liaotung peninsula.

CHINA.

Friday, May 25.

It is stated that the Chinese Government has decided to exercise discretion in granting passports to foreigners for travelling in the interior of the country. Hitherto the local authorities have been free to grant such passports. That arrangement will not be interfered with so far as ordinary travellers are concerned. But when there is reason to suspect that the object of an applicant is to prospect for mines or to examine sites for railways, the local authorities must not act on their own discretion but must first seek the sanction of the Waiwupu in Peking. How such a system is to be carried into practice the telegram (Nichi Nichi Shinbun) does not suggest. We can not, for our own part, imagine by what process of discrimination or investigation the local authorities are to distinguish between an ordinary tourist and a prospector. In the days of Japanese passports their holders were forbidden to engage in trade in the interior, and this veto proved more or less effective as a specific act was forbidden. But no one contemplated the impossible task of discerning the intention of an applicant for passport. The Chinese Government might attempt to forbid any passport-holder from prospecting for mines or lines of railway, but it would be extremely difficult to enforce such a prohibition, and moreover the question arises whether the veto would not be contrary to China's conventional agreement to grant trading passports to foreigners. If the telegram be correct, the inference is that the China-for-the-Chinese fever is greatly obscuring China's judgment.

Saturday, May 26.

The two newly appointed High Commissioners of Customs, Messrs. Tieh and Tang, have memorialized the Throne in the sense that likin should be abolished altogether in exchange for an increase of export and import duties. It almost seems as though likin had suggested itself to Chinese statesmen as an instrument for augmenting the imposts borne by the empire's foreign trade. The last commercial conventions were supposed to have disposed finally of the question, but now it is brought to the front again, and once more an addition is proposed to the customs dues on its account.

France having resolutely declined to abate her demands in connexion with the Nanchang affair, the duty of negotiating the matter has been entrusted to Viceroy Yuan, it is said.

Sunday, May 27.

Mr. Tang Shaoi, who, as previously stated, went to Tientsin to confer with Viceroy Yuan, has returned to Peking (Hochi Shinbun's telegrams). It is alleged that, in accordance with the Viceroy's counsels, the second remonstrance from the British Legation will be answered in the sense that the Customs dues are the principal source of revenue in China; that the Board of Finance has charge of all matters relating to the incomings and outgoings of the State; that, consequently, the appointment of a high official of the Board to act as commissioner of customs is a natural measure of organization; that it will not have the slightest effect upon Sir Robert Hart's position or is not intended to have any effect upon the latter; that it will not in any way impair the nature of the security given for the Empire's foreign debts, and that, in short, it is merely a measure of administrative convenience. But plausible as this explanation sounds the expectation is that it will not satisfy the foreign Representatives. They are said to argue that had the step been really inspired by the motives now assigned for it, the Chinese would have consulted Sir Robert beforehand; that nothing has been adduced to show the sudden need for such a change; that the choice of time—just after Sir Ernest Satow's departure from the capital—is significant, and that, finally, the measure has a most suspicious resemblance to the new and mischievous policy which is agitating China. They are determined, therefore, to have a most unequivocal reply to the British Chargé d'Affaires' query.

The Emperor of China is reported to be sick. His Majesty's temperature has run very high and he has suffered from exhausting symptoms, so that his condition now causes some anxiety. The Emperor's decease might be an occasion for trouble as his successor has not been determined, but so long as the Empress-Dowager remains supreme some exit from any difficulty of that kind is pretty sure to be discovered.

Prince Su, who was despatched some time ago on a tour of inspection in Mongolia, has reported, it is said, that he found a quantity of land in the possession of Russian subjects. The Peking authorities are of course anxious to recover this land but M. Pokotiloff seems naturally averse to any such surrender.

Viceroy Yuan is represented as endeavouring to recover from Russia and Japan the line of telegraph between Mukden and Kirin.

The Dalai Lama's projected visit to Russia is said to be creating uneasiness in Peking, where a belief gains ground that he intends to enter into some arrangement for placing Mongolia under Russian protection. An envoy has been sent from Peking to contrive the abandonment of the hierarch's journey. We do not clearly gather whether the journey has yet commenced.

The Asahi's Peking correspondent wires that from various indications, notably the posting of placards, a state of affairs closely resembling that which existed in 1899 seems to be growing up in Pehchili. Several arrests of suspicious characters have been made and there is much uneasiness.

Mr. Uchida has reached Kobe en route for Tokyo. Interviewed by a representative of the Asahi Shinbun he said that the negotiations between Russia and China are alleged to be going on, but that from the point of view of an outsider no progress appears to be made. As to Manchuria, Mukden and Antung are already provided with consuls, and it is Japan's desire that the whole district should be freely opened to the trade of the world. Mr. Uchida does not think that there is much opportunity for agricultural enterprise in Manchuria. A most important point is the development of railways. A complete system must be designed and carried out. Thereafter Japanese commerce will certainly prosper.

Monday, May 28.

The Dalai Lama is now said to be hesitating to return to Tibet, his apprehension being that the British Authorities, regarding him as pro-Russian, will take some steps to punish him should he come within reach of their arm. This having been communicated to the Government in Peking, the latter addressed an inquiry to the British Legation, and received an answer in the sense that for the purpose of restoring order in Tibet, the British Authorities were only too anxious for the return of the Dalai Lama, and that the question whether he be pro-Russian or anti-Russian does not make the slightest difference in the welcome that will be accorded to him. On the strength of this assurance the hierarch is expected to turn his steps towards Lassa. It will be remembered that the latest previous news represented him as having gone to Russia while the Chinese, on their side, had despatched officials to arrest his progress thither. These reports are seen to be more consistent than rumours generally are, for it is very possible that the Lama's fears, as above described, may have been made known to the pursuing officials and by them communicated to Peking.

An insurrection is reported from Kiangsi. Two centres of disturbance are mentioned, Hsuehou and Taping. At the former a French place of worship is said to have been destroyed.

It is stated that the sequel of Marquis Saionji's visit to Manchuria will be the immediate departure for that place of Admiral Viscount Ito, Field Marshal Nozu and Admiral Inouye. These high personages are to proceed on a tour of inspection and a similar intention is attributed to three other parties at later dates, one consisting of Admiral Togo and General Nogi; another of Baron Kioura, Marquis Ito and Marquis Yamagata; and yet another of General Terauchi, Mr. Yamagata (Minister of Communications) and Mr. Matsuoka (Minister of Agriculture and Commerce). At a subsequent date a party of business men are expected to visit the Three Provinces.

Looking at the composition of these various parties one is led to infer that the Manchurian problem still awaits final solution as between the civil and the military views. We have little doubt that the former will ultimately carry the day, but it will occur to any thoughtful person that delay in such matters is very dangerous. Delay means an opportunity for the manufacture and circulation of rumours and the growth of a hostile public opinion in the West, the final issue thus being that when the liberal policy, inevitable from the first, is adopted, the Japanese will be said to have yielded to pressure rather than to the dictates of their own free judgment and volition.

A curious piece of intelligence is telegraphed to the Jiji Shimpō from Taipeh in Formosa. It is to the effect that a discovery has just been made of an affair which took place some years ago, namely, the secret import of a quantity of small arms—a thousand stand of rifles is mentioned—for the use of the insurgents. The story is that these weapons were taken to pieces and smuggled in, mixed with other goods, in such a manner as to elude the observation of the customs officials. Nothing is explained as to the circumstances which led to the discovery at this late hour, but the telegram adds that the official investigation has elicited statements that the smuggled arms were not intended for use as weapons, but were to be broken up as old metal. That sounds an exceedingly flimsy excuse.

Tuesday, May 29.

It is stated (Jiji Shimpō, Asahi and Hochi Shinbun telegrams) that the second reply of the Chinese Government to the British Chargé d'Affaires' inquiry with regard to the Customs' affair, was much the same as the first, or, as the phrase goes, the two were largely like and smally different. The reply does not state definitely that there is no intention of changing the present administration of the Customs: it leaves this vital point obscure, and of course the British Legation is dissatisfied. Mr. Carnegie has telegraphed the text of the reply to London, where it is sure to meet with disapproval. The impression is that the British Government will now place itself in direct communication with the other Powers interested, for the purpose of bringing united pressure on the Chinese, who, having been given ample opportunity to explain themselves satisfactorily, have signally failed to do so.

Various reports are circulated about the condition of the Emperor of China, some saying that his Majesty has dysentery and is in a perilous condition, others (the Fiji Shimpō's correspondent, etc.), alleging that the indisposition is trifling. We believe the latter version to be correct, as the intelligence officially received in Tokyo speaks merely of a slight cold. The Hochi's correspondent wires that all kinds of rumours are in circulation, one being to the effect that a certain high dignitary of State had audience of His Majesty on the 27th and received his final injunctions. These tales are doubtless attributable to the fact that everything connected with the Chinese Court is wrapped in a cloud of mystery which blurs the outlines of the simplest phenomena. It has been confidently asserted more than once that, by order of the Empress Dowager, attempts have been made on the life of the Emperor, and the circulators of these canards have not been at all discouraged by the obvious inconsistency of imagining that had the Empress Dowager entertained such a design she would have failed to consummate it. The strong probability is that the terrible character attributed to her Majesty—a character for which the leading Shanghai journal is largely responsible—rests on no foundation more solid than these stories of abortive assassination.

It is stated (Fiji Shimpō's Peking correspondence) that the Chinese Government has asked Japan to inform Peking officially on each occasion of the military evacuation of a part of Manchuria, in order that China may at once send a force to replace the Japanese troops and assist in the work of preserving law and order. This is an astute move, but much of its astuteness depends upon whether a similar application is made to Russia and whether she complies with it. The Chinese must not fall into the error commonly committed by Occidentals, the error of expecting Japan to live up to a standard which is not observed by other Powers in their dealings with one another. What is sauce for the Japanese goose in this case must be source for the Russian gander also, and before Japan agrees to make any such reports, she will naturally insist on learning whether Peking has obtained any corresponding engagement from St. Petersburg. We hear little of the evacuation of Northern Manchuria, though of course silence does not mean that evacuation is not going on duly. It must be frankly confessed, however, that Russia has not qualified to be implicitly trusted in such matters, and Japanese statemanship has consequently a not too easy problem to solve.

Wednesday, May 30.

Fresh rumours arrive, this time via Paris, that the Emperor of China is seriously ill. Some even allege that he has succumbed. We do not know the exact provenance of these telegrams. Formerly the Legation of France used to place some of its Saigon messages at the disposal of the local press, and during the past few days it appeared that the practice had been resumed, for the Asahi gave to its readers an occasional telegram marked Saigon. But now a service has suddenly made its appearance coming nominally from special correspondents in Paris and appearing simultaneously in several Tokyo journals, the language being always identical. It does not materially signify whether the messages come via Saigon or direct from Paris, but it would greatly add to their interest were they known to have an official imprimatur. As to this particular question, however, we may take it for granted that it is not through Paris, or by any other similarly circuitous route we shall receive the first news of an event so momentous as the demise of his Majesty of China.

Certainly if the intentions of the Chinese in appointing high commissioners of customs be as innocent as they are represented to be, the commotion caused is very inexplicable. Telegrams continue to be flashed to all parts of the world daily and one would suppose that the issue involved was nothing less than war. The latest news is that the Waiwupu's answer to the second query of the British Chargé d'Affaires did not go beyond a general statement that the Chinese Government intended to strictly observe treaty provisions. No notice was taken by the drafters of the reply as to the cardinal point raised in the query. It is noticeable, however, that while the correspondents at the Peking end of the wires are remarkably well informed as to the nature of all communications coming from the Chinese side, they never venture to specify the contents of the documents emanating from the British Legation. Thus we are without any intelligence as to the exact nature of the assurance demanded by Great Britain, and we consequently can not estimate the measure of defiance—if there be any—displayed by China's rejoinder. Her attitude, however, seems to be clearly defined. She maintains that the appointment of the two commissioners is purely a matter of domestic legislation and that she is not called upon to give any account of it to foreign questioners. She will observe her conventional obligations but she declines to admit that they extend to accepting alien counsels or remonstrances about the appointments or removals of her own administrative officials so long as such steps do not violate any existing treaty. That is an intelligent contention and she is alleged to be maintaining it very resolutely—so resolutely, indeed, that certain Japanese correspondents think they detect the traces of strengthening influence exercised by some third party, and of course Germany is suspected. Germany is always suspected, now-a-days. St. Petersburg's hand used to be detected everywhere in the Far East by the political meteorologists but now their records point to Germany. In this case, however, nothing more tangible is alleged than the fact—if it be a fact—that Germany's attitude is very indifferent. There is also a story that Mr. Tang Shaoi, conversing with an anonymous German subject, declared that the customs' affair is purely a matter of domestic policy, and that though China would answer questions emanating from the British Legation, she altogether denied the right of any foreign Power to interfere in such arrangements. As for cancelling the Imperial Edict, that was wholly out of the question. It looks, then, as though an impasse was not unlikely to be reached, but we can not imagine that such a problem will attain serious dimensions.

Thursday, May 31.

In spite of Sir Edward Grey's declaration in the House of Commons, the Chinese Government does not appear to have yet conveyed to the British Chargé d'Affaires a satisfactory answer to his last query. It is probable, however, that a promise to convey such an answer has been made and that no time will be lost in drafting it. The British and Japanese Charge's d'Affaires are said to have addressed a strong note to the Waiwupu, pointing out that any delay would merely offend the Powers, and the Chinese Government is reported to have decided on sending an answer in the sense that the sixth article of the convention of 1898 shall be carefully observed so long as the convention is in operation, namely, up to the year 1943. The Asahi Shimbun's Peking correspondent, however, wires in a somewhat different sense. He alleges that a certain Power—obviously Germany is designated—holds that China has done enough by giving the general assurance contained in her first and second written answers and the verbal explanations accompanying them, and that, consequently there is no occasion to cancel the Imperial Decree. Under these circumstances a council of the Foreign Representatives has not yet been held, but England is not satisfied. We suspect this correspondent to be somewhat badly informed.

Mr. Uchida, speaking to a representative of the Nippon, is said to have stated that Japan's action in this matter has been limited to friendly advice against China taking any heroic measure of reform calculated to offend foreign Powers. In reply to this remonstrance, for which China expressed herself grateful, the Waiwupu stated that no intention of altering existing arrangements was entertained, and that the Government's procedure meant merely a change in domestic organization.

Sir Edward Grey's recent statement in the House of Commons shows that the British Government recognises Japan's good faith in the matter of opening Manchuria so far as she has competence to do so. Antung and Tatungkow are already open and Mukden is to be opened to-day (June 1st), while Tienhsing, Liaoyang, Hsinmintun, Tieling, Tungkiangtsz and Fakumun are to be opened as soon as the necessary arrangements are complete. But while these steps are taken to open southern Manchuria, namely, the province of Shinking, nothing whatever of a similar nature is done by Russia in the two northern provinces. The agreement still holds by which the navigation of the Sungari is limited to Chinese and Russian craft. Now the Sungari and the Liao are the great water-ways of Manchuria, and the Tokyo press points out that to open Southern Manchuria while this special convention closes the Sungari is almost a farce.

In this context we may mention that Marquis Ito will set out for a trip in Manchuria on the 10th of this month, and that on his return he will proceed to Korea accompanied by Marquis Yamagata.

Recently a rumour was circulated to the effect that the Chinese Government had decided to dispense with the services of the Japanese subjects now engaged as police instructors, and the action was interpreted as a further evidence of the spirit now animating the authorities of the Middle Kingdom. But we learn from an interview between Mr. Uchida and a member of the Nippon's staff that the story was an exaggeration: The term originally fixed for the employment of these instructors expires next July, and the Chinese certainly did show some disposition not to renew the agreement, their reluctance being dictated by the prevailing spirit of China for the Chinese. But as the Powers were evidently desirous that the services of the Japanese instructors should be retained, it was finally decided in that sense.

Mr. Uchida mentions in this context that in recent years China having adopted the instruments of Western civilization and its sciences, her sense of her own condition had been aroused, and this, operating in a bad sense, had created the anti-foreign power. But some two or three months ago an Imperial Decree had been issued warning the people against indulging in such a mood, and therefore Mr. Uchida believes that the danger is past.

There have of late been rumours about the restoration of Yingkow to China and the appointment of a Chinese Taotai there. We learn from a statement attributed to Mr. Uchida by the Nippon that the public have laboured under a misapprehension in this matter. According to the agreement concluded between Major-General Fukushima and the Russia Commissioner the Japanese military government will remain in power at Yinkow until the expiration of the period for military evacuation, namely, April 1897. The Japanese have agreed to the Taotai's return to his post, but they have not taken any step towards removing the military government. The administrative question calls for a convention but it has not yet been negotiated.

VISCOUNT HAYASHI ON NEWSPAPERS.

The Fiji Shimpō contains some very interesting remarks made by His Excellency Viscount Hayashi to a reporter on the subject of newspapers. "It is a fact," the Minister is represented as saying, "that the character of journalists and their correspondents advances with the development of a country's fortunes, but how far that is true of Japan I have not yet had leisure since my return to examine carefully. High character is the source of a journal's credit. Having become Foreign Minister it devolves on me to take up the difficult foreign relations that have grown out of the war and I ought to have some more or less novel method of dealing with them. But, after all, as the prime aim is to promote the country's fortune and to increase its strength, my humble hope is that, to the best of my small ability, I shall succeed in making self completely subservient to the interests of the State. Apart from journalists and correspondents who seek merely to make profit out of sensations, and who devote themselves to the commercial side of their enterprise without taking thought for their country's conditions, I have every sympathy with those that act as leaders of public opinion, and I desire to treat them with all respect. I regret to say that I have not hitherto encountered many deserving of such consideration. The late Mr. Fukuchi of the Nichi Nichi, the late Mr. Narishima of the Choya, the late Mr. Kurimoto of the Hochi, and Mr. Chirō of the London Times—these are men whom I have met and conversed with at home and abroad and whose high character I have learned to appreciate. With such persons I can not but desire to exchange views in the most intimate manner for the sake of promoting the country's interests. In the main foreign affairs belong to the realm of secrecy, but there have been times when even the merest trifles were concealed. That is extremely indiscriminating. International relations as well as social call sometimes for privacy, but that is quite the exception. The mistake of over secrecy is that it impairs mutual understanding and works no small mischief directly as well as indirectly. If journalists were careful to maintain a high character the time would probably come when they would encounter scarcely any secrecy whether in diplomatic affairs or in any other sphere. An influential London editor once said to me:—'Men who besiege the doors of statesmen, ambassadors and ministers and who forthwith employ pencil and note-book, do not deserve to be confidentially treated.' I fully appreciated the remark. Again, while I was staying in London during the Russo-Japanese war, this same journalist came hurriedly to the Legation one day, and showing me a telegram asked me whether it was true. I replied that I had not yet received such a telegram, whereupon he said, "Then whether this be true or not, it shall not go into the paper so long as you have not received it." The next day I looked at the journal he represented but the telegram was not there, nor was there a word about it. Yet the telegram related to a question at that time attracting the greatest interest at home and abroad, and no little expense and trouble had been incurred in gaining the intelligence. This was a type of the really influential journalists of Europe. But what shall be said of our journalists in Japan? Last year a certain newspaper appearing in Tokyo published news about a diplomatic question which had not yet even become a subject of discussion. Some one had partly revealed the circumstances to him under a strong pledge of secrecy, yet without any regard for the country's interests or for his own pledge, he had yielded to the fear of being late with the intelligence. It was quite enough to indicate his character as a journalist. My desire is to pursue the policy of the open door; or rather I should say that I desire to make newspaper men so trustworthy that I can open the door to them without reserve. In every country there those that take their cue from others and those that think for themselves. I regret to say that recent events have demonstrated the existence of too many of the former class in Japan. I had occasion to be ashamed of the fact when I was abroad. At the opening of war between England and the Transvaal, voices of approval and of opposition were loudly heard. Sir Henry Campbell-Bannermann and Mr. William Stead were vehement opponents of the war, yet they were guided by purely loyal and patriotic considerations and their nationals gave them credit for it. A nation must be magnanimous enough to consider these arguments on such occasions and to employ them as materials for reflection. Do our nationals possess such magnanimity or do they not? The Far-Eastern correspondent of the Tribune, an organ of the present English Cabinet, is an opponent of the Anglo-Japanese alliance and has sent to his journal some communications not at all favourable to Japan. For this he has been vehemently attacked in some quarters. Yet the thing is not worth consideration, for the Tribune having been but a short time in existence and having only a narrow circle of readers, few people will be disposed to credit this correspondent. The Anglo-Japanese alliance is not a mere lip affair; it is a matter of genuine mutual interest. This fact must be borne in mind when planning enterprises in Manchuria and Korea. * * * The nation must be brought to a unanimous view of the work of tariff revision which is to take place four years hence, and must not regard it from a purely selfish standpoint. The Japanese deem it a disgrace to follow the Sultan's example of obstinacy at the outset and yielding subsequently. Their creed is that the spoken word should be as immovable as a mountain, and that whatever a man says that he should carry into practice. Foreigners too must have begun to appreciate that their habitual mistakes about Asia have betrayed them into great blunders."

This is the first occasion on which a leading Japanese statesman has addressed plain words to the press. It will be observed that the Viscount speaks eulogistically of deceased Japanese editors only. Naturally he refrains from invidiously discriminating among the living, though he certainly could have found several present-day Tokyo editors worthy at least to be classed with those he mentions. On the whole his Excellency will probably admit that the press of his country has made very signal progress during the past fifteen years. There were predictions of much trouble when, after repeated efforts by the Diet, a Government bill was finally introduced granting virtually complete liberty of pen. But experience has proved that the experiment was not premature; the press has lived up to the trust reposed in it. Yet there is no denying that the profession of journalism is still regarded with some contempt in Japan. Were not that the case, there would be no occasion for such words as those used by Viscount Hayashi.

THE RUSSIAN FISHERIES.

Our readers know that the Governor-General of the Amur District recently issued a proclamation inviting Russian subjects, and Russian subjects only, to bid for the fisheries in northern waters, and announcing that, with insignificant exceptions, the term granted would be six years. At first the public regarded the intelligence with scepticism. Such a course would have completely nullified the 11th Article of the Portsmouth Treaty, which provides that the privilege of engaging in fishing enterprise in Russia's North-Asiatic waters shall be extended to Japanese subjects. It seemed consequently incredible that the Amur Governor-General would have taken a step which meant at least practical postponement of the operation of the Treaty for 6 years. Very shortly afterwards, however, the news was confirmed by an official telegram stating that the six-year period mentioned in the Governor-General's proclamation had been reduced to one-year. It is now stated that this reduction was effected owing to a remonstrance from the Tokyo Government, which of course did not sit quiet in face of an unequivocal disregard of its nationals' treaty rights. Promptitude was needed inasmuch as the Governor-General's proclamation had named the 6th of June as the latest date upon which tenders might be sent in. It would appear, however, that the St. Petersburg Government at once recognised the justice of Japan's remonstrance for, as stated above, not a day has been lost in changing the terms of the Amur official's announcement. We have nothing but conjecture to guide us in estimating the motive which induced the Governor-General to take such a step. It may be confidently assumed that he had no intention whatever of violating any treaty or of flouting Japan, and that assumption forces us to conclude that he acted in ignorance. It is a strange incident.

SIR ERNEST SATOW'S RECEPTION IN JAPAN.

Sir Ernest Satow was received in audience by the Emperor and Empress on the 26th instant, and a banquet was subsequently given in his honour at the Shiba Detached Palace. On the 27th Count Inoue gave a banquet to his old friend, and to-day (28th) Sir Ernest is to lunch at the Foreign Office. The Jiji Shimpō writes editorially about Sir Ernest Satow's visit to Japan and about his great achievements as a Japanese scholar. This country, says our contemporary, regards him as a true friend, nay even as a fellow-national; welcomes him with open arms, and hopes that his future career will be even more brilliant than his past has been.

It is interesting and gratifying to observe the warm welcome extended by the Japanese to Sir Ernest Satow. All his old friends in Japan, whose name is legion, appear to be vying with one another to do him honour, and thus nearly his whole time in Tokyo is occupied attending entertainments organized on his account. Count Matsukata gave a banquet to him on the 22nd instant in the Count's new mansion, a fine building which shows many evidences of the admirable taste of its architect Mr. J. Conder. The guests were the British Ambassador and Lady MacDonald, Baron Komura, and Miss Komura, Mr. Chinda, Mrs. Bonar, Mr. Nagasaki, Mr. Masuda, Mr. H. W. Denison, Mr. Yoshida and Captain and Mrs. Brinkley. On the 27th there was a banquet at Count Inouye's residence, when the guests were Marquis Ito, Count Katsura, the British Ambassador, Viscount Yoshikawa, Baron Otori, Mr. Hara, (Minister of State for Justice), Mr. T. Kato, Baron Komura, Viscount Hayashi, Admiral Saito, Mr. Tsuzuki, Viscount Yenomoto, Mr. Takahashi, Mr. Nagasaki, Mr. Hayashi (the former Minister in Korea), Mr. Yoshida, Mr. H. W. Denison, Mr. D. W. Stevens, and Capt. Brinkley. The occasion was rendered further attractive by a display of several of the unique works of art forming Count Inouye's collection. The host proposed Sir Ernest Satow's health, speaking of him as a friend of 42 years' standing and Sir Ernest replied in a short but very graceful speech. It contained an allusion to the battle of the Sea of Japan, and the British Ambassador thereupon called for three cheers for Admiral Togo, which were given with much enthusiasm. Admiral Saito said that he would not fail to convey the fact to Admiral Togo. On the following day the Minister of State for Foreign Affairs invited a large party to luncheon in his official residence to meet Sir Ernest. There were present General Terauchi, Viscount Tanaka, Baron Komura, Count Toda, the British Ambassador, Colonel Shiba, Mr. Uchida (who has just returned from Peking) Mr. Sato, Mr. Ishii, Mr. Saito, Admiral Saito, Mr. Yamaza, Mr. G. Hayashi, Mr. J. H. Gubbins, Mr. Yoshida, Mr. Denison, Mr. W. H. Stone, Mr. Stevens, Captain Brinkley, etc.

SIR ERNEST SATOW AND THE TOKYO JOURNALISTS.

The journalists of Tokyo entertained Sir Ernest Satow at the Nippon Club on the afternoon of the 20th instant. Among the guests were Marquis Ito, Viscount Hanabusa, Baron Ishikuro, Baron Komura, Viscount Yanagizawa, Mr. T. Kato, Baron Kikuchi, Mr. Soyeda, Mr. Shirata, Mr. Ozaki Yukio, Mr. Toyokawa, etc. The editor of the Nichi Nichi Shimbun, Mr. Yokoi Tokiwo, did the honours. Sir Ernest and the British Ambassador arrived at 3.30 p.m. Mr. Minoura Katsundo, of the Hochi Shimbun, greeted the distinguished guest in the name of the journalists. He recalled the fact that Sir Ernest had come to Japan 45 years ago, had lived here throughout the period of her greatest difficulties, and had contributed not a little to their solution. These high services were fully appreciated and would be long remembered. He begged Sir Ernest to forgive the imperfect nature of their preparations to welcome him and to be assured that had time and means permitted they would have spared neither to do him honour worthily. Sir Ernest, replying in English, said that the Japanese language as known to him was the language of 40 years ago, the language spoken to one another by men sitting on the mats. He would not attempt therefore to address them in the old-fashioned words which alone were at his command. He had come to Japan in 1862, and the more he studied the country and the people, the more he associated with them and learned their thoughts and their ways, the greater interest had he taken in them, so that he had finally made up his mind to live here all his days, an intention which had been in part carried out for he had passed 40 years in the country. It might be true, as Mr. Minoura had said, that he had assisted in introducing Western civilization into Japan, but if so he had learned two things in the process and the lessons were engraved on his heart. One was the attitude of reverential and loving obedience shown by children towards their parents; the other, the self-sacrificing loyalty of the samurai towards his feudal chief. The fall of feudalism might have been expected to work some change in this latter respect, but it had only transferred the feeling to the Throne, and thus the nation had been welded into an entity inspired by a sentiment which constituted the admiration of the world. At the base of all Japan's great successes were these two virtues, the virtues of filial piety and national loyalty. He could not but recall, in connexion with his return to Japan, that at the time when he first made her acquaintance she had been divided into three hundred principalities, each autonomous and virtually independent, so that not a sign of future integration was apparent. To-day, however, he found one of the most united nations in the world, and he recognised that its union depended on those two great bases of morality, filial piety and loyalty to the Throne. On the other hand it must never be forgotten that many brave men had sacrificed their lives to make the history of modern Japan—men like Yokoi Shonan whose son, the editor of the Nichi Nichi Shimbun, was among the hosts this evening. Happily some of those that had braved all the dangers of that great crisis, were still living, as Marquis Ito, and were able to guide their countrymen along the paths which Japan was now treading with so much glory to herself.

Marquis Ito then spoke as follows:—

My first meeting with Sir Ernest Satow was in the summer of 1864. Japan was then in a disturbed state. More especially was this the case in my native place, Choshu, where the anti-foreign fever ran high, and exceedingly dangerous conditions existed. I had just returned from England and I took refuge in the British Legation, thus barely escaping. In fact, I owed my life to the protection of the English flag. I could not avert the breaking out of war between my country and England, yet in the course of one or two years

Choshu adopted the policy of opening the empire. This is not the time to recount the annals of that period. I allude to them merely for the purpose of recalling that it was thus I first met Sir Ernest and that if in the 40 odd years which have elapsed since then Japan has undergone many changes and has made for herself a remarkable history, Sir Ernest Satow has been a part of that history. And how is it with the Japan of the present day? Her people with one heart turn to their Sovereign. Social order requires such distinctions as nobles, officials, business-men and so forth, but all are equal before the law and all are equal recipients of the Imperial favour. The people may dispute about disputable points, but in their disputes they must never forget the foundations of our country, namely, filial obedience and national loyalty. Sir Ernest Satow has just spoken of these two virtues. It is a great pleasure to find an eminent foreigner who regards our condition with such penetration. For all time Japan must make filial obedience and loyalty to the Throne the backbone of our national institutions. I call upon you all to join me in drinking the health of His Excellency Sir Ernest Satow, who for the sake of old friendship has visited us on his way homeward.

The toast was drunk with three vigorous "banzai" for Sir Ernest.

THE WELCOME SOCIETY.

It seems strange that correspondents should continue to address to the local newspapers letters calling on the Welcome Society to publish its accounts and generally to make a statement of its affairs. For why should any such demand be preferred? The Welcome Society is not a public institution or an official organization in any sense. It is a private association formed solely with the object of providing facilities for tourists. The travellers who, in consideration of a payment of five yen, are admitted to temporary membership of the Society and become thus entitled to avail themselves of its services, have no more right to see its accounts than they have to see the accounts of the railways and steamships by which they journey, or the inns where they obtain shelter and food. Even if the Society were intended to be a money-making enterprise, which it is not and never was, no one except its permanent members would be entitled to scrutinize its incomings and outgoings. The tourists who are permitted to call themselves members during the time of their sojourn in Japan, are not in any sense partners and have no competence to share either its earnings or its expenditures. It is really surprising that such a thoughtless outcry should have been raised. Complaints of inconsiderate, careless or dishonest treatment may be properly formulated and would doubtless be thankfully welcomed by the Society, but to say that the public in general or the tourists in particular who join the Society for a brief space in order to get the advantages of its assistance, have a proprietary right of investigation and audit is exceedingly inconsiderate. Nevertheless it becomes a question whether, this commotion having been raised, the Society's best plan might not be to publish a full statement of its assets and outlays. The promoters and their supporters may justly regard themselves as victims of ingratitude, since their absolutely disinterested and liberal scheme has exposed them to criticisms such as would be almost insulting even were the Society a money-making venture. But they will complete their disinterested and hospitable record if they treat these harsh condemnations with courteous good humour.

KOREA.

Friday, May 25.

It is reported that the insurgents at Honju have a hundred Murata rifles and that their ranks include about 250 men who have served in the infantry and artillery of the regular army. Hence they make some show of discipline. The Japanese force of gendarmes and police which originally resisted these rebels had to retreat, owing to the great inferiority of numbers to Yesan. On the 23rd instant a second force set out to join the first at Yesan and a third was to set out on the 24th. Apparently a body of gendarmes was ordered to the region from Seoul also. It would seem that the affair is not regarded as sufficiently important to call for the employment of regular troops.

Saturday, May 26.

Telegrams from Korea say that a force of 60 Japanese gendarmes and Korean soldiers attacked the insurgents at Hongju on the 25th instant at dawn. The result of the action is not yet known.

There is a question about the marine products on the coast of Chhollado. It appears that the Korean Government has granted a monopoly of all these products to a Korean subject and has further issued instructions that no transactions in them are to be made with Japanese. The coast of Chhollado is studded with small islands, on several of which Japanese subjects have taken up their residence temporarily for the purpose of exploiting these products. Much loss and distress are therefore caused by this arbitrary action on the part of the Korean Government. The Japanese Consul in Mokpho has forwarded to Seoul a strong complaint, and Mr. Tsuruharu, Chief of the Bureau of Affairs in the Residency General, has protested to the Korean Government.

Sunday, May 27.

Later news shows that the attack on Honju was abandoned temporarily owing to the impossibility of making any impression on the insurgents' fortifications with rifles. Captain Komori, who was in command of the Japanese detachment, has asked for a field-piece and in the meanwhile is refraining from further attack. Another telegram from Yesan indicates that there is disquiet of a wide-spread nature in that region. The province where these disturbances are taking place is Chhungchhyon-do. In the Andong district of Kyongsang-do also there is unrest. Two gendarmes are missing and it is apprehended that they have met with foul play. Further at Pian in this same province a band of the Wi Pyon have engaged the Korean local forces to the discomfiture of the latter. From Kongju it is telegraphed that the notorious Pedlars' Guild shows signs of insurrection and that precautionary measures are being adopted. We learn nothing as to the origin of these troubles. They seem to be on an insignificant scale, and the impression is that they are simply raids of bandits, but concerning this latter point the telegrams are silent. The only indication furnished is that the Emperor is said to have sent an envoy to reason with the insurgents at Kongju and to point out to them the error of their ways, from which incident it may be inferred that in that part of the country at all events the emeute has a political character.

Tuesday, May 29.

The Residency-General has made repeated applications to the Korean Government urging that the insurrection at Honju should be quelled by means of Korean troops in accordance with the country's sovereign dignity. But these representations having all proved fruitless, it has at length been decided to send a body of Japanese troops from Seoul. Two companies of infantry with cavalry and artillery were told off to leave the capital on the evening of the 27th, travelling by rail. This should have brought them to Honju by noon on the 29th, and the plan was that they should immediately commence the attack by blowing up the gates of the town with dynamite. A night assault would of course have been safer, but the desire being to avoid injury to peaceful citizens, the more perilous method of a day movement was chosen. The telegrams (Jiji Shimpō) which convey this intelligence say that there has been a continuous downpour of rain for several days and the rivers are consequently flooded. This may delay the operations of the troops so that they will not reach their destination until the evening of the 29th, in which case the attack was to be postponed to the morning of the 30th. It is certainly characteristic of the incompetence of the Korean Authorities that, in the face of numerous invitations to take the law into their own hands as becomes an administration laying any claim to autonomy, they sat quiet and left the work to be done by the Japanese. Possibly they may be in sympathy with the insurgents, but a more easily credible hypothesis is that they wish to leave to the Japanese the task of dealing with everything troublesome, not reflecting that such insouciance on their part means a practical surrender of the empire's last remnants of sovereignty.

Wednesday, May 30.

The Residency-General has given to the Korean Government formal notice of the despatch of Japanese troops to deal with the insurgents in Chhungchhyon-do, and has also urged that a Korean force be immediately sent to Kyongsan for a similar purpose. Possibly the object-lesson furnished by the movement of the Japanese will rouse Korea to a sense of her obligations in such matters. If she voluntarily and practically abandons to Japanese hands the whole duty of preserving order within her territories, she can not long remain in doubt as to the consequences. Meanwhile we hear of a fresh disturbance further south than Hongju, namely, at Kangkyong in the same province. The Japanese in that region have addressed to Mr. Tsuruharu earnest telegrams calling for aid. Here, however, the Korean authorities seem to have despatched a force of 150 men from Kongju. From Hongju there is as yet no intelligence concerning the outcome of the punitive expedition which left Seoul on the evening of the 27th. It was not to be expected, however, that news would arrive so quickly. The troops set out on the 27th but were not timed to reach their destination and deliver an attack before noon on the 29th at the earliest, and the morning of the 30th was spoken of as an alternative and not improbable date. We may not expect to learn anything definite, therefore, before this (Thursday) afternoon.

A suggestive account comes from Kyongsan-do. It appears that two gendarmes having been despatched to investigate the alleged symptoms of unrest at Andong, fell in with a party of 40 insurgents at Pukkuk on the 25th instant. The insurgents were eating luncheon at the moment. One expects to learn that the two gendarmes prudently withdrew to seek assistance or at any rate to save their own lives, but, on the contrary, they are described as advancing to effect an arrest, which procedure reminds one forcibly of the Irishman who, single-handed, declared that he "surrounded" his foe. The Koreans, who were armed with matchlocks, opened an innocuous fire on the gendarmes, and these replied with their magazine rifles, the speedy upshot being that the insurgents fled, leaving one of their number dead upon the field and two prisoners as well as eleven matchlocks in the hands of the Japanese. It was a very tidy exploit for two gendarmes, but the Japanese papers, in publishing the news, make no comments whatever on it, suggestive as it is.

Thursday, May 31.

It is rumoured that a high Court Official, Mr. Kim Kyuson, whose arrest was recently effected, has been in close communication with the Honju insurgents and is, in fact, one of their instigators.

The chief of the rebellious Wi Pyong, namely, Ming Chyongsik, has seized the official seal at Honju and is using it to levy taxes, enrol men and make requisitions.

There is as yet no news about the attack on Honju; we now learn that 2 companies of Japanese troops have been sent to Kyongsan in addition to the two despatched to Honju.

It will be remembered that two Japanese gendarmes were recently reported missing in Kyongsan-do. It has now been ascertained that they fell in with a party of 150 insurgents and were killed at a place called Yongryong.

The Jiji Shimpō urges the Japanese Authorities not to waste any time making representations to the Korean Government but to take at once resolutely into its own hands the duty of quelling these disturbances. Korea is powerless to restore order.

There is news of disturbance in the Yalu region also. A Japanese raft, when floating down towards Antung, was fired on by a party of about 40 Koreans, including, it is said, five or six Chinese soldiers. The raft had to be abandoned.

DEATH OF MR. PET. PEACOCK, M.V.O.

By the sudden death, between 5 and 6 o'clock on Thursday afternoon, of Mr. Peter Peacock, M.V.O., the British Embassy is robbed of one of its best known officials. He had been down to Yokohama on service matters and was returning on his bicycle to the station when he suddenly collapsed, death quickly supervening, owing, we presume, to heart failure. Mr. Peacock was one of Sir Harry Parkes' famous Cavalry Guard and was with him in Kyoto when two rouin attacked the Minister while on his way to the Palace. Among the wounded was Inspector Peacock. This was in 1867. Mr. Peacock was thus in the employ of the Legation for over forty years and for his faithful service to the Crown he was recently decorated by Prince Arthur with the M.V.O. He was a keen judge of horse-flesh and in his time trained many a well-known racing pony for the Negishi Course. His loss will be greatly felt by a wide circle of friends who valued him for his extreme courtesy, keen conscientiousness and upright character.

Tientsin papers report that an officer made his way through the line of police in order to see the Emperor proceeding to the Temple of Heaven, and when stopped by a constable cut him with his sword; the incident is the subject of diplomatic representations.

RUSSIA.

Rumour still continues to suggest that General Stoessel has been condemned to death. A cousin of his is said to have petitioned President Roosevelt to exercise his influence in behalf of the condemned officer. General Nogi, according to Japanese newspapers, does not believe in the news of condemnation. He is reported (Asahi Shimbun) to have telegraphed seeking information, and at the same time he has taken the opportunity of bearing testimony to the Russian General's gallant defence and the tenacious fighting of the troops under his command. We do not ourselves believe for one moment that the Tsar will confirm the death sentence, even supposing it to have been passed. The most curious reflection connected with the matter is that Stoessel is in possession of one of the highest Orders in the gift of the German Emperor. It was suggested at the time of conferring the Order that His Majesty would have been better advised had he waited, but to wait would have been to spoil the effect of the honour. Every thoughtful person must sympathise with the German Emperor's enthusiasm over the attack and defence of the fortress, and with his promptitude in expressing applause. None the less it has turned out very unfortunately.

It is hard to divine the truth of the rumours circulating about England and Russia. Up to the 24th instant the telegraph spoke very confidently of an entente having been actually arranged or, at all events, being on the point of arrangement, but then suddenly came news that the statement was quite premature, and that it had been "made in Germany," with the idea of muddying international waters for the benefit of Berlin fishermen. It is quite likely that this latter version emanated from some correspondent addicted to sensational invention, but how are we at this distance to form a judgment? Now we have other telegrams alleging that a secret interchange of ideas is going on between St. Petersburg and Berlin, and that the former has assured the latter that the Bagdad Railway is beyond the purview of the Anglo-Russian understanding. We are thus led to infer that the entente is an accomplished fact, or at any rate that it is on the eve of accomplishment. On the whole it will probably be correct to think that all this smoke is not without some fire. The Chuo Shimbun, a Seiyu-kai organ, examines the rumours seriously and arrives at the conclusion that the Morocco Conference laid the foundations of an entente, though in view of the pressing nature of the domestic questions which now absorb Russia's attention it seems unlikely that the pourparlers with England have been carried very far. In all probability—we still quote—the British advocates of an entente include persons hostile to the Anglo-Japanese alliance and disposed to create doubts of Japan. But there is no valid reason to fear that an understanding between London and St. Petersburg would weaken the ties that bind Japan and England together. Lord Lansdowne, the author of the Anglo-Japanese alliance, was also an advocate of an entente with Russia, and his successor, Sir E. Grey, who has declared his resolve to maintain continuity of foreign policy, will not suffer anything to come between his country and Japan. For the rest there is no reason whatever why the two things should be incompatible. Japan would rejoice at an entente which lessened her responsibilities on the Anglo-Indian frontier.

The telegraph is busy just now transmitting news of the struggle between the Duma and the Bureaucracy in St. Petersburg. From the accounts thus reaching the world it is plain that the struggle, old elsewhere, has been vehemently inaugurated in the Russian capital; the struggle for party government. It does not seem that the Bureaucracy has any supporters worth counting in the New National Assembly. Motions hostile to the Cabinet are voted almost unanimously, and thus a spectacle is presented which is exceedingly likely to inflame the people. Men will naturally say that the Government convened a national assembly simply to display openly how small is the importance attached by the Bureaucracy to any popular remonstrances, and a struggle will arise all the more dangerous on account of the constitutional sanction that has now been given to the people's protests. The world has learned to regard the potential resources of the Bureaucracy as almost illimitable, and doubtless they are so long as the Cossacks can be freely used. But the Tsar, essentially a humane man and a lover of peace, will hesitate long before employing the sword to exorcise a phantom of his own raising. The Duma was deliberately called into existence as the child of long promise, and a mood of terrible despair will be produced in Russia if this hoped for exit from a painful situation should prove a blind alley. It is observable that the Nichi Nichi Shimbun, a most estimable authority on foreign affairs, takes a very optimistic view of the situation. It calls attention to many evidences that Russia's strength is not absorbed or exhausted by these domestic troubles. Even at this moment she is offering demonstration of her might in Eastern Asia. The ordeal through which she is passing at home is virtually inevitable. Nearly every country has had to face it in a more or less accentuated form. Russia will probably emerge more powerful and more vigorous than ever. In fact, the era of her really solid strength will commence when the heart of the nation beats in unison with the policy of her rulers. The Nippon, however, writes in a very different strain. The sum of its comments is that in the end military force will have to be employed to temporarily restore a situation which can never be permanently restored.

OFFICIAL INTERFERENCE IN TRADE.

A few days ago it was currently reported that the Treasury had exerted its influence to throw into the hands of the Industrial Bank all transactions connected with the import of foreign capital. Several leading newspapers denounced the unwisdom of such a course. The Jiji Shimpō was conspicuous among them. But now the Jiji writes as follows:—"Recently it was rumoured that the Government having interfered in every way to place the business of importing capital in the hands of the Industrial Bank, some transactions which were on the eve of being concluded became abortive. Had this been true the thing ought to be exposed and we therefore took steps to investigate, with the result that we found the rumour to be nothing more than either an error or an invention. It is undoubtedly true that at a meeting of the Local Governors Mr. Sakatani, Minister of Finance, instructed them that if any of the autonomous local bodies wanted to borrow foreign capital, they should apply to the Kogyo Ginko as far as possible. This was because, in the opinion of the Minister of Finance, it would be disadvantageous for localities to borrow small sums independently, and moreover local bodies, having only a shallow knowledge of foreign conditions, could not hope to carry on their negotiations without being more or less handicapped; therefore if they combined their loans and applied to a proper agent, namely, the Industrial Bank, they would probably be able to achieve their purpose on a comparatively profitable basis. Further, it seems to be true that the Minister of State for Home Affairs privately conveyed a similar instruction to the Local Governors, advising that if any communal body wanted foreign capital, it would be wise to convey the wish to the Home Office which would then get the Industrial Bank to raise the money. But in the case of companies carrying on private enterprises or in the case of individuals, the Government has no intention of interfering, nor has it hitherto done anything of the kind. The Finance Department has definitely made this denial to persons who addressed inquiries to it. Here it is advisable to consider the origin of the above rumours. The Industrial Bank being in an advantageous position for importing foreign capital, is calculated to be victorious in competition. For the fact that its increased capital was subscribed in England shows that foreigners, who have no intimate knowledge of Japanese affairs, hoped to find a safe channel of investment through the medium of the Industrial Bank, and since that was their prime motive, they will readily subscribe to enterprises introduced by the Bank, whereas applications coming from other quarters will inevitably be received with doubt. The foreign holders of the Industrial Bank's shares comprise practically all the banks and companies in London which take up and float foreign loans. Hence assuming that any foreigners in Japan formed a plan to import foreign capital direct without reference to the Industrial Bank, such persons having no capital of their own and being not representatives of recognised capitalists but merely go-betweens or brokers, would have to transfer the operation to other hands in England, which transfer would have to be made to the shareholders of the Industrial Bank inasmuch as it will not be wrong to say that any others would make a failure. Persons ignorant of these things may be disposed to entertain doubts as to the propriety of the Industrial Bank's interference. Another source of such rumours is the following:—"After the war many persons came to Japan to assist in importing foreign capital. But they failed to come to any agreement, the terms they proposed having been extremely disadvantageous to the Japanese. There are some indications that in order to conceal the true causes of their ill success they have endeavoured to lay the blame on others. May is not be that this motive led them to make the Minister's instruction to the Local Governors a basis for circulating injurious rumours? From another practical point of view, also, the procedure of the Industrial Bank may have provoked some hostile comment, the justice of which will gradually become known. But the sum of the matter is that the Government's policy towards the import of foreign capital is not so narrow as popular rumour represents it to be. Of that there seems to be no doubt."

It appears plain that the Jiji Shimpō intends the above to be a retraction of the very out-spoken condemnation it originally published against the official policy in this matter.

THE ARMY.

Rumours continue to be busily circulated about a considerable increase of the Japanese Army's strength. It has emerged from the war four divisions stronger than it was at the outset; and as four divisions means an addition of one-third—excluding the Guards—many people supposed that growth would stop there. An anonymous staff officer, however, has now informed the Jiji Shimpō that a much more drastic programme is likely to be adopted. The details will be best understood in tabular form:

INFANTRY—The number of Divisions to be raised to 20 exclusive of the Guards, the total complement thus becoming 21. Prior to the war the Divisions numbered 12 only, or 13 with the Guards, so that this is an addition of ten-thirteenths.

CAVALRY—The establishment to be raised to 8 Divisions. This is a most remarkable change. Hitherto the Japanese army has been eminently weak in cavalry. Its whole force consisted of one brigade, or half of a Division. Eight Divisions would therefore signify a sixteen-fold increase, and would also mean that from having been an almost neglected arm of the service the Japanese cavalry will become a very powerful body. The exact strength of a Division is not publicly known, and therefore we are not in a position to say how many sabres are represented by 8 Divisions, but there can be no doubt that such a force would be very formidable, especially if the troops be mounted on horses of the quality now contemplated as the outcome of the new stud movement.

HEAVY FIELD ARTILLERY (yasen juhōtai)—This is a force which has hitherto had no existence in the Japanese army, the field artillery being all armed with light weapons. The staff-officer quoted by the Jiji alleges that it is in contemplation to raise 10 brigades of the new kind, which would probably represent a force of some 300 guns. The calibre and nature of the weapons is not mentioned, but since the appellation Kōjō-hōtai (siege artillery) is used evidently as a synonym we gather that very heavy weapons are in question.

ENGINEERS—The battalion organization of the present force to be raised to the strength of a regiment; in other words, the force will be trebled.

LAND TRANSPORT (Shicho-kei).—The battalion organization to be changed to that of a regiment, thus trebling the establishment.

HORSE ARTILLERY (Ki-hōtai).—One regiment to be attached to each Division, including the Guards. Thus there would be 21 regiments of this force.

BALLOON CORPS (Keikikyūtai).—One corps to be attached to each Division, making 21 corps in all.

TELEGRAPH AND TELEPHONE BATTALIONS (Denshin Denwa Daitai).—It is not clear whether one battalion is to be raised or several.

In addition to the above it is proposed to increase the number of rounds of ammunition allowed to field-gun artillery, and to give a larger calibre to the infantry rifle.

The time for carrying out these extensive changes will be divided into two or three periods, but the organization of the heavy field artillery, the horse artillery and the balloon corps will proceed at once.

It must be explained that in re-publishing this programme we do not in any respect vouch for its correctness. At present its interest consists solely in the fact that it furnishes an indication of the ideas entertained in some quarters as to the dimensions the army should take, and as to the improvements suggested by experiences garnered in the recent war.

Tokyo newspapers continue to speak with keen interest of the re-organization of the Army in accordance with the experiences of the last war. We do not find any confirmation of the recently published statement that the number of Divisions is to be raised to twenty, but neither do we find any contradiction. At present the matters chiefly spoken of relate to organization. It appears to have been definitely settled that a Division shall cease to be the major unit, and that this shall now be an army corps (Gundan) composed of two Divisions, and therefore having a strength of some 20,000 on a peace footing, which force would be nearly quadrupled on a war footing. But it must be premised that in speaking of the war footing we have nothing except the purest conjecture to guide us. No outsider can tell what the war footing will be when the new 2-years' system of service with the colours comes into operation as it will do from December next. The Japanese military authorities evidently intend that these matters shall be wrapped in secrecy as they have always been, and most wisely we venture to think. With regard to the increase of the cavalry and its organization into Divisions, the new formation of heavy artillery, balloon corps and so forth, recent intelligence is confirmed and it is added that much discussion has taken place as to whether these bodies should be independent units, or whether they should be attached to the Division and borne on the latter's establishment. The decision is said to have finally been in the latter sense, though both methods present special advantages. We find further that corps of quick-firing artillery are spoken of as absolute necessities, but their number is not stated, neither is anything further said about the dimensions to which the railway corps is to be raised. It is added that the military force in Formosa, now consisting of 11 battalions, will be reduced by about one-half, there being no further need to retain so many men there.

Rumour says that Lt.-Generals Tatsumi, Oshima Hisanao (not "Pyongyang Oshima"), Oseko and Terauchi will be raised to the rank of full General. The first-named officer is in a very delicate state of health and will probably be placed on the Retired List, but Generals Oshima and Oseko will remain in command of Divisions under the new regulation which sanctions the appointment of officers of this high rank to Divisional commands.

MR. HUNTINGTON WILSON.

The American Friends Society gave a farewell banquet to Mr. Huntington Wilson at the Maple Club on the 26th instant. Baron Kaeko presided. He recalled the fact that Mr. Wilson had been in Japan for over nine years, and that he had thoroughly accustomed himself to Japanese ways. (This remark was in allusion to Mr. Wilson's facility in sitting and eating washō-japanese.) The American Friends Society greatly regretted his departure but rejoiced at the very exceptional promotion that had fallen to his lot: rejoiced at it not only for his sake but because it evinced the American Government's special interest in Japan and her affairs. The Society sincerely hoped to see Mr. Wilson return to this country in the capacity of Ambassador before many years had passed. Mr. Wilson made a graceful reply. He could not, he said attempt to emulate Baron Kaeko's eloquence, and besides, his heart was too full of regrets at leaving Japan to permit many words. He bade a hearty farewell to all his friends and hoped to greet them from time to time in his own country. As a memento of his pleasant relations with the Society, he desired to offer to it a portrait of Mr. Townsend Harris, America's first Representative in Japan; a man who deserved to be remembered as one of the most astute and far-seeing statesmen who had ever visited Japan, and whose name should be associated in Japanese annals with that of Commodore Perry.

THE JAPAN RAILWAY COMPANY.

On the 25th instant the directors and shareholders of the Japan Railway Company gave an entertainment in the Ueno Park to celebrate the company's independence of State aid. When this railway was projected 26 years ago so reluctant were the public to invest any money in it that the Treasury found it necessary to guarantee interest at the rate of 8 per cent. on the paid up capital. This guarantee was for a fixed period of 25 years which has now expired. It need scarcely be said that the Treasury's payments on account of the guarantee have for some years been very small, the earnings of the line having proved amply sufficient to pay a dividend of at least 8 per cent., and the Government's liability being thus confined to uncompleted sections. Some 500 persons attended the celebration, among them being Viscount Soga, Counts Okuma and Matsukata, Marquis Hachisuka, Baron Shibusawa, Mr. Soma and many other prominent men. Viscount Soga read a congratulatory address on behalf of the company and Marquis Hachisuka replied on account of the shareholders. Count Okuma then spoke. He recalled that ever memorable feature of the Meiji Restoration, the surrender of their fiefs by the Daimyo, an act which, though largely due in an indirect measure to pressure from abroad, must rank as one of the noblest and most disinterested deeds of all time. The future of these feudal chiefs then constituted a source of keen anxiety to Princes Iwakura and Sanjo, and they planned the Fifteenth Bank and the Japan Railway as investments which might yield a safe income to the holders of pension bonds. But at that time the Treasury's credit was very low; so low that when the Government sought to raise a loan of ten million yen after the rebellion of the 10th year of Meiji, no better terms could be obtained than 8 per cent. at 80. Thus when the plan of the Japan Railway was brought practically on the tapis four years later, no capitalists were willing to invest, and the ex-Daimyo on whose account the enterprise had been conceived, asked for a Government guarantee of 12 per cent., but finally consented to be satisfied with 8, another act of sacrifice from the point of view of the time when it took place. It might thus be said that the celebration they were now holding marked the final emergence of the country from feudal times and their consequences. Of the men that took a prominent part in all these doings, the great majority were now in their graves. Indeed the only survivors were Marquis Ito, Count Matsukata, Mr. Narahara and himself (Count Okuma). They very much regretted that Marquis Ito had not been able to join the celebration, which was in effect a national and a historical event.

Count Matsukata also spoke. He recalled his own visit to the West in 1878, when he held the post of Vice-Minister of Finance. His investigations on that occasion had shown him that a main source of the commercial and industrial activity prevailing in Occidental countries was the railway, and on his return he had brought the fact strongly to the attention of the Government, explaining at the same time the system of state guarantees that prevailed in some parts of Europe. Prince Iwakura had taken up the subject vigorously and the results were before them to-day. He rejoiced greatly that it had fallen to his lot to be present at such a ceremony.

THE RUSSIAN CONSUL-GENERAL IN KOREA.

It is observable that various more or less inexplicable explanations are published of the delay that is taking place in M. Plançon's journey to Seoul. He is still in Tokyo and the true reason of his interrupted journey is, we believe, that he has not yet obtained his exequatur. Russia says that the exequatur should be issued by the Emperor of Korea but Japan declines to endorse that view and insists that the Mikado is the proper source. It is doubtless fresh in everybody's memory that when war broke out between Japan and Russia, the Korean Government formally denounced all treaties and conventions then existing between itself and the latter Power. Russia up to that time had been entitled to most favoured nation treatment in Korea, but of course so soon as the conventional relations between the two States came to an end, this privilege lost all validity. Then followed the Portsmouth Treaty by which Japan's paramount status in the peninsular empire received explicit recognition and thereafter came the treaty between Japan and Korea which placed the control of the latter's foreign relations in the hands of the former, Russia offering no protest. Under such circumstances one is perplexed to discover any justification for St. Petersburg's present claim. The Russian Government is reported to allege that it was never a consenting party to Korea's abrogation of the old treaties. That is quite conceivable, but it is not to be supposed for a moment that the denouncing of a treaty by one of the contracting parties requires the consent of the other in order to have validity. As an indisputable fact Russia has no commercial treaty whatever with Korea at present, and the latter, having surrendered the direction of its foreign affairs into Japanese hands, has no competence to issue an exequatur. The matter is understood to have been referred to several of the great Powers, and while some have emphatically declared themselves in accord with Japan's interpretation of the situation, others have kept silence, not one, however, supporting Russia's contention. M. Plançon, it is said, has made two or three attempts to be received by Marquis Ito, but the latter persistently alleges, that while quite ready to meet M. Plançon as a friend, he can not receive him officially until the exequatur question is disposed of, since so long as that is on the tapis all meetings must be purely informal. We learn that Great Britain unequivocally endorses Japan's attitude, and indeed her own record shows that she is bound by precedent to endorse it. What Russia hopes to accomplish by such action it is not easy to see. She can scarcely expect to wipe out all the incidents of the past three years so far as Korea is concerned, or to resume her own old status in the Far East just as though no such thing as a war had taken place.

THE RYOMONSHA.

There is in Tokyo a Club called the Ryomonsha. It has for its central figure Baron Shibusawa, and may indeed be called his club. A few days ago this association held a meeting at Baron Shibusawa's Oji villa, and heard an interesting address from Mr. Sakatani, Minister of State for Finance. He said (as reported by the Shogyo Shimpō):—"We have happily been victorious in a war on which our country's existence was staked. The origin of our success may be summed up by saying that Japan proved to be unexpectedly rich. Nevertheless the result was that nearly 1800 millions of war bonds had to be issued. Some people take a very gloomy view of this fact. Well, it is undoubtedly a hardship, but we must resign ourselves to find that the greater the degree of hardship the greater also is the pleasure. After the war Japan's capital will become very plentiful. As the confidence placed in the country increases so will its capital. The war astonished the world, and one of its results was that foreigners came to trust Japan and began to send their capital thither under various pretexts. Moreover Japan's so-called sphere of influence received considerable extension in the direction of Manchuria, China and Korea, so that a larger area presents itself for Japanese energy. Japan has a large population, she has abundance of capital and she has a wide field. If her people have courage to use these advantages fully, there is no knowing what degree of development she may not attain after the war. To cite some examples. People are already engaged in the cotton-growing industry in Korea. Japan's yearly imports of raw cotton have attained to the large figure of 40 to 120 millions of yen. If Korea can ultimately supply this cotton a very radical change will be effected in the cotton-spinning industry of Japan. Again, our people import 10 million yen worth of wool yearly. But the experience of the war taught us that Manchuria could supply sheep-skins sufficient to protect our million and a half of soldiers against cold. Immense quantities of wool are obtainable from Mongolia. It appears too from gradual investigation that Mongolia abounds with cattle-stations where quantities of sheep, pigs and cattle are reared. Thus there can be no doubt that the ten million yen worth of wool at present imported from Australia can be obtained from Mongolia. If ample plans be made for storing and packing wool at Mukden or Hsinmintung and for transporting it to Japan, a great demand for the cheap material would surely grow up in this country. Then there is flour and there are other staples which may be turned to advantage. If these opportunities be fully utilized there is plenty of room to accumulate post bellum wealth. It will therefore be for the Japanese not to limit themselves to the domestic field, but to go abroad to their country's new spheres of influence, and if industrials and merchants adopt this plan, bankers too must take a similar course. It is difficult to do business with a country which is environed by tariff walls, but fortunately the customs' duties in China, Manchuria and Korea are only 3 per cent., and the world has endorsed the open-door policy there. These regions, too, are not yet fully developed and there is no telling to what limit enterprise may not be pushed there. Nothing could be sillier, therefore than to fall into a pessimistic mood instead of ~~trampling~~ <sup>trampling</sup> ~~uncasiness~~ <sup>uncasiness</sup> under foot and devising plans to get rich.

There is a great real of refreshing vigour about these utterances and it is not mere idle optimism. Japan has undoubtedly great opportunities. Should Korea prove a really <sup>profitable</sup> ~~profitable~~ field for cotton growing, the Minister of Finance is right in estimating the results as very large indeed. Japanese mills will then have the raw material at their very doors, and it will be their own fault if they cannot monopolise the markets of the East for cotton manufactures. A similar development may be possible in woollen manufactures also.

SAGHALIEN.

Mr. Motono reports from St. Petersburg that the Russian Government has decided to abandon the policy of making Saghalien a convict island. This point was brought up by Baron Komura at the Portsmouth conference. His Excellency called attention to the source of international friction that would be created if the Russian moiety of the island were employed for such a purpose. Partly in consequence of that protest and partly because of their own perception of the danger the Russian authorities have now taken the above decision. It appears that the Minister of Home Affairs entered into a full explanation at a recent sitting of the Council of State. He said that the danger of having trouble with Japan if the convict settlement were continued could not be over-looked. Even when the boundaries of the two empires were separated by the sea, problems of extradition had caused some trouble, and if the convicts had only to travel a few miles by land to reach the dominions of another Power, a most disquieting state of affairs would exist. Besides, the accommodation for prisoners in the northern half of Saghalien was limited to three jails, each capable of holding 900 men. Experience had showed clearly that the policy of attempting to develop the mining and other resources of the island by means of convict labour was mistaken. For that purpose nothing could succeed except private enterprise amply supported by capital. Thus all considerations combined to counsel the abandonment of the convict stations in the island, and the transfer of Russia's dominions there from the jurisdiction of the Department of Justice to that of the Home Department.

A BATTLE ANNIVERSARY.

The Navy held a brilliant celebration at the Suikoshu on the 27th instant in honour of the first anniversary of the battle of the Sea of Japan. There were over 2,500 persons present. The Crown Prince honoured the occasion with his presence, as did several of the Princes of the Blood. A novel feature of the entertainment was that a model battle-ship had been built in the basin and on its deck various performances were given, while immediately adjoining it stood a monster refreshment salon. A post office within the enclosure ministered to the philatelic mania by stamping pictorial cards made by the Naval Department and distributed to the guests only. We may mention that all letters passing through the post on the day of the celebration were specially stamped, and that persons bringing letters to first or second class post-offices during the following three days (28th, 29th and 30th) up to 4 p.m., can have them similarly stamped. This was the first occasion of the Navy's throwing open its doors for such a ceremonial. Various celebrations on a small scale—domestic affairs they might be called—had previously been held, but nothing of such a large and general character.

The Department of Communications has issued the following Notice to Mariners:—Gulf of Tokyo.—Notice is hereby given that the circular top of the Kawasaki Buoy moored at the southern point of Haneda Shoal, Gulf of Tokyo has disappeared. Notice will be given when the mark is renewed.

THE "GOSNRI KEIGA KINEN."

The association for celebrating the completion of 5,000 miles of railway in Japan has issued to each of its members and to the guests invited to the Nagoya fete, a series of pictorial post-cards specially designed and printed for the occasion, as well as a small volume, explaining the facts relating to the ceremonial and the main features of railway history in this country. The little book is very prettily got up. It has a dainty cover, is printed in delightfully clear type—unfortunately ideographic—on paper of high quality and has excellent illustrations in the form of likenesses of Prince Iwakura, Marquis Ito, Count Okuma, Viscount Inouye, General Kawakami, Mr. Nakamigawa, Professor Matsumoto, Mr. Watanabe (Hiromoto), Baron Mori and Professor Minami. There are also many other pretty illustrations and interesting diagrams. Altogether the little book is a most attractive souvenir.

THE GERMAN EMBASSY.

On Friday evening at 9 o'clock the newly arrived German Ambassador, Baron Mumm von Schwarzenstein, was at home to receive the first visit due to him as Ambassador according to diplomatic etiquette. The notifications were issued for the Japanese official and Court Society by the Japanese Board of Ceremonies and for the Diplomatic Corps by the Dean, H.B.M.'s Ambassador.

There were present about 300 people, including all Foreign Representatives and their staffs, most of the Cabinet Ministers and high dignitaries of the Court.

By the Imperial Household Department's courtesy the Imperial band under Mr. Dubravicz' able direction was performing during the evening.

NOTES ON CURRENT EVENTS.

It is not conceivable that according to any construction of the liberty of speech granted to a barrister defending a client in open court, the remarks recently made by Mr. Hirata in the Kobe Local Court as reported by the Kobe Chronicle can be justified. The case was an action brought Mr. H. E. Reynell against Mr. Alfred Kirby and Mr. J. Hirata. Mr. Reynell asked that the defendants be ordered to publish an apology for an advertisement inserted by them in the Kobe Chronicle impugning his business reputation and further that they be required to pay ten thousand yen by way of damages. As to the case itself we have of course nothing to say since it is still sub judice, but Mr. Hirata's remarks in his capacity of barrister for the defence require a most emphatic protest. More unrestrained libels could scarcely be conceived. He declared the plaintiff's character to be such that there were foreigners in the Kobe settlement who would not associate with him; he described his social position as such that men would not sit at the same table with him; he accused him of having falsely described as lucrative a business by which in reality he was losing heavily; and he concluded by calling him "a man possessing neither reputation nor credit." On the utterance of each of these libels Mr. Masujima, who represented the plaintiff, remonstrated vehemently, denouncing Mr. Hirata's statements as "outrageous," but so far from being supported by the Court, he was required to allow counsel for the defence to continue his speech without interruption.

The methods of barristers are already quite sufficiently open to censure. Frequently they do not hesitate to blacken the reputation of the parties against whom they are briefed by suggestion and innuendo so crafty and so cruel that honourable men shrink from the ordeal and prefer to suffer injustice by refraining altogether from appeal to the law. If in addition to this disgraceful and grossly impertinent licence, barristers are to be also permitted to themselves make any defamatory declarations they please, neither supporting them by evidence nor incurring responsibility for them, law-courts will become quite intolerable. We can only express profound surprise that Judge Miyake and his two associates on the bench suffered such an abuse to pass unchecked and unrebuked.

It is stated by the leading journals of Tokyo that the important council of statesmen held on the 22nd instant, adopted the following resolutions with regard to Japan's policy in Manchuria:—First, that China's sovereignty shall be respected and that the programme of equal opportunities for all shall be pursued. Secondly, that a display of military force shall be avoided in Manchuria and that the people shall be led by peaceful means to understand and appreciate Japan's intentions. Thirdly, that every effort shall be made to prevent Japan's Manchurian policy from fanning the flame of rights-recovery fever in Southern China.

The Nichi Nichi Shimbun says that in pursuance of the above determination the military establishments of Japan in Manchuria will be reduced at once and the military administration will be replaced by civilian. Our contemporary further alleges that a decision has been arrived at with regard to the levying of customs dues at Talien, but whether the latter is to be a free port or not, we do not gather. Of course the above policy is only in mere outline; the details have all to be filled in. This interpretation of the Council's decisions is endorsed by the Kokumin Shimbun, which says that Manchuria is to be the arena of free and untrammelled competition. All nationalities will have equal opportunities, and none will receive special official assistance, so far at least as Japan is concerned.

It has been decided that duly qualified Japanese medical practitioners shall be permitted to practise their profession within the United Kingdom and its colonies. But there seems to be some doubt as to the discretionary power reserved to the Central Medical Association of England, which is to pass judgment on a candidate's qualifications. This point is now under discussion. For many years English medical men have been allowed to practise in Japan and it was full time that the permission should be mutual.

